AND when they had fynished all this: all Jsraell that were founde in the cy= ties of Juda, went oute and brake the Images and cut downe the groues, and all to brake the hylaultares and the other aultares thorow out all Juda and Ben Jamin, Ephra= im and Manasses, tyl they had made an ende of them. And afterwarde all the children of Jsrael returned euery man to his possession in their owne cyties. And Ezechias set the prea= stes and the Leuites in their ordre to wayte by course, euery e man accordinge to his office whether preast or Leuite: for the burntoffe= ringes and peaceoffringes, and to minister and to thanke & to praye in the gates of the lodge of the Lorde. And the kynge gaue a porcyō of his substaunce for burntoffringes at morninge and euen, and for burntoffringes on the Sab both dayes and new mones, and other solēne feastes, accordinge * as it is wrytten in the lawe of the Lord. And he bad the people that dwelte in Jerusalem to gyue the parte of the preastes & Leuites, that they might be mayn= teyned in the lawe of the Lorde. And as sone as the worde came abrode, the children of Js= raell brought aboundaunce of fyrste frutes of corne, wyne, oyle, and hony, and of al maner of frutes of the felde: and the tythes of al ma ner of thinges brought they in plentcously. And the children of Jsrael and Juda þ dwelt in the cyties of Juda, they also brought in the tythes of oxen and shepe, and tythes of dedi= cate thinges which were dedicate to the Lord their God, and put theym on heapes. In the thirde moneth they began to laye the heapes and fynished them the seuenth.

And when Ezechias and the lordes came & sawe the heapes, they blessed the Lorde and his people Jsraell. And Ezechias questioned with the preastes and the Leuites concerning the heapes. And Azarias the chief preest of the house of Sadoc answered him & sayde: sythens they began to bringe the heueofferinges into the house of the Lorde, we haue eaten & had ynoughe, and yet lefte aboundaunce, for the Lorde hathe blessed his people and therof is this heape left. And Ezechias bad dresse vp þ store houses about the house of the Lorde. And so they dyd, and caryed in the heaueoffe= ringes and the tythes and the dedicat gyftes, euen of fydelitte.

Ouer which Chonanlah the Leuite hadde the rule with Semei his brother nexte to him. And Jehiel, Asarlah, Nahath, Asael, Jerī= moth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachiah, Mahath and Bananiah, were ouerseers ordeyned, by Chonaniah and Semei his brother, at the ap poyntement of Ezechias the kynge, and Aza= rias the ruler of the house of God. And Chore the sonne of Jemna the Leuite porter of the East wre had the ouersight of the frewilloffrin ges of God, to gyue peaceoffringes vnto the Lorde, and was ouer thinges most holy. And vnder him were Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Se metah, Amariah and Sechenlah in the cyties of the preestes of their fidelitte, to gyue to their brethren their portions, as well to the small as to the great.

And to the males also that were reckened from thre yere & aboue amonge all that went into the house of the Lorde daye by day, to w seruice & to wayte by course. And to the prea= stes that were reckened in the housholdes of their fathers from. xx. yere & aboue, to wayte when their courses came. And to theym that were reckened thorow out al their babes, wy ues, sonnes & doughters thorow out al the cō gregacion. For to the fidelitie of them dyd me commit their sanctified gyftes. And therto a= monge the children of Aarō the preastes were men named by name in the feldes of the sub urbes of all their cyties, cytie by cytie, for to gyue portions to all the males of the preastes and to all that were reckened amonge the Le uites.

And on this maner dyd Ezechias thorowe out all Juda, & dyd that was good, ryghte & truth, truthe, before the Lorde his God. And in all the worckes that he began in the seruice of ꝯ house of God, to seke his God after the lawe and commaundement, he dyd with al his hert and prospered.

¶ Sennacherib which shulde haue beseged Jerusalē is stryken of the Aungell. Ezechias dyeth after whom succedeth Manasses.

CAPI. XXXII

A iiij.Re.xviij.c

After these dedes and truthe, Sennacherib kynge of Assur came and entred into Juda and pyeched against the stronge cyties and thought to drawe them to him. But when Ezechias sawe that Sennacherib was come & that he purposed to fight against Jerusalem: he toke counsel with his capitaynes and men of might, to stop the watter of ꝯ fountaynes that were without the cytie: and they were content to helpe him. And so there gathered moche people togither and stopt all the welles and the broke that ran thorow the myddes of the lande, entendinge that the kynges of Assur should not fynde moche water, when they came. And he went to iustely and buylte vp the wall where it was broken, and made towres aboue vpon, & yet an other wal without, and repayred Melo the cytie of Dauid, and made many dartes and shildes.

B And he set capitaynes of warre ouer ꝯ people & gathered theym togither into the large strete of the gate of the cytie and spake gently to them, sayenge. Pluck vp your hertes and be stronge: Be not afrayed or in any wyse discouraged for drede of the kynge of Assur, and iiij.Reg.vj.c. of the great multitude that is with him: for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is an arme of flesh: but with vs is the Lorde our God for to help vs and to fight our batayles. And the people were well couraged with the wordes of Ezechias kynge of Juda.

After that, Sennacherib kyng of Assur sent of his seruauntes to Jerusalem (he him selfe lyenge before Lachis and all his kyngdome w him) vnto Ezechias kynge of Juda and vnto all Juda that were at Jerusalem, sayenge.

C iiij.Re.xviij.c Thus sayth Sennacherib kynge of Assur: * where in do ye trust O ye that are beseged in Jerusalem? Ezechias deceyueth you, to delyuer you to death, hongre, and thyrst, sayeng: the Lorde oure God shall rydde vs out of the hande of the kynge of Assur. Is it not that Ezechias that put downe his hyll aultares and his other aultares, and commaunded Juda & Jerusalem sayenge: before one aulter ye shal bowe your selues and vpon that offer also?

Moreouer haue ye not herde what I and my fathers haue done vnto the people of all landes? were the gods of the people of other landes able to saue their landes oure of my hande? which of all the goddes of those nacions that my fathers destroyed was it, that coulde delyuer his people out myne hande, that your God shulde be able to delyuer you oute of myne hande? Wherfore nowe let not Ezechias deceyue you ether perswade you on this facion, nor yet beleue him. For as no God amonge so many nations and kyngdomes, was able to rydde his people out of myne hande & the handes of my fathers: euen so moche lesse shall your God kepe you out of myne hande. And yet more dyd his seruauntes speke against the Lorde God and against his seruaunt Ezechias. Furthermore he wrote a letter to raile on the Lorde God of Israel and spake therin sayenge: as the goddes of the nacions of other landes haue not delyuered their people out of myne hande, no more shall the God of Ezechias delyuer his people out of myne hande. And they cryed with a lowde voyce in the iewes speache vnto the people of Jerusalem, ꝯ were on the walles, to feare them and to dismaye theym, that they might haue taken the cytie. And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the goddes of the nations of the earth, which are the workes of the handes of men.

But Ezechias the kynge and the Prophete Isai sonne of Amoz prayed concernynge that thinge and cryed vp to heauen. And the Lord sent an aungell and destroyed all the men of warre and the Lordes and Capitaynes of the host of the kynge of Assur, that he turned his face with shame towarde his owne lande. And when he was come into the house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen w the sweard euen by them that issued out of his bowels. And so the Lorde saued Ezechias and the inhabiters at Jerusalem oute of the handes of Sennacherib kynge of Assur and of all other, and mayntened them on all sydes, In so moch that many brought presentes vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem and precious gyftes to Ezechias kynge of Juda: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations frome thence forth.

* In those dayes Ezechias was sicke vnto ꝯ death and besought the Lorde: which answered him and shewed him a wonderfull myracle: But Ezechias dyd not accordinge to the curtesye shewed him, for his hert arose: therfore came there wrath vpon him and vpon Juda and Jerusalem. Notwithstanding Ezechias mekened him self for the arysing of his hert bothe he and the inhabiters of Jerusalem. Wherfore the wrath of the Lord fel not vpō them in the dayes of Ezechias.

And Ezechias had exceding moch rychesse and honour. And he gathered him treasure of siluer, golde, precious stones, spices, shildes, and all maner pleasaunt iewelles: and made store houses for the frutes of corne, wyne and oyle: and stables for all maner beastes, & foldes for shepe. And made him townes because he had catel of shepe & oxen great aboundaūce For God had gyuen him substaunce exceading moche. And the same Ezechias stopped ꝯ vpper watersprynges of Gihon & brought them downe to the West syde of the cytie of Dauid And Ezechias prospered in all his workes. But when the Embassadours of the lordes of Babylon were sente to him, to enquyre of the wonder that chaunced in the lande, God left him; to tempte hym that all that was in his herte hert myght be knowen.

The reste of the dedes of Ezechias and his goodnesse are writtē in the vision of Isai the prophete the son of Amoz in the boke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And then Ezechias layde him to rest with his fathers, and they buryed him in the hyghest sepulchre of the sonnes of Dauid: and Juda and the inhabitaunts of Jerusalem dyd him worshyppe at his deathe. And Manasses his sonne raygned in his stede.

¶ Manasses is taken prysoner, and after destroyeth the Idoles. He dyeth after him succeadeth Amō. Amō was kylled of his owne people, and Josiah his sonne raygneth for him.

CAP. XXXIII.

MAnasses was .xij. yere old when he was made kynge, and raigned .lv. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd wyckedlye in the sight of the Lorde, lyke vnto the abominacions of the Paynims which the Lorde cast out before the children of Israel. For he went and buylt agayne the hylaulters which Ezechias his father had broken downe. And he reered vp aulters vnto Baals, and made groues, & bowed him selfe vnto all the host of heauen and serued thē. And he buylt aulters in the house of the Lorde: Of which the Lorde had sayde * in Jerusalem shall my name be for euer. And he made aulters vnto all the host of heauen in the two courtes of the house of ỹ Lorde And he burnt his children in fyre in the valey of the sonnes of Hennon. And he obserued dismal dayes and occupyed wytchecraft and sorcery, and mayntened workers with spirites & fears of fortunes: and wrought moche euyll in the sight of the Lorde, to anger him with. And he put the kerued Image of an Idole which he had made, in the house of God. Of which house God sayde to Dauid and to Salomon his sonne, in this house here in Jerusalem which I haue chosen out of all the tribes, * I wil put my name for euer, & no more remoue the seate of Israell for the of the lande which I haue ordeyned for your fathers, In case they walke dyligent to do all I haue commaunded by Moses in all the lawe ordinaunces and maners. But Manasses made Juda & the inhabiters of Jerusalem to erre, and to do worse then the Heythen which the Lorde destroyed before the children of Israel. And whē the Lorde spake to Manasses and to his people, they attended not to him.

Wherfore the Lorde brought vpon them ỹ Capitaynes of the host of the kynge of Assur, which toke Manasses in an holde and bound him with chaynes and carryed him to Babilon And when he was in tribulacion he besought the Lorde his God, and humbled him selfe exceedyngly before the God of his fathers, and made intercession to him: and he was entreated of him and herde his prayer and brought him agayne to Jerusalem into his kyngdome. Then Manasses knewe how that the Lorde was the very God. After that, he buylt a wall without the cytie of Dauid on the west syde of Gihon in the broke and so forth to fishgate and rounde about Ophel and brought it vp of a very greate heyght, and put Capitaynes of warre in all the stronge cyties of Juda. And he toke away straunge goddes and the Idole out of the house of God, and all the aultares that he had buylt in the mount of the house of God and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the cytie. And he made an aulter vnto ỹ Lord and sacrificed theron peasoffringes and thanksoffringes, and charged Juda to serue ỹ Lorde God of Israel. Neuertheles the people dyd other syll in the hyllaultars, howbeit vnto the Lorde their God only.

The reste of the actes of Manasses and his prayer vnto his God, and the wordes of the seers of visions that spake to him in ỹ name of the Lorde God of Israell, are written amonge the dedes of the kynges of Israel. And his prayer and how that he was herde, and all his synne and trespace, and the places where he made hyllaulters and set vp groues & kerued Images before he was mekened, are written amonge the dedes of the seers of visions. And when Manasses was layde to rest with his fathers, they buryed him in his own house and Amon his sonne raygned in his rowme. Amon. Amon was .xxij. yeres olde, when he began to raygne, and raygned two yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lorde lyke vnto Manasses his father, for Amon sacrificed to all the kerued Images whiche Manasses his father made, and serued theym, and mekened not him selfe before the Lorde, as Manasses his father had mekened him selfe: But Amon trespalled greatly. Wherfore his owne seruaūtes conspired against him and slew him in his owne house. And the people of the lande slew all that had conspired against kynge Amon. And therto the people of the lande made Josias his sonne kynge in his rowme.

¶ Josias destroyeth the Idoles and restoreth the temple in whiche is founde the boke of the lawe. He sendeth to Holda the prophetisse for counsell.

CAP. XXXIIII.

IOsias was made kynge when he was .viij. yere olde, and he raygned in Jerusalem .xxxj yeres. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde, & walked in the wayes of Dauid his father bowinge neyther to the ryght hande ne to ỹ left. In so moche that the eyght yere of his raigne, when he was yet a lad, he began to seke after the God of Dauid his father. And in the .xij. yere he began to purge Juda and Jerusalem of hyllaulters, groues, kerued Images, & Images of metall: so that they brake downe ỹ aulters of Baals euen in his presence, and the Idolles that were vpon theym, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, & Images of metall he brake and made dust of them, and strawed it vpon the graues of them that had offred to them. And he burnt the bones of the preastes vpon the aultars, and clensed Juda and Jerusalem. And euen so dyd he in the in the cytes of Manasses, Ephraim, Simeon and of Nephthali. And in the wyldernesses of them rounteabout he plucked a sonder the aultares and the groues and dyd beate them and stampe theym to powder, and bet wwne the ydles thorowout all the lande of Israel: and then returned to Jerusalem.

In the.xviij. yere of his raygne when he had purged the lande and the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azalia, and Maasiah the gouernoure of the cytie, and Joah the sonne of Joachaz the recorder, to repayre the house of the Lorde his God. And when they came to Helkiah the hyghe preaste, men delyuered theym the moneye that was brought into the house of God, which the Leuites that kept ꝑ enteryes had gathered of the handes of Manasses and Ephraim and of all that yet remayned in Israel and of all Juda and Ben Jamin and of the enhabiters of Jerusalem. And they put it in the handes of the workmē that had the ouersight of the house of the Lorde, whiche gaue it to the labourers that wrought on the house of the Lorde, to repayre and mende it, and to masons and carpēters to bye hewed stone and tymbre, for to make couples & beames for the houses which the kynges of Juda had destroyed: And the men wrought in ꝑ worke faithfully.

And the ouerseers of them to courage them were Jahath and Obadiah Leuites of ꝑ children of Merari: and Sacharia and Mesulam of the children of the Cahathites, and as many other of the Leuites as couldе skill of instrumētes of Muske. And ouer the bearers of burthens and ouer all that wrought, in what so euer workmanship it were, were there scribes, officers and porters of the Leuites.

And as they brought out the moneye that was brought into the house, Helkiah ꝑ preast founde the boke of the lawe of the Lorde gyuen by Moses. And Helkiah aunswered and sayde to Saphan the scrybe: I haue founde ꝑ boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, & gaue the boke to Saphan. And Saphan caryed the boke to the kynge, and brought ꝑ kynge worde agayne, sayenge: all that was committed to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue powred out the money that was founde in the house of the Lorde and haue delyuered into the handes of the ouerseers of the workmen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kynge, sayenge: Helkias the preast hath gyuē me a boke, and he red it before the kynge.

And when the kyng had herde the wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes, and commaunded Helkiah and Ahikam the sonne of Saphā and Abadon the sonne of Micah and the sayd Saphan the scribe and Asaia a seruaunt of the kynges, sayenge: go and enquire of the Lorde for me and for them that are left in Israel and Juda, concernynge the wordes of the booke ꝑ is founde. For great is the wrath of the Lord that is fallen vpō vs, because our fathers kept not the worde of the Lorde, to do after al that is written in this boke. And Helkias with thē that pertayned to the kynge went to Holdah a prophetisse wyfe of Sellum the son of Thekoh ath the sonne of Hasarah keper of the wardrope (which prophetisse dwelt in Jerusalem in the seconde warde) and they communed with her. And she sayde vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, tell ye the man that sent you to me: euen thus sayth the Lorde: lo, I will bringe euyll vpon this place and vpon the enhabiters therof, euen al the curses that are written in the boke whiche they haue red before the kynge of Juda, because they haue forsaken me and haue offred vnto other Gods to angre me with all maner workes of their handes, therfore is my wrathe set on fyre agēst this place and shall not be quenched.

And as for the kynge of Juda whiche sent you to enquire of the Lorde, so shall ye say vnto him: thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell concernyng the wordes which thou hast herd. Because thyne hert dyd melt and thou dydst meke thy selfe before God, when thou herdest his wordes against this place and against the enhabiters therof: and humbledst thy selfe before me, and tarest thy clothes and wepest before me, that haue I herd also sayth the Lord. Beholde I will take the to thy fathers & thou shalt be put in thy graue in peax, & thyne eyes shall not se all the myschefe that I will bring vpon this place and vpō the inhabiters of the same. ✳ And they brought the kynge worde agayne. Then the kynge sent and gathered together all the elders of Juda and Jerusalem. And the kynge went vp into the house of the Lorde, and all the men of Juda and the inhabiters of Jerusalem and the preastes and Leuites and all the people great and small: and red al the wordes of the boke of the couenaūt that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge stode at his standing and made a couenaunt before the Lorde, to folowe the Lorde and to kepe his commaundmentes, his wytnesses and his statutes with all his herte and with all his soule and to fulfill the wordes of the appoyntement written in the sayde booke.

And he made to come forthe all that were founde in Jerusalem and Ben Jamin, and the inhabiters of Jerusalem promysed to kepe the couenaunt of ꝑ God whiche was the God of their fathers. And Josias put away al maner abhominations out of all landes that pertayned to the children of Israel, and brought all that were founde in Israell to serue the Lorde their God. And they tourned not a syde from the Lorde God of their fathers as longe as he lyued.

¶ Josias holdeth passouer. He fyghteth agaynst the kynge of Egypte / and dyeth. The people bewayle hym.

CAPI. XXXV.

And Josias helde the feast of passouer vnto the Lorde in Jerusalem, and they slewe passouer in the. xiiij. daye of the first moneth. And he set the preestes in their offices and ayded thē in the seruyce of the house of the Lorde. And he sayd to the Leuites that taught taught thorow out all Israel and were sanctified vnto the Lorde: put the holy arcke in the house which Salomon the son of Dauid kyng of Israell dyd buylde, ye nede not to beare it vpon your shoulders. Wherfore now serue the Lorde your God and his people Israell. And prepare your selues by your auncient housholdes and companyes, accordinge to the writynge of Dauid kynge of Israel, and the writing of Salomon his sonne. And stande in the holy place accordynge to the deuysions of the auncyent housholdes of youre brethren the chyldren of the people, and after the deuyson of the auncyent housholdes of the Leuites, & kyll passouer, sanctyfye and prepare your brethren that they maye doo accordynge to the worde of the Lorde by the hande of Moses.

And Josias gaue to the common people in lambes and kydde, for passe ouer offerynges onely, vnto all that were present thirty thousande by tale, and thre thousande oxen, euen of ꝑ kynges substaunce. And his Lordes gaue willyngly both vnto the people and vnto ꝑ preastes and vnto the Leuites. Helkias, Zacharias & Jehiel rulers of the house of God, gaue vnto the preastes for passe ouer offerynges two thousande and syxe hundred lambes and kydde, and thre hundred oxen. And Conanta with Semeia and Nathaneel his brethren, and Hasabiah and Jaiel and Josabad, Lordes of the Leuites, gaue vnto ꝑ Leuites, fyue thousande passe ouer offerynges, & fyue hundred oxen.

And so the seruyce went forwarde: and ꝑ preastes stode in theyr places, and the Leuites in theyr companyes at the kynges commaundement. And they offered passouer: and the preastes syprynkled the bloude receaupynge it of the Leuites, and the Leuites stryppe the beastes. And they set awaye the burnt offerynges, to gyue them vnto the comme people as they were deuyded by auncient houses, for to offer vnto the Lorde, as is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And so dyd they with the oxe to. And they dressed the passouer with fyre as the maner was. But the other halowed dedicat beastes they sod in pottes, cauldrons and pannes and deled them quickely amenge all the common people. And afterwarde they made redy for them selues and for the preastes and for the children of Aaron, which were buyed in offeringe burnt offerynges and the fat vntyll night. And therfore the Leuites prepared for them selues and for the preastes the sonnes of Aaron. And the singers the chyldre of Asaph stode in their standinge accordinge to the commaundement of Dauid and Asaph, Heman & Jeduthun the kynges sear of visions: and the porters wayted at euery gate, and might not departe frome their seruice: But their brethre the Leuites prepared for them. And so all the seruice of the Lorde went forwarde the sayde daye, in offeringe passouer of burntofferynges vpon the aultare of the Lorde, accordinge to the commaundement of kynge Josias. And so the children of Israell that coulde be founde/ kept passouer the same tyme and kepte the feast of vnsoure breed. vij. dayes. And there was no passouer lyke to that kept in Israel frome the tyme of Samuel the Prophete: neyther dyd any of the kynges of Israel holde suche a passouer as dyd Josias and the preastes & Leuites and all Juda, and almoche of Israel as coulde be had, and the inhabiters of Jerusalem. And this passouer was holden in the xviij. yere of the raygne of Josias.

D iiii. Re. xxiii. &

After all this, when Josias had kynyshed the temple, Necho kynge of Egypte came vp to fight againste Carcamis vpon Euphrates, and Josias went out against him. And the other sent messengers to him, sayenge: what haue I to w with the thou kynge of Juda? I came not against the now at this tyme, but against an house with whome I haue warre, & God bad me haste. Leaue therfore and medle not with God which is with me, least he destroy the. Neuertheles Josias turned not his face frō him, but made him redy to fight with him, & herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouthe of God. And when he was come to fight in the valeye of Magew, ꝑ shoters shot against the kynge Josias. And ꝑ kynge sayd to his seruauntes: cary me away, for I am sore hurt. And his seruauntes hadde him out of that charet & put him in an other, and brought him to Jerusalem where he dyed and was buryed in ꝑ sepulchre of his fathers. And all Juda and Jerusalem mourned for Josias. And Jeremye lamented Josias, and all singynge men and singynge wemen speake of Josias to this daye, and made it an ordinaūce in Israel: and they be wrytten in lamentacions. The rest of the actes of Josias & his goodnes in folowinge the writinge of the lawe, & his dedes first and last are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda.

¶ After Josias raigned Joachaz, Joakim, Joacin, Sedekias, in whose tyme all the people were caryed away to Babilon and were brought agayne the lxx. yere after, by kynge Cyrus.

CAP. XXXVI.

AND the people of the lād toke Joachaz the son of Josias & made him kyng after his father in Jerusalem. And Joachaz was. xxiij. yere olde when he began to raygne, & raygned thre monethes in Jerusalē. For the kynge of Egypt put him downe at Jerusalem & raunsomed the lande in an hundred talentes of syluer & a talent of golde. And the kynge of Egypte made Eliakim his brother kynge vpon Juda & Jerusalem, & turned his name vnto Joakim, but Joachaz his brother Necho toke & caryed him to Egypte. Joakim was. xxv. yere old when he began to raigne, & raygned. xj. yere in Jerusalē: & he dyd ꝑ displeased the Lord his God. Against him came Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilō & bouūde him in fetters to cary him to Babilon. Moreouer the kyng Nabuchodonozor caryed of ꝑ vessels of ꝑ house of the Lorde to Babilon & put them in his temple at Babilon. in his steade. Joacin was. viij. yere olde when he began to raygne, and raygned three monethes and ten dayes in Jerusalem / and dyd þ displeased the Lorde. And when the yere was out, kynge Nabuchodonozor sent and fet him to Babilon with the goodly vessels of þ house of the Lorde, and made Sedekias his brother kynge ouer Juda and Jerusalem.

And Sedekias was. xxj. yere olde when he began to raygne, and raygned a. xj. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyd that displeased the Lord his God, and humbled not him self before Jeremy the Prophete at the mouth of the Lord. And therto he rebelled against Nabuchodonozor which had receyued an othe of him by god and was to stynecked and to harde herted to turne vnto the Lord God of Israel. Furthermore all the rulers of the preastes with the people trespaced a pace after all maner of abominacions of the Panyms & poluted þ house of the Lorde whiche he had halowed in Jerusalem.

And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, sendynge them by tymes: for he had compassion on his people and on his dwellynge place. But they mocked the messengers of God and despysed their wordes and mysused his Prophetes, vntyll the wrath of the Lorde so arose againste his people that it was paste remedy. And so he brought vpon them the kynge of Caldey & slew their young men with the swerde in their holy temple, and neyther spared younge man nor mayden, neyther olde man, neyther so moche as him that stowped for age: But gaue al into his hande.

And they burnt the house of God and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces therof with fyre, with all the goodly stuffe therof, and marred it. And he caryed awaye them that had escaped the swerde, to Babilon, where they were seruantes to him and his children, vntyll the kyngdome of Persia began to rule, to fulfill the worde of the Lord by the mouthe of Jeremy, vntyl the land had her pleasure of her Sabbothes: for as longe as she laye desolate, she kept Sabboth vntyll she had fulfilled. lxx. yeres. And the first yere of Cyrus kynge of Persia to fulfyll the word of the Lorde by the mouth of Jeremy, þ Lord stered vp the spirite of Cyrus kynge of Persia that he made a Proclamacion throrow out all his kyngdome, and set it vp in wrytinge, sayenge: Thus sayth Cyrus kynge of Persia, all the kyngdomes of the earth the Lord God of heauen hath gyuen me, whiche hathe charged me to buylde him an house in Jerusalem that is in the lande of Juda. Wherfore who so euer is amonge you of all his people, the Lorde his God be with him, and let him go vp.

¶ Cyrus sendeth agayne the people that was in captyuytye, and restored them theyr holy vessells: And commaundeth them to buylde agayne the temple.

CAPI. I.

A IN the fyrste yere of Cyrus kynge of Persia (that the worde of the Lorde spoken by the mouth of Jeremy myght be fulfilled) the Lorde stered vp the spirite of Cyrus kynge of Persia, that he caused it be proclaymed thorow out all his empyre, yea and by wrytinge also, sayenge: Thus sayth Cyrus the kynge of Persia: The Lorde God of heauen hathe gyuen me all the kyngdomes in the lande and B hath commaunded me to buyld him an house at Jerusalem in Juda. Who so euer nowe among you is of his people, the Lord his God be with him, and let him go vp to Jerusalem in Juda, and buylde the house of the Lorde God of Israel. He is the God that is at Jerusalem. And who so euer remayneth yet in any maner of place (where he is a straunger) let ye men of his place, helpe him with syluer and golde, with good and catel, beside that whiche they willyngly offer, for the house of God at Jerusalem.

Then gat vp the principall fathers of Juda and Ben Jamin, and the preastes and Leuites, and all they whose spyrete God had rayssed to goo vp, and to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And all they that were about them, strengthed their handes with vessels of syluer and golde, with good and catell and Jewels, beside that whiche they gaue of their frewill. And kynge Cyrus brought forth of the vessels of the house of the Lorde, whiche Nabuchodonozor had taken out of Jerusalem, and put in the house of his God. But Cyrus the kynge of Persia brought them forthe D by Mithridates the treasurer, and numbred them vnto Sesbazar the prince of Juda. And this is the numbre of them: thirty bases of golde and a thousand basens of syluer, and nyne and twenty knyues, thirty cuppes of golde, and of other syluer cuppes foure hundred and ten, and of other vessels a thousand. So that all the vessels both of golde and syluer, were fyue thousand and foure hundred. Sesbazar brought them all vp, with them that came vp oute of the captiuitie of Babilon vnto Jerusalem.

CAP. III.

When the seuenth moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cyties, the people cloustred togither as one man, vnto Jerusalem. And Jesua the sonne of Josedec arose and his brethren the preastes, & Zorobabel the son of Salathiel and his brethren, and buylded the aultar of the God of Israel, to offre burntofferinges thereon, as is written in the law of Moses the man of God and the aultar they dyd set vpon his sockettes (for there was a fearfulnes among them because of the nacions and landes) and offred burntofferinges theron vnto the Lorde in the mornynge and at euen. And helde the feast of Tabernacles (as is written) and offred burnt sacrifices dayly in order, accordinge to the nombre, daye by daye. Afterwarde the dayely burntofferinges also, and of the new Monethes of all the feast dayes of the Lorde that were halowed, and all maner of freewill offringes, whiche they dyd of their owne moeion vnto the Lorde.

Upon the first daye of the seuenth moneth beganne they to offre burnt sacrifices vnto the Lorde. But the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde was not yet layde. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto the masons and carpenters, and meat and drinke and oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tire, to bringe them Cedre tymbre frome Libanus by see vnto * Joppa, accordinge to the commaundement of Cyrus kynge of Persia.

In the seconde yere of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem and the seconde moneth, began Zorobabel sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua sonne of Josedec, and the rest of their brethren the preastes and Leuites and all that were come out of captiuite vnto Jerusalem, and appointed the Leuites from twentye yere olde and aboue, to ouersee the worke of the house of the Lorde. And Jesua stode with his sonnes and brethren, and Cadmiel with his sonnes, and the children of Juda, to forther the workemen of the house of God, namely the children of Henadad, with their children, and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundacion of the temple of the Lorde, the preastes stode in their araye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the children of Asaph with Cymbales, to praise the Lorde * after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sange togither, gyuynge praises and thankes vnto the Lorde, that he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel.

And all ℔ people shouted loude in praysinge the Lorde, because the foundacyon of the house of the Lorde was layde. Many also of the olde Preastes and Leuites and auncient fathers fathers, which had sene the first house: when the foundacion of this house was layde before their eyes, wepte with a loude voyce. And many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a great sounde, in so moch that the people could not perceyue the ioyfull sounde for the noyse of the weppnge amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was heerde farre of.

¶ The buyldynge of the temple is hynderyd.

CAPI. IIII.

BVt when the aduersaryes of Juda and Ben Jamin hearde, that the childzen of captiuitie buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Jsraell, they came to Zozobabel and to the principall fathers, and sayd to them: We wil buylde with you: for we seke the Lorde youre God as ye do. And we haue vsed sacryfice vnto him, sythens that Asor hadon kynge of Assur brought vs vp hyther. But Zozababel and Jesua and the other auncient fathers of Jsrael answered theym: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we our selues will buylde alone vnto the Lorde our God of Jsraell, as Esdr.ia Cyrus kynge of Persia hath commaūded vs.

Then the folke of the lande hynddered the people of Juda, & made them afrayde to buyld and hyred counselours against them and hynB dered their deuyse, as longe as Cyrus kynge of Persia lyued, tyll the raygne of Darius kynge of Persia. And whē Aluerus was made kynge, in the begynninge of his raygne they wrote vnto him a complaynt against them of Juda and Jerusalem.

Also in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Tabeel, and the other of their conspiracie vnto Artaxerxes kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter, was written in the Syrians speache, and was red in the language of the Syrians. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samsai the scrybe, wrote also an Epistle frome Jerusalem, to Artaxerxes the kynge, of this tenour.

We Rehum the chauncelour, and Samsai the scrybe, and other of the counsel of Dina, of Arphasath, of Tarplat, of Persia, of Arach of Babylon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elā, and other of the people, whome the great and noble Asenaphar brought ouer, and set in the cyties of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Ceneeth. (This is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kynge Artaxerxes). Thy seruantes the mē on this syde the water and in Ceneeth to kyng Artaxerxes greC tynge. Be it knowen vnto the kynge, that the Jewes are come vp frome the to vs vnto Jerusalem a cytie seditious and frowarde, and buylde the same, and laye the foundacion of the walles therof, and repayre them. Knowe now therfore, O kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded and the walles made vp agayn, they shall not gyue trybute, tolle, ne yearely custome and so euen vnto the kynges shall this hurt redounde. But now sythe we al are therby, whiche destroyed the temple, we woll no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore we haue sent out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: that serche maye be made in the Chronycles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronycles, and perceyue, that this cytie is sedycious and noysom vnto kynges and landes, and that they cause others also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cytie destroyed. Therfore we certyfye the kynge, that yf this cytie be buylded, & the walles therof made vp, thou shalte kepe nothinge on this syde the water by reason of it.

Then sent the kynge an answere vnto Rehum Chaunceler, and Samsai the Scribe, & to the other of their cōsel that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde the water. Dear and salutation. The letters whiche ye sent vs, haue bene openly red before me, and I haue commaunded to make searche: and it is founde, that this cytie of olde hath made insurrection against kynges, and how that sedicion and rebellion hathe bene committed therin. There haue bene myghty kynges also at Jerusalem, whiche haue raigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and tolle, tribute and yerely custome was gyuen theym. Do ye now after this commaundemente, forbyd the same men, that the cytie be not buylded, tyll I haue gyuen commaundement. Se nowe ye be not negligent here in, least the kynge haue harme by meanes of it. D The kynges answere.

When kynge Artaxerxes letters were red before Rehum the chaunceler and Samsai the Scrybe and their counsell, they went vp in al haste to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, and forbad them with vyolence and power. CAP. V.

THe Prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary ꝑ sonne of Ado, prophecyed vnto the Jewes that were in Juda and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Jsraell. Then gat vp Zozobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and began to buyld the house of God at Jerusalem, and with thē the Prophetes of God which helped them. At the same tyme came to theym Thathanai the Capitayne on this syde the water, and Sthar buzanai, and their felowes, and sayd thus vn to theym: Who hathe commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles thereof? Then tolde we theym the names of the men, that made this buyldynge. But vpon the Elders of the Jewes came the eye of their God, so that they coulde not cause theym to cease, tyll the matter was brought afore Darius, and tyll they had answered by letters therunto. A in Esdr. vi. B

This is the coppe of the letters that Thathanai Capitayne on this syde the water, and Stharbuzanai, and their adherentes of Aphar sach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. The wordes they sente vnto him were these: Vnto Darius the kyng All peax. Be it knowen to the kynge, that we came into Jewri to the house of ꝑ great God which is buylded with roughe stone, and beames are layd in the walles, and the worke goeth fast forthe, and prospereth in their handes.

C We asked therfore the elders, and sayde vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We asked their names also, that we myghte certyfye the, and haue written the names of the men that were their rulers. But they answered vs these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen and earthe, and buylde the house that was buylded many yeres ago, which a great kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after our fatheres had sered ꝑ God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue the ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babilon the Caldee, which ouerthrew this house, and caryed the people awaye vnto Babilon. But in the first yere of Cyrus the kynge of Babilon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buyld this house of God, for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of the temple at Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babilon, and deliuered them vnto Salbazar by name, whom he made Capitayne, and sayde vnto him. Take these vessels, go thy waye and bringe them vnto ꝑ temple at Jerusalem, & let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Salbazar and layd the foundacion of ꝑ house of God at Jerusalem. Sithes that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and as yet is not fynysshed. Nowe therfore yf it lyke the kynge, let searche be made in the kynges treasure house at Babylon, whether it was kynge Cyrus cõmaundement, that the house of God at Jerusalem shulde be buylded: and sende vs the kynges pleasure in this behalfe.

A Then commaunded kynge Darius, search to be made in the Library of the kynges bookes, whiche laye at Babilon. So at Ecbathanis in a castel that lyeth in the lande of the Medes, was founde a booke, and in it was a recorde written after this maner: In the firste yere of kynge Cyrus, commaunded kyng Cyrus to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, in the place where ꝑ sacrifice is made and to laye a foundacion of thre shore cubites hyghe, and thre shore cubytes brode, and thre walles of roughe stones, and one wall of tymber, and the expenses shulde be gyuen of the kynges house. And the golde and siluer vessels of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the temple at Jerusalem, and brought vnto Babilon) shulde be restored agayne, that they may be brought vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

Nowe therfore thou Thathanai capitayne beyonde the water, & Stharbuzanai, & youre felawes which are beyonde the water, get ye awaye frome theym. Let theym worke in the house of God, that the Capitayne of the Jewes and their elders may buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shall be wone to the Elders of Juda in the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shall dyligently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the reuenues beyonde the water, and gyuen vnto the men, and that they be not hyndred. That yf they haue nede of calues, lambes, or gotes, for burntoffrynge vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalem be it gyuen them dayly that no complaynt be made herein. And let them offre swete sauoures vnto the God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I gyuen. And what man so euer altereth these wordes, there shall a beame be taken frome his house, and set vp, & he shalbe hanged theron, and his house shall be forfayted for the dede. Yea the God that hath made his name to dwell there, destroye all Realmes & people, that put to their hand to alter and breake downe the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently wone.

Then Thathanai, the Capitayne beyonde the water, and Stharbuzanai with their felowes (to whome kynge Darius hadde sent) dyd their deuour. And the elders of the Jewes buylded, and they prospered thorow ꝑ prophecyenge of Aggeus the prophete and Zacharye the sonne of Aw: and buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundment of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerres kynges of Persia. And they were in fynysshynge the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was in the sixte yere of the raygne of kynge Darius.

And the chyldren of Israel, the preastes, the Leuites, and the other chyldren of captyuitie helde the dedication of the house of God with ioye, and offred at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hundred lambes, foure hundred gotes: and for the synnoffringe for al Israel twelue he gotes, accordyng to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the preastes in their courses, and the Leuites in their offices to ministre vnto God which is at Jerusalem, as is written in the booke of Moses.

And the chyldren of captyuite helde passeuer, vpon the fourtenth daye, of the fyrst moneth: for the preastes and Leuites hadde purified

ryhed them selues, so that they were all clene as one man, and offered Passeouer for all the chyldren of captiuitie, and for their brethren the Preestes, and for theym selues. And the chyldren of Israell, whiche were retourned oute of captiuitie, and all suche as hadde seuered theym selues frome the fylthynesse of the Paynmes in the lande to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feaste of vnleuend breed seuen dayed with ioye: for the Lorde hadde made them gladde, and tourned the herte of the kynge of Assur vnto them, so that theyr handes were strengthed in ỹ worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

¶ By cõmaundement of Artaxerres/Esdras taketh the chyldren of Israel/ and returneth to Jerusalem.

CAPI. VII.

g After these thynges in the raygne of Artaxerres kynge of Persia, there wente vp frome Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Saraiah, the sonne of Azariah, the son of Helkia, the sonne of Helum, the sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Azaria, the son of Maraioth, the sonne of Zaraiah, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Bokt, the son of Abisua, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the chiefe Preeste. This Esdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moses, * which the Lord God of Israell dyd gyue. And the kynge gaue him all he requyred, accordynge to the hand of the Lorde his God vpon him. So went vp certayne of the chyldren of Israel, and of the preestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yere of kynge Artaxerres. And they came to Jerusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seuenth yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the firste moneth began he to goo vp from Babilon: and on the firste daye of the fifth moneth came he to Jerusalem accordinge to the good hande of God vpon him. For Esdras prepared his herte to seke the lawe of the Lorde, and to wo it, and to teache the precept and iudgement in Israel. This is the coppe of the letter that kynge Artaxerres gaue vnto Esdras the Preest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the Lorde, and of his statutes ouer Israell. Unto Esdras the preest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heuen peax and gretynge. I haue commaunded that all they of the people of Israel, and of the preestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche are mynded to go vp to Jerusalem, that they goo with the, beinge sente of the kynge and of the seuen Lordes of the counsell, to vysyte Juda and Jerusalem, according to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande: and that thou take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kynge and the Lordes of his counsell haue gruen of their good wyl vnto the God of Israel (whose habitacion is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and golde thou canst fynde in all the countrey of Babilon: with that also that the people and Preestes gyue of their good wyl vnto the house of God at Jerusalem. Take thou ỹ same and bye diligently with it, calues, lambes, gotes, and sacrifices, and drynckeofferynges, to be offered vpon the aultare of the house of youre God at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren, to wo with the reste of the moneye, that wo after the wyll of youre God. And the vesselles that are gruen the for the ministracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And what so euer thyng more shall be nedfull for the house of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be gruen oute of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerres haue decreed and commaunded to all the kepers of our treasour beyond the water, that loke who so euer Esdras the Preest and scryde in the lawe of the God of heuen requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same diligentlye, vntyll an hundred talentes of syluer, vntyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundred Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundred Batthes of oyle, and salte without measure. What so euer belonged to the rytes of the God of heuen, let the same be wone with diligence for ỹ house of the God of heuen, that there come no wrath of, vpon ỹ kinges realme and his chyldren.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre taxes and custome and yerely rentes vpon anye of the Preestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims, and ministers in the house of this God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou Judges and presidentes to iudge all the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and theym that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyll not dylygentlye fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banysshed or to be condemned in goodes, or to be put in pryson. iii. Esd. viii. c

* Praysed be the Lorde God of youre fathers, which so hath inspyred the kynges hert to garnysshe the house of God at Jerusalem: and hathe enclyned his mercye vnto me in the presence of the kyng and his counsellours, and before all the kynges hye estates. CAP. VIII.

g These are the heades of their fathers that were named, whiche wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kyng Artaxerres raigned. Of the chyldren of Phinees, Gersom: Of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the chyldren of Dauid, Hatus: of the chyldren ii. Esd. viii. c chyldren of Zecaniah, of the children of Pharos, Zacharye, and with him were nombred an hundred and fiftye men: of the chyldren of Pahath, Moab, Elioenai, the sonne of Zaraiah, and with him two hundred men: of the chyldren of Zechaniah the sonne of Jahaziel, and with him thre hundred men: of the chyldren of Adin Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, & with him fiftye men: of the chyldren of Elam Elaiah the sonne of Athaliah, and with hym seuentye men: of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah the sonne of Michael, and with him. lxx. men.

B Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred & eyghtene men: of the chyldren of Selomith the son of Josphiah, and with hym an hundred & three men. Of the children of Bebai, Zacharye the sonne of Bebai, and with him eyght & twenty men. Of the children of Asgad, Johanan the sonne of Hakatan, and with hym an hundred and ten men. Of the last chyldrē of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jehiel and Samatah, and with them thre score men. Of the chyldren of Begui, Uthai and Zabud, and with them seuentye men. And I gathered them togyther by the water that renneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes.

C And when I loked amonge the people and the preestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Elieser, Ariel, Semetah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathā, Zachary and Mosollam the rulers/and Joiarib and Elnathā the teachers, and those sent I vnto Edw the chiefest at Casphia, that they sholde fetche vs ministers for ꝓ house of our God, and I told them what they sholde saye vnto Edw, and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casphia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man frome the chyldren of Moholi the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israell, I meane Sarabia with his sonnes and brethren eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with him Isaiah of the children of Merari, with his brethren and their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whome

D Dauid and the Princes gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twenty, all named by name.

A fastynge proclaymed. And euen there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to be proclaymed, that we myght humble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, and oure children, and all our substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldiours and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the ennemy in the waye. For we had sayd vnto the kynge: The hande of our God is vpon all them that seke him in goodnesse, and his violence and wrathe vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this at our God, and he

E herde vs. Then I tooke out twelue of the chief preestes, Sarabia, and Hasabia, & ten of their brethren with them, and weied them there the siluer and golde, and vesselles for the offeryng vnto the house of our God, whiche the kynge and the lordes of his counsell and princes, and all Israel that were at hand, had gyuen to the offeryng: and there weyed I them vnder their hande, fyue hundred and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of golde of a thousand drammes, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holye vnto the Lorde, therfore are the vesselles holy also, F and so is the syluer and golde that is gyuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chiefe Preestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the Thesaurie of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Preestes and Leuites the weyed syluer and gold and vessell, to bring it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we marched forwarde, from the water of Ahaua, on the twelueth daye of the firste moneth, to goo vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon vs, and delyuered vs frome the hande of the ennemye and lyers in awayte by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the G fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meromoth the sonne of Uria the Preeste, and with him Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with him Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadia the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordynge to the nombre and weyght of euery one. And the weyght was all written at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuytie, whiche were come oute of pryson, offered burntofferynges vnto the God of Israell: twelue bullockes for all Israell, nynetye and fiue rammes: seuentye and seuen lambes, and twelue gotes for a synneofferynge, all to the burntofferynge of the Lorde. And thy delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers, and to the capitaynes on this syde the water. And they auaunced the people, and the house of God.

¶ Esdras complayneth on the people, that had turned them selues from God, and entermaryed with the gentyles.

CAPI. IX.

When all this was performed, the rulers cam to me, and sayde: the people of Israell and the Preestes and Leuites are not seuered from the nations in the landes as touchyng their abhominacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken their doughters, and their sonnes/and haue myxte the holye seed with the nacyons of the landes: and moreouer the hande of the prynces and rulers hath ben peynepall in this trespace. * When I herde this, I tare my clothes and my rayment, and plucte of the heere of my heed and of my berde, and sat mournynge. Then resorted vnto me all suche as feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel, bycause of the great transtranſgreſſion. And I ſate mournynge tyll the euenynge ſacrifice. And aboute the euenynge ſacrifice, I roſe vp fro my heuynesſe, and rente my clothes and my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, and ſpred out my handes vnto ꝯ Lorde my God, and ſayd. My God, I am aſſhamed, and dare not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for our wyckednesſe are growen ouer our heed, & our treſpaces are waxen great vnto the heuen: Sithes the tyme our fathers, haue we ben in great treſpace vnto this daye, ✳ and bicauſe of oure wyckednesſe haue we and oure kynges ben gyuen vp in to the hande of ꝯ kynges of the nacions in to the ſwerde, in to bondage, in to ſpoyle, and in to confuſion of face, as it is come to paſſe this daye.

¶ But now a litle and ſodayne graciouſnes is come from the Lord our God, ſo that ſome of vs are eſcaped, that he maye giue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyght oure eyes, and gyue vs a lytle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and our God hathe not forſaken vs in our bondage, but hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in ꝯ ſight of the kinges of Perſia, that he ſholde gyue vs lyfe, & auaunce the houſe of our God, and buylde vp the deſolate places therof, and to gyue vs an hedge in Juda and Jeruſalem.

And nowe, O our God: what ſhall we ſaye after this? for we haue forſaken thy commaũdementes, whiche thou haſte commaunded vp thy ſeruauntes the Prophetes, and ſayd: The lande vnto whiche ye go to poſſeſſe, is vncleane thorow the filthynesſe of the people of the landes, by their abhominacions wherwith they haue filled it with vncleannes on euerye ſyde.

D Therfore ye ſhall not gyue your doughters to their ſonnes, and their doughters ſhall ye not take vnto your ſonnes, and ſeke not their peax and welthe for euer, that ye maye be ſtronge and enioye the good in the lande, and that ye and your chyldren may haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs, bycauſe of our euyl dedes and great treſpace thou our God haſt ſpared oure wyckednesſes, and haſt gyuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to paſſe this daye.

And neuertheleſſe we haue tourned backe, and haue let goo thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of theſe abhominacions. Wylte thou then be wrothe with vs, tyll we be vtterly conſumed, ſo that nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lorde God of Iſrael thou art righteous, for we remayne yet eſcaped, as it is this daye. Behold in thy preſence are we in oure treſpace, for bycauſe of it there is no ſtandyng before the.

¶ The people repente them / and put awaye theyr ſtraunge wyues.

CAPI. X.

A Whyle Eſdras prayed after this maner, and knowleged, wepte, and laye before the houſe of God, there reſorted vnto him out of Iſrael a very great nombre of men and women, & chyldren: for the people wepte verye ſore. And Sechanias the ſonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Elam, anſwered & ſayd vnto Eſdras: We haue treſpaced agaynſt the Lorde oure God, in ꝯ we haue taken ſtraunge wyues of all the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Iſraell concernynge this, therfore let vs make a couenaunt nowe with our God, to put awaye all the wyues, & ſuche as are borne of them, accordynge to the counſell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, that we maye do accordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good comforte and do it. ✳ Then roſe Eſdras, and toke an othe of the rulers, Preeſtes and Leuites, and of all Iſraell, that they ſholde do accordynge to this worde: and they ſware. And Eſdras ſtode vp before the houſe of God, and wente in to the chambre of Johanan the ſonne of Eliaſib. And when he came thyther, he ate no breed, nor dranke water: for he mourned bycauſe of the tranſgreſſion of them that hadde bene in captiuitie. iii. Eſdr. ix. B

And they cauſed a proclamation be made thorowe oute Juda and Jeruſalem, vnto all the chyldren which had ben in captiuitie, that they ſholde reſorte vnto Jeruſalem: And that who ſo euer came not within thre dayes, accordyng to the determinacion of the rulers and elders, all his ſubſtaunce ſholde be forfeyt, and he to be put out of the congregacion of the captiue. Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin aſſembled vnto Jeruſalem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nyneth monety: and all the people ſate in the ſtrete before the houſe of God, and trembled bycauſe of theyr ſynnes, and for the rayne. And Eſdras ꝯ preeſt ſtode vp and ſayd vnto them: ✳ Ye haue tranſgreſſed, in that ye haue taken ſtraũge wiues, to make the treſpace of Iſraell yet more: confeſſe nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, and do his pleaſure, and ſeuer your ſelues from the people of the lande, and from the ſtraunge wyues. Then anſwered all the aſſemble, and ſayd with a loud voyce: Let it be done as thou haſt ſayde. But the people are many, and it is a raynye wether, and they can not ſtande here without, neyther is this a worke of one day or two, for we are many that haue offended in this tranſgreſſion. Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the congregacion, ꝯ all they whiche haue taken ſtraunge wyues in oure cityes, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the elders of euery cite, and theyr Judges with them, tyll the wrathe of our God be tourned awaye from vs for this offence. *Deut. vii. & Judith. iii. &

Then were appoynted Jonathan the ſonne of Aſahel, and Jahaſia, the ſonne of Thekua ouer this matter: And Moſollam and Sabathai the Leuite holpe them. And the chyldren of the captyuitie, dyd euen ſo. And Eſdra the Preeſt, and the auncient heades thorowe the houſe of theyr fathers, and all that were now reherſed by name, ſeuered them ſelues, and ſat C

them downe on the firſt daye of the tenth moneth to examyn this matter. And in the fyrſte daye of the fyrſte moneth they made an ende concernynge all the men þ̄ had taken ſtraunge wyues.

And amonge the chyldren of the Prieſtes there were men founde þ̄ hadde taken ſtraunge wyues, namely amonge the chyldren of Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec and of his brethren, Maaſiah, Eliezer, Jarib and Godoliah. And they gaue their handes there vpon, that they wolde put awaye their wyues: and for their offering to giue a ramme for their treſpace. Among the children of Emer, Hanani, and Zabadiah. Among the children of Harim, Maaſiah, Eliah, Semeiah, Jehiel. and Oſias. Amonge the children of Phaſhur, Elioenai, Maaſia, Iſmael, Nathanael, Joſabed and Elaſa. Amonge the Leuites, Joſabed, Semei and Kelaia, which ſame is Kalithah, Pathahiah, Juda and Eleazar. Amonge the ſingers: Eliaſib. Amonge the porters: Helum, Telem and Uri.

Of Iſrael. Amonge the children of Pharos: Remiah, Jeſiah, Melchia, Miamin, Eleazar, Melchia, and Banaiah. Amonge the children of Elam, Mathania, Zacharye, Jehiel, Abdi, Jerimoth and Elia. Amonge the chyldren of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliaſib, Mathania, Jerimoth, Zabad and Aziza. Amonge the chyldren of Bebai, Johanã, Hanania, Zabai and Athlai. Amonge the children of Bani: Moſollam, Maluch, Adaia, Jaſub, Saal and Jerimoth. Amonge the children of Pahath Moab, Edna, Calal, Banaiah, Maaſia, Mathaniah, Bezeleel, Benui, and Manaſſes. Amonge the children of Harim, Eliezer, Iſchiah, Melchiah, Semeiah, Simeon, Ben Jamin, Maluch and Samarias. Among the chyldrẽ Haſem, Mathathya, Zabed, Elipheleth, Jeremai, Manaſſe and Semei. Amonge the children of Bani, Madai, Amram, Huel, Baneay, Badaia, Uania, Maremoth, Eliaſib, Mathania, Mathanai, Jaaſan, Banui, Benui, Salamia, Nathan, Adaia, Machnadebai, Saſai, Sarai, Aſarael, Selemiahu, Samaſum, Amariah, and Joſeph. Amonge the children of Nebo, Jaiel, Mathathiah, Zabed, Zebina, Jedai, Joel and Banaiah. All theſe had taken ſtraunge wyues. And among þ̄ ſame wiues there were ſome that had borne children.

The ende of the fyrſte boke of Eſdras.

THE BOKE OF NEHEMIAS, OTHERVVYSE CALLED THE SECONDE BOKE OF ESDRAS.

Nehemy butteler to kynge Artaxerxes, prayeth to god for the people.

CAPI. I.

THese are the actes of Nehemie the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in the moneth Casleu, in the twenty yere, that I was in the castell at Sulā: and Hanani one of my brethren came wt certayne men of Juda, and I asked them howe the Jewes dyd that were delyuered and escaped from the captiuitie, and how it wente at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuitie are there in the lande in greate myserie and rebuke. * The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the gates therof are brent with fyre.

When I herde these wordes, I sate me downe and wepte, and moumed thre dayes, and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lorde God of heuen, thou greate and terrible God, * thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for them that loue the, and obserue thy commaundementes: Lette thyne eares harken, and thyne eyes be open, that thou mayste heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, whiche I praye nowe before the, daye and nyght, for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowlege the synnes of the children of Israell, whiche we haue committed agayn̄ the. And I and my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in that we haue not kepte the commaundementes, statutes and lawes, whiche thou commaundedst thy seruaunte Moses. Yet call to remembraunce the worde that thou commaundedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: Yf ye transgresse, I wyll scatter you abrode amonge the nacyons. But yf ye tourne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and do them: thoughe ye were caste out vnto the vttermost parte of heuen, yet wyll I gather you thence, and bringe you euen vnto the place that I haue chosen for my name, to dwelle there. They are thy seruauntes, and thy people, whome thou haste delyuered thorowe thy greate power, and stronge hande. O Lorde, let thyne eares harken to the prayer of thy seruaunte, and the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose delyre is to feare thy name, and let thy seruaunt prospere this daye, and graunte hym mercye in the syghte of this man: for I was the kynges butler.

After Nehemy had obtayned letters of Artaxerxes, he cōmeth to Jerusalem, and builded the walles.

CAP. II.

IN the moneth of Nisan, in the .xx. yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wine stode before him, I toke vp the wine and gaue it vnto the kynge, and I was heuye in his presence. Then sayde the kynge vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sycke, this is not without cause, but there is somwhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afrayde & sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer: sholde I not loke sadly? the cittye of my fathers burial lieth waste, and the gates therof are consumed with fire. Then sayd the king vnto me: what is thy requeste? thē made I my prayer to the God of heuen, and said vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and if thy seruaūt be fauoured in thy syght: I beseche the sende me in to Juda, vnto the city of my fathers burial, that I may buylde it. And the kynge said vnto me, and also the quene that sate by him: how longe shall thy iourney continue, & when wilt thou come again? And it pleased the king to sende me, and I set him a tyme, and sayd vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, let him giue me letters to the captaynes beyonde the water, that they may conueye me ouer, tyll I come in to Juda: and letters vnto Asaph keper of ꝑ kings wod, that he may gyue me wod for beames to the gates of the temple, for the towres of the house, for the walles of the city, and for the house that I shal entre in to. And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hande of God vpon me. And when I came to the captaynes beyonde the water, I deliuered them the kynges letters. And the kynge had sent captaynes and horsemen with me. But whē Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites herde this, it greued thē sore, that there was come a man which sought ꝑ welth of the chyldren of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had ben there thre dayes, I gat me vp in the night season, and a few men with me: for I tolde no man what God had gyuē me in myne hert to do at Jerusalem, and there was not one beast with me, saue that I rode vpon. And I rode by night vnto valey gate before the dragon well, and to the donge gate, & considered the walles of Jerusalem that were broken downe, and the gates therof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well gate, and to the kinges condite, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it coulde go vnder me. Then went I on in the night by the broke syde, and considered the wall, and turned backe and came home agayne to valeye gate.

And the rulers knewe not wyther I wente, or what I dyd, for hither to had I not tolde ꝑ Jewes and the preestes, the cōsellers and the rulers, & the other that laboured in the worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the myserye that we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre, come let vs buyld vp the walles of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproche. And I tolde them of the good good hande of my God, whiche was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they said: then let vs arise & build: and their handes were strēgthed to good. But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobias the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesem ỹ Arabian herde this, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs and said: what is this that ye do? Will ye fal away agayne from the king? Then answered I them, and sayd: the God of heuē it is that causeth vs to prosper: and we be his seruauntes. Let vs arise and build. As ☞ for you, ye haue no portion nor right nor remēbraunce in Ierusalem.

¶ The nombre of them that buylded the walles.

CAPI. III.

A And Eliasib the high preest gat him vp with his brethren the preestes, and buylded the shepegate. They repayred it, & sette vp the dores of it: euen vnto the tower Meah repayred they it, namely vnto the ✝ tower of Hananeel. Nexte vnto him buylded the men of Jericho. And beside him buylded Zachur the sonne of Amri. But the fyshgate dyd the children of Asanah buylde, they couered it, and set on the dores lockes and barres of it. Nexte vnto him buylded Marimoth the sonne of Uriah the sonne of Hakoz. Nexte vnto him buylded Mosolam the sonne of Barachiah the sonne B of Mesesabeel. Next vnto him buylded Zadoc ỹ son of Baana. Next vnto him buylded they of Thekua. But their great mē put not their neckes to the seruice of their Lorde.

Jere.xxxi.g Zacha.xiiii.c

The oldegate buylded Joiada the sonne of Paseah, and Mosolam the sonne of Besodiah they couered it, and sette on the dores, lockes, and barres. Nexte vnto them buylded Malatiah of Gabaon, and Jadon of Merano, men of Gabaon, and of Maspha for the seate of the capitayne on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Uziel the sonne of Harhaiah the goldsmyth. Nexte vnto hym buylded C Hananiah the Apotecarys sonne, and they repayred Jerusalem vnto the brode wall. Nexte vnto him buylded Raphaiah the sonne of Hur the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalē. Next vnto him buylded Jedaiah the sonne of Haremaph ouer agaynst his house. Next vnto him buylded Hatus the sonne of Hasabonias. But Melchia the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the son of Pahath Moab buylded the other pece, and the towre beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Helum the sonne of Halohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalem, and his daughters.

The valey gate buylded Hanun, and the citesyns of Zanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres, and a thousande cubites on the walle, vnto dongegate. But dongegate buylded Melchiah the sonne of Rechab the ruler of the fourth parte of the vyneyardes: he buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres therof. But the wellgate buylded Helum the sonne of Cholhasah, the ruler of the fourth part of Maspha. He buylded it, and couered it, and set on the dores, lockes, and barres, and the wall vnto the pole Siloah by the kynges garden, vnto steppes that goo downe frome the citye of Dauid. After him buylded Nehemias the sonne of Asbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethsur vntyll the other syde ouer agaynst the sepulchres of Dauid, and the pole Asuia, and vnto the house of the myghtye.

After him buylded the Leuites, Rehum the sonne of Bani. Next vnto him buylded Hasabiah the ruler of the halfe quarter of Keila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethren, Bauai the sonne of Henadad, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Keilah. After him buylded Ezer the sonne of Josua the ruler of Maspha, the other pece harde ouer agaynst the harneste corner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabai the other pece worshyppfully & costly, from the corner vnto the dore of ỹ house of Eliasib the hyghe preest. After him buylded Marimuth the sonne of Uriah the son of Hacos the other pece, from the dore of the house of Eliasib, euen as long as the house of Eliasib extended. After him buylded the preestes, the men of the countrey. After him buylded Benjamin and Hasub ouer against their house. After them Asariah the son of Maasiah the son of Ananiah nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad, the other peace frome the house of Asariah, vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner. After him buylded Phalel the sonne of Usai ouer against the corner and the hye towre, whiche lyeth out ouer from the kynges house, beside the courte of the pryson. After him Phadaiah the sonne of Pharos (as for the Nethinims they dwelte in Ophel, vnto the water gate, towarde ỹ East where the towre lyeth oute.) After him buylded they of Thekua the other pece ouer against the great towre that lyeth outwarde, and vnto the wall of ✝ Ophel.

But frome horse gate forth buylded the preestes, euerye one ouer agaynste his house. After them buylded Zadok the sonne of Emer ouer agaynst his house. After him buylded Semaiah the sonne of Sechaniah keper of Eastgate. After him builded Hananiah son of Helemiah, & Hanun son of Zalaph the sixt, the other pece. After him buylded Mosolam the sonne of Berachiah ouer agaynste his treasurie. After him buylded Melchiah the goldsmythes son, vntyll the house of ỹ Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer agaynst the counsel gate, & to the parlour in the corner. And betwene the parlour of the corner vnto shepe gate buylded the goldsmythes and the marchauntes.

¶ The buyldynge of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it beinge redy harneysed: bycause their enemyes shulde inuade them.

CAPI. IIII.

When Sanabalat herde that we buylded the wall, he was wroth, and toke great indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayd before his brethren and the hoste of Samaria;

gaynst what do the weake Iewes? shall they be thus suffered? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one daye? shall they make the stones hole agayne that are brought to dust and dyrt? And Tobias the Ammonite beside him sayd: let them build on, yf a fox go vp he shall breake downe their stony wall. Heare O thou oure God how we are despised, turne their shame vpon their owne heed, that thou maiste gyue them ouer in to despitynge in the lande of their captiuitie. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not oute their synne frome thy presence: for they haue prouoked the build ers. Yet builded we the walle, and ioyned it hole togyther vnto the halfe heygthe. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanabalat and Tobias, and the Arabians, and Ammonites, and Asdodites herde that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begon to stoppe vp the gappes, they were very wrothe, and conspyred all together to come and fyght against Ierusalem, and to make an hynderaunce therin. Nerthelesse we made our prayer vnto oure God and set watchemen vpon the walle daye and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is to feble, and there is to much dust, we are not able to build vp the wall. And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not knowe neither se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, and slee them, and hinder the worke. But when the Iewes ꝑ dwelte beside them came out of all the places where they dwelte aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as ten tymes/ then set I the people after their kynredes with their swerdes, speres and bowes benethe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chiefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayde of them, ✳ thynke vpon the greate Lorde, whiche ought to be feared, and fyght for youre brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Neuerthelesse when our ennempes herde that we had goten worde of it, God brought their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forde it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whiche builded on the walle, and bare burthens frome those that laded them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with the other helde they their weapen. And euerye one that builded, hadde his swerde gyrde by his syde, and so builded they/ and the trompetters stode beside me. And I sayde vnto the principall men and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is greate and large, and we are diuided vpon the walle one farre from an other. Loke in what place nowe ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thither vnto vs. ✳ Our God shal fight for vs, and we will be labourynge in the worke. And the halfe parte of them helde the speares from the morynge sprynge, tyll the starres came forthe. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with his seruaunte at Ierusalem, that in the nyght season, we maye gyue attendaunce to the watche, and to laboure on the daye tyme. Surely I and my brethren and my seruauntes, and the men of the watche behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe our selues.

¶ The people are vexed with hoger. Nehemias forbyddeth vsurye. He requyreth not the ryghte of a capitayne.

CAPI. V.

AND there arose a great complaint of the people and of their wyues against their A brethren ꝑ Iewes. And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and oure doughters are to many, let vs take corne for them and eate, that we maye lyue. Some sayd: let vs set oure landes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, and take vp corne in the derth. But some sayd: let vs borowe moneye of the kynges tribute for our landes and vineyardes. Now are our brethrens bodyes as our owne bodyes, and their children as our children: elles shulde we subdue our sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued alredye, and no strengthe is there in our handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

But when I herde their complaynte and suche wordes, it displeased me sore, and I reuolued so in my mynde, that I rebuked the B heades & rulers, and sayd vnto them: ✳ wyll Deute. xxiii. 8 ye requyre vsurye one of an other? And I ꝙ vsurye.
brought a great congregacion agaynste them, and sayd vnto them: we (after our habilitie) haue bought our brethren the Iewes, whiche were solde vnto the Paynimes. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whome ye haue bought vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and couldе fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye wo. D Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heythen oure ennempes? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsurye, let vs leaue it. Therfore this same E daye, se ye restore them their landes agayne, their vyneyardes, oyle gardens, and houses, yea, the hundred parte of the money, of the corne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayd they: we wyll restore them agayne, and wyll requyre nothynge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the preestes, & toke an othe of them, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frome his house and laboure, that maynteyneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lorde. And ꝑ people dyd so. And frome the tyme that it was commytted vnto me to be a capytayne in the lande of Juda, namely frome the twentyeth yere vnto the two and thirtyeth yere of kynge

☞ Artaxerxes (that is twelue yere) I and my brethren dyd not eate suche sustenaunce as was D giuen to a capitayne. For the olde capitaynes that were before me, had ben chargeable vnto the people, and hadde taken of them breed and wyne, and fourty sicles of syluer: yea and their seruauntes hadde oppressed the people.
But so did not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpō the walle, and boughte no lande. And all my ser-uantes came thyther together vnto the worke Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyftye of the Iewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me from the Panyms that are a-boute vs, and there was prepared me dayly an oxe, and sixe chosen sheepe and byrdes, and euer ones in ten dayes a greate quantite of wyne.
Yet required not I the ryuyng of a capitayne, for the vondage was greuous vnto the peo-

CAPI. VI.

A And when Sanabalat, Tobiah, and Ge sem the Arabian, and the other of oure ennemyes herd that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no moo breakes therin (how be it at the same tyme I had not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanabalat and Gesem sente vnto me, sayinge: come and let vs mete togyther in the villages vpon the playne of the citye Ono. Neuertheleſſe they thoughte to woo me euyll. Notwithstandynge
I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a great busyneſſe to do, I can not come downe.
The worke sholde stande styl yf I were slacke and came downe to you. How be it they sente vnto me as good as foure tymes after ỳ same B maner. And I gaue the same answere. Then sente Sanabalat his seruaunte vnto me the fyfth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: it was tolde the Hey-then, and Gesem hathe sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldeſt the walle, and wylte be their kyng in theſe maters, and hast ordeyned the Prophetes to preache of the at Ieruſalem, and to saye he is kyng of Juda. Now shal this come to the kinges eares: come now therfore, & let vs take hur counsel togyther. Neuerthe-leſſe I sent vnto him, saying: there is no suche thynge wone as thou sayeſt: thou haſte fayned it out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayde, and thought:
they shall withdrawe their handes frome the worke, that they shall not laboure. How be it C I strengthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semeiah the sonne of De-laiah the son of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe within, and said: let vs come togy-ther in to the house of God, euen in to the mid-des of the temple, and shut the dores of the tem ple: for they will come to sle the, yea euen in the night will they come to put ỳ to deth. But I said: sholde any suche man as I flee? Who that being as I am, that wil go in to the temple to saue his lyfe? I wyll not go in. For I perceyued ỳ God had not sent him; Yet spake he prophesie vpon me, neuertheleſſe Tobias & Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therfore tohe he the money, that throught feare I sholde so do, and synne: that they might haue an euill reaporte of me, to blaspheme me. Ye God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, according vnto theſe their workes, & of the prophet Noadiah, and of the other prophetes that wolde haue put me in feare. And the wall was finyſshed on the fyue and twentye daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fyftye dayes.
And when all our ennemyes herde therof, all the Heythen that were about vs, were afrayd and their courage fayled them: for they per-ceyued that this worke came of God. And at the same tyme were there manye of the chefe of Juda, whole letters wente vnto Tobias, & from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Juda ỳ were swore vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Johanan had the dough-ter of Moſolam the sonne of Barachiah, and they spake good of him before me and tolde him my wordes) and Tobias sente letters, to put me in feare.

¶ After the wall ones buylded the watche is ap-poynted. They that returned frome the captyuyte are nombred.

CAPI. VII.

When we hadde buylded the wall I hong ed on the wores, and the porters, singers, & Leuites were appoynted. And I commaunded my brother Hanani and Hana-niah the ruler of the palace at Ieruſalem (for he was a faythfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other,) And I sayd vnto them:
let not the gates of Ieruſalem be opened eyr the sonne be hote. And whyle they are yet stan-dynge in the watche the dores shal be shut and barred. And there were certayne citezins of Jeruſalem appoynted to be watchemen, euery one in his watche, and aboute his houſe. And the citye, was large of rowme and greate, but the people were few therin, & the houſes were not buylded.

And my God dyd put in my herte that I gathered togyther the principall men, and the people to nombre them, and I founde a regi-ſter of the nombre of them, whiche came vp afore oute of the captiuite: and founde written therin: ✳ theſe are the sonnes of the lande that wente vp from the captiuite of the cap-tinge awaye (whom Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon had brought awaye) and came a-gayne to Ieruſalem and Juda, euery one vnto his city, whiche came with Zorobabel: Je-ſua, Nehemias, Asariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mardochee, Belsan, Mesparath, Begual, Nahum, and Baanah.

This is the nombre of the men of the people of Israel. The childre of Pharos were two

The chyldren of Halom, three hundred and eyghte and twentye: the chyldren of Bezai, three hundred and foure and twentye: the chyldren of Hariph, an hundred and twelue: the chyldren of Gabaon, fyue and nynetye: the men of Bethlehem and Nethophah, an hundred foure score and eyghte: the men of Anathoth, an hundred and eyghte and twentye: the men of Beth Asmoth, two and fourtye: the men of Kariath Jarim, Cephirah and Beeroth, seuen hundred and three and fourtye: the men of Rama and Gaba, syxe hundred and one and twentye: the men of Hachmas, an hundred and two and twentye: the men of Bethel and Ai, an hundred and three and twentye: the men of Nebo, an hundred and two and fyftye: the chyldren of the other Elam, a thousande, two hundred and foure and fyftye: the chyldren of Harim, three hundred and twentye: the chyldren of Jericho, three hundred and fyue and fourtye: the chyldren of Lodhadid and Ono, seuen hundred and one and twentye: the chyldren of Senaah, three thousande, nyne hundred and thirtye.

The preestes. The chyldren of Jadaiah of the house of Jesua, nyne hundred seuentye and three: the chyldren of Emer, a thousande and two and fyftye: the chyldren of Pashur a thousande, two hundred and seuen and fourtye: the chyldren of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

The Leuites. The chyldren of Jesua of Cadmiel amonge the chyldren of Hodauah foure and seuentye. The syngers. The chyldren of Asaph, an hundred and eyght and fourty. The porters: The chyldren of Selum, the chyldren of Ater, the chyldren of Talmon / the chyldren of Acub, the chyldren of Hatita, the chyldren of Sobai, all togyther an hundred and eyght and thirtye.

The Nethinims. The chyldren of Ziha, the chyldren of Hasupha, the chyldren of Tebaoth, the chyldren of Ceros, the chyldren of Sia, the chyldren of Phadon, the chyldren of Lebanah, the chyldren of Hagaba, the chyldren of Salmai, the chyldren of Hanan, the chyldren of Gidel, the chyldren of Gaher, the chyldren of Raaia, the chyldren of Rasin, the chyldren of Necoda, the chyldren of Gesem, the chyldren of Uza, the chyldren of Phaseah, the chyldren of Besai, the chyldren of Meunim: the chyldren of Nephusasim, the chyldren of Bachuc, the chyldren of Hacupha, the chyldren of Harhur, the chyldren of Bazlith, the chyldren of Mahida, the chyldren of Harsa, the chyldren of Bercos, the chyldren of Sisera, the chyldren of Thamah, the chyldre of Nesiah, the chyldren of Hatipha.

The chyldren of Salomons seruauntes: The chyldren of Sotai, the chyldren of Sophereth, the chyldren of Pherida, the chyldren of Jaala, the chyldren of Darcon, the chyldren of Gidel, the chyldren of Saphatiah, the chyldre of Hatil, the chyldren of Pochereth of Zabaim, the chyldren of Amon. All the Nethinims & the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes were three hundred, nynetye and two.

And these wente vp also of Thel Mela, Thel Harsa, Cherub, Adon and Emer: but they coulde not shewe theyr fathers house, nor theyr seed, whether they were of Israell. The chyldren of Dalaiah, the chyldren of Tobia, and the chyldren of Necoda, fyue hundred and two and fourtye. And of the Preestes the chyldren of Habaiah: the chyldren of Hacos, the chyldren of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the doughters of Berzilai the Galaadyte to wyfe, and was named after theyr name. These soughte the register of their pedigrue, & when they founde it not, they were put frome the Preesthode. And Hathirsatha sayd vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the moost holye, tyll there came vp a Preest with the light and perfectnesse,

The hole congregacion as one man, was two and fourtye thousande, three hundred and three score, beside their seruauntes and maydes, of whome there were seuen thousande, three hundred and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundred and seuen and fourtye syngynge men and women, seuen hundred and fyue and fourtye horses, two hundred and fyue and fourtye mules, foure hundred and fyue and thirtye camelles: fyue thousande, seuen hundred and twentye asses.

And certayne of the auncyent fathers gaue vnto the worke. Hathirsatha gaue to the treasure a thousande drammes, fiftye basens, fyue hundred and thirtye Preestes garmentes. And some of the chiefe fathers gaue vnto the treasure of the worke twentye thousande drammes, two thousande and two hundred pound of syluer. And the other people gaue twentye thousande drammes, and two thousande pounde of syluer, and three score and seuen Preestes garmentes. And the Preestes and Leuites, the porters, the syngers, and the other of the people and the Nethinims, and all Israell dwelte in theyr cities.

A When the seuen moneth drewe nye, and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr cytyes, all the people gathered togyther, as one man, vpon the strete before the water gate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scrybe, that he sholde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche the Lorde commaunded to Israel.

iiii.Re.xxiii.a

* And Esdras the Preeste broughte the lawe before the congregation, bothe of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth, and redde therin in the strete that is before water gate (frome the morynge vntyll the noone daye) before men and women, and suche as coulde vnderstande it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scrybe stode vpon an hyghe pulpyt of wodde, whiche they hadde made for the preachynge, and beside him stode Mathathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Urias, Helkiah, and Maaseiah on his ryghte hande: and on his lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zacharye and Mosolam.

The boke of the lawe is red to the people.

B And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras prayse the Lorde the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen/ with theyr handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the grounde. And Jesua, Baani, Serabiah, Jamin, Acuba, Sebathai, Hodaiah, Maasiah, Celita, Azariah, Josabed, Hanan, Phalaiah, and the Leuites caused the people to giue hede vnto the law, and the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and playnely, so that men vnderstode the thynge that was redde. And Nehemias (whiche is Hathirsatha) and Esdras the preest and the scrybe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holye vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye sorye therfore, and wepe not. For al the people wepte when they herde the wordes of the lawe.

C Therfore sayde he vnto them: goo youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete/ and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holy vnto oure Lorde, be not you sorye therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is youre strengthe. And the Leuites spilled the people, and sayd: hold youre peace, for the daye is holye / vexe not ye your selues. And al the people went their way to eate and drynke, and sende part vnto other, and to make greate myrthe, bycause they hadde vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye assembled the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the Preestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scrybe, that he shoulde teache theym the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe

* how the Lorde hadde commaunded by Moses, that the chyldren of Israel shoulde dwell in boothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaymed, in all their cytyes, and at Jerusalem, sayinge: goo vp vnto the mounte and fetche Olyue braunches, Pyne braunches, Myrt braunches, Palme braunches, and braunches of thycke trees, to make boothes, as it is wrytten.

And the people went vp and fet, and made them boothes, euerye one vpon the rofe of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God. and in the strete by water gate, and in the strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregacion of theym that were come agayne oute of the captiuitie, made boothes, and dwelte therin: for sythens the tyme of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, had not the chyldren of Israell wone so, and there was verye greate gladnesse. And euerye daye frome the fyrst daye vnto the laste, redde he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eyghte daye they made a gatherynge, accordynge to the maner.

¶ The people repent and forsake theyr straunge wiues. Esdras reproueth the benefytes of God and the synnes of the people.

CAPI. IX.

IN the foure and twentye daye of this moneth, came the chyldren of Israel togyther with * fastynge and sacke clothes, and erth vpon them, and separated the seed of Israell from all the straunge chyldren, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and redde in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde theyr God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshypped the Lorde theyr God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hygh, namelye Jesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Buni, Sarebiah, Bani and Chanani, and cryed loude vnto the Lord their God. And the Leuites, Jesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebaniah, Phathahiah, sayd: stande vp, prayse the Lord your God for euer: and let thankes be gyuen vnto the name of thy glorye, whiche excelleth all thankesgyuynge and prayse. Lorde, thou alone hast made heuen, and the heuen of all heuens, with all their hoste, the earthe and al that is therin, the see and all that is therin: thou gyuest lyfe vnto all, and the hoste of heuen bowe them selues vnto the. Thou art the Lorde God, that haste chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of * Ur in Chaldea, * and calledst him Abraham, and foundest his herte faythfull before the, * and madest a couenaunt with him to gyue vnto his seed the land of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Jebusites, and Gergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte ryghtous, * and hast consydered the myserye of our fathers in Egypte, and herde their complaynt by the red see / and shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, and on all his seruauntes, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they were presumptuous and cruell agaynste theym, and so madest thou the name as it is this daye. And the rede see dyddest thou diuyde in sonder before them, so that they wente thorowe the myddes of the see drye shoed: and their persecuters threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the myghtye waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudye pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre, to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they went.

L * Thou camest downe also vpon mounte Sinai, and spakest vnto them frome heuen, and gauest them ryghte iudgementes, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto them thy holye Saboth, and commaundedst them preceptes, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaut: and * gauest them breed frome heauen when they were hungrye, and * broughtest forthe water for them oute of the rocke when they were thyrstye: and promysedst them that they sholde go in and take possession of the lande, ouer which thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande for to gyue them.

But oure fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not thy commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not myndeful of the wonders that thou dyddest for theym: but became sturdye and headye, in so moche that they tourned backe to their bondage in their disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercyfull, pacyent, and of greate goodnelle, and forsokest them not. * And thoughe they made a moulten calfe, (and sayd: this is thy God that broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte) and dyd greate blasphemyes, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernesse, accordyng to thy greate mercy. * And the cloudye pyller departed not from them on the daye tyme to leade them the waye, neyther the piller of fyre in the nyght season, to shewe them light in the way that they went.

And thou gauest theym thy good spirytе to enfourme them, * and withheldest not thy Manna frome theyr mouthe, * and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. Fourty yeres longe madest thou prouysion for theym in the wyldernesse, so that they lacked nothynge * their clothes wared not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes and nacions, and partedst theym accordynge to their portcions, so that they possessed * the lande of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og the kynge of Basan. And their chyldren multiplyedst thou as the sterres of heauen, and broughtest them in to the lande wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they sholde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And the chyldren wente in, and possessed the lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabiters of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them in to their hande, and theyr kynges and the people of the lande, that they myghte do with them what they wolde. And they wanne theyr stronge cityes, and a fatte lande, and toke possession of houses that were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged oute, vyneyardes, oyle gardens, and manye frutefull trees: and they ate and were fylled, and became fat, and lyued in welthe thorowe thy greate goodnesse. Neuertheleſſe they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynste the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, and slewe thy Prophetes (whiche exhorted them so earnestly that they sholde conuerte vnto the) and dyd great blasphemyes. Therfore gauest thou the ouer in to the hande of their ennemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble they cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them frome heuen, and thorowe thy greate mercye, thou gauest them sauiours, whiche helped them out of the hande of their ennemies. But when they came to reste, they tourned backe agayne to do euyll before the: therfore lefte̊st thou them in the hande of their ennemies, so that they had the dominion ouer them. So they conuerted, & M cried vnto the, and thou herdest them from heuen, and many tymes hast thou deliuered them accordynge to thy great mercye, and testifiedst vnto them, that they sholde turne agayne vnto thy lawe.

Notwithstandynge they were proude, and hardened not vnto thy commaundementes, but synned in thy lawes, (* whiche a man sholde do, and lyue in them) and toured the shoulder awaye, and were styffenecked, & wold not heare. And manye yeres dyddest thou forbeare them, and diddest witnesse vnto the̊ thorowe thy spirite, euen by the office of thy Prophetes, and yet wolde they not heare. Therfore gauest thou them in to the hande of the nacions in the landes. But for thy greate mercyes sake, thou hast not vtterly consumed the̊, neither forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and mercyfull God.

* Lew. xviii. & Roma. x. a. Galat. iii. b Ezechi. xx. b

* Nowe our God, thou great God, myghtye and dradfull, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy, regarde not a lytle all the trauayle that hath happened vnto vs, and our kynges, prynces, preestes, prophetes, fathers / and all thy people, frome the tyme of the kynges of Assur, vnto this daye. Thou arte ryghtous in all that thou hast broughte vpon vs: for thou hast wone ryghte. As for vs, we haue ben vngodlye, and oure kynges, prynces, preestes and fathers haue not wone after thy lawe, nor regarded thy commaundementes, and thy ernest exhortacions, wherwith thou hast exhorted theym, and haue not serued the in theyr kyngdome, and in thy great goodes that thou gauest them, and in the large and plentious lande whiche thou gauest them, and haue not conuerted frome theyr wycked workes. Behold, therfore are we in bondage this daye: euen in the lande that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes therof/behold, there are we bondmen. And great is the encrease of it vnto the kynges, whome thou hast set ouer vs bicause of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer our bodyes and catell, and we are in greate trouble. Vpon all this therfore we make a sure couenaunt, and

A THese sealers were: Nehemias (that is) Hathirsatha the sonne of Hachaliah and Zedekiah, Saraiah, Asariah, Jeremye, Phashur, Amariah, Malchiah, Hatus, Sebanias, Malluch, Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, Daniel, Jenthon, Baruch, Mosolam, Abiah, Miamin, Maasiah, Belgai, and Semeiah: these were preestes. The Leuites were: Jesua the sonne of Azaniah, Benui amonge the chyldren of Henadad, and Cadmiel. And their brethren: Sechanias, Hodiah, Celita, Phalaiah, Hanan, Micha, Rohob, Hasabiah, Sachur, Serebiah, Sabanias, Hodiah, Bani and Baninu. The heedes of the people were: Phares, Pahath Moab, Elam, Zathua, Bani, Bonni, Azgad, Bebai, Adonias, Begoai, Adin, Ater, Ezechias, Asur, Hodiah, Hasum, Bezai, Hariph Anathoth, Nebai, Magphias, Mosolam, Hesir, Mesesabel, Zadoc, Jaddua, Phalatia, Hanan, Anaiah, Hosea, Hananiah, Hasub, Haloh es, Phaleha, Hobek, Rehum, Hasebnah, Maasiah, Abiah, Hanan, Anan, Malluch, Harim and Baanah.

B And the other people, the Preestes, Leuites, porters, syngers, Nethinims, and all they that had seuered them selues frome the people in the landes vnto the lawe of God, with their wyues, sonnes, and doughters / as many as couloe vnderstande it, and their lordes that had rule of them, receyued it for their brethren.

Iosu. xxiiii. c. & ii. Para. xv. c. ✳ And they came to sweare, and to bynde theym selues with an othe to walke in Gods lawe, whiche was gyuen by Moses the seruaunt of God, that they wolde kepe and do accordynge vnto all the commaundementes, iudgementes and statutes of the Lorde oure God: ✳ and that we wolde not gyue oure doughters vnto the people in the lande, neyther take their doughters for oure sonnes. And Leuiti. xxv. a. Deuter. xv. a. let the seuenth yere be free concernyng all maner of charge.

C And we decreed a statute vpon oure selues, to gyue yerely the thyrde parte of a sycle to the ministracion in the house of oure God, namely to the shewbreed, to the dayly meate offerynge, to the dayly burntofferynge of the Sabothes, of the new mones and feast dayes, and to the thinges that were sanctified, and to the synneofferynges, to reconcyle Israel withall, and to all the busynesse in the house of our God.

And we caste the lot amonge the preestes, Leuites, and the people, for offerynge of the wood to be brought in to the house of our God from yere to yere, after the houses of oure fathers, that it myght be brent at tymes appoynted, vpon the aulter of the Lorde our God, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and yerely to bryng the firstborne of our land, and the firstborne of our frutes of all trees, yere by yere, vnto the house of the Lorde: and the firstborne of oure sonnes, and of our cattell, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and the firstborne of oure oxen and of our shepe, that we sholde brynge all this to the house of oure God, vnto the preestes that minister in ỹ house of oure God: and that we sholde bryng the firstborne of our meates, and of oure drynkes, and the frutes of all maner trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto the preestes to the chestes of the house of oure God. And the tithes of our lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites might haue the tithes in al ỹ cities of our ministracion.

And the Preeste the sonne of Aaron shall with the Leuites haue also of the tythes of the Leuites, so that the Leuites shall brynge vp the tithes of their tithes vnto the house of oure God, to the chestes in the treasure house. For the chyldren of Israel and the children of Leui shall brynge vp the firste frutes of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the chestes. And there shall be the vesselles of the sanctuarye, and the preestes that minister, and the porters and syngers, that we forsake not the house of our God.

¶ Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was buylded, and with in the cytyes of Juda.

CAP. XI.

AND the rulers of the people dwelte at Jerusalem. But the other people caste lottes therfore, so that among ten one parte went to Jerusalem in to the holy cyty to dwell, and nyne partes in the cities. And the people thanked al the men that were willing to dwell at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And euerye one dwelt in his possession, and in theyr cityes of Israell, the Preestes, Leuites, the Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the chyldren of Juda and of Ben Jamin.

Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Vsiah the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Saphatiah, the sonne of Mahalaleel, of the chyldren of Phares. And Maasiah the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chol Hose, the sonne Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Jotarib, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Siloni. All the chyldren of Phares that dwelte at Jerusalem, were foure hundred thre score and eyght valiaunt men.

These are the chyldren of Ben Jamin: Sallu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed, the sonne of Phadaia, the sonne of Colaiah, the sonne of Maasiah, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isaiah. And after him Abai, Sellai, And nyne hundred and eyghte and twentye.

Joel

Joel the sonne of Zechri had the ouersyghte of them: & Juda the sonne of Senuah ouer ꝑ seconde parte of the cytye.

Of the preestes there dwelte: Idaia the sonne of Ioiarib, Jachin, Saraiah the sonne of Helkia the sonne of Mosolam, ꝑ sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Achitob, was prince in the house of God, and his brethren that perfourmed the worke in the house: of whom there were eyghte hundred and two and twentye. And Adaiah the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Plalaliel, the sonne of Amasi, the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah & his brethren, chiefe amonge the fathers: of whom there were two hundred and two and fortye. And Amasai the son of Asarael the son of Ahasai the sonne of Mosolamoth, the son of Emer: & his brethren were valiaunt men of whome there were an hundred and .xxbiij. And their ouersear was Zabdiel the sonne of Hagdolim.

Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Azerikam, the sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Bont: and Sabathai and Josabad of the chiefe of the Leuites, in ꝑ outwarde busynes of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the sonne of Asaph, which was the principal to begyn the thankesgyuyng vnto prayer. And Bakbukiah the seconde amonge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Idithun. All ꝑ Leuites in the holy cytie were twoo hundred lxxiiij. And the porters Acub and Talmon, & their brethren that kept the portes, were an hundred leuenty & two. The rest of Israel, the preastes and Leuites, were in al the cyties of Juda, euery one in his inheritaunce. And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Ziha & Gaspha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouersear of the Leuites at Jerusalē, was Uzi the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

Of the childrē of Asaph there were singers aboute the ministery in the house of God: for it was the kynges cōmaundement concerning them, that the singers shulde deale faithfully euery daye as was accordinge.

And Pathaia the sonne of Meselabel of ꝑ childzen of Zarah the sonne of Juda next the kynge in all matters concernynge the people and their villages, throw out all their regions. And ꝑ childzen of Juda that were without in the townes of their lande, dwelte some at Kariath Arbe, and in the villages therof, and at Dibon, and in the villages therof: and at Cabzeel, and in the villages therof: and at Jesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Hazersual, Bersabe and in their villages: and at Siklag & Mesonah, and in their villages: And at Enrimon, Zarah, Jermuth, Zanoah, Odlā and in their villages: At Lachis, and in the feldes therof: At Azekah, and in the villages therof: and dwelt from Bersabe vnto the valley of Hennom.

The childrē of Ben Jamin of Gaba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel and in their villages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Nabalath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valley. And certayne of the Leuites that had portions in Juda, dwelt in Ben Jamin.

¶ The preestes and Leuites which came with Zorobabel to Jerusalem are numbred: and the wall is dedycate.

CAPI. XII.

These are the preastes and Leuites that went vp with Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and with Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremy, Esdras, Amariah, Meluch, Hatus, Sechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth. Aw, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Maadia, Belga, Semaiah, Joiarib, Idaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaiah. These were the heades among the preastes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Mathaniah ouer the office of thankesgyuinge, they & their brethren: Bacbukiah and Uni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chiefe fathers amonge the preastes: vnder Saraiah, Maraiah, vnder Jeremy, Hananiah: vnder Esdras Mosolam: vnder Amariah, Joanan: vnder Milico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph vnder Harim, Edna: vnder Maraioth, Helcai: vnder Adia, Zachary, vnder Genthon, Mosolam: vnder Abia, Zechri: vnder Miniamin and Moadia, Peltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathnai: vnder Jadaiah, Uzi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helkia, Hasabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib. Joiada, Johanan and Jadua, were the chief fathers amōg the Leuites, and the preastes written vnder ꝑ raygne of Darius the Persian. The childzen of Leui the principall fathers were writen in the Chronycles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathā the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chief amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Serebiah & Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethrē ouer against them, to gyue prayse and thākes according as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer against an other. Mathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolam Talmon and Abub were porters in the watche at the thresholdes of ꝑ gates. These were in the tyme of Joakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemi as the Capitayne and of the preest Esdras the scrybe.

And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought out of al their places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse, wt thankesgyuynges, with singynge with Cymbales, Psalteries and Harpes. And the childzen of the singers gathered theym selues togyther frome the playne countrey about Jerusalē salem, and frome the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, and oute of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the singers had buylded them villages about Jerusalem. And the preistes and Leuites purified them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

E And I caused the princes of Juda to goo vp vpon the wall, and appoynted twoo greate queers of thankesgeuynge, whiche went on ỹ ryght hande of the wall towarde the Donge gate, and after them went Hosaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, and Azaria, Esdras, Mosolom, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certayne of the preasties childre with trompettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the son of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, ỹ son of Zecur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethre Semeiah, Azarael, Melalai, Galalai, Maai Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musical instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

And Esdras the scribe before them, towarde the Welgate, and they went vp ouer against them vpon the steppes of the cyty of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate eastwarde.

The other queer of thankesgyuynge went ouer against them, and I after them, and the half part of the people vpon the wal, toward Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll the hyde wall, D and to the gate of Ephraim, and to Oldgate, and to the fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, & to the tower of Meah, vntyl shepegate. And in the prysongate stode they stil, and so stode the two queers of thankesgyuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the preasties, namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Eliaenai, Zachary, Hananiah, with trompettes and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Vsi, Johanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ezer. And the singers sange loude, and Jezraia was the ouerseer.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offred, and they reioyced: for God had gyuen them great gladnes, so that both the wyues and childre were ioyful, and the myrthe of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were the offeringes, firstfrutes, & the tythes) that they shuld gather them out of the feldes about the cyties to deale them vnto the preasties and Leuites, accordinge to the law: for Juda was glad of the preasties, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the clensinge. And the singers & porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph, were the chiefe singers ordred, and the songes of prayse and thankesgyuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel, gyue portions vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his portion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thinges that were sanctified, vnto the childre of Aaron.

1.Par.xxiiii.a.

¶ Deuteronompye is redde, and when they haue heardе it, they seuered from them all straungers. &c.

CAPI. XIII.

AND what tyme as the booke of Moses was red in the eares of ỹ people, there was founde written therin, * that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregacion of God, becaule they met not the childre of Israel with bred & water, and hyred Balaam against them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles our God turned the curse into a blessinge. Now whē they herde the Lawe, they seuered from Israel euery one that had myxte him self therin. And before this had the preaste Eliasib ordeyned the chest of the house of our God vnto his kynsman Tobiah: for he had made him a great chest and there had they afore tyme layde the offerynges, frankincense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the commaundement gyuen to the Leuites, singers and porters) and the firste frutes of the preasties.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtyeth yere of Artaxerxes kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge and after certayne dayes I got lycence of the kynge to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he hadde made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth al the vessels of ỹ house of Tobiah out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chestе. And thether brought I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice and the incense.

And I perceyued, that the portions of the Leuites were not gyuen them, for which cause the Leuites and singers were fled, euery one to his lande for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, & sayd: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto ỹ treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurours ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preast, & Zadoc the scribe, and of the Leuites Phadaiah and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was to distribute vnto their brethren. Thinke vpō me O my God herein, and wype not out my mercye, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wyne presses on the Sabboth and bringynge in clustres, and asses laden with wyne, grapes, frygges, and bryngynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same daye that they solde the vytayles. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, whiche brought fysshe and and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the children of Juda and Jerusalē. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto them: what euyll thynge is this ye do, & breake ꝑ Sabboth day? Dyd not our fathers euen thus, & our God brought all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cytye? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israell, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

And it fortuned, that when the gates of Jerusalem were couched with the euenynge shadowe on the Sabboth, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Saboth: & some of my seruantes set I at the gates, that there shulde no burthen be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght with oute Jerusalem, with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, and sayde vnto them: why tarye ye all nyght about ꝑ wall? Yf ye do it ones agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. Frome that tyme forth came they no more on the Sabboth. And I sayd vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halow the Sabboth daye. Thinke vpon me (O my God) concerninge this also, and spare me accordīg to thy great mercy.

And at the same tyme saw I Jewes, that maryed wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, and their children spake halfe in the speche of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge might a man perceyue euery people. And I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and pluct them vp, and toke an othe of them by God: ye shall not gyue your doughters vnto their sonnes, nether shal ye take their doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Did not Salomon the kyng of Jsrael synne therin? & yet amonge many Nacyons was there no kynge lyke him, and he was deare vnto his God, and God made him kynge ouer al Jsrael, and yet neuertheles straunge wemen caused him to synne? And shall we then obey vnto you, to do all this great euyll, to halte before our God, and mary straunge wyues? iii. Regū. iii. b

And one of the children of Jolada the son of Eliasib the hyghe preast, hadde made a contract with Sanabalat the Horonite: but I chaced him frome me. O my God, think thou vpon them that defyle preasthode, and ꝑ lawe of the preasthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frome all suche as were straungers, and appointed the courses of the preastes and Leuites, euery one to his office, and to offre the wood at tymes appointed, and the fyrste frutes. Thinke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

¶ The ende of the boke of Nehemias.

THE BOKE OF ESTHER.

¶ Kynge Asuerus, whiche is called Artaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, wherunto the quene Vasthi wil not come: for whiche cause she is diuorced.

CAP. I.

A IN the tyme of Asuerus which raygned from Inde vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, what tyme as he sate on his seate royal in the castel of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the capitaynes and rulers of his countreyes, that he myght shewe the noble ryches of his kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his power, many dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, ꝑ kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto great & small, seuen dayes longe in the court of the garden B by the kynges palace: where there hanged whyte, red and yelow clothes, fastened with cordes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer ryngs, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of gold and siluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caryed in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessel. And the kynges wyne was exceding moche, accordinge to the great power of the kynge. And no man was appoynted what he shulde drinke: for the kynge had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euerye one shoulde do as it lyked him, And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Asuerus. And on the .vij. daye when the kynge was pleasauntly merye of the wyne C he commaunded Mehuman, Bartha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carcas the .vij. chamberlaynes, that dyd seruice in ꝑ presence of kynge Asuerus, to fetche the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal, that he myght shew the people and princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtyfull. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge verye wrothe, and his indignacion kyndled in him, and he spake to the wyse men that had vnderstandinge in the ordinaunces of the lande, for the kynges matters must be handled before al suche as haue knowledge of the lawe and iugement: and the next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Marsana and Mamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, and Medes, whiche sawe the kynges face, and were wont to sit first next him, What lawe shulde be execute vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordinge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaynes.

Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge and D the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely hurt the kynge, but also all the princes and al the people in all the prouinces of kynge Asuerus, for this dede of ꝑ quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so ꝑ they shall despyse their husbandes before their eyen, and shall saye: ꝑ kynge Asuerus commaunded Vasthi ꝑ quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And by this example shal all the princes wyues of Perse and Media set at naught the commaundement of their husbandes, when they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there arise despytefulnes and wrath ynoughe. If it please the kynge, let there go forth a Proclamacion frome him, and let it be written accordinge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Asuerus, and let the kynge gyue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this wrytynge of the kynge whyche shalbe made, be publyshed throwe out all his empyre which is great, that all wyues maye haue their husbandes in honoure, both great & smal. This pleased ꝑ kynge & the princes, & the kynge dyd accordinge to the word of Mamucan. Then were letters sent forth vnto all the kynges landes, into euery lande accordinge to the wrytinge therof, and to euery people after their language, that euerye man shulde be Lorde and chiefe in his owne house. And this caused he to be diuulged amõges all people.

¶ The quene put awaye, certayne goodly younge damoselles are searched out te amonges whome Esther pleaseth the kyng. Mardocheus discloseth to the kynge those that wolde betraye him.

CAP. II.

THese thinges done whē the displeasure of kyng Asuer⁹ was alayed he thought vpon Vasthi, what she had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruātes: Let there be fayre yõg virgins sought for the kynge, & let the kynge appoynt ouerseers in all the landes of his empyre, that they maye brynge togyther al fayre younge virgins vnto the castel of Susan to ꝑ wemens lodgynge, vnder the hande of Hegei the kynges chamberlayne, that keepeth ꝑ wemen, and let him gyue them their apparell. And loke which damosell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis stede. This pleased the kyng and he dyd so.

In the castel of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, the son of Jemini, which was caryed away from Jerusalem, whan Jekonias the kynge of Juda was led away, whom Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon caryed awaye) & he norysshed Hadasah, otherwyse called Esther, his vncles daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, & she was a fayre and bewtyfull damesell. And when her father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receyued her, as his owne doughter.

Now

Nowe when the kynges commaundement was publyshed, and accordynge to it manye damsels were broughte to gyther vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hande of Hagei, Esther was taken also vnto the kinges house vnder the hande of Hagei the keper of the women, and the damsell pleased him, and she founde grace in his syght. And he caused her oyntment to be gyuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her seuen notable gentyl women of the kynges house, and arayed both her & her gentyllwemen veey rychely in the house of the wemen. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery day before the court of the wemens buyldinge, that he myght know howe Esther dyd, and what shulde become of her. And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsel came that she shulde come to the kynge Asuerus, after that she had bene. xij. monethes in the dewkynge of the wemen (for their dewkynge must haue so moche tyme, namely. vj. monethes with Balme and Myrre, and. vj. monethes with good spices, so were the wemen dewtyked) then went there one damsel vnto the kynge, and what so euer she required that must be gyuen her to go with her out of the wemens buyldinge vnto the kynges palace. And when one came in the euenynge, the same went frome him on the morowe into the seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saagas the kynges chamberlayne, whiche kept the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kynge nomore, oneles it pleased the kyng and that he caused her to be called by name.

Nowe when the tyme came of Esther the wughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (who he had receyued as his owne wughter) that she shulde come to the kynge, she desired nothinge but what Hagei the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayde. And Esther founde fauoure in the sight of all them that loked vpon her. So Esther was take vnto kynge Asuerus into the house royall, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the vij. yere of his raygne.

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his sight before all the virgines: and he set the quenes crowne vpon her head, and made her quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kynge made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes (which feast was because of Esther): & he gaue rest to all the landes, and gaue royal giftes accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And whan the virgins were gathered togyther the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet hadde not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, accordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as whe he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, twoo of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan & Thares which kept the dore were wroth, & sought to laye handes on the kynge Asuerus: wherof Mardocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vnto quene Esther, and Esther certyfyed the kyng therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquyrye was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wryten in the Chronycles, before the kynge.

¶ Haman obtayned of the kynge that all Jewes shulde be put to deeth because Mardocheus hadde not gyuen hym worshyp, as other had.

CAPI. III.

After this the kynge promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, & set him hyghe, and set his seate aboue all the princes that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Haman: for the kynge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why breakest thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake this dayly vnto him, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had told them that he was a Jewe. And whe Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to lytel to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him the nacion of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy all the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in the hole empyre of Asuerus.

In the. j. moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the. xij. yere of kyng Asuerus, they cast Phur (that is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shulde be done: and there came out the. xij. moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kynge Asuerus: There is a people scatered abrode & dispeepled from them selues amonge all people in the landes of thyne empire, & their law is contrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyt to suffer them after this maner. If it please the kyng, let him inacte, that they be destroyed, and so will I weye downe ten thousande talentes of syluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought into the kynges chamber. Then toke the kynge his ryng from his hande, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes ennemy And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be gyuen the, and that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on the xiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was written (accordinge as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes and to the captynes euery where in the landes, and to the rulars of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordinge to the wrytinge of euery nacion, & after their language in the name of kynge Asuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryng. And the wrytinges were sent by pursyuauntes into all the kynges landes, to rote out: to kyl

& to destroy al Jewes, both yong & olde, chyldren and women in one daye, that is to wite vpon the thirteenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar and to spoyle theyr goodes.

This was the summe of the lettres, that there shulde be a commaundement gyuen in all landes, to be publysshed vnto all people, that they shulde be readye agaynste the same daye. And the purseuauntes went in all the haste accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was ỹ commaundement dressed. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cytie of Susan was disquieted.

CAPI. IIII.

A Whē Mardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rent his clothes, & put on sacke clothe, and asshes, and went out into ỹ myddes of the cytie, and cried loude and lamētably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde & commaundement extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the Jewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and laye in sacke clothes and in asshes. So Esthers damoselles, & her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shoulde put B them on, and laye the sacke cloth frome hym. But Mardocheus woulde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue him a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, ỹ he myght knowe what it were, and wherefore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytie, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe down in the kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them, and he gaue him the copy of the commaundement, that was dressed at Susan to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her, that she shulde go in to the kynge, & make her prayer and supplication vnto him for her people.

And when Hathath came in, and tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, C and the people in the landes of the kynge knowe, that who so euer commeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediatly oneles the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto him, in token of clemencie that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynge now this thirty dayes.

And when Mardocheus was certyfyed of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad saye agayn vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Jewes haue helpe D and delyuerance oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad, gyue Mardocheus this answere: go thou thy waye, and gather together all the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not and drinke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor nyght. I and my damoselles will fast lykewyse, and so will I go in to the kynge contrary to the commaundement: yf I perysshe, I perysshe. So Mardocheus went his waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded him.

¶ Esther entreth in to the kynge and bydden hym and Haman to a feaste. Haman prepareth a gallowe for Mardocheus.

CAPI. V.

ON the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparell, and stode in the court of F ỹ kynges palace within, ouer against the kynges lodgynge. And the kynge sat vpō his royal seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the quene standinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And the kynge helde oute ỹ golden scepter in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the toppe G of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe gyuen the. Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket, that I haue prepared. The kynge sayd: Cause Haman to make haste: that he maye do as Esther hathe sayde.

Now when the kynge and Haman came to the banket that Esther had prepared, ỹ kynge sayde vnto Esther after he had largely dronke of the wyne: Esther, what is thy petition? it shalbe gyuen the. And what requirest thou? Yf it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition and desire is, yf I haue founde grace H in the sight of the kynge, and yf it please ỹ kynge to gyue me my petition, and to fulfill my requeste, then let the kynge and Haman come to the banket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I doo to morowe as the kynge hathe sayde.

Then went Haman forthe the same daye, ioyfull and mery in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned him selfe: and when he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes and Zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glory gloyre of his riches, and the multytude of his chyldren all to gyther, howe the kynge hadde promoted him so greatly, and howe that he was taken aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea & Esther the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the bancket that she had prepared except me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. Then sayd Zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyftye cubites hyghe, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardocheus may be hanged theron, and so thou shalt go merely with the kyng vnto the banket. Haman was well content herewith, and caused a gallowes to be made redy.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Chronycles and findeth the hystorye of Mardocheus: and then to the confusion of Haman, he commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

CAPI. VI.

The same night could not ꝑ kynge slepe, and he commaunded to bringe the Chronicles and hystories: whiche when they were red before the kynge they happened on the place where it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept ꝑ thresholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Asuerus. And ꝑ kyng sayde: what worshyp and good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde ꝑ kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him. There is nothinge done for him. And the kyng sayd: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court without before ꝑ kynges house that he myght speake vnto the kynge to hang Mardocheus on the tre, that he hadde prepared for him.) And the kynges seruantes sayde vnto him: beholde, Hamā stādeth in the court. The kyng sayd: let him come in. And whē Hamā came in, ꝑ kyng sayd vnto him: what shal be done vnto the man, whō the kynge wolde fayne bringe vnto worshyppe? But Haman thought in his hert: Whome shulde the kyng els be glad to bringe vnto worshyp, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kynge wolde be glad to do worshyp, be brought hither, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes whiche the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge ryeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpon his heed. And let this rayment and horse be delyuered vnder ꝑ hande of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall (whō the kynge wolde fayne honoure) and carry him vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cyte, and cause it to be proclaymed before him: thus shal it be done to euery man, whome the kynge wolde fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & doo euen so with Mardocheus the Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, & let nothinge fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arayed him, and brought him on horsbacke thorow the strete of the cyte, and proclaymed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whome the kynge is disposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat him home in al the hast mourninge with bare head, and tolde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thing that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men of his counsayle and Zares his wyfe vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of the sede of ꝑ Jewes, before whome thou hast begon to fal thou canst do nothinge vnto him, but shalte fall before him. Whyle they were yet talking with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, & caused Haman to make hast to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene bydeth the king and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowse, whiche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

CAPI. VII.

And when the kynge and Haman came to the bancket that quene Esther hadde prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bancket of wyne: what is thy petitiō quene Esther, that it may be gyuen the? And what requirest thou? Yea aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. Esther the quene aunswered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy sight (O kyng) and yf it please the kynge then graunt me my lyfe at my desire and my people for my petitions sake: for we are solde both I and my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perysh. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmē and bondwemē, then wolde I holde my tōge so shoulde not the ennemy be so hyghe to the kynges harme. The kyng Asuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: Who is this? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do suche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the ennemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman. Which thing when Hamā herd he was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge and the quene. And the kynge arose frome the bancket and from the wyne in his displeasure and went in to the palace garden. And Hamā stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe there was a myschefe prepared for him of the kynge alredy.

And when the kynge came agayne out of ꝑ palace garden into the parler where they had eaten, Haman hadde layde him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kynge, will he force the quene also besyde me in the house? As sone as that worde wēt out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of ꝑ chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde. Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyftye cubytes hyghe, which he had made for Mardocheus docheus, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayd: hange him theron. So they hanged Hamā on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. So was the kynges wrath appeased.

¶ After the deth of Hamā Mardocheus is promoted then are cōfortable letters sēt vnto the Jewes.

CAPI. VIII.

A THe same daye dyd kynge Asuerus gyue the house of Haman the Jewes enemye vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how he belonged vnto her. And the kynge toke the ryng of his kynger, whiche he had taken frō Haman, and gaue it Mardocheus. Moreouer Esther sette Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And she spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, & besought hym, that he wolde put awaye the malice of Haman the Agagite, and his moost vngracious deuises that he had ymagined agaynste the Jewes. And the kynge held out the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, &

B stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, and if I haue founde grace in his syght, and yf he be conuenient for the kynge, and if it be accepted in his syghte then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in all the kynges landes. For howe can I se the cupll that shall happen vnto my people? and how can I loke vpon the destruction of my kyn?

Then sayde the kinge Asuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tree,

C because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye nowe therfore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges ryng (for the wryttynges that were written in the kinges name, & sealed with the kynges ryng, durst noman disanull.) Then were the kynges scrybes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten accordinge as Mardocheus commaunded vnto the Jewes and to the prynces, to the deputyes and capitaynes in the landes frome Ind vntyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euerye one accordynge to the wryttynge therof, vnto euerye people after theyr speche, and to the Jewes accordynge to D theyr wryttynge and language. And it was wrytten in the kynge Asuerus name and sealed with the kynges ringe. And by swyft messangers, sent he the wryttynges, wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes so euer they were) to gather them selues to gyther, and to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to rote oute, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that wolde trouble them, with childzen and women, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one day in all the lādes of kyng Asuerus namely vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wryttynge was, howe there was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, & the Jewes shulde be redye agaynst that daye to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And the messaungers that bare the tydinges went forth with all spede, accordyng to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was deuised in the castell of Sulan.

And Mardocheus went out from ꝑ kynge in royal apparel of yelowe & whyte & with a great crowne of golde, arayed with a garmēt of lynnen and purple, and the cytye of Sulan reioyced and was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come lyght and gladnes & ioye & worshyp. And in all landes and cytyes, in to what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundement reached, there was ioye & myrth, prosperitie and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in so moche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ At commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put their foos to deth. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feastfull daye in remembraunce of theyr delyuerye.

CAPI. XI.

IN the twelfte moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirtenth daye, which, the kinges worde and commaundement had appoynted, that the ennemyes shulde haue destroyed the Jewes, it turned contrarye wyse that the Jewes shulde subdue their ennemyes. Then assembled the Jewes togyther in their cytyes within all the landes of king Asuerus, to lay hand on suche as wold haue done them euil, & no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and prynces and deputies, and officers of the king promoted the Jewes for the feare of Mardocheus came vpō them. For Mardocheus was great in ꝑ kinges house, and the reaporte of him was bruted in al landes, how he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their ennemyes with a sore slaughter, and slew and destroyed, and did after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castel Sulan the Jewes slewe and destroyed fiue hundred men, and slewe ꝑsharsandatha, Delphon, Alphatha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai, Maizatha, the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amadatha the ennemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they wolde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombre of these that were slayne at the castell Sulan. And the kynge sayde vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men at the castell of Sulan, and the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kynge? What is thy requeſt, that it maye be gruen the? and what requyeſt thou more to be done? Esther sayde: Yf it pleaſe the kynge, let hym suffre the Jewes tomorowe also to do accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tree. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuyſed at Susan, and Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues to gyther at Susan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & slewe thre hundreth men at Susan, but theyr godes they wolde not spoyle.

Moreouer the other Jewes in the kynges landes, stode for their lyues, and gat rest from their ennemyes: and slew of their ennemyes lxv. thousande, how be it they layd no hãdes on their goodes. This was done on the. xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, and on the. xiiij. day of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan were come to gyther both on the. xiij. daye and on the. xiiij. and on the. xv. daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnesse. Therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the. xiiij. daye of the moneth Adar, to be a day of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto an other.

And Mardocheus wrote all these actes, and sent the wryttinges vnto all the Jewes that were in al the landes of kynge Asuerus, both nyghe and farre, that they shoulde yerely receyue and holde the. xiiij. and. xv. daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jewes came to rest from their ennemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was tourned to ioye, and their sorowe into prosperitie: that they shulde obserue the same as dayes of welthe & gladnes, and one to sende gyftes vnto an other, and to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes receyued al that they hadde begon to do, and that Mardocheus had wryte vnto them: how that Haman the son of Hamadatha ennemy to all the Jewes, had deuised to destroye all the Jewes, & caused to cast Phur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, & to bringe theym to naught: and howe Hester went and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyse, whiche he ymagyned against the Jewes, myght be turned vpõ his owne heed, & how he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For which cause they called this daye Phurim after the name of Phur accordinge to all the wordes of this wryting: and what they them selues had sene, & what had happened vnto them. Phurim

And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and their sede, and vpon all such as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not mysse to kepe these two dayes yerely, accordinge as they were written and appoynted, how these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of euerichens childre amonge al kynredes in all landes and cytyes. These are the dayes of Phurim ſ is to saye of lottes, which are not to be ouerslipt among the Jewes, and the memorial of them ought not to perysshe frome their sede.

And quene Hester the doughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with al auctorite, to confirme this seconde wryttinge of Phurim, and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the. c. and. xvij. landes of the empire of Asuerus, with frendly and faithful wordes to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appointed, accordinge as Mardocheus ſ Jewe and Esther the quene had ordeyned in that behalfe: lyke as they vpon their soule & vpon their sede had confirmed the actes of the ✠ fastinges and of her complaynte. And Hester commaunded to stablysshe these actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a boke. Hester.iiij.

CAPL. X.

AND the kyng Asuerus layd tribute vpõ the lande, and vpon the Iles of the see. But as touchinge all the actes of his power and auctorite, and the great worshyp of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue him, beholde, it is written in the Cronycles of ſ kynges of Media and Persia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto kyng Asuerus, and great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one that seketh the welthe of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

¶ Job is plaged of God by the losse of his goodes and chyldren.

CAPI I.

A IN the land of Hus, was a man called Job: a perfect and vpryght man, suche one as feared God, and eschewed euell. This man hadde seuen sonnes, and three daughters. His substaunce was seuen thousand shepe. xij. thousand camels fyue hundred yoke of oxen, fyue hundred Asses, and a verye greate housholde: so that he was one of the myghtyest men amonge all them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went and made bāketes: one daye in one house, and an other daye in an other, and sent for their. iij. sisters, to eate and drynche with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banketting rounde about, Job sent for them, and clensed them agayne, and gat vp early, and offered for euery one a sacrifice. For Job thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankefull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daye. B Now vpō a tyme, when the seruauntes of God came & stode before the Lorde, Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satā: whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue compased the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, howe that he is a perfecte and vpryght man: suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euyll, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? Satan answered, and sayd vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and al his substaūce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But lay thyne hande vpon him a lytle, and touche ones all ỹ he hath, and yf he curse the not to thy face, I meruayle. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo al that he hath, be in thy power: only vpō him selfe se thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Satan forth frome the Lorde.

C So vpon a certayne daye when his sonnes and doughters were eatinge, and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there cam a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were plowynge, and the Asses goyng in the pasture beside them: the Sabees came in with force, and toke them al away: yea they haue slayne thy seruauntes with the swerde, & I onely haue escaped, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakyng, there cam an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen frome heauen, it hath consumed, & brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes: and I onely am my waye, to bryngе the tydinges In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armyes, and rushed vpon thy camels, which they haue caryed awaye, yea & slayne thy seruauntes with the swerde: and onely am gotten awaye, to bryngе tydinges. Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet an other, and sayde: Thy sonnes and doughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and sodenly there came a myghty great wynde out of the South, and smote the. iiij. corners of the house: which fell vpon thy children, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to bringe tydinges.

Then Job stode vp, and rente his clothes shaued his head, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, and sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shal I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, & the Lorde hath taken awaye: now blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thinges, dyd Job not offende, ne murmured folysshely against God.

¶ Job is plaged with sore byles, and afterwarde mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vysyte him, and haue compassion on hym.

CAPI. II.

IT happened also vpon a tyme, that when the seruauntes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came amonge them and stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered and sayde: I haue circuyted the lande and walked thorow it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, howe that he is an innocent and vertuous man suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euyl, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me against him, to punysshe him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse. Satan answered the Lorde, & sayd: Skynne for skynne and all that euer a man hath, he wil geue for his lyfe. But lay thyne hand vpon him, touche him ones vpon the bone and flesshe, and thou shalt se he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth frome the Lorde, and smote Job with marueylous sore byles, frō the sole of the foote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon ỹ grounde in the asshes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potsherde. Then sayde his wyfe vnto him: Dost thou continue in thy perfectnes? curse God and dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Seynge we haue receyued prosperitie at the hand of God, wherfore shoulde we not be content with aduersitie also? In all these thinges dyd not Job synne with his lyppes. Nowe when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble, that happened vnto him, there came thre of them, euery one frome his owne place: Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

Fu

For they were agreed togyther to come to shewe theyr compassion vpon hym, and to cõfort hym. So when they lyft vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wept: then euery one of them rent his clothes, & sprynkled dust vpon theyr headdes in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nyghtes. Neyther was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym, for they sawe that his payne was very great.

¶ The wordes of Job, wherin he declareth that this present lyfe is myserable: and the deth of the ryghteouse ioyouse and fortunable.

CAPI. III.

After this Job opened his mouth, and cursed his daye, and sayde: lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght in whiche it was sayde, there is a man chyld conceyued. The same daye be turned to derkenesse, and no regarded of God aboue, neyther be shyned vpon with lyght: but be couered with derkenesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be wrapped in sorowe. Let the dercke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in ỹ monethes. Desolate be that nyght, and discommended: let the that curse the daye, those I saye ỹ be redy to rayse vp ✝ Iewiathan gyue ye also their curse. Let the starres be dymme thorow derkenesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but se none, neyther the rysyng vp of the morning: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ne hyd these sorowes from myne eyen.

Alas, why dyed I not in the matrice? why dyd not I perysh, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me suck with their brestes? For now I shuld haue lyen still I shulde haue slept, and bene at rest: lyke as the kynges and lordes of the earthe, whiche buylde them selues solytary places: or as the princes that haue great substaunce of golde, & their houses full of syluer. O that I vtterly had no beynge, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put aside) eyther as younge children, which neuer sawe the lyght. There the wycked do ceasse from their tyranny, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at rest: there are those let out free, whiche haue bene in prison, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressour: There are small and great: the bõd man, is fre from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght gyuen him that is in wretchednes? and lyfe them that haue heuye hertes? Whiche longe for deathe, yf it come not: and searche for it more then for treasure and wolde be exceadinge gladde, and reioyce yf they founde their graue. That shulde be ioye to the man whose waye is hyd, whiche God hedeth backe from hym. For my sighes come before I eate, and my roaringe fall out lyke flowynge water. For the thinge I feared, is come vpon me: and the thinge that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happye? had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in reste? And nowe commeth indignacion vpon me.

¶ Job is by Eliphas reproued of impacience and iniustice, and of the presumption of his owne ryghteousnes.

CAPI. IIII.

Then answered Eliphas the Themanyte and sayde vnto hym: Yf we begynne to commen with the, peraduenture thou wilt be discontent, but who canne withholde hym selfe frome speakynge? Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, and hast comforted the weery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon ỹ, thou shrynkest awaye: now that it hathe touched thy self, thou art fayntharted. Where is thy awe, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I pray the) who euer perysshed beynge an innocent? Or, when were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe wyckednesse, and sowe malyce reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysshe, and with the breth of his anger consumed they awaye. The roaringe of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyonesse, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon perysheth, for lacke of pray, and the Lyons whelpes are scatered abrode.

And vnto me was the worde hyd, & myne eare hath receyued a lytell therof. In the phãtasies and thoughtes of the vysions of the nyghte, when slepe commeth on men; feare came vpon me and dred, and made my bones to shake. And when the wynde passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my flesshe stande vp. He stode there and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was before me, & there was sylnes, so that I herde this voyce. 1. Petri, ii. c.

Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer than his maker? Beholde there is no trust to his seruauntes, and in his aungelles hathe he founde crokednesse. Howe moche more in theym that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but earthe; whiche shal be consumed by the moth. They shal be smytten frome the morynge vnto the euenynge: they shall perysshe euerlastyngly, and no man thynke theron. Is not their dignytie taken away with them, they shall dye & that er they be ware.

¶ The end of a fole. The ryghtousnes of God. The Lorde chasteneth his, and delyuereth them agayne.

CAPI. V.

Call me one els, yf thou canst fynde anye of the holy men. As for the foolysh man, displeasure kylleth him, and anger slayeth the ignorannce. I haue sene my selfe, when the foolysshe was depe rooted, that his bewtye was sodenly destroyed, that his chyldre were with out prosperite or helth: that they were slayne in the doze, and no mā to delyuer them: that his harueste was eaten vp of the hungry: that the wealthy man had spoyled it, and that ꝑ thurstye had dronke vp his riches. It is not the earth that bringeth forthe trauayle, neyther commeth lorowe out of the grounde: but it is man, that is borne vnto mysery, lyke as the byrde to flyght.

B The power of God. But nowe wyll I speake of the Lorde, & talke of God: whiche doth thynges, that are vnsearcheable, and maruelous without nombre: which gyueth rayne vpon the earth, and poureth water vpon all thinges: whiche setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heynesse: Whiche destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so ꝑ they are not able to performe the thinges ꝑ they take in hande: which compaseth the wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth C the counsell of the wycked. In so moche that they run into darcknesse by fayre daye, and grope about them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.

And so he delyuereth the poore frome the swearde, frome the mouth, and frō the hand of the cruel, that the poore maye haue hope, & that the mouthe of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Beholde, happy is the man, whom God punysheth: therfore, despyse not thou the chastenyng of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he gyueth a medicine agayn: though D he smyte, his hande maketh hole agayne.

He delyuereth the out of sixe troubles, so ꝑ in the seuenth there can no harme touche the. In the myddest of honger he saueth the frome death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swerde.

He shall kepe the frome the scourge of the tongue, so that when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In hauocke and derth thou shalt be mery, and shalte not be afrayed of the beastes of the earth: But the stones in the lande shall be confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shall gyue the peax.

Yea thou shalt know, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt behold thy substaunce, and be no more punysshed for synne. Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shal encrease and that thy progenye shalbe as ꝑ grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as ꝑ corne sheues are brought in to the barne in due season. Loo, this is the thinge that we our selues haue proued by experience. Therfore nowe that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

¶ Job answereth, that his payne is more greuous then his faute, yet not withstanding he desireth ther in.

CAP. VI.

A Iob answered, and sayde: O that my mysery were wayed, and my punysshement layd in the balaunces: for then shuld it be heuyer, then the sande of the see. This is the cause that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignacion hath dronke vp my spyrite, and the terrible feates of God fyghte against me. Doth the wylde asse roare when he hath grasse? Or cryeth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynoughe? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten without salt, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge? The thinges ꝑ some tyme I myght not awaye with, are now my meate for very sorow. O that I myght haue B my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me ꝑ thinge, that I longe for: That he wolde destroy and smyte me: that he wolde let his hād go, and hewe me downe. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yea I wolde desire him in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wil not be against the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne ende, that my soule myght be patient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so that there C is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken frome me? He that is in tribulation ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane away: Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that hastely runneth thorowe the valleyes. But they that feare the hore frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their tyme commeth, they shall be destroyed and perysshe: and when they be set on fire, they shalbe remoued out of their place for the pathes that they go in, are croked: they haste after vayne thinges, and shall perysshe. Consydre the pathes of Theman, & the wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they, that put any confidēce in them: For when they came to obtayne the thinges they loked for, they were brought to D confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayde. Dyd I desire you, to come hyther? Or, to gyue me any of your substaunce? To delyuer me from the ennemyes hande, or to saue me frome the power of the myghty? Teache me and I wil holde my tongue: and yf I werre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truely spoken? which of you can reproue them? Saynge only that ye are subtyll to check mens sayenges, and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, and go about to ouerthrowe your owne frende. Wherfore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into your own selues (I pray you) be indifferēt iudges, and consydre myne vnryghtynes: whether there be any vnryghtousnesse in my tongue, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

¶ Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a battayle, or warfare.

CAPI. VII.

A war-

A Warrefare is the lyfe of man vpon earthe, and his dayes are like the dayes of an hyred seruaunte: For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyrelynge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: euen so haue I laboured hole monethes longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layd me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I aryse? Agayne, I longed sore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with sorowes, tyll it be darke. My flesshe is clothed with wormes, filthinesse and dust: my skynne is withered and crompled together: my dayes passe ouer more hastyly, then a weauer can weaue oute his webbe: and are B gone or I am ware. O remembre, that my life is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall no more se the pleasures therof, and that none other mannes eye shall se me any more. For yf thou fasten thyne eyes vpon me, I come to nought, lyke as a cloude is consumed and banished awaye: euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth no more vp, ne turneth again in to his house, neither shall his place knowe him any more.

C Therfore I wyll not spare my mouthe, but wyll speake in the trouble of my spirite, in the bytternesse of my mynde wyll I talke. Am I a see or a Whale fysshe, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I saye: my bed shall comforte me: I shall haue some refreshynge by talkynge by my selfe vpon my couche: Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayde therowe visyons, that my lyfe wysheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be deed.

I can se no remedye, I shall lyue no more: D Spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is man, that thou haste him in suche regarde, and settest so moche by hym? Thou takest diligente care for him, and sodeynly doest thou trye him.

Why goest thou not fro me, ne lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalowe downe my spettle? I haue offended, what shall I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of men? Why haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuye a burthen vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgyue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse? Behold, nowe muste I slepe in the dust: and yf thou sekest me to morowe in the morynge, I shall be gone.

¶ Job is reprehended and noted to haue deserued his payne. A descryption of hypocrysye.

CAPI. VIII.

A Then answered Baldad the Suhyte, and sayd: Howe longe wylte thou talke of suche thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Dothe God peruerte the thynge that is lawfull? Or dothe the almyghty destroy the thyng that is right? When thy sonnes synned agaynst him, did not he punysshe theym for their wyckednesse? Yf thou wouldest now resorte vnto God by tymes and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghtye: yf thou wouldest lyue a pure and a godlye lyfe: shulde he not walke vp vnto the forthewith, and gyue the, the beautye of ryghtousnesse agayne? In so moche, that wherin so euer thou haddest a lytle atore, thou shouldest B nowe haue a greate aboundaunce. Enquyre of theym that haue bene before the, searche dylygentlye amonge thy forefathers. (For Psal.cxliii.a. we are but of yester daye, and we knowe not, that our dayes vpon earthe are but a verye shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladlye counterfe the same.

Maye a russhe be grene without moysture? maye the grasse growe without water? No, (but or euer it be shot forthe, and or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before any other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all theym that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites Hypocrysye. hope come to nought. His confidence shall be C destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe. D He leaneth him vpon his house, but he shal not stande: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng doth flourysshe, and men thynke that it maye abyde the sunne shyning: it shooteth forthe braunches in his garden, it taketh many rootes, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be taken oute of his place, euerye man denyeth it, sayinge: I knowe the not: D Lo, thus is it with him that reioyseth in his owne doinges: and agayne other growe oute of the earthe.

Beholde, God wyll not caste awaye an vpryghte man, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouthe shall he fylle with laughynge, and thy lyppes with gladnesse. They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodlye shall come to nought.

¶ Job declareth the benefytes of God, and howe mannes ryghtousnes is nothynge.

CAP. IX.

IOb answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it A is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustifyed. Yf he wyll argue D with him, he shall not be hable to aunswere him, one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of herte, and mighty in strength. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste hym? He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be ware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrathe. He remoueth the erth out of her place, and her pylers, be all to shaketh. He commaundeth the sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the sterres, as it were vnder a signet. He him selfe alone spreadeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the see. He maketh the bayres of heuen, the Orions, the seuen sterres, and the secrete places of the southe. He dothe great thinges, suche as are vnsercheable, yea and wonders without nombre.

Yf he came by me, I mighte not loke vpon B him: yf he went his waye, I shoulde not perceyue repue it. Yf he be hastye to take any thynge awaye, who shall make him restorest agayne? Who shall saye vnto him: what doest thou? He is God, whose wrathe no man can withstande: but the proudest of al must stoupe vnder him? Howe shoulde I then answere him? or what wordes shoulde I fynde out agaynst hiim? Yea, thoughe I be ryghtous, yet wyll I not gyue him one worde agayne, but meekely submyt my selfe to my iudge. All be it that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure that he hathe herde my voyce: he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wounde me out of measure without cause. He shal not let my spirite be in reste, but fylleth me with bitternesse.

Yf men wyll speake of strengthe, he is the strongest of all, yf men wyll speake of ryghtousnesse, who dare be my recoyre? Yf I wyll iustifye my selfe, my owne mouthe shall condemne me: Yf I wyll put forthe my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: For that I shoulde be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not / yea I my selfe am wery of my lyfe.

This one thyng wyll I saye: he destroyeth both the ryghtous and vngodly. And thoughe he slee sodeynly with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the innocent. As for the world, he giueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, suche as the rulers be, wherof all landes are ful. Is it not so? where is there any but he is suche one?

My dayes haue ben more swift then a pursenant: they are gone sodeynly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are paued awaye, as the shyppes that are good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that hasteth to her praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges, to chaunge my countenaunce, and to comfort my selfe: then am I afrayde of all my workes, for I knowe thou fauourest not an euyll doer. D Yf I be then a wicked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Thoughe I washed my self with snowe water, and made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shouldest thou dyppe me in the myer, and myne owne clothes shoulde defyle me. For he that I muste gyue aunswere vnto, and with whome I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any dayesmen to reproue both the partes, or to laye his hand betwene vs. Let him take his rod away fro me, yea let him make me no more afrayde of hym, and then shall I answere him without feare. For as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

¶ Iob is wery of his lyfe, and setteth out his frayltye before God. He desyreth time to repent. A discripcion of dethe.

CAPI. X.

A NEuertheles, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I wyll speake out of the bytter heuynesse of my soule, and wyl saye vnto God: Ah doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou iudgest me on this maner? Thynkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to cast me of (beinge a worke of thy handes) and to mayntayne the counsell of the vngodlye? Haste thou fleshly eyen, or doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeres as mannes yeres, that thou makest suche inquiry for my wickednesse, and searchest oute my synne? where as thou knowest I am no wycked person / and that there is no mā hable to rescue me out of thyne B hande? Thyne handes haue made me, and facyoned me all togyther rounde aboute, wilt thou then destroye me sodeynly? O remembre (I beseche the) that thou madest me of the moulde of earthe, and shalte bryngе me to earthe agayne. Hast thou not mylked me like mylke, and pressed lyke chese? Thou haste couered me with synne and flesshe, and ioyned me togyther with bones and sinowes. Thou C haste graunted me life, and done me good: and the diligēt kepe that thou takest vpon me, hath preserued my spirite.

Though thou hydest these thynges in thyne herte: yet am I sure that thou remembrest them all. Wherfore diddest thou kepe me, whē I synned, and haste not clensed me fro myne offence? Yf I wo wickedly, wo is me therfore: Yf I be ryghtous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heed: so full am I of confusion, and so myne owne miserie.

Thou huntest me oute, oppressed with heuynesse, as it were a Lyon, and troublest me beyonde all measure. Thou bryngest freshe witnesses agaynste me, thy wrathe increasest thou vpon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherfore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perished, and D no eye had sene me. Yf they had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was born, then shoulde I be nowe, as thoughe I hadde neuer ben.

Shall not my shorte lyfe come soone to an ende? O holde thy hand fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a lytle afore I goo thether, whence I shall not retourne. Namely to that lande of darkenesse and shadowe of dethe, yea in to the darke clowdye lande and deedly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continually abydeth.

¶ Iob is vniustly reproued of Sophar. God is not reproueable. He is mercyfull to the repentaunt.

CAPI. XL

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite and sayd: shoulde not he that maketh many wordes be aunswered? Shoulde he that babbleth moche be commended therin? Shulde men giue eare vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorne, & shal no body mocke the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God: the thyng that I take in hande is perfect, and I am clene in thy sighte? O that God woldē speake, and open his lyppes agaynst the, that he might shewe the out of his secret wisdome, howe manyfolde his lawe is; then shouldest thou thou knowe that God had forgotten the, by-cause of thy synnes.

Wylte thou kynde oute God with thy se-kynge? wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hygher then heuen, what wylte thou do? Deper then the hell, how wylte thou then knowe him? His length
B exceedeth the lengthe of the earthe, and his breadth the breadth of the see. Thoughe he turne all thynges vp set downe, close them in, or thrust them together, who dare checke him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth the vanitie of men: he seeth their wyckednesse also, shoulde he not then consider it? A vayne bodye vaun-
C teth him selfe, and the sonne of man is lyke a wylde asses foole. Yf thou haddest nowe a right hert, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towarde him: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whiche thou haste in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwelte in thy house: then mightest thou lyfte vp thy face without shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shouldest thou forget thy miserie, and D thynke no more of it then of the waters that runne by. Then shoulde thy lyfe be as clere as the noone daye, and sprynge forthe as the morning. Then myghtest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly when thou arte layde in. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayde, yea many one shulde set moche by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shall be consumed, and E not escape: their hope shall be mucry and sorowe of mynde.

¶ Iob in the wynge his patience declareth the might and power of God.

CAPI. XII.

SO Iob aunswered and sayde: Nowe vn-G doubtedly I se ye are onely men, and that wysdom dye w̄ you? But I haue vnderstanding as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea xii.a who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he H calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godlye and giltles man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is the lampe despised in the hertes of the riche, and is set for them to stomble vpon. The hou-
I ses of robbers are in welthe and prosperitie, and they that maliciously medle against God, dwell without care: yea God gyueth al thin-K ges rychely with his hande. For aske the cattell, and they shall enforme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the: Speake to the earthe, and it shall shewe the: Or to the xii.a fyshes of the see, and they shall certifye the.
Who is he that knoweth not that the hande xxxiii.a of the Lorde made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuynge thynge, and the L breth of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure xxxiii.a in hearynge, and the mouthe in tastynge the thyng that it eateth? Among olde personnes there is wysdome, and amonge the aged is vn-derstandynge. Yea with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hathe counsell and fore-knowlege. Yf he breake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? Yf he shutte a thynge, who wyl open it? yf he withholde the waters they drye vp: Yf he let them go, they destroye the earthe. With him is strengthe and wys-dome: he knoweth bothe the disceyuer and him that is disceyued.

Esaye.xxii. B. Ipoca.iii.b Esaye.l.a

He carieth awaye the wyse men, as it were
M a spoyle and bryngeth the iudges out of their wyttes: He looseth the bandes of kynges, and gyrdeth their loynes with a bande. He leadeth away the preestes in to captiuitie, and turneth the mighty vp set downe. He taketh the trouth
N out of the mouth, and disappointeth the aged of their wysdome. He poureth out confusyon vpon princes, and comforteth them that haue ben oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darke-nesse, he declareth it openly: and the derke shadowe of deathe bryngeth he to lyghte. He O bothe increaseth the people, and destroyeth them: he maketh them to multiplye, and driueth them awaye. He chaungeth the herte of the princes and kynges of the earthe, and disappointeth them: so that they goo wan-dryng out of the waye, and grope in the darke withoute lyghte, staggerynge to and fro lyke dronken men.

ii.Par.xxii.c Ezech.xxxi.b Luc.xii.a

¶ Iob repreueth his frendes with theyr owne sayinges, and condemneth hypocrysy.

CAPI. XIII.

LO, all this haue I sene with myne eye,
A hero with myne eare, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye know, that same I knowe also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Neuer-theles I am purposed to talke with the al-myghtye, and my desyre is to commen with God. As for you, ye are workemasters of lies, & vnprofitable phisicians all togither. Wolde God ye kepte youre tonge, that ye myghte be taken for wyse men. Therfore heare my wor-des, and ponder the sentence of my lyppes.
B Wyll ye make aunswere for God with lyes, and mayntayne him with disceyte? Wyll ye accepte the person of God, & intreate for him? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to accomptes? Thynke ye to begyle him, as a mā is begyled? He shal punysshe you, and reproue you, yf ye do secretly accepte anye person.
Shall he not make you afrayde, when he shew-eth him selfe? Shall not his terryble feare fall vpon you? youre remembraunce shall be lyke dust, and pryde shall be coumed to claye.
Holde your tonges nowe, and let me speake, for there is some thynge come in to my mynde.
Wherfore do I beare my flesshe in my tethe, and my soule in myne handes? Loo, there is C neither comforte or hope for me, yf he wyll slee me. But yf I vtter & reproue myne owne wayes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me hole: and why? there maye no dissembler come before hym. Heare my wor-des, and ponder my sayinges with youre ea-res. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe that I shall be founde ryghtous. What is he, that wyll goo to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tonge, I shall dye. Neuertheleſſe graunte me two thinges, and then wyll I not hyde my ſelfe from the.

D Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearefull dreade of the, make me afeayde. And then ſende for me to the law, that I maye aunſwere for my ſelfe: or els, let me ſpeake, and gyue thou thy aunſwere. Howe greate are my myſdedes and ſynnes? Let me knowe my tranſgreſſions and offences. Wherfore hydeſt thou thy face, and holdeſt me for thyne ennemye? Wylte thou be ſo cruell and extreme vnto a flyenge leafe, and folow vpon drye ſtubble, that thou layeſt ſo ſharply to my charge, and wylt vtterly vndo me for the ſynnes of my youthe? Thou haſt put my foote in toe ſtockes, thou lokeſt narowly vnto all my pathes, & markeſt the ſteppes of my fete: where I muſt conſume lyke a foule carcon, and as a clothe that is motbe eaten.

¶ Job deſcribeth the lyfe of man, and prophecieth of the reſurrection. Hope luſtayneth the godly, tyll they haue that they loke for.

CAPI. XIIII.

A MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a ſhorte tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuers miſeryes. He commeth vp, and falleth awaye lyke a floure. He fleeth as it were a ſhadowe, and neuer continueth in one ſtate. Thynkeſt thou it nowe well doone, to open thyne eyes vpon ſuche one, and to bringe me before the in iudgement? Who can make that cleane, that commeth of an vncleane ſede? No body. The dayes of man are ſhorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou haſt appoynted him his bounds, he can not goo beyonde them. Goo fro me him, that he maye reſte a lytle: vntyll his day come wherin he loketh for, lyke as an hyre-lynge doth.

Yf a tree be cut downe, there is ſome hope B yet that it wyll ſprout and ſhote forthe the braunches agayne: For though the roote be waren olde and dred in the grounde, yet when the ſtocke getteth the ſente of water, it wyll budde and bringe forth bowes, lyke as when it was firſt planted. But man when he is dead, periſſhed and conſumed awaye, what becommeth of him? The fiſhes when they be dried vp, and the riuers when they be emptye, are filled agayne therowe the flowyng waters of the ſee: but when man ſleepeth, he ryſeth not agayne, but vntyll the heuen peryſſhe: he ſhal not L wake vp, ne ryſe out of his ſlepe. O that thou wouldeſt kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntil thy wrathe were ſtylled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wherin thou mighteſt remembre me. May a dead man lyue agayne? All the dayes of this my pylgrymage, am I lokinge when my chaūging ſhall come. Yf thou wouldeſt but call me, I ſholde obeye the: only deſpiſe not the worke of thyne owne handes.

D For thou haſt nombred all my goinges, yet be not thou extreme vpon my ſynnes. Thou haſte ſealed vp myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyful vnto my wickednes. The mountaynes fall awaye at the laſte, the rockes are remoued out of theyr place, the waters pearſe thorowe the verye ſtones by lyfe and lyfell, the ſtoudes waſhe awaye the grauell and earthe: Euen ſo deſtroyeſt thou the hope of man. Thou preuayleſt agaynſte him, ſo that he paſſeth a waye: thou chaungeſt his ſtate, and putteſt him keome the. Whether his chyldren come to worſhyp or no, he can not tell: And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his fleſh muſt haue trauayle: and whyle the ſoule is in him the muſt be in ſorowe.

¶ Eliphas reproueth Job because he aſcribeth wyſdome and pureneſs to hym ſelfe. He declareth the curſe that tarieth on the wycked, reckenynge Job to be one of that nombre.

CAP. XV.

THen aunſwered Eliphas the Themanite, and ſayd: Sholde a wyſe man aunſwere as the ſcyence of the wynde, and fill his belye with the wynde of the Eaſt? Thou reprouest with wordes that are nothyng worth, and ſpeakeſt thynges whiche can do no good. As for ſhame thou haſte ſet aſyde, els wouldeſt thou not make ſo manye wordes before God: but thy wyckednes teacheth thy mouth, and ſo thou haſt choſen the a craftie tonge. Thyne owne mouthe condemneth the, & not I: yea thyne owne lyppes ſhape the an aunſwere. Art thou the firſte man that euer was borne? Or A was thou made before the hylles? haſte thou herd the ſecrete counſel of God, that al wyſdome is to lyte for the? What knoweſt thou that we knowe not? What vnderſtandeſt thou but we can the ſame? With vs are olde and aged men, yea ſuche as haue liued longer then thy fore fathers.

Thynkeſt thou it a ſmalle thynge of the conſolacions of God? and are they with the a lytinge worde? why doth thyne hert make the ſo proude? Why ſtandeſt thou ſo greatly in thyne owne conceyte? Wherevnto loke thyne eyes, that thy mynde is ſo pukte vp agaynſt God, and letteſt ſuche wordes goo oute of thy mouth? What is man, that he ſholde be clene? what haly ye (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be knowen to be ryghtous? Beholde there is no truſt to his ſayntes: yea the very heuēs are not clene in his ſight. How mooche more then an abhommable & vile man, whiche drynketh wickednes lyke water? I wil tell the, heare me: I wyl ſhewe the a thyng that I knowe, which wiſe men haue tolde, and C hathe not ben hyd frome their fathers: vnto whom only the land was giuen, that no ſtraunger ſholde come among them.

The vngodly diſpayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, and the nombre of a tyraunts yeres are vnknowen. A fearefull ſounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peax, yet feareth he deſtruction: He diſcreth neuer to be deliuered out out of darkenesse, the swerde is alway before his eyes. When he goeth forthe to get his lyuynge, he thynketh playnely that the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse make him afrayde, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with his hoste redye to the battayle. For he hathe stretched out his hande agaynst God, and armed him selfe agaynst the almyghty. He runneth proudly vpō him, and with a stiffe necke fyghteth he agaynste him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his bodye well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellynge be in desolate cities, and in houses, whiche no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be ryche, neither shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shall drye vp his braunches, with the blaste of the mouth of God shall he be taken away. He will neyther applye hym selfe to faythfulnesse ne truthe, so sore is he disceyued with vanite.

He shall perisshe afore his tyme be worne out, and his hande shall not be grene. He shall be pluckte of as an vntymely grape from the vine, and shall let his floure fall as the olyue dothe. For the congregacion of hypocrites is vnfruteful, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are gredy to receyue giftes. He conceyueth trauayle, he beareth mischiefe, and his body bringeth forth disceyte.

¶ Job repetynge his mysserye, sayth that he suffreth more then his wyckednesse hath deserued.

CAPI. XVI.

IOb answered and sayd: I haue ofte times herde suche thynges. Miserable gyuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or what thou yet anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye doo also. But wolde God that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, and shake my heed at you. I sholde comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne with the talkynge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe will not cease: and thoughe I holde my tonge, yet will it not departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wyfes neyghbours beare witnesse) there standeth vp a dissembler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angrye at me, he hateth me, and gnasheth vpon me with his teth. Myne ennemye scoureth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wide vpō me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue eased the selues thorow myne aduersitie. God hath giuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me in to the handes of the wicked. I was somtyme in welthe, but sodeynly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rēt me, and set me as it were a marke for him to shote at: he hath compassed me rounde aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon an other and is fallen vpon me like a giaunt. I haue sowed a sacke clothe vpon my skynne, and lye wt my strength in the dust.

My face is swollen with weping, and mine eyes are waxen dymne. Howe be it there is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayer is cleane. O erth couer not my bloud, and let my crynge synde no rowme. For loo, my witnesse is in heauen / and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygthe. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth oute teares vnto God. Thoughe a bodye myght pleat with God as one man dothe with an other, yet the nombre of my yeres are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

CAPI. XVII.

MY breth sayeth, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at dethes doze. I haue disceyued no man, yet muste myne eye continue in heuinesse. O deliuer me and set me by the: who shall then be able to thruste my handes together? Thou hast withholden their hertes frome vnderstandynge, therfore shall they not be sette vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne chyldren spende it. He hathe made me as it were a by worde of the common people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge them. My countenaunce is heuye for verye anger, and the membres of my bodye are become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consider this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynste the hypocrite.

The ryghtous wyll kepe his waye, and he that hathe cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, tourne you and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man amonge you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are vanysshed awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte chaungynge the nyght in to daye, and the lyghte in to darckenesse. Thoughe I tary neuer so moche, yet ỹ graue is my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darcke. I call corrupcion my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thynge that I loke for? All that I haue shall goo downe in to the pit, and lye with me in the dust.

¶ Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnfaythfull and wycked.

CAPI. XVIII.

Then

A Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: when will ye make an end of your wordes? Marcke well and consider, we wyll speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beestes, and reputed so vyle in youre syght?
Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger?
Shall the earthe be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of their place bycause of the?
B Shall not the lyghte of the vngodlye be put out? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne.
The lyght shall be darke in his dwellyng e, & his candle shall be put oute with him. His presumptuous gopnges shall be kepte in, and his owne counsell shall caste him downe. For his fete shall be taken in the net, and he shall walke in the snare. His fote shall be holden in the trap, and the thyefe shal catche him. The snare is layd for him in the ground, and a pitfall in the waye.
Fearefulnesse shall make him afrayde on e-uery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Honger shall be his substaunce, & mis-C fortune shall hange vpon him. He shall eate the strengthe of his chynne, the fyrste borne of deth shall eate his membres. All his comforte and hope shall be rotted out of his dwelling, very tearefulnesse shal bryng him to the king.
Other men shall dwell in his house (whiche nowes none of his) and brymstone shal be sca-tered vpon his habitacion. His rotes shall be dryed vp beneth, and aboue shal his harnest be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe D from the erth, and his name shall not be prays-sed in the stretes: he shal be dryue from light in to darkenesse, and be caste clene oute of the worlde, he shal neyther haue children nor kyns-folkes amonge his people/no, ne any posterite in his countrey: ponge and olde shall be astonished at his deth. Suche are now the dwel-lynges of the wicked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

¶ Job receyueth his mysseryes and greuouse paynes.
The Prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

CAPI. XIX.

A IOb answered and sayde: howe longe wyll ye vexe my mynde, and trouble me with wor-des? Loo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me:
are ye not ashamed to laughe me to scorne? yf
I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye wyll enhaunce youre selues agaynste me, and accuse me to be a wycked person bycause of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God which hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me about with his scourges. Beholde, though I crye yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde:
Thoughe I complayne, there is none to gyue sentence with me. He hathe hedged vp my pathe, I can not get awaye, he hathe set dark-nesse in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne
B honoure, and taken the crowne awaye fro my heed. He hathe destroyed me on euerye syde, and I am vndone: My hope hathe he taken awaye fro me. as it were a tree pluckt vp by the roote. His wrathe is kyndled a-gaynst me, he taketh me as though I were his enemye.
His men of warre came togyther, and made theyr waye ouer me, and besyeged my dwellynge rounde aboute. He hathe put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and suche as were of myne acquayntaunce, are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an alyeaunt in their syght.
When I call vpon my seruaunt, he gyueth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am layne to speake layre vnto the chyldren of myne owne bodye. Yea the very fooles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euyll vpon me. All suche as were my moost familiars abhorre me: & they whome I loued beste, are tourned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesshe is awap, onely there is left me the skyn about my teth, haue pitye vpon me, haue pi-tye vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hathe touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfyed of my flesshe?
O that my wordes were wrytten, O that they were put in a booke: would God they were grauen with an yron penne in lead or in stone. For I am sure that my redemer liueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earthe in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne with this skynne, and se God in my flesshe.
Yea I my selfe shall beholde hym, not why other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: Why wo not we persecute him? we haue founde an occasion agaynste him. But beware of the swerde, for the swerde wyll be auengyd of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudge-ment.

¶ Sophar sayeth, that the vnkaythfull, the contentious, and the wycked, shall haue a shorte ende.

CAPI. XX.

THen answered Sophar the Naama-thite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer.
And why? my mynde is tossed here and there.
I haue sufficiently herde thy checkynge and reproffe, therfore am I purposed to make an-swere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely that frome the begynninge (euer sithens the creation of man vpon erth) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben short, and that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the twynklynge of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to the heuen, so that his heed reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perysheth at the last like dong: in so moche that they whiche haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He venisheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be found, and passeth awaye as a vision in the night.

nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth now no syght of him, & his place B place knoweth him no more. His chyldren goo a beggyng, their handes bryng them to sorow and heynelle.

From his youth his bones are full of vice, whiche shall lye downe with him in the earth. When wickednelle is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth that will he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth shall be turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shall he perdyake agayn, for God shal draw them out of his belly, he shall sucke the serpentes heed, & L the adders tong shall slee him: so that he shal no more se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue nothynge to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not builded them. His bely could neuer be filled, therfore shall he perysshe in his couetyse. He deuoured so gredyly that he left not hyng behynde/ therfore his goodes shal not prosperr. Though he hadde poyson of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretche on D euery syde.

For thoughe the wycked haue neuer so moche to fyll his belye, yet God shall sende his wrathe vpon him, and cause his battayle to raygne ouer him: so that yf he flee the yron weapons, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arowe shall be taken forthe, and go oute at his backe, and a glysterynge swerde thorow the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darckenelle be hable to hyde him. And vnkyndled fyre shall consume him, and loke what remayneth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wyckednelle, and the earthe shall take parte agaynste him. The substaunce that he hathe in his house, shall be taken awaye and perisshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. This is the portion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the heritage that he maye loke for of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXI.

IOb answered and said: O heare my wordes A and amende youre selues. Suffre me a litle, þ I may speake also, and then laugh my wordes to scorne yf ye wyll. Is it with a man that I make this disputacion? Which if it were so, holde not my spirite be then in sore trouble? Marke me well, be abasshed, & laye youre hand vpon youre mouth. For when I ponder and cõsider this, I am afrayde, and my flesh is smitten with feare. Wherfore do wycked men liue in healthe and prosperitie come to their olde age, and increase in rychelle? Their chylders chyldren lyue in their syght, and their generacion before their eyes. Their houses are safe frome all feare, for the rod of God dothe not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, & that not oute of tyme: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth their chyldren by flockes, and their sonnes leade the daunce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue in- B strumentes of muslyke at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthe: but sodeynlye they goo downe to hell. They saye vnto God: goo frome vs, we desyre not the knowlege of thy wayes. What maner felowe is the almightye, that we shoulde serue him? What profyte shoulde we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vtterly no goodnelle in them, therfore wil not I haue to do with the counsel of the vngodly. How oft shal the candle of the wicked be put out? how oft cõmeth their destruction vpon them? O what sorowe shall God gyue theym for their parte in his wrathe? Yea they shall be as chaffe before the wynde, and as duste that the storme carryeth awaye.

And though God saue their chyldren from suche sorow, yet wil he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruction and mislerye shal they se with their eyes, and drinke of the fearful wrath of the almightye. For what careth he what becommeth of C his household after his deth? whose monethes passe away swifter then an arow. In as moch then as God hath the hyest power of al, who can teache him any knowlege? One dieth now when he is mightye, and at his best, riche, and in prosperitie: euen when his bowelles are at the fattest, & his bones full of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe and heynelle, and neuer had good dayes: Nowe slepe they bothe alyke in the earthe, and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, yea & what ye ymagin agaynste me vnryghtousnye. For ye saye: where is the Princes palace? Where is the D dwellyng of the vngodly? Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and (yf ye wil not regarde their tokens and dedes) he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruction, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrathe. Who dare reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewardeth him for the vngraciousnelle that he dothe? Yet shall he be broughte to his graue, and watche among the heape of the dead. Then shal he be layne to be buryed amonge the stones by the brooke syde. All men muste folowe hym, and there are innumerable gone before him. O howe vayne is the comforte that ye gyue me? Are not youre aunsweres cleane contrarye to ryght and truthe?

CAPI. XXII.

THen Eliphas the Themanite gaue answere and sayd: Maye a man be compared vnto God in wysdome, thoughe he seme to hy him him selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art rightous? Or what dothe it profyte him, that thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayde to reproue the, and to step forthe with the in to iudgement? Commeth not this for that greate wyckednesse, and for thyne vngracious dedes, whiche are innumerable? Thou hast taken the pledge frome thy brethren for nought, and robbed the naked of their clothynge: To suche as were wery, hast thou gruen no water to drynke, thou haste withdrawen bread from the hungrye: Sholde

B suche one then as vseth violence, wronge, and oppression (doynge all thynge of partialitie, and haupnge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sente wydowes awaye emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore arte thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, and sodeynly vexed with feare. Shouldest thou then se no darckenesse? Sholde not the water flou de runne ouer the? Nowe bycause that God is hyer then the heuēs, and bicause thou seest that the sterres are so hye, wylte thou therfore saye: Tussche how shoulde God knowe? Dothe his dompnion reache beyonde the cloudes? Tussche the cloudes couer him that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heuen. Well, thou wylte kepe the olde
C waye that all wycked men haue gone: bothe olde and younge, whose foundacion is a runnynge water, which saye vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner: Tush, what wil the almightye do vnto vs? where as he (notwithstandynge) filleth their houses with all good. Whiche meaninge of the vngodly be farre fro me. For with ioye shal the godly, & with gladnesse shall the innocente se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, and their posterite consumed with fyre.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shal all thynges prospere with the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at his mouthe, and laye vp his wordes in thyne herte. For yf
D thou wylt tourne to the almyghty, thou shalt stand faste, and all vnrygbtousnesse shall be farre from thy dwellynge: He shall gyue the an haruest, whiche in plenty and aboundaunce shall excede the dust of the earthe, and the golde of Ophir lyke ryuer stones. Yea the almyghtye his owne selfe shall be thyne harueste, and the heape of thy monye. Then shalte thou haue thy delyte in the almyghtye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalte kepe thy promyses. Then, loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prospere with the, and the lyghte shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth him selfe, hym shall he set vp: and who so loketh mekely, shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and thorowe the vngyltynesse of thyne handes shalte thou be deliuered.

¶ Job affyrmeth that he both knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayth that he hath walked in his ryghtousnes.

CAPI. XXIII.

IOb answered and sayd: My sayinge is yet
A this daye in bytternesse, and my hande heupe amonge my groninges. O that I mighte se him and fynde him: O that I myght come before his seat, to pleade my cause before him, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes, that I myght knowe what answere he wold giue me: and that I mighte vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleade agaynst me with his great power and strength, or wil he leane him selfe vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not doo so with me. But let him gyue me B lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before I fynde him not: Yf I come behynde, I can gette no knowlege of him: Yf I goo on the lefte syde to ponder his workes, I can not atteyne vnto theym. Agayne, yf I goo on the ryghte syde, he hydeth hym selfe that I can not se him: but as for my way he knoweth it, and trieth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his pathe, his
C hyghe strete haue I holden, and not gone oute of it: I haue not forsaken the commaundement of his lyppes, but loke what he charged me with his mouthe, that haue I shut vp in my herte. It is he hym selfe alone, who shall tourne hym backe? He dothe as him lusteth, and bryngeth to passe what he wyll. He rewardeth me in to my bosome, and many other thynges mo doth he, as he was by his power. This is the cause that I shrinke at his presence, D so that when I consider him, I am afrayde of him. For in so moche as he is God, he maketh my herte softe: and seynge that he is almightie, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darckenes, the cloude hathe so couered my face.

¶ Job describeth the wycke dues of men, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wycked.

CAPI. XXIIII.

COnsyderynge then there is no tyme hyd
A from the almyghtye, how happeneth it that they whiche knowe him, wyll not regarde his dayes? For some there be that remoue other mennes landemarkes: that robbe theym of their cattell, and kepe the same for theyr owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes oxe for a pledge: that thruste the poore oute of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde togyther. Beholde, the wylde asses in the desserte goo by tymes, as theyr maner is, to B spoyle: Yea the berye wyldernesse ministreth foode for theyr chyldren. They repe the corne felde that is not theyr owne: and gather the grapes out of his vyneyarde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, haupnge no clothes to couer them & kepe them from colde: So that when the showers in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet,

they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckynge fatherlesse chyldren, and put the poore in pryson: in so moche that they let them goo naked withoute clothynge, and yet the hungrye beare the sheues. The poore are fayne to labboure in theyr oyle mylles, yea and to treade in their wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The hole cytye cryeth vnto the Lorde with syghynge, the soules of the slayne, make their complaynte: But God destroyeth them not for al this, where as they (notwithstandynge) are rebellious & disobedient enemies, which leke not his light and waye, ne turne againe in to his pathe. Timely in the mornyng do they aryse to murther the L. symple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduoutrer, that wayteth for the darckenesse, and sayth thus in him selfe: Tush, there shall no man se me, and so he disguyseth his face. In the nyght season they searche the houses, and hyde them selues in the dayetyme, but wyll not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of deth commeth vpon them, and they goo in horrible darckenesse. The vngodlye is very swyfte O that his portion also vpon earthe were swyfter then the runnyng water, which suffereth not the husbandman to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt vineyardes: O that they (for the wickednesse whiche they haue done) were drawen to the hell sooner then nowe meeteth at the heate. O that all compassion vpon theym were forgotten: that theyr dayntes were wormes, that they were cleane put oute of mynde, and vtterlye hewen downe lyke an vntruthful tre. For they mayntayne the bareyn, & make them that they can not beare, and vnto wydowes they do no good. They plucke downe the mightye with theyr power, and when they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer withoute feare, as long as they lyue. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not receyue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne waies. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme poouertie, and taken oute of the waye: yea and vtterly plucte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll then reproue me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothynge worth?

¶ Baldad proueth that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

CAPI. XXV.

THen aunswered Baldad the Suhite, and saith: Power and feare is with him aboue, that maketh peace, sytting in his highnesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose light ariseth ouer al. But how may a man compared vnto God be iustyfyed? Or how can he be clene, that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth nothing in comparison to him, and the sterres are vncleane in his sight. How moch more then man that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, whiche is but a worme?

¶ Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and proueth it by his myracles.

CAPI. XXVI.

IOb aunswered and sayde: O howe helpest thou the weyke? what comfort giuest thou vnto him that hath no strength? Where is the counsel that thou sholdest gyue him which hath no wysdome? Wyth whom spakest thou so hewye thyne excellent ryghtousnesse, before whome haste thou spoken these wordes? Who made the brethe to come oute of the mouthe? The gyauntes and worthyes that are slayne, and lye vnder the worlde with their companions, yea and all they whiche dwell benethe in the hell are not hyd from him, and the verye destruction selfe can not be kepte oute of his syght. He stretcheth oute the northe ouer the empetye, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothynge. He byndeth the water in his cloudes, that they fall not downe together. He holdeth backe his stoole, that can not be sene, and spredeth his cloudes before it. The wōders of God.

He hath compassed the waters with certayne boundes, vntyll the daye and nyghte come to an ende. The verye pyllers of heauen tremble and quake at his reproffe. He stilleth the see with his power, and thorowe his wysdome hath he set forthe the worlde. With his spirite hathe he garnysshed the heauens, and with his hande hathe he wounded the rebellyous serpente. This is nowe a shorte somme of his doynges. But who is hable sufficyently to rehearse his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thonder of his power?

¶ The constancye and perfectnes of Job, and the parte of the vnfaythfull with god.

CAPI. XXVII.

AND Job went forthe in his communication, sayinge: as truely as God lyueth (whiche hathe taken awaye my power fro me) and the almyghtye, that hathe vexed my mynde: my lyppes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no discrete, whyle my brethe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath gyuen me) is in my nostrels.

God forbyd I shoulde graunte youre cause to be right. As for me, vntyll myne ende come, wyll I neuer goo fro myne innocencye. My ryghtous dealynge kepe I faste, whiche I wyll not forsake: my herte shall not reproue me of my dayes. Therfore myne ennemy shal be founde as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte agaynste me as the vnrighteous. What hope hathe the hypocryte, thoughe he haue greate good, and thoughe God gyue him ryches after his hertes desire? Dothe God heare him the soner, when he cryeth vnto him in his nede? Hathe he suche pleasure and delyte in the almyghtye, that he dare alwaye cal vpon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thynge that I haue of the almyghtye wyll I not kepe from you. Beholde ye stande in your owne conceyte, as thoughe ye knewe all thynges. Wherfore then do ye go aboute with suche vayne wordes? sayinge: This is the porcion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the herytage that tyrauntes shall receyue of the almyghtye. Yf he get manye chyldren, they shall perysshe with the swerde, and his posteritie shall haue scarcenesse of breed. Loke whom he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye and be buryed, and no man shall haue pitye of his wydowes. Thoughe he haue as moche money as the dust of the earth, and rayment as redye as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the goulye shall put it vpon him, and the innocent shall deale oute the moneye. His house shall endure as the moth, & as a boothe that the watchman maketh. When the ryche man dyeth, he caryeth nothynge with him: he is gone with the twynclynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyght season. A vehement wynde caryeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place. It ruysheth in vpon him and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Then clap men their handes at him, yea and iest of him when they loke vpon his place.

¶ Job sheweth that the wisdome of God is vnsearcheable.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THere are places where siluer is molten, and where golde is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to metall. The darkenesse shall ones come to an ende, he can seke out the ground of al thinges: the stones, the darke, and the horrible shadowe. With the ryuer of water parteth he asunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourheed: suche as are rude, vnmanerly, and boystours. He bringeth foode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are clene Saphirs, and where the clottes of the erth are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hathe sene: wherin the proude and hye minded walke not, and where no lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bryngeth he great floudes togyther / and the thynge that is hydde, bringeth he to lyghte. How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandynge? Verely no man can tell how worthy a thyng she is, neither is she founde in the lande of the lyuynge. The depe sayth: she is not in me. The see saith: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fyne golde, neither maye the pryce of her be bought with anye moneye. No wedges of golde, of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs maye be compared vnto her. No, neither gold, ne christal, neither swete owntz, ne golden plate. There is nothynge so worthy, or so excellet, as is ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth oute of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her, yea no maner apparell, howe pleasaunte and fayre so euer it be.

Whence then commeth wysdome? & where is the place of vnderstandynge? She is hydde from the eyen of all men, yea & from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and deathe saye: we haue herde tell of her with our eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghty floudes a lawe, then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knewe her. And vnto man he sayd: Beholde to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euyll, is vnderstandynge.

¶ Job complayneth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, subtelly reprouynge his frendes of iniurye, because they sayde that Job suffred accordynge to his deserynge.

CAPI. XXIX.

SO Job proceded and wente forthe in his communicacion, sayinge: O that I were as I was in the monethes paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shined vpon my heed: when I went after the same lyghte, and shynynge euen thorowe the darckenesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthye and hadde ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when the almyghtye was with me: when my houshold folkes stode aboute me: when my wayes ran ouer with butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I went thorowe the citye vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) hydde theym selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the Princes left of their talkynge, and layde their hande to their mouthe: when the myghtye kepte styll their voyce, and when their tonges cleaued to the rofe of their mouthes. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wysshed me good. For I delyuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue ben lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wydowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghtousnesse, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equytie was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore, and and when I knewe not their causes, I sought it oute diligently. I brake the crafftes of the vnryghtous, and pluckte the spoyle oute of theyr tethe.

Therfore I thought vetily, that I shoulde haue dyed in my neste: and that my dayes shoulde haue ben as manye as the sondes of the see. For my roote was spredde oute by the water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne. Myne honour encreased moze and moze, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with sylence they tarped for my counsell. Yf I hadde spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonges them. They wayted for me as the earthe dothe for the rayne: and gaped for me, as the grounde dothe to receyue the latter showe. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and this testimonye of my countenaunce fall not to the earth. When I agreed vnto theyr waye, I was the chyefe, and sate as a kynge amonge his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth suche as be in heuynesse.

CAPI. XXX.

BVt nowe they that are myne inferyoures and yonger then I, haue me in derysyon: yea euen they, whose fathers I wold haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spente and paste awaye without anye profyte. For verye mysery and honger, they wente aboute in the wildernesse lyke wretches and beggers, plucknge vp herbes amonge the bushes, and the Iunipers roote was theyr meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a theefe. Their dwellynge was beside foule brookes, yea in the caues and dennes of the earthe. Vpon the brye heth wente they aboute cryinge, and in the bryme hylles they gathered them togyther. They were the chyldren of fooles and vylaynes, which are deed awaye from the worlde. Now am I their songe, and am become their tessting stocke: they abhorre me, they flee farre fro me, and spayne my face with spettle. For the Lorde hathe opened his quyuer, he hathe hyt me, and put my bridle in my mouthe. Vpon my ryghte hande they rose togyther agaynste me, they haue hurte my feete, made awaye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was easye for theym to doo me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it hadde ben the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearefulnesse is tourned agaynste me.

Myne honoure vanysheth awaye moze swyftely then wynde, and my prosperitie departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my mynde poured full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synowes take no reste. With all their power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therwith as it were with a cote. I am euē as it were claye, and am become like asshes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and thoughe I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemy, and with thy violent hande, thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe haste thou gyuen me a verye sore fall. Sure I am that thou wylt delyuer me vnto deth: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all thynge lyuynge. Now vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed allredye: but where hurte is wone, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? hadde not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuertheless, where as I loked for good, euyl happened vnto me: and where as I waited for lyghte, there came darckenesse. My bowelles sethe within me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpō me. Mekely and lowly came I in, yea and without anye displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is tourned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heate: my harpe is tourned to sorow, and my pype to weppynge.

¶ Job recyteth the innocencye of his lyuynge, and nombre of his vertues.

CAPI. XXXI.

I Made a couenaunt with myne eyes, that I wolde not loke vpon a damosell. For howe greate a portion shall I haue of God from aboue? and what enheritaunce frome the almyghtye on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that torneth him selfe to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and mysery come vpon him? Dothe not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges? Yf I haue cleued vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to discyuer: lette me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocencye. Yf so be that I haue withdrawen my foote out of the right waye: yf myne herte hath folowed myne eye syght, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: O then is it reason, that I sowe, and an other eate / yea that my generacion and offsprynge be cleane rooted oute. Yf myne herte hathe lusted after my neyghbours wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his doze: O then lette my wyfe be an other mannes harlot, and let other lye with her. For this is a wyckednesse and synne that is worthy to be punisshed, yea a fyre that vtterly shold consume me, and rote oute all my substaunce. Dyd I euer thynke scorne to do ryghte vnto my seruauntes and maydens, when they had any matter agaynst me? But seynge that God wyll syt in iudgement what shall I doo? And for so moche as he wyll nedes vysyt me, what answere shall I gyue him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also? were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore desyreth any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused ỹ wydowe stande waytynge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no part with me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perisshe thorow nakednesse and want of clothyng? Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose syde thanked me not, because he was warmed with the wolle of my shepe?

Dyd I euer lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in auctoritie: then let myne arme fall fro my shoulder, and myne arme holes be broken frome the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punyshement of God, and knewe verye well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced because my substaunce was greate, and because my hande gat so moche? Dyd I euer greatly regarde the rysynge of the sonne? or hadde I the goynge downe of the moone in greate reputacion? Hathe my herte medled pryuyly with any discevte? Or dyd I euer kisse myne owne hande? that were a wyckednesse worthye to be punyshed, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of myne ennemye? Or was I euer glad that anye harme happened vnto him? Oh no. I neuer suffered my mouthe to wo suche a synne as to wysshe him euyll. Yet they of myne owne housholde saye: who shall lette vs to haue oure bellye full of his flesshe? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye without, but opened my doores vnto him. Haue I euer done anye wicked dede, where thorowe I shamed my selfe before men: or anye abhominacion, that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I hadde feared anye greate multytude of people: or yf I hadde ben despysed of the symple: O then shoulde I haue bene afrayde. Thus haue I quietly spente my lyfe, and not gone out at the doore. O that I hadde one whiche wolde heare me. Loo, this is my cause. Lette the almyghtye gyue me aunswere: and let him that is my contrarye partye, sue me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlande aboute my heed. I haue tolde the nombre of my goinges, and delyuered them vnto him as to a prynce. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynste me, or that the forowes therof make anye complaynte: Yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yea yf I haue greued anye of the plowemen: then lette thystles growe in stede of my whete, and thornes for my barleye.

¶ Eliu after the other had fynyshed their communycacyon, reproueth them of foolishnes. Zeg maketh not a men wyse, but the spirite of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

SO these thre men wolde stryue no more with Job, bycause he helde him selfe a righteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iust before God. And vp Jobs three frendes he was angrye also, bicause they hadde founde no reasonable aunswere to ouercome hym. Nowe tarved Eliu tyll they hadde ended their communicacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe that these thre men were not able to make Job answere, he was mysconteut, so that he gaue answere him selfe and sayde: Lonly be yonge that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, e durste not shewe for the my mynde, for I thoughte thus within my selfe: It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doubte) hathe a mynde, but it is the inspiracion of the almyghtye that giueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wyse, neither dothe euerye aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I maye be herde) and wyll shewe you myne opinion. For when I hadde wayted tyll ye made an ende of your talkynge, and herde youre wysdome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea when I hadde diligently pondred what ye sayd: I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynste Job, or that directly coulde make answere vnto his wordes: leste ye sholde prayse your selues to haue founde oute wysdome: bycause it is God that hath caste hym oute, and no man. Neuertheles seynge he hathe not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll not I answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make aunswere, nor speake one worde) but sythe ye wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke domme men, and makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape him an aunswere, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe bottels in sunder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make answere. I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye.

¶ Eliu sheweth wherin Job offendeth. With God maye we not stryue, nor curyously searche oute his workes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A Wherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll saye: Beholde, I wyll open my mouthe, and my tonge shall speake oute of my chawes. My herte shall ordre my wordes a right, and my lyppes shall talke of pure wysdome. The spirite of God hath made me, and the breth of the almyghty hath gyuen me my life. Yf thou canst, then gyue me answere: prepare thy self to stande before me face to face. Beholde betwe God am I euē as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore thou nedest not be afrayde of me, neither nedest thou to feare, that my authoryte shalbe B to heuy for the. Nowe hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynste me, and taketh me for his ennemye: he hath put my fote in the stockes, and loketh narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vnresonable wordes of thyne wyll I make aunswere.

Sholde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynst him bicause he giueth the no accomptes of all his doinges?

C For when God doth ones commaūde a thing there shold no man be curious, to serche whether it be right. In dreames and visions of the night season (when slombring commeth vpon men that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rowneth them in the eares, he informeth the and theweth them playnely that it is he whiche withdraweth man from euill, deliuereth him from pryde kepeth his soule from destruction, and his lyfe from the swerde. He chasteneth him with sycknesse, and bringeth him to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so ꝓ his lyfe may awaye with no bred, and his soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meat: in so moche that his body is clene consumed awaye, and his bones appere no more. His soule draweth on to destruction, and his lyfe to deth. Now if there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the right waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and saythe: he shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe D to destruction. for I am sufficiently reconcyled. Then his flesshe (whiche hath ben in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in his youth. For yf he yelde him selfe vnto God, he is gracyous, and sheweth him his countenaūce ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his righteousnesse. Suche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hathe chastened and reformed me: I did vnrightously, neuertheles he hath not recompenced me therafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe that it seeth the light. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he kepeth his soule frome perysshynge, and letteth him enioye the lyghte of the lyuynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, vntyll I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye, then answere me, and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothing, then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

¶ Eliu prayseth the iustice of God, whiche iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

CAP. XXXIIII.

A Eliu proceadinge forth in his communication, sayd: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge our selues, that we may knowe what is right. And why? Job hath sayde: I am righteous, but God dothe me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyer, thoughe my cause be right, and violently I am plaged where as I made no faute: where is there suche one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnesse like water? whiche goeth in the company of wycked B doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he sayethe: Thoughe a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore herke vnto me ye that haue vnderstandyng.

Farre be it from God, that he shold medle with wickednes: and farre be it from the almighty, that he shold medle with vnrighteous dealyng: but he rewardeth the workes of mā and causeth euery man to fynde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is that God condēneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgemēt of the almighty is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth the earthe in his stede? Or whome hathe he set to gouerne the hole worlde? To whome hathe he giuen his bert, for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto him? All flesshe shall come togyther vnto nought, and all men shall turne agayne vnto earthe. yf thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I say, and harken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no right? Yf thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is euē the same, that knoweth the rebellyons kynges, and sayth to Prynces: Vngodlye men are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the personnes C of the lordlye, and regardeth not the ryche more then poore. For they be all the worcke of his handes. In the twinclynge of an eye shall they be slayne: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perisshe and be taked awaye withoute handes. And why? his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all his goynges. There is no darcknesse nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers frome hym. For no man shal be suffered to go in to iudgement with God.

Many one, yea innumerable dothe he punysshe, and setteth other in their stedes for he knoweth their euyll and darke workes, therfore shall they be destroyed. They that were in the stede of Sears, dealte lyke vnhodlye men. Therfore turned they backe crapterously and vnfaythfully from him, and wold not receyue his his wayes. In so moch ꝑ they haue caused ꝑ voyce of the poore to come vnto him, & nowe he heareth the complainte of suche as are in necessitie. Yf he delyuer and graunte pardon, who will iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde awaye his countenaunce, who will turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to any man? For the wyckednelle and synne of the people, he maketh an hypocrite to reygne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begon to talke of God, I will not hynder ꝯ. Yf I haue gone a mylle, enfourme me: yf I haue done wronge, I wil leaue of. Wilt thou not gyue a reasonable answere? Art thou afrayed of any thinge, seynge thou begannest first to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandinge and wyldome, that haue herd me, myght saye: What canst thou speake? As for Iob he hath neyther spoken to the purpose nor wysely. O father, let Iob be well tryed, because he hath turned him selfe to the wycked: yea aboue his synnes he hathe blasphemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in that he stryueth against God with his wordes.

¶ Neyther doth godlynes profyte, or vngodlynes hurte to God, but to man.

CAPI. XXXV.

ELiu spake more ouer, and sayde: Thinkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, howe west thou knowe it? What thinge hast thou more excellent then I, that am a synner? Therfore will I gyue answere vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consydre the cloudes, how they are hygher then thou. Yf thou synnest, what doest thou vnto him? Yf thyne offences be many, how gettest thou his fauoure? Yf thou be ryghteous: what gyuest thou him? Or what receyueth he of thy handes? Of suche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: there is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery man complayneth vpon ꝑ cruell arme of tyrauntes. For suche one neuer sayth: Where is God that made me? & that styrreth vpon vs, that we myght prayse him in the nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnderstandinge, then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

Yf any suche complayne, no man gyueth aunswere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? Doeth not the almyghty accepte his crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then dieth he no violence in his wrathe, neyther hath he pleasure in curyous and depe inquysicions. Therfore hathe Iob opened his mouth but in vayne, and folyshly hath he made so many wordes.

¶ Eliu sheweth wherfore God punysheth and correcteth.

CAPI. XXXVI.

ELiu proceded forthe in his talkynge and sayde: Holde the styll a lytle, and I shewe the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I will open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding, and proue my maker ryghteous. True are my wordes, and no lye: and the knowledge, wherwith I argue against the, is perfect. Beholde, God castyth not away the myghty, for he him selfe is mighty in power and wyldome.

As for the vngodly, he preserueth them not but helpeth the poore to their right. He turneth not his eyes awaye frome the ryghteous he setteth vp kynges in their trone, and setteth them, so that they alwaye sit therin. But yf they be layde in pryson and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of pouertie: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes and the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruell violence.

He with punyshyng and nurtring of the, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of frome their wyckednelle, and to amende. Yf they now will take hede and be obedient, they shall weare out their dayes in prosperitie, and their yeres in pleasures ioye. But yf they will not obeye, they shall go thorowe the swearde, and perysshe, or they be ware. As for suche as be fayned, dissemblers, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, thought they be his prysonners. Thus their soule perysheth in folye, and their lyfe with the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of his straytnelle, and comforteth suche as be in necessitie and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wilt be content) frome the bottomlelle pytte that is beneth: and yf thou wilt holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table with plentye.

Neuertheleſſe thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffre. For thou shall not thy cause be styled with cruelte, nor pacyfyed with many gyftes. Hath God ordened then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all suche myghty men, shoulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, till there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not aſyde to wyckednelle and synne, whyche hytherto thou hast chosen more then meknesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hyghe power: Where is suche a gyuer and lawe gyuer as he? Who shal reproue him of his wayes? Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou hast doone wrong?

O consydre how great and excellent his workes be, whome all men loue and praise: yea and wonder at him, and yet they se hym but afarre aware of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neyther are we hable to come to the experience of his yeres. He turneth the water to small droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they powre vpon and drop vpon men. He cā spreade out the cloudes (a couering of his tabernacle) and cause his lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, and gyueth the aboundaunce of meate. In the turnyng of an hande he hydeth the lyght, and at his commaundement it commeth agayne. The rysing vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the catell.

¶ Elihu proueth that the wysdome of god is vnsearcheable.

CAP. XXXVII.

1 AT this, my hert is astonyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thinge vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce followeth him: for his glorious maiestie gyueth suche a thonder clap, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde, whē God sendeth out his voyce: greate thinges doth he, which we can not comprise. Whē he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As sone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, forthwith the showers haue their stregth and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their owne workes. The beastes crepe into their dennes, and take their reste. Oute of the Southe, commeth the tempeast, and colde oute of the 9 North.

At the breth of God, the froste commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes doo their labour in gyuynge moystenesse, the cloudes powre downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, according as it pleaseth him to deale oute his workes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth them thorow the hole worlde: whether it be to punyth any lande, or to doo good vnto theym, that seke hym.

14 Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styll, and consydre the wondrous workes of God. Arte thou of counsell with God, when he doeth these thinges? When he causeth the lyght to come forthe of his cloudes? Arte thou of his counsell when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, whē the lande is styll thorow the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto him, for we are vnmete because of darkenesse.

Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Shuld a man speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the lyght, that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth whan he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth frome God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equitie, and righteousnesse, he is hygher than can be expressed. Sythe then that euery body feareth him, why shoulde not all wyse men also stande in awe of him?

¶ The wonders that the Lorde hath done frome the begynnynge.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

THen spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hydeth his mynde with folysh wordes? Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I will question the, se thou gyue me a direct answer. Where wast thou, when I layde the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou haste vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spred the lyne vpō it? Wherevpon stande the pylers of it? Or, who layd the corner stone? Where wast thou when the morynge starres praysed me togyther, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantely? Who shut the see with dores, when it brake forth as a childe out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, and swadled it with the darcke? When I gaue it my commaundement, makynge dores and barres for it, sayenge: Hytherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalte thou laye downe thy prowde and hyghe waues? Hast thou gyuen the morynge his charge, (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spryngne his place, that it might take holde of the corners of the earthe, and that the vngodly myghte be shaken out? Their tokens and weapons, hast thou turned lyke claye, and set theym vp agayne as the chaungynge of a garment. Yea thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the prowde. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see? or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the? or hast thou sene the dore of euerlastyng treasure? Haste thou also perceyued how broade the earth is? Now yf thou hast knowledge of all, then shew me where lyght dwelleth, and where darckenes is: that thou mayste bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses.

Knewest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou euer into the threasauries of the snowe? or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, whiche I haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, against the tyme of batayle and warre? By what what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate dealt out vpon the earthe? Who diuideth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the stormey wether, that it watereth and moysteneth the drye and baren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hathe begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hathe gendred the coldenes of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe.

Hast thou brought the seuen starres togither? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bringe forth the morninge starre or the euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, and conueye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayst set vp the ordinaunce thereof vpon the earthe? Moreouer, canste thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye powre downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canste thou thondre also that they maye goo their waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayenge: Lo here are we? Who gyueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandinge? who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who spilleth the vehement watres of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne?

Huntest thou the praye frome the Lyon? or fedest thou his whelpes lyenge in their dennes and lurkynge in their couches? Who puruayeth meat for the rauen, when his younge crye vnto God, and flycker aboute for wante of meate?

¶ God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge him by the examples of his workes, that his ryghteousnes is vnsearcheable.

CAPI. XXXIX

KNowest thou the tyme when the wylde gotes bringe forth their younge among the stony rockes? Or layest thou wayte when the hyndes bie to yawne? reckenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of their bearinge? or when they lye downe, when they cast their younge, and when they are delyuered of their trauayle and payne? How their younge growe vp, and waxe great thorow good feedynge? Who letteth the wylde asse go free? or who loseth the bondes of the mule? Vnto whom I haue gyuen the wyldernesse to be their house, and the vntylled lande to be their dwellynge place. That they maye gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, neyther regarde the crienge of the dryuer: but seke their pasture about the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse.

Vnycorne. Wyll the Unicorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybbe? Canst thou bynde the pocke aboute him in thy forowes, to make hym plowe after the in the valleyes? Mayste thou trust him (because he is stronge) or commyt thy laboure vnto him? Mayst thou beleue him, that he will bringe home the corne? or to carye anye thinge vnto the barne?

The Estrych (whose fethers are fayrer then the wynges of the sparowe hauke) when he hath layde his Egges vpon the grounde, he bredeth them in the dust, and forgetteth that so that they myght be troaden with fete, or broken with some wylde beast. So harde is he vnto his younge, as though they were not his, & laboureth in vayne without any feare. And that because God hathe taken wysdome frome him, and hath not gyuen him vnderstandinge. When his tyme is, he mounteth vp on hyghe, and careth neyther for horse ne man.

Hast thou gyuen the horsse his strength, or lerned him to bow downe his neck with feare that he letteth him selfe be dryuen forth lyke a grashopper, where as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearfull? He breaketh the grounde with the hoffes of his fete cherefully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harnessed men. He layeth aside all feare, his stomack is not abated, neyther starteth he a back for any swerde. Thoughe the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shylde glystre: yet rusheth he in fearsely, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as sone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, thush (sayth he) for he smelleth the batayle a farre of, the noyse, the Captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Gosshauke flyeth towarde the South? Doth the Egle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abydeth in the stonye rockes, and vpon the hyghe toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. Frome thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre aboute with his eyes. His younge are fed with bloude, and where any deed body lyeth, there is he forthwith.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayd: Can he that stryueth with the almyghty, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, gyue hym an aunswere? Job aunswered the Lorde, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore will I laye my hande vpon my mouthe. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I wyll saye no more.

¶ Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the description of an Elephant. Leuiathan.

CAPI. XL.

THen spake the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, and tell me the thinges that I wyll aske the. Wilte thou defete my iudgement? Or wylte thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayste be made ryghteous? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, aryse, decke the in thy holy araye, powre out the indignation of thy wrathe: se that thou cast downe all the proude, looke thou maiest all suche as be stubbourne, to ouerthrowe: Treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete cast them downe into the myre, & couer their faces with darckenesse: Then will I confesse also, that thyne owne ryght hande hath saued the.

Beholde, ℣ Behemoth (whom I made with the) whiche eateth haye as an oxe: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the Nauell of his bodye. He spreadeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, all his synnes are styfe. His shynnes are lyke pypes of brasse, his rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. First when God made him, he ordeyned the wyldernesse for him, that the mountaynes shulde gyue him grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde him with their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour may he drynke out of the hole floude, and suppe of Iordan without any trauayle. Who darre laye hande vpon him openly, and vndertake to catche him? Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou drawe out ℣ Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? Canst thou put a rynge in the nose of him? or bore his chaftes thorow with a naule? Will he make many fayre wordes with the, (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Will he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou able to compell him to do vnto the continual seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with him as wyth a byrde? or gyue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the net with his shynne, or the fysshpannier with his heed? Darrest thou laye hande vpon him? It is better for the to consyder what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touche him. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall beguyle the: Euery man also that seyth him, shall go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

¶ Of the same Leuyathan wherof is mencyoned in the chapter afore.

CAPI. XLI.

WHo is able to stande before me? Or, who hathe gyuen me anye thinge afore hand, that I am bound to rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or spyke fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, and strypeth him out of his clothes? Or who taketh hym by ℣ bryt of his brydle? Who openeth the doore of his face? for he hathe horrible teth rounde aboute. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes, lockt in, kepte, and well compact togyther. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea one hangeth so vpon an other, and stycketh so togyther, that they can not be sundered. His neesing is lyke a glystrynge fyre, and his eyes lyke the morynge shyne. Out of his mouthe go torches and fyre brāds, out of his nostrels there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sething pot. His breth maketh the coles burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strēgth, and before his face sorow is tourned to gladnesse. The membres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleue so fast togyther, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as herde as a stone, and as fast as the stithye that the hammer man smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues heup. If he draw out the swerde, there maye neyther speare, ne brest plate, abyde him. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for slynge stones, he careth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth him to scorne ℣ shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in ℣ myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh ℣ depe to sethe and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see togyther lyke an oyntement. The waye is lyght after him, the depe is his walkynge place. Upon earthe is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consydre all myghty thinges, this same is a kynge ouer all the children of pryde.

¶ The repentaunce of Iob. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

CAPI. XLII.

THen Iob answered the Lord, and sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thinges, and that there is no thought hyde vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therfore haue I spoken vnwysely, seynge these thinges are so hygh, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O herken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I will aske the. I haue gyuen dylygent eare vnto the, and now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I gyue myne owne self the blame, and take repentaunce, in the duste and asshes. A Esay. xxviii. c. 1. Regū. xvi. b.

Nowe when the Lorde hadde spoken these wordes vnto Iob, he sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with ℣ and thy two fredes, for ye haue not spoke ℣ thyng that is ryght is right before me, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take seuen oxen and seuē rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, offre vp also for your selues a brentoffringe: and let my seruaunt Job praye for you. Him will I Marche. v.c. accepte, and not deale with you after youre folysshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken ỹ thing whiche is ryghte, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite wente
C their waye, and dyd accordinge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde tourned him vnto Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyse as moch as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all his brethren, all his sisters, with all theym that had bene of his acquayntaunce afore, and ate bred with him in his house, wondringe at him, & comfortynge him ouer all the trouble, that ỹ Lorde hadde brought vpon him. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he hadde fourtene thousande shepe, fyue thousande Camels, a thousande yoke of oxen, and a thousande asses. He had children also, seuen sonnes and three daughters. The first called Daye: the seconde Kesia: the thirde All pleasousnes. In all the lande were none founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job, & their father gaue them enheritaunce amōg their brethren. After this lyued Job fourtye yeres, so that he sawe his children, and his childrens children to the foureth generacion. And so he dyed, beynge old and of a perfect age.

PSAL. I.

BLessed is ỹ man, that goeth not in the counsell of the vngodly: that abydeth not in the way of synners, and sytteth not in ỹ seate of the scornefull.

But delyteth in the lawe of the Lorde, and exercyseth him selfe in his lawe, daye and nyght.

Suche man is lyke a tree planted by the waters syde, that bryngeth forth his frute in due season.

His leaues shall not fall of, and what soeuer he doth, shall prosperre.

Not so with the vngodly, not so but they are lyke dust, which the wynde scattereth away from of the grounde.

Therfore the vngodly shall not stande in ỹ iudgement, nyther the synners in the congregacion of the righteous.

For the Lorde alloweth the way of the righteous: but the waye of the vngodly shall perysshe.

PSAL. II.

WHy do the Heythen grudge? why do the people ymagyne vayne thinges?

The kynges of the earth stande vp, & the rulers are come togither, against ỹ Lorde and against his annointed.

Let vs breake their bondes asunder, and cast awaye their yocke from vs.

But he ỹ dwelleth in heauen, shall laughe them to scorne: the Lorde him selfe shal haue them in derysion.

The shal he speake vnto them in his wrath and vexe them in his sore displeasure.

Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hill of Sion.

As for me, I will preache the lawe, whereof the Lorde hath sayde vnto me: Thou arte my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the.

Aske of me, and I shall geue the the Heythen for thyne enheritaunce, Yea the vttemoste partes of the worlde for thy possession.

Thou shalt rule theym with a rod of yron, and breake them in peces lyke an earthen vessell.

Be wyse now therfore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earth.

Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyse before him with reuerence.

Embrace instruction, least the Lorde be angry, and so ye perysh from the right waye.

For his wrath shalbe kyndled shortly: blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSAL. III.

A Psalme of Dauid when he fledde from the face of Absalom.

WHy are they so many, O Lord, that trouble me? a great multitude are they that ryse against me. A

Many there be that saye of my soule: there is no helpe for him in God. Selah.

But thou, O Lorde, art my defender, my worshyp, and the lyfter vp of my head.

I call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he heareth me out of his holy hill. Selah.

I layde me downe and slept, but I arose vp agayne, for the Lorde sustayned me.

I am not afrayd for thousandes of people, B that compasse me rounde about.

Aryse Lorde, and helpe me, O my God: for thou smytest all myne ennemyes vpon the cheke bones, and breakest the teth of the vngodly.

Helpe belongeth vnto the Lorde, therfore let thy blessynge be vpon thy people.

PSAL. IIII.

To the chaunter in Neginoth, a Psalme of Dauid.

HEare me when I call, O God of my righteousnes: thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, & herken vnto my prayer. A

O ye sonnes of men, how longe will ye blaspheme myne honour? why haue ye such pleasure in vanitie, and seke after lyes? Selah.

Knowe this, that the Lord dealeth marueylously with his sayntes: and when I cal vpon the Lorde, he heareth me.

Be angry, but synne not: comune with your owne hertes vpon your beddes, and remembre your selues. Selah. B

Offre the sacrifice of righteousnes, and put your trust in the Lorde.

There be many that saye: who will do vs any good? Lorde lyft vp vpon vs the lyght of thy countenaunce.

Thou reioycyste myne herte, thoughe theyr encrease be greate both in corne and wyne.

Therfore will I lay me downe in peace, and take my rest: for thou Lorde only settest me in a sure dwellynge.

PSAL. V.

To the chaunter by Nehiloth, a Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my wordes (O Lord) consydre my callinge. A

Marke the voyce of my petition, my kynge and my God, for vnto the, wil I make my prayer.

Heare my voyce by tymes (O Lord) for early in the morninge will I get me vnto the, & that with diligence.

For thou art not the God that hath pleasure in wyckednesse, there maye no vngodly personne dwell with the.

Suche as be cruell maye not stande in thy ryght, thou art an ennemye vnto all wycked doers.

Thou destroyest the lyers: the Lord abhorreth the vloudethursty and disceytful.

But I will come into thy house, euen vpon
B the multitude of thy mercye: and in thy awe will I worshyp towarde thy holy temple.

Leade me (O Lorde) in thy ryghteousnesse because of myne enemyes, and make thy way playne before me.

For there is no kaythfulnesse in their mou-Roma.iii.b thes: they dissemble in their heertes: their throte is an open sepulchre: with their tongues they disceyue.

Punysh them (O God) that they may pe-
C ryssh in their owne ymagination: cast the out because of the multitude of their vngodlynes for they rebell against the.

Agayne, let all them that put their trust in the, reioyse: let them euer be gruynge of thākes, because thou defendest them: that they which loue thy name, may be ioyfull in the.

For thou Lorde gyuest thy blessinge vnto ȳ righteous: and with thy fauorable kyndnes thou defendest him, as with a shylde.

PSAL. VI.

¶ To the chaunter by Neginoth vpon Shemynith, a Psalme of Dauid.

A LOrd rebuke me not in thyne anger: chasten me not in thy heuy displeasure.

Haue mercy vpon me (Oh Lorde) for I am weake: Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed.

My soule also is in great trouble, but Lord how longe?

Turne the (Lorde) and deliuer my soule: saue me for thy mercyes sake.

For in death no man remembreth the: Oh who will gyue the thankes in the hell?

B I am wery of groonynge: euery nyght wash I my bedde, and water my couche with my teares.

My countenaunce is chaunged for very inwarde griefe, I consume away, I haue so many ennemyes.

Awaye frome me all ye wycked doers, for the Lorde hathe hearde the voyce of my weepynge.

The Lorde hath herde myne humble petitiō the Lorde hath receyued my prayer.

All myne ennemyes shalbe confounded and sore vexed: they shalbe turned backe and put to shame, and that right sone.

PSAL. VII.

1. Regū.xv. ¶ Sigaion of Dauid, whiche he sange for the wordes of Cus the sonne of Jemini.

A OLorde my God, in the do I trust: saue me frome all them that pursue, and deliuer me.

Least he hantche vp my soule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peces, whyle there is none to helpe.

O Lorde my God, yf I haue wrought any such thynge, yf there be any vnrighteousnes in my handes, Yf I haue rewarded euyll vnto them that dealt frendly with me, or hurt the that without cause are myne ennemyes.

Then let myne enemy persecute my soule & take me: yea let him treade my lyfe downe in the earth, & laye myne honour in the dust. Selah.

Stande vp (Lorde) in thy wrathe, lyft vp ȳ thy self ouer the furyous indignatiō of myne ennemyes: aryse vp (for me) in the vengeaūce that thou hast promysed.

That the congregacion of the people may come about the, for their sakes therfore lyft vp thy selfe agayne.

The Lorde is iudge ouer the people: iudge me then (O Lorde) accordinge to my righte- C ousnes and innocency.

Let the wyckednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but mayntayne the iust, thou righteous God, that tryest the very heertes and reynes.

My helpe commeth of God, which preserueth them that are true of hert.

God is a righteous iudge, and God is euer threatnynge.

Yf men will not turne, he hathe whet his D swerde: he hathe bent his bowe and made it redy.

He hath prepared him the weapōs of death, and ordeyned his arowes to destroye.

Beholde, he trauayleth with myschefe, he hathe conceyued vnhappynesse, and brought forth a lye.

He hath graue and dygged vp a pyt, but he shall fall him selfe into the pyt that he hathe made.

For his vnhappynes shall come vpon his owne hed, and his wyckednes shal fall vpon his owne pate.

But, I wyll gyue thankes vnto the Lorde for his righteousnes sake, and wil prayse the name of the most hyghe Lorde.

PSAL. VIII.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Githith, a Psalme of Dauid.

O Lorde our gouernour: howe wonder- I full is thy name in all the worlde? howe excellent is thy glory aboue the heauens?

Out of the mouth of the very babes & sucklynges thou hast ordeyned prayse, because of thyne ennemyes, that thou myghtest destroye the ennemy and the auenger.

For I consyder thy heauens, euen ȳ worcke of thy fingers: the mone and the starres whiche thou hast made.

What is man, that thou art so myndefull of hym? eyther the sonne of man that thou vi- F sitest him?

After thou haddest for a season made him lower then the aungels, thou crowndest him with honour and glory.

Thou

Thou hast set him about the woꝛkes of thy handes: and thou hast put al thinges in subiection vnder his feete.

All theyꝛ and oxen, yea the beastes of the felde.

The foules of the ayꝛe, the fiſſhe of the ſee, and what ſo euer walketh thoꝛow the wayes of the ſee.

O Lorde our gouernour, how wonderfull is thy name in all the woꝛlde?

PSAL. IX.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Almuth Laben, a Pſalme of Dauid.

I Will gyue thankes vnto the (O Lorde) with my hole heꝛte, I will ſpeake of al thy meruelous woꝛkes.

I will be glad, and reioyce in the, yea my ſonges will I make of thy name, O thou moſt hyghe.

Becauſe thou haſte dꝛyuen myne enemyes backe, they were diſconfyted, and peryſſhed at thy preſence.

Foꝛ thou haſt mayntayned my right & my cauſe: thou ſittest in the thꝛone that art the true iudge.

Thou rebukeſt the heythen, and deſtroyeſt the vngodly, thou puttest out their name foꝛ euer.

The enemyes ſwoꝛdes are come to an ende, thou haſt ouerthꝛowen their cyties, their memoꝛial is peryſſhed with them.

But the Lorde endureth foꝛ euer, he hath pꝛepared his ſeate vnto iudgement.

He gouerneth the woꝛlde with righteouſnes, and miniſtreth true iudgement vnto the people.

The Lorde is a defence foꝛ ỹ poꝛe, a defence in the tyme of trouble.

Therfoꝛe they ỹ know thy name, put their truſt in the: foꝛ thou (Lorde) neuer fayleſt them, that ſeke the.

Pꝛayſe ye the Lorde, which dwelleth in Sion, ſhewe the people of his wynges.

And why? he maketh inquiſition foꝛ their bloude, and remembꝛeth them: he foꝛgetteth not the complaynt of the poꝛe.

Haue mercy on me (O Lorde) conſydꝛe the trouble that I am in amonge myne ennemyes, thou that lyfteſt me vp frome the gates of death.

That I maye ſhew all thy pꝛayſes within the gates of the wughter of Sion, and reioyſe in thy ſaupnge healthe.

But the Heythen, are ſuncken downe in the ỹt that they made: in the ſame nette whiche they ſpied oute pꝛyuely, is their owne feete taken.

Thus the Lorde is knowne to execute true iudgement, when the vngodly is trapped in the woꝛkes of his owne handes. Selah.

The wycked muſt be turned vnto hell, and all the heythen that foꝛget God.

But the poꝛe ſhall not alwaye be out of remembꝛaunce, the patient abydinge of ſuch as be in trouble ſhal not peryſh foꝛ euer.

Aryſe Lorde, let no man haue the vppeꝛ hande, let the Heythen be condemned befoꝛe the.

O Lorde ſet a φ ſcolemaiſter ouer them, that the Heythen maye knowe them ſelues to be but men. Selah. φ A lawe maker.

¶ There is no Tytle in the Hebꝛue.

Here the Hebꝛues begyn the tenth Pſalme.

Why art thou gone ſo farre of, O Lorde? wilt thou hyde thy ſelfe in tyme of trouble? א

Whyle the vngodly hath the ouerhande, ỹ poꝛe muſt ſuffer perſecution.

O that they were taken in the ymaginacõ which they go about.

Foꝛ the vngodly maketh booſt of his owne hertes deſire, the couetous bleſſeth him ſelfe, and blaſpheмeth the Lorde.

The vngodly is ſo pꝛoude and full of indignacion, that he careth not: neyther is God befoꝛe his eyes. ב

His wayes are alway filthy, thy iudgemẽtes are farre out of his ſight, he defyeth all his ennemyes.

Foꝛ he ſaith in his hert: Tuſh, I ſhall neuer be caſt downe, there ſhal no harme happẽ vnto me.

His mouthe is full of curſinge, fraude and diſceyte: vnder his tongue is trauayle and ſoꝛow.

He ſitteth lurkyng in the gardens, that he maye pꝛyuely murther the innocent, his eyes are ſet vpon the poꝛe. ג

He lyeth in awayte ſecretly, as it were a lyon in his denne.

He lurketh that he maye rauyſh the poꝛe, yea to rauyſh the poꝛe, when he hathe gotten him in to his net.

Then ſtoupeth he, then oppꝛeſſeth he & caſteth downe the poꝛe with his auctoꝛite.

Foꝛ he ſayth in his hert: Tuſh, God hath foꝛgotten, he hath turned awaye his face, ſo that he will neuer ſe it. ד

Aryſe O Lorde God, lyft vp thyne hande, and foꝛget not the poꝛe.

Wherfoꝛe ſhoulde the wycked blaſpheme God and ſaye in his hert: tuſh, he careth not foꝛ it.

This thou ſeyſt, foꝛ thou conſidꝛeſt the myſery and ſoꝛow.

The poꝛe gyueth him ſelf ouer into thy hãd and committeth him vnto the, foꝛ thou art ỹ helper of the frendleſſe. ה

Bꝛeake thou the arme of the vngodly and malicious, ſearche out the wickednelle which he hath done, that he maye peryſh.

The Lorde is kynge foꝛ euer, the heythen ſhall peryſh out of his lande.

Lorde, thou heareſt the deſirous longynge of the poꝛe: their hert is ſure, that thyne eare herkeneth therto.

Helpe the fatherleſſe and poꝛe vnto their right, that the vngodly be no moꝛe exalted vpon earth.

¶ A prayer of Dauid.

HEare the right (O Lorde) consydre my complaynte: herken vnto my prayer, that goeth not out of a fayned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth frome thy presence: and loke vpon the thinge that is equall.

Thou hast proued and vysited myne hert in the nyghte season: thou haste tryed me in the fyre: and hast founde no wyckednesse in me: for I vtterly purposed that my mouth shulde not offende.

Because of the wordes of thy lyppes, I haue kept me frome the workes of men: in the waye of the murtherer.

Order thou my goynges in thy pathes: that my fote steppes slippe not.

For vnto the I crye: heare me O God: enclyne thyne eares to me: and herken vnto my wordes.

Shewe thy maruelous louynge kyndnesse, thou that sauest them which put their trust in the, frome suche as resist thy right hand.

Kepe me as the balle of an eye, defende me vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

Frome the vngodly that trouble me, from myne enemyes which compasse my soule round about.

Which mayntayne their owne welthynesse with oppression, and their mouth speaketh prowde thinges.

They lye in wayte in our way on euery side turnyng their eyes vnto the grounde.

Lyke a Lyon that is gredy of his pray, and as it were a Lyons whelpe lurkynge in his denne.

Aryse Lorde, disapoynte him and cast him vnder: delyuer my soule with thy swerde from the vngodly.

From the men of thy hande (O Lord) from the men of the worlde, which haue their porcion in this lyfe: whose belyes thou fyllest with thy treasure.

They haue children at their desire, and leaue the rest of their substaunce for their babes.

PSAL. XVII.

After the Hebrues. xviii.

¶ To the chaunter of Dauid seruaunt of the Lord whiche sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the daye in whiche the Lorde delyuered hym frome the hande of all his enemyes, and frome the hande of Saul, and sayde.

I Wyll loue the (O Lorde) my strength.

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my Sauiour: my God, my helper in whom I trust: my buckler, the horne of my helth, and my protection. Heb. ii.

I will prayse the Lorde, and call vpon him, so shall I be safe from myne ennemyes.

The sorowes of death compassed me, & the brookes of vngodlynes made me afrayed.

The paynes of hell came about me, & snares of death toke holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lord, and complayned vnto my God.

So he herde my voyce out of his holy temple, and my complaynte came before him, euen into his eares.

Then the earthe trembled and quaked, the very foundacions of the hylles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth.

There went a smoke out of his nostrelles & a consuminge fire out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, & it was darcke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd fle: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknes his pauylyon rounde about him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

The Lorde also thondred out of the heaue and the heygth gaue his thondre with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

He sent out his arowes and scatered them, he caste fore lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, and the foundacyons of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chyding (O Lorde) at the blaJi. iij. stynge stynge and breth of thy displeasures.

He sent downe frome the heygth to fetche
L me, and toke me out of great waters.

He delyuered me frome my stronge ennemyes, and from my foes which were to migh ty for me.

They preuented me in the tyme of my trou ble, but the Lorde was my defence.

He brought me forth also into libertie: and delyuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my rygh teous dealynge, & accordinge to the clennesse of my handes shall he recompence me.

For I haue kept the wayes of the Lord: & haue not behaued my selfe wyckedly against my God.

I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and caste not out his commaundementes frome me.

Uncorupt will I be before him, and wyll
D eschew myne owne wyckednes.

Therfore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my ryghtuous dealynge, and according vn to the clennesse of my handes in his eye sight.

With the holy thou shalt be holy, & with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the pore oppressed, and bringe downe the byghe lokes of the proude.

Thou lightest my candle, O Lord my God thou makest my darckenes to be light.

F For in the I can discomfort an host of men: yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfect waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for all them that trust in him.

For who is God, but the Lorde? Or, who hath any strength, but our God?

It is God that gyrded me with strength, & made my waye vncorupt.

He hath made my fete lyke hertes fete, & set me vp on byghe.

He teacheth myne handes to fight, and ma
1.Regū.xxii.c keth myne armes to breake euen a bowe of stele.

Thou hast gyuē me the defence of thy helth thy righthande vpholdeth me, and thy louing correction maketh me great.

Thou hast made rowme ynough vnder me for to goo, that my foote steppes shoulde not slyde.

I wyll folowe vpon myne ennemyes, and take them: I wyll not turne tyll they be dis comforted.

I wyll smyte them, they shal not be hable to stande, but fall vnder my fete.

F Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto ꝑ batell, thou hast throwen them al downe vn der me, that rose vp against me.

Thou hast made myne enemyes to tourne their backes vpon me, thou hast destroyed the that hated me.

They cryed, but there was none to helpe them: yea euen vnto the Lorde, but he herde them not.

I will beate them as small as the dust clay in the wynde, I will cast them out as the clay in the stretes.

Thou shalt delyuer me from the stryuinges of the people, thou shalt make me the head of the heythen.

A people whome I haue not knowen shall serue me.

As sone as they heare of me, they shal obey me, but the straunge children dissemble with me.

The straunge children are waxen olde, and go haltinge out of their pathes.

The Lorde lyueth: and blessed be my hel- G per, praysed be the God of my helth.

Euen the God which seyth that I be auen ged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that delyuereth me frome my cruell ennemyes: thou shalt lyft me vp frome them that ryse against me, thou shalt ryd me frome the wycked man.

For this cause I wyll gyue thankes vnto ꝑ (O Lorde) amonge the gentyles, and synge prayses vnto thy name. 1.Reg. Rom.

For thou haste preuented him with lyberall blessynges: and sette a crowne of golde vpon his heed.

He asked lyfe of the, and thou gauest him a longe lyfe, euen for euer and euer.

His honour is great in thy saufynge helthe: gloyre and greate worshyp shalte thou laye vpon him.

For thou shalte gyue hym euerlastynge welthe: and make him glad with the ioye of thy countenaunce.

And why? bycause the kynge putteth his truste in the Lorde: and in the mercye of the hyest he shall not mysscarye.

Lette all thyne ennemyes fele thy hande: let thy ryghte hande fynde oute all them that hate the.

Thou shalte make them lyke a fyre ouen in tyme of thy wrathe: the Lorde shall destroye theym in his displeasure, and the fyre shall consume them.

Theyr frute shalte thou roote oute of the earthe: and theyr sede frome the chyldren of men.

For they purposed myschyefe agaynst the: and ymagined suche deuises, as they were not able to performe.

Therfore shalte thou put them to flyght: with thy strynges thou shalt make redy thyne arowes agaynst the faces of them.

Be thou exalted, Lorde, in thyne owne strengthe: so wyll we synge and prayse thy power.

¶ To the Chaunter vpon Hieleth, of the morynge starre, a Psalme of Dauid.

MY God, my God: why hast thou forsaken me? the wordes of my complaynte are farre fro my helthe. A O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no reste.

Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuarye, o thou worshyp of Israel.

Oure fathers hoped in the: they trusted in the, and thou dyddest delyuer them.

They called vpon the, and were helped: they put theyr trust in the, and were not confounded.

But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a verye scorne of men and the oute caste of the people. B

All they that se me, laughe me to scorne: they shoute oute their lyppes, and shake their heedes. Mat. xxvii. d Mar. xv. c

He trusted in God, let him deliuer him: let him helpe him, yf he wil haue him.

But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope, whē I hanged yet vpon my mothers brestes.

I haue ben lefte vnto the, euer sythens I was borne: thou arte my God, euen fro my mothers wombe.

Go not fro me then, for trouble is harde at hande, and here is none to helpe me. C

Great bulles are come about me: fat oxen close me in on euery syde.

They gape vpon me with theyr mouthes: as it were a rampynge and rorynge lyon.

I am poured oute lyke water: all my bones are oute of ioynte: my herte in the myddest of my bodye, is euen lyke meltynge waxe.

My strengthe is dryed vp lyke a pottesherde, my tonge cleaueth to my gommes: and thou haste brought me in to the dust of deathe. D

For dogges are come aboute me: the counsell of the wycked hathe layde siege agaynste me.

They perseb my handes and my fete, I might haue tolde all my bones: but they stode starynge and lokynge vpon me. Mat. xxvii. d. Iohn. xix. d

They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and cast lottes vpon my vesture.

But

But be not thou farre fro me, o Lord: thou art my succour, hast the to helpe me.

Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my derlynge from the power of the dogge.

Saue me from the lyons mouth: and heare me bitwene the hornes of the vnicornes.

So wyll I declare thy name vnto my brethren: in the middest of the congregacion wyl I prayse the.

Prayse the Lord ye that feare him: magnifie him all ye seed of Jacob, and let all the seed of Israel feare him.

For he hath not despised ne abhorred the miserable state of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but when I called vnto hym, he herde me.

I wil prayse the in the great congregacion, and performe my vowes in the sight of al the that feare the.

The poore shall eate and be satisfied: they that seke after the Lord shal prayse him: our herte shall lyue for euer.

All the endes of the worlde shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde: and all the generacions of the Heythen shall worshyp before him.

For the kingdom is the Lordes: and he shal be the gouernour of the Heythen.

All suche as be fatte vpon earthe: shall eate also and worshyp: all they that lye in the dust and lyue so hardly, shall fall downe before him.

The seed shall serue him, and preache of the Lorde for euer.

They shall come and declare his rightousnesse: vnto a people that shal be borne, whom the Lorde hath made.

Though I sholde walke now in the valey of the shadowe of deth, yet I feare no euyll, for thou art with me: thy staffe and thy shepehoke comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me agaynste myne ennempes: thou annoyntest my heed with oyle, and fyllest my cup full.

Of Dauid.

VNto the, O Lorde, I lyfte vp my soule: my God, I truste in the, let me not be confounded, lest myne ennemyes triumphe ouer me.

For all they that hope in the, shall not be ashamed: but suche as be scornefull despysers without cause, shall be put to confusyon.

Shewe me thy wayes (Lorde) and teache me thy pathes.

Leade me in thy truthe, and lerne me: for thou arte the God of my helthe, and in the is my hope all the daye longe.

Call to remembraunce, O Lorde, thy tender mercyes, and thy louynge kyndenesses, which haue ben euer of olde.

Oh remembre not the synnes and offences of my youthe, but accordynge vnto thy mercye: thynke vpon me, O Lorde, for thy goodnesse.

O how frendly and righteous is the Lorde: therfore wil he teache synners in the waye.

He leadeth the symple a right: and suche as be meke, them lerneth he his wayes.

All the wayes of the Lorde, are very mercy and faythfulnesse, vnto suche as kepe his testament and couenaunt.

For thy names sake, o Lorde, be mercyfull vnto my synne, for it is great.

What so euer he be that feareth the Lorde: he shall shewe hym the waye that he hathe chosen.

His soule shall dwell at ease: and his seed shall possesse the lande.

The secrete of the Lorde is amonge them that feare him: and he sheweth them his couenaunt.

Myne eyes are euer lokynge vnto the Lorde: for he shall plucke my feate out of the nette.

Turne the vnto me, and haue mercye vpon me:

For thy louynge kyndnesse is before myne eyes: and I walke in thy truthe.
B I syt not amonge vayne persons, and haue no felawshyp with the disceptfull.
I hate the congregacion of the wicked, and I wyll not syt amonge the vngodly.
I washe my handes with innocencye, O Lorde, and so go I to thyne aulter.
That I may shewe the voyce of thy prayse: and tell of all thy wonderous workes.

PSAL. XXVI.

Of Dauid.

A The Lorde is my lyghte and my helthe:
whome then shulde I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my life, for whom then shulde I be afrayde?
Therfore when the wycked, euen myne ennemies came vpon me to eate vp my flesshe, they stombled and fell.
B Though an hoste of men were layde against
C me, yet shal not my hert be afrayd: and though there arose vp warre agaynste me, yet wyll I put my trust in him.
One thing haue I desyred of the Lord, whiche I wil requyre: namely, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my life, to beholde the fayre beautie of the Lorde, and to vysit his temple.
For in tyme of trouble he hath hydde me in his tabernacle, yea in the secrete place of his dwellyng hath he kepte and set me vp vpon a rocke of stone.
And nowe hathe he lyfte vp my heed aboue myne ennemyes, that compassed me rounde aboute.
Therfore wyll I offre in his dwellynge, the E oblacion of thankesgyuyng: I wyll syng and speake prayses vnto the Lorde.
Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercye vpon me and heare me.
My hert speaketh vnto the: my face seketh the: yea Lorde thy face will I seke.
Hyde not thou thy face fro me: cast not thy seruaunt of in displeasure.
Thou art my succour, leaue me not, neither forsake me, o God my sauiour.
For my father and my mother haue forsake me: but the Lorde hath taken me vp.
Shewe me thy waye, O Lorde: and leade
D me in the ryght pathe, because of myne ennemyes.
Delyuer me not in to the wyles of myne aduersaryes: for there are false wytnesses risen vp agaynste me: and they ymagen mischiefe.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A Ascrybe vnto the Lorde, O ye myghtye: ascribe vnto the Lorde worshipp & strengthe.

Gyue the Lorde the honoure of his name: bowe your selues to the holye maiestie of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the gloryous God that maketh the thonder, it is the Lorde that ruleth the see.

B The voyce of the Lorde is myghtye in operation: the voyce of the Lorde is a gloryous voyce.

The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedar trees: yea the Lorde breaketh the Cedars of Libanus.

He maketh them to skyp lyke a calfe: Libanus and Sirion lyke a yong vnycorne.

The voyce of the Lorde diuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde shaketh ℣ wyldernesse: yea the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lorde moueth the hyndes: and discouereth the thycke bushes: in his temple shall euerye man speake of his honoure.

The Lorde sytteth the water floude: & the Lorde remaynyth a kyng for euer.

The Lorde shal gyue power vnto his people, the Lorde shall gyue his people the blessynge of peace.

¶ A Psalme and songe of the dedycation of the house of Dauid.

A I Wyll magnifye the, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp: and not suffred my foes to tryumphe ouer me.

O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the: & thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule oute of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, where as they go downe to the pyt.

Sing prayses vnto the Lorde (o ye sayntes of his) gyue thankes vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

For his wrath endureth but the twynckling B of an eye, and his pleasure is in life: heuinesse maye well endure for a nyghte, but ioye commeth in the mornyng.

As for me, when I was in prosperite, I sayd: tushe, I shall neuer fall more.

And why? thou Lorde of thy goodnes hadest made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedst thy face fro me, I was brought in feare.

C Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyte is there in my bloude: yf I go downe to corruption?

Maye the dust gyue thankes vnto the? or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercye vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

D And so thou hast turned my heuynesse in to ioye: thou hast put of my sackclothe, and gyrded me with gladnesse.

That myne honour myght syng prayses vnto the without ceasing: O Lorde my God, I wyll gyue thankes vnto the for euer.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

I N the, O Lorde, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but delyuer me in thy E ryghtousnesse.

Bowe downe thyne eare to me, make haste to delyuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayste saue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: be thou my guyde, and leade me for thy names sake.

Drawe me oute of the nette that they haue layde prpuely for me, for thou arte my strengthe.

In to thy handes I commende my spirite: F thou hast delyuered me, o Lorde, thou God of truthe.

I hate them that holde of vanities: and my trust is in the Lorde.

I wil be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou hast cõsidered my trouble, thou hast knowen my soule in aduersitie.

Thou hast not delyuered me ouer in to the handes of the ennemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

Haue mercy vpon me, o Lorde, for I am in trouble, myne eye is consumed for very heuynesse, yea my soule and my body. G

My lyfe is waxen olde with heuinesse: and my yeres with mournynge.

My strength faileth me because of myne aduersitie, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a verye reproche amonge all myne ennemyes: my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquayntaunce are afrayde of me: they that se me in the streete, conuey them selues fro me.

I am cleane forgotten and oute of mynde, as a dead man: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

For I haue herde the blasphemye of H the multytude: euerye man abhorreth me, they haue gathered a counsell togyther agaynste me, and are purposed to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: delyuer me from the hande of myne ennemyes, and from them that pursue me.

Shewe thy seruaunt the lyght of thy countenaunce: helpe me for thy mercyes sake.

Let

Let me not be confounded, O Lorde: for I call vpon the: let the vngodlye rather be put to confusyon, and broughte vnto the hell.

Let the lyeng lyppes be put to syleence: whiche cruelly, disdaynfully, & despitefully speake agaynst the ryghteous.

Howe greate and manyfolde is thy goodnesse: whiche thou haste hydde for them that feare the?

O what thinges bryngest thou to passe for them that put their trust in the: euen before the sonnes of men?

Thou hydest them priuely by thyne owne presence from the proude men: thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges.

Thankes be to the Lorde: for he hath shewed me excedynge great kyndnes in a stronge cyte.

For when the sodeyn feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast out of thy sight.

Neuertheleese thou herdest myne humble prayer: when I cryed vnto the.

O loue the Lorde (all ye his saynctes) for the Lorde preserueth the faythful, and plentiously rewardeth the proude wer.

Be stronge therfore and take good herte vnto you: all ye that put youre truste in the Lorde.

PSAL. XXXI.

A Instruction of Dauid.

BLessed are they, whose vnryghtousnesse is forgyuen: and whose synnes are couered.

*Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lorde imputeth no synne: in whose spirite there is no gyle.

For whyle I helde my tonge: my bones consumed awaye, thorowe my daylye complaynynges.

And because thy hand was so heuy vpon me both daye and nyght: my moysture was lyke the drouth in sommer. Selah.

Therfore I confessed my synne vnto the: & hyd not myne vnryghtousnesse.

I sayd, I wyll knowlege myne offence, and accuse my selfe vnto the Lorde: and so thou forgauest me the wyckednesse of my synne. Selah.

For this shall euerye saynt make his prayer vnto the in due season: therfore shall not the great water floudes come nye him.

Thou arte my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me: compasse thou me aboute also with the ioye of delyueraunce. Selah.

I wil enforme the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalte goo: I wyll fasten myne eyes vpon the.

Be not ye now lyke horses & mules, which haue no vnderstandyng.

Whose mouthes thou muste holde with byt and dydle, yf they wyll not obeye the.

Greate plages shall the vngodly haue, but who so putteth his truste in the Lorde, mercy shall compasse him on euery syde.

Be glade, O ye ryghtous, and reioyce in the Lorde: be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

PSAL. XXXII.

After the Hebrues. xxxiii.

REioyce in the Lorde, O ye ryghtous, for it becommeth well the iuste to be thankfull.

Prayse the Lorde with harpe: synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrumẽt of ten strynges.

Synge him a newe songe, yea sing lustely vnto him with a lusty courage.

For the worde of the Lorde is true: and all his workes are faythfull.

He loueth mercy and iudgement: the erth is full of the goodnesse of the Lorde.

By the worde of the Lorde were the heuens made: and all the hostes of them by the breth of his mouthe.

He gathereth the waters together as it were in a bottell: and layeth vp the depe in secrete.

Let all the earthe feare the Lorde: and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stande in awe of him.

For loke what he sayeth, it is done: and loke what he commaundeth, it standeth fast.

The Lorde bringeth the counsel of the heythen to nought, and turneth the deuises of the people.

But the counsell of the Lorde endureth: and the thoughtes of his herte frome generacion to generacion.

Blessed are the people that holde the Lorde for their God: and blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heritage.

The Lorde loketh downe from heuen, and beholdeth all the chyldren of men: from his strong seat he consydereth all them that dwell in the worlde.

He onely hath facioned al the hertes of the, and knoweth all their workes.

A kynge is not holpen by his owne greate hoste: neither is a gyaunte saued thorowe the might of his owne strength.

A horse is but a vayne thing to saue a man, it is not the power of his strength that can deliuer him.

Beholde, the eye of the Lorde loketh vnto them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

That he may deliuer their soules from deth: and to fede them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule patiently abide the Lorde: for he is our helpe and shylde.

So shall our hertes reioyce in him: because we haue hoped in his holy name.

Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, O Lorde, be vpon vs: lyke as we put our trust in the.

¶ Of Dauid.

A STryue thou with them, o Lorde, that stryue with me: fyght thou agaynste them, that fyght agaynst me.

Laye hande vpon the shylde and spere: and stande vp to helpe me.

Drawe out thy swerde and stop the way agaynste them that persecute me: saye vnto my soule, I am thy helpe.

Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let them be turned backe and be brought to confusion, that ymagen mischiefe for me.

Lette theym be as the duste before the wynde: and the aungell of the Lorde scatteryng them.

Lette theyr waye be darcke and slyppery: and the aungell of the Lorde to persecute them.

For they haue pryuyly layde their net to destroye me without cause: yea & made a pyt for my soule whiche I neuer deserued.

Let a sodein destruction come vpon hym vnwares, and the net that he hathe layde pryuyly catche hym selfe, that he maye fall into his owne mischiefe.

But let my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: & reioyse in his helpe.

All my bones shal saye: Lorde who is lyke vnto the? which deliuerest the poore fro those that are to stronge for hym, yea the poore and the nedy from his spoylers.

False witnesses are rysen vp, and lay to my charge thynges that I knowe not.

They reward me euil for good, to the great discomfort of my soule.

E Neuertheless when they were sycke, I put on sackclothe: I humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer turned in to myne owne bosome.

I behaued my self as though it had ben my frende or my brother: I went heuyly, as one that mourneth for his mother.

But in myne aduersite they reioyce & gather them togither: yea the very lame come togyther against me vnwares, makinge mowes at me, and cease not.

With the gredye and scornefull hypocrites they gnasshed vpon me with their teth.

Lorde whan wilt thou loke vpon this?

Reskue my soule from the wicked rumout of them, my derlynge from the lyons?

So wyll I gyue the thankes in the greate congregation: and prayse the amonge moche people.

Let them not tryumphe ouer me, that are myne ennemyes for noughte: lette them not wynke with theyr eyes that hate me without cause.

And why? their commening is not for peax, but they ymagen false wordes againste ȳ outcastes of the lande.

They gape vpon me with their mouthes, sayinge: there, there: we se it with our eyes.

This thou seest, o Lord: hold not thy tong then: go not farre fro me, o Lorde.

Awake Lorde and stande vp: auenge thou my cause my God and my Lorde.

Judge me, o Lorde my God, accordinge to thy righteousnesse, that they tryumphe not ouer me.

Let them not say in their hertes, there there so wold we haue it: let them not say: we haue ouercome him.

Let them be put to confusion & shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonour, that boste them selues agaynst me.

Let

Lette them also be glad & reioyce, that fauoure my ryghtous dealynge: yea lette them saye alwaye: blessed be the Lorde, whiche hath pleasure in the prosperitie of his seruaunt.

And as for my tonge, it shall be talkynge of thy ryghtousnesse and of thy praise, all the day longe.

PSAL. XXXV.

¶ To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruaunte of the Lorde.

My herte sheweth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly: that there is no feare of God before his eyes.

For he dissembleth before his face, so longe till his abhominable synne be found out.

The wordes of his mouthe are vnryghtousnesse and disceyte: he wyll not be lerned to do good.

He ymagineth mischiefe vpon his bed: he will come in no good waye, ne refuse the thing that is euill.

Thy mercye, O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauen: and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy righteousnes standeth like the stronge mountaynes: and thy iudgement lyke the great depe.

Thou, Lorde: preseruest bothe men and beastes.

How precious is thy mercy, o God, that the children of men may put their trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges?

They shal be satisfied with the plentifousnes of thy house: and thou shalt giue them drinke of the ryuer of thy pleasures.

For by the is the well of life: & in thy light, shal we se light.

Stretche forth thy louing kindnesse vnto the that know the, and thy righteousnesse vnto the that are true of hert.

Lette not the foote of pryde ouertake me: let not the hande of the vngodly caste me downe.

As for wicked doers, they fall: they are cast downe, and are not hable to stande.

PSAL. XXXVI.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

Fret not thy self at the vngodly: be not thou enuyous agaynst the euill doers.

For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse: and be withered euen as the greene herbe.

Put thou thy trust in the Lorde, and be doing good: so shalt thou dwel in the land, and verily it shall fede the.

Delite thou in the Lorde: and he shal giue the thy hertes desyre.

Commyt thy waye vnto the Lorde, lette thy hope in hym: and he shall bringe it to passe.

He shall make thy ryghtousnesse as cleare as the lyght: and thy iust dealing as the noone daye.

Holde the styll in the Lorde, and abyde patiently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at one that hath prosperous, and lyueth in abhominacion.

Leue of from wrath, let go displeasure: let not thy gelowsye moue the also to do euil.

For wicked wers shal be roted out, but they that patiently abyde the Lorde, shal enherite the lande.

Suffre yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodlye shall be clene gone: thou shalt loke after his place, and he shall be awaye.

But the meke spirited shall possesse the erth: and haue pleasure in moche rest. Matth. v.

The vngodly layeth wayte for the iust, and gnasheth vpon him with his teth.

But the Lorde laugheth him to scorne: for he seeth that his daye is comming.

The vngodly drawe out their swerde and bende their bowe: to caste downe the symple and poore, and to slee suche as goo the ryght waye.

Neuertheles, their swerde shall goo thorowe their owne herte: and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng that the righteous hathe: is better then great riches of the vngodly.

For the armes of the vngodlye shall be broken: but the Lorde vpholdeth the ryghteous.

The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly: and their inheritaunce endureth for euer.

They shall not be confounded in the perilous tyme: and in the dayes of dert, they shal haue ynough.

But the vngodly shal perish: and when the enemies of the Lord are in their flowers, they shal consume, yea euen as the smoke shal they consume awaye.

The vngodlye boroweth, and payeth not agayne: but the ryghteous is mercyfull and lyberall.

Suche as be blessed of him, shal possesse the lande: and they whom he curseth, shall be roted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans going: and hath pleasure in his way.

Though he fall, he shal not be hurt: for the Lorde vpholdeth him with his hande.

I haue ben yong and now am old: yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, ne his seed to seke their breed.

The righteous is euer mercifull, and lendeth gently: therfore shal his seed be blessed.

Flee from euil, and do that is good: so shalt thou dwell for euer.

For the Lorde loueth that is right, he forsaketh not his saynctes, but they shall be preserued for euermore: where as the seed of the vngodly shal be roted out.

Yea the ryghteous shall possesse the lande: & dwell therin for euer.

The mouthe of the ryghteous is practised in wysdome: and his tonge talketh of iudgement.

The law of his God is in his hert: therfore shal not his fote slippes slyde.

The vngodly seeth the rightous, and goeth about to slee him.

But the Lorde will not leaue hym in his handes: ne condemne hym when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his way, and he shall so promote the, that thou shalte haue the lande by enheritaunce, and se when the vngodly shal perisshe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in greate power: and flourysshynge lyke a grene baye tree: but when I wente by, loo, he was gone, I soughte hym, but he couldē no where be G founde.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto the thynge that is ryghte: for that shall bringe a man peax at last.

But the transgressours shall perysshe together: and the vngodlye shall be rooted out at the last.

The helpe of the rightous commeth of the Lorde: he is their strength in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shal deliuer them from the vngodly, and helpe them, bycause they put theyr trust in him.

PSAL. XXXVII.

After the Hebrues. xxxviii.

¶ To the chaunter, to bringe to remembraunce.

A PUt me not to rebuke, oh Lorde, in thyne anger: chasten me not in thy heuy displeasure.

For thyne arowes sticke fast in me, and thy hande pressith me sore.

There is no hole parte in my body, bycause of thy displeasure: there is no rest in my bones by reason of my synnes.

For my wickednesses are gone ouer my hed: and are like a sore burthen, to heuy for me to beare.

My woundes styncke and are corrupt, thoB rowe my foly shamefully.

I am brought in to so greate trouble and myserye: that I goo mornynge all the daye longe.

For my loynes are clene dryed vp: and there is no hole parte in my body.

I am feble and sore smytten: I rore for the verye disquietnesse of my hert.

Lorde, thou knowest all my desire: and my groninge is not hyd from the.

My herte panteth, my strength he hathe fayled me: and the lyghte of myne eyes is gone fro me.

My louers and frendes stande lokynge vpon my trouble: and my kynsmen are gone a C farre of.

They that sought after my lyfe, and to woe me euyl: spake of lyes and ymagined dyscrete all the daye longe.

As for me, I was lyke a deafe man and herde not: and as one that were dom, not openyng his mouthe.

I am become as a man that heareth not: and that can make no resystence with his mouthe.

For in the, o Lorde is my trust: thou shalte heare me, o Lorde my God.

My desire is that myne ennemies triumphe D not ouer me: for yf my fote slyp, they reioyse greatly agaynst me.

I am redye to suffre trouble: and my heuynesse is euer in my sight.

For I confesse my wickednesse: & my synne greueth me.

But myne ennemyes lyue, and are mighty: and they that hate me without cause, are many in nombre.

They that rewarde me euyll for good: speake euyll of me, bycause I folowe that good is.

Forsake me not (O Lorde my God) go not farre fro me.

Haste the to helpe me: Lorde, my sauE coure.

PSAL. XXXVIII.

After the Hebrues.

¶ To the chaunter for Idithun, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Sayd: I will kepe my wayes that I offend not in my tonge. F

And so I shut my mouth, whyle the vngodly sayd wayt for me.

I held my tong, I was domme, I kept silence yea euen from good wordes, but it was payne and grefe to me.

My hert was hote within me: and while I was thus musing, the fyre kyndled, so that I spake with my tonge.

Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombre of my dayes: that I may be certified what I want.

Beholde, thou haste made my dayes a span B longe: and my lyfe as it were nothynge before the.

O howe vayne, are all men lyuynge? Selah.

Yea euery mā walketh as it were a shadow, and disquieteth him self in vayne: he heapeth vp ryches, and can not tell to whome he gathereth them. D

And nowe Lorde, wherin shall I comforte me? my hope is in the.

Deliuer me from al myne offences: & make me not a scorne vnto the foolish.

I kepe silence, and open not my mouth: for thou hast done it.

Turne thy plages awaye fro me: for I am E consumed thorow the feare of thy hande.

When thou punisshest man for synne, thou chastenest him: so that his beautie consumeth away, lyke as it were a moth.

O how vayne are all men? Selah.

Heare my prayer, o Lorde, and consider my callynge: shewe not thy selfe as though thou sawest not my teares.

For I am a steauenger and pilgrim with the as all my fore fathers were.

Oh spare me a lytle that I maye refreshe my my selfe before I goo hence: and be no more seene.

PSAL. XXXIX.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of David.

I Wayted patiently for the Lorde, whiche enclyned him selfe vnto me: and herde my callynge.

He brought me out of the horrible pit, out of the myre and claye: he set my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goinges.

He hath put a new song in my mouth, euen a thankesgyuing vnto our God.

Many men seing this shal feare the Lorde: and put their trust in him.

Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the Lorde: and turneth not vnto the proude, & to suche as go about with lyes.

O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous workes whiche thou hast done: and in thy thoughtes rowarde vs, there may none be likened vnto the.

I wolde declare them and speake of them: but they are so manye, that they can not be tolde.

Sacrifyce and offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body thou hast ordeyned me: burnt offerynges and sacrifyce for synne thou hast not alowed.

Then sayde I: lo I come. In the begynnynge of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shulde fulfyll thy wyll, o my God, and that am I content to do: yea thy lawe is within my hert.

I wyll preache of thy ryghteousnesse in the greate congregacion: loo, I wyll not refrayne my lyppes, o Lorde, and that thou knowest.

I doo not hyde thy ryghteousnesse in my hert: my talkyng is of thy truthe and sauynge helthe: I kepe not thy louynge mercye and faythfulnesse backe from the greate congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercy fro me, o Lorde: but let thy louing kyndnes and truth alwaye preserue me.

For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my synnes haue taken suche hold vpō me that I am not able to loke vp: yea they are mo in nombre then the heeres of my heed, and my hert fayled me.

O Lorde, lette it be thy pleasure to deliuer me: make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me.

Let them be ashamed and confounded that seke after my soule to destroye it: let them fal backwarde and be put to confusion, that wish me euyll.

Let them soone be brought to shame, that crye ouer me: there there.

But lette all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy sauynge helthe, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in myserye: but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou art my helper and redemer: make no long taryeng, o my God.

PSAL. XL.

After the Hebrues. xli.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

BLessed is he that considereth the poore: the Lorde shall deliuer hym in tyme of trouble. A

The Lorde shal preserue him, and kepe him alyue: he shal make him to prosper vpō erth and shal not deliuer him in to the wyll of his ennemyes.

The Lorde shall refresh him when he lyeth sicke vpon his bed, yea thou makest his bed in all his sickenesse.

I sayd: Lorde be mercyfull vnto me: heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

Myne ennemies speke euil vpon me: when shal he dye, and his name perysshe?

Thoughe he came in to se, yet meaned he falsehed in his herte: heapyng mischiefe vpon him selfe. B

All they that hate me, run togyther agaynst me: and ymagen euil against me.

They haue gyuē a wicked sentence vpō me: when he lyeth, he shal ryse vp no more.

Yea euen mine owne familiar frende whom I trusted, which did eate my breed, hath lyfte vp his hele agaynst me. Math xxvi.b Jhon.xiii.b Act.i.c

But be thou mercyfull vnto me, o Lorde: rayse thou me vp, and I shal rewarde them. C

By this I know thou fauourest me that my ennemy shal not triumphe ouer me.

Thou haste vpholden me bycause of myne innocencye: and sette me before thy face for euer.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israell: from hence forth, and for euermore, Amen, Amen.

¶ To the chaunter a monicion of the sonnes of Corah.

LYke as the harte desyreth the water brookes: so longeth my soule after the, O God. A

My soule is a thurst for God, yea euen for the lyuinge God: when shal I come & beholde the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye and nyghte, while it is dayly said vnto me: where is now thy God?

Now when I thinke therupon, I poure out my hert by my self: for I wold fayne go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankesgyuinge, amonge suche as kepe holy daye. B

Why arte thou so full of heuynesse (o my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete within me?

Put thy truste in God, for I will yet gyue him thanckes for the helpe of his countenaunce.

My God, my soule is vexed within me therefore I remembre the land of Jordan, and the lytle hyll of Hermonim.

L One depe calleth an other with the voyce of the whystles: all the waues and water floudes are goue ouer me.

The Lorde hath promised his louing kyndnesse daylye, therfore wil I prayse him in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I wyl saye vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuily whyle the ennemy oppresseth me?

While my bones are brokē, and while mine D ennemies cast me in the tethe dayly, saying vnto me: where is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy, o my soule? and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy trust in God: for I wil yet thanke him for the helpe of his countenaunce, and because he is my God.

After the Hebrues.xlii. PSAL. XLII.

A Gyue sentence vpon me (o God) and defende my cause agaynst the vnholy people: delyuer me from the disceytful and wicked man.

For thou (o God) art my strength: why hast thou shot me from the? why go I then so heuily, whyle the ennemy oppresseth me?

Send out thy light and thy truth, that they may lead me and bring me vnto thy holy hyll, and to thy dwellyng.

That I may go in to the aulter of God, euē B vnto the God which is my ioye and pleasure: and vpon the harpe to giue thankes vnto the, o God, my God.

Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy truste in God, for I will yet gyue him thankes for the helpe of his countenaūce, and because he is my God.

To the chaunter an instruccion of the sonnes of Korah.

A We haue herd with our eares, o God, our fathers haue tolde vs, what thou hast wrought in their time of olde.

Howe thou hast dryuen oute the Heithen with thy hande, and planted them in: howe thou hast destroyed the nacyons and caste them out.

For they gat not the land in possession thorowe their owne swerde, neither was it their owne arme that helped them.

But thy right hand, thyne arme & the lyght of thy countenaunce, bicause thou hadest a fauour vnto them.

Thou art the kyng and my God: thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Thorow the, wyl we ouer throw our ennemies: and in thy name wil we tread them vnder, that aryse vp agaynst vs.

For I will not trust in my bowe: it is not my swerde that shall helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs frome oure ennemies: and puttest them to confusion that B hate vs.

We wil alwaye make our boste of God: & prayse thy name for euer. Selah.

But nowe thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusyon, and goest not forthe with oure hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpon our ennemyes, so ỹ they which hate vs spoyle our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like sheepe: and scatteredst vs among the Paynims.

Thou sellest thy people for nought: and takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure L neyghboures, to be laughed to scorne, and hadde in derision, of them that are rounde about vs.

Thou hast made vs a bery byworde amonge the Heithen: and that the people shake their heedes at vs.

My confusion is daylye before me: and the shame of my face couereth me.

For the voyce of the sclaūderer and blasphemer: for the ennemy and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs: and yet haue we not forgotten the, nor behaued our selues vnfaythfully in thy couenaunt.

Our herte is not turned backe, neither oure steppes gone out of the waye.

For thou hast smitten vs in the place of dragons, and couered vs with the shadow of deth.

If we had forgotten the name of our God: and holden vp oure handes to anye straunge God. D

Shold not God find it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are kylled all the daye longe: and are counted as sheepe appoynted to be slayne.

Vp Lorde, why slepest thou? awake, & caste vs not of for euer.

Wherfore hydest thou thy face? wylte thou cleane forget oure mysery and oppression?

For our soule is brought low euen vnto the dust, and our belye cleueth vnto the ground.

Arise, o Lord, helpe vs and deliuer vs for thy mercy sake.

PSAL. XLIIII. Ad

To the chaunter vpon Solanim, an instruction of the chyldren of Korah, a songe of loue.

My herte is endytynge good matter: I A speake of that whiche I haue made of the kynge: my tonge is the pen of a redye wryter.

Thou art the fayrest among the children of men, ful of grace are thy lippes, therfore God blesseth the for euer.

Gyrde the with thy swerde vpon thy thigh (O thou myghtye) with worshyp and renowne.

Good lucke haue thou with thyne honour, ryde on ryde on with the truthe, mekenesse and ryghtoulnesse: and thy right hand shal teache won derfull thinges.

Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shall be subdued vnto the: euen in the myddest among the kinges ennemyes.

Thy seat (God) endureth for euer: the scep ter of thy kyngdome is a right scepter.

Thou hast loued ryghtousnesse, and hated iniquite: wherfore God (whiche is thy God) hath annoynted the with the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes.

All thy garmentes are lyke Myrre, Aloes, & Cassia, when thou commest out of thyne yue-ry palaces in thy beautifull glory.

Kynges doughters go in thy goodly araye, and vpon thy right hande standeth a quene in a garment of moost pure golde.

Harken (o wughter) considre & bowe downe thyne eare: forget thine owne people, and thy fathers house.

So shall the kynge haue pleasure in thy beautye, for he is thy Lorde, and thou shalte worship him.

The doughters of Tire shall be there with gyftes, the ryche among the people shal make their supplicacion before the.

The kynges doughter is all glorious with-her clothing is of wrought golde.

She shall be brought vnto the kynge in raymente of nedle worke, and maydens after her: suche as be nexte her shall be brought vnto the.

With ioye & gladnesse shal they be brought:
and go in to the kinges palace.

In stede of thy fathers thou haste gotten children, whom thou shalte make prynces in all landes.

I wyll remembre thy name frome one ge-neracion to an other: therfore shall the people gyue thankes vnto the, worlde without ende.

PSAL. XLV.

To the chaunter, a songe of the childzen of Corah vpon Almuth.

IN our troubles & aduersite, we haue founde that God is oure refuge, our strength and helpe.

Therfore we wil not feare, though the erth fell, and though the hylles were caryed in to the myddest of the see.

Though the waters of the see raged and were neuer so troublous, and though the mountaynes shooke at the tempeste of the same.

For there is a floude whiche with his riuers reioyseth the citye of God, the holy dwellyng of the hyest.

God is in the middest of her, therfore shall she not be remoued: for God helpeth her, and that ryght early.

The Hethen are mad, the kyngdomes make moche a wo: but when he sheweth his voyce, the erth melteth awaye.

The Lorde of hostes is with vs; the God of Jacob is oure defence.

Come hyther and behold the workes of the Lorde: what destructions he hathe brought vpon the earth.

He hathe made warres to cease in all the world: he hath broke the bow, he hath knapped the speere in sonder, and brent the charettes in the fyre.

Be styll then, and confesse that I am God:
I wil be exalted amonge the Gentiles, and I wil be exalted vpon erth.

Synge prayses, synge prayses vnto God:
synge prayses, synge prayses vnto our kynge.

For God is kyng of all the erth: sing pray-

B Wherefore sholde I feare cupll dayes, when the wyckednesse of my helers compasseth me round about?

They that put theyr truste in their good: and bosse theym selues in the foyson of theyr ryches.

No man maye deliuer his brother: ne make agrement vnto him for God.

For it costeth more to redeme their soules: so that he must let ꝑ alone for euer, yea though he lyue long, and se not the graue.

For it shall be sene, that suche wyse men shal dye and perysshe togyther, as well as the ignorant and folysshe, and leue their goodes for other.

Loke what is in their house, it continueth styll: their dwellinge places endure from one generacion to an other, & are called after theyr owne names vpon erth.

C Neuertheles man abideth not in suche honour, but is compared vnto the brute beestes, & becommeth like vnto them.

This waye of theyrs is verye foly, and yet their posteritie prayseth it with theyr mouthe. Selah.

They lye in the hell lyke shepe, death shall gnaw vpon them, & the righteous shal haue dominacion of them in the morynge by tymes: their strength shall consume, and hell shall be their dwellynge.

But God shall delyuer my soule frome the power of hell, when he receyueth me. Selah.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

THe Lorde euen the mightye God hath spoken and called the worlde frome the ryssinge of the sunne, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

Out of Sion appereth the glorious beautye of God.

Oure God shall come, and not kepe silence: there goeth before him a consumynge fyre, and a myghtye tempest rounde aboute hym.

He shall call the heuens from aboue: & the erth, that he may iudge his people.

Gather my sayntes togither vnto me: those that sette more by the couenaunt then by any offerynge.

And the heauens shall declare his righteousnesse: for God is Judge hym selfe. Selah.

Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me testifie amonge you, o Israel: I am God, euen thy God.

I reproue the not because of thy sacrifice, thy burntofferinges are alwaye before me.

I wyll take no bullockes out of thy house: ne gotes out of thy foldes.

For all the beestes of the feld are myne, and thousandes of catell vpon the hylles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes: and the wylde beestes of the felde are in my sight.

Yf I be hungrye, I wyll not tell the: for the hole worlde is myne, and all that therin is.

Thinkest thou that I will eate the fleshe of oxen, or drynke the blonde of gotes?

Offre vnto God prayse and thankesgyuynge: and paye thy vowes vnto the moost hyest.

And call vpon me in the tyme of trouble: so wyll I heare the, that thou shalte thanke me.

But vnto the vngodly saith God, why wilt thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth?

Where as thou hatest to be reformed: and castest my wordes behynde the?

Yf thou seest a thefe, thou runnest with him: and art partaker with the aduoutrers.

Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednesse: and thy tonge paynteth disceyte.

D Thou syttest and speakest agaynste thy brother: yea and slaunderest thyne owne mothers sonne.

This thou doest, whyle I holde my tonge, and thynkest me to be euen suche one as thy selfe: but I wyll reproue the, and set my selfe agaynst the.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid, when the Prophet Nathan came vnto him, after he had lyen with Bethsabe.

1 HAue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and accordinge vnto thy great mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Washe me wel from my wyckednesse, and clense me frome my synne.

For I knowledge my faultes, and my synne is euer before me.

Against the onely, against the haue I synned, and done euyll in thy sight: ℣ thou mightest be iustified in thy sayenges, and shouldest ouercome, when thou art iudged.

5 Beholde, I was borne in wyckednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceyued me.

6 But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truthe, & hast shewed me secrete wysdome.

7 Purge me with Isope, and I shal be cleane washe thou me, and I shall be whyter then snowe.

8 Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whiche thou hast broken, maye reioyse.

9 Turne thy face frome my synnes, and put out all my misdedes.

10 Make me a cleane hert, O God, and renue ryght spirite within me.

11 Cast me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me.

12 Gyue me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, and stablyth me with thy free spirite.

13 Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wycked, that synners maye be conuerted vnto the.

14 Delyuer me frome bloude gyltynesse, O God, thou that art the God of my healthe, that my tongue maye prayse thy ryghteousnesse.

15 Open my lyppes, O Lorde, that my mouth maye shewe thy prayse.

16 For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I wolde gyue it the: but thou delytest not in burntofferinges.

17 The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a cõtrite hert, O God, shalt thou not despyse.

18 Be fauorable and gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem maye be buylded.

19 For then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousnesse, with the burntoffe-rynges and oblacions: then shall they lay bullockes vpon thyne aulter.

¶ To the chaunter, an exhortacion of Dauid, when Doeg the Edomite came to Saul, and shewed him, sayinge: Dauid is come to the house of Achimelech. 1. Regũ. 22.

1 WHy boastest thou thy selfe, thou tyrãt, that thou canst do myscheefe?

Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet daylye.

2 Thy tongue ymagineth wyckednesse, and with lyes it cutteth lyke a sharpe rasoure.

3 Thou louest vngratiousnes more the good, to talke of lyes more then righteousnesse. Selah.

4 Thou louest to speake all wordes that may do hurt, O thou false tongue.

5 Therfore shal God cleane destroye ℣, smyte the in peces, plucke the out of thy dwellyng, and rote the out of the lande of the lyuynge. Selah.

6 The righteous shall se this, and feare, and laughe him to scorne.

7 Lo, this is the man, that toke not God for his strengthe, but trusted vnto the multitude of his ryches, and was myghty in his wyckednesse.

8 As for me, I am lyke a greene olyue tre in ℣ house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer and euer.

9 I will alwaye gyue thankes vnto the, for that thou hast done: & wil hope in thy name, for thy sayntes lyke it well.

1 THe folysh bodyes saye in their hertes: there is no God.

Corrupt are they, and become abominable in their wyckednesses: there is not one, that doth good.

2 God loked downe frome heauen vpon the children of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande, or seke after God.

3 But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all become vnprofitable: there is none ℣ doth good, no not one.

4 How can they haue vnderstandinge, that are ℣ workers of wyckednes, eatynge vp my people as it were bread, and call not vpon God?

5 They are afrayd, where no feare is: for God breaketh the bones of them that besiege the: thou puttest them to confusion, for God despyseth them.

Helpe

A HElpe me (O God) for thy names sake, and delyuer me in thy strength.

Heare my prayer (O God) consydre the wordes of my mouth.

For straūgers are ryssen vp against me, and and the myghty (which haue not God before their eyes) seke after my soule. Selah.

B But lo, God is my helper: it is he that vpholdeth my soule.

He shall rewarde cupll vnto myne ennemies: and in thy trouth shalte thou destroye them.

A free wyll offerynge wyll I gyue the, and prayse thy name, O Lorde, because it is so cōfortable.

To the chaunter vpō Neginoth, an instruccion of Dauid.

A HEare my prayer, O God, and hyde not thy selfe from my petition.

Take hede vnto me & heare me, howe pytefully I mourne and complayne.

The ennemy cryeth so, and the vngodly cōmeth on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some myschefe, so maliciously are they set against me.

My herte is trouy within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me.

Fearfulnesse and tremblynge are come vpō B me, and an horrible dreade hathe ouerwhelmed me.

And I sayde: O that I had wynges lyke a doue, that I myght flee somewhere, and be at rest.

Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, & remayne in the wyldernesse. Selah.

I wolde make hast to escape, from the for my wynde and tempest.

Destroye their tongues (O Lorde) and dyuyde them, for I se vnrighteousnes and strife in the cyte.

This goeth daye and night about the walles, myschefe and vyce are in the myddest of it.

C Wyckednesse is therin, discept and gyle go not out of her stretes.

Yf it were myne ennempe that reuyled me, I could beare it: or yf one that ought me euel wyll, dyd threaten me, I wolde hyde my selfe from him.

But it is thou my companyon, my gyde & myne owne familiar frende.

We had swete and secrete communication togither in the house of God.

Let death come hastely vpon them, and let them go downe quyck in to hell, for wyckednes is amonge them in their dwellynges.

But I will call vnto God, and the Lorde shall helpe me.

In the euenynge, mornynge & at none daye will I mourne and complayne: and he shall heare my voyce.

It is he that delyuereth my soule in peace, from them that lye in wayte for me: for they are many against me.

Yea euen God that endureth for euer, shall D heare me, and brynge them downe.

For they will not turne: & why? they feare not God.

Yea they laye handes on such as be at peace with him, and so they breake his couenaunt.

Their mouthes are softer then butter, and yet haue they battel in their mynd: their wordes are smoother then oyle, & yet be they very swordes.

Cast thy burthen, or care, vpon the Lorde, he shall norysh the, and not leaue the righteous in vnquyetnesse.

But as for them, thou (O God) shalt cast downe into the pyt of destruction.

The bloudthursty and discepteull shall not lyue oute halfe their dayes: neuertheles my trust is in the.

PSAL. LV.

To the chaunter, vpon the dumme stocke doue whiche tyeth farre of, Michtam of Dauid, when the Philistines toke him in Geth.

Myne enemyes treade me dayly vnder their fete, for they be many that proudly fight against me.

Neuertheles, when I am afrayed, I put my trust in the.

I will comfort my selfe in Gods word, yea I will hope in God, and not feare: what can fleshly then do vnto me?

They vexe me dayly in my wordes: all that they ymagine, is to do me euell.

They holde all togither, and kepe themselues close: they marke my steppes, howe they F maye catche my soule.

But in vayne, for it shall escape them: and why? thou (O God) in thy displeasure shalt cast downe suche people.

Thou tellest my syttynges, thou puttest my teares in thy bottell, and nombrest them.

When so euer I call vpon the, myne ennemyes are put to flight: whereby I know thou G art my God.

In Gods worde will I reioyce, in the Lordes worde will I comfort me.

Yea in God do I trust, and am not afrayd what can man then do vnto me?

Vnto the (O God) wyll I paye my vowes, vnto the wyll I gyue thankes and prayse.

There lytle Ben Jamin, the Prynces of F Juda, the Prynces of Zabulon, and the Prynces of Nephthaly beare rule amonge them.

Thy God hathe committed strength vnto the, stablysshe the thinge, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs.

For thy temples sake at Jerusalem shal kyn- G ges bringe presentes vnto the.

Reproue the beastes amonge the reedes, the heape of bulles with the calues: those that dryue for money.

Oh scatter the people that delyte in battayle.

The princes shall come out of Egypte, the Morians lande shall stretche out her handes vnto God.

Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of the earth: synge prayses vnto the Lorde. Selah.

Which sitteth in the heauens ouer all from the be-the begynnynge: Lo, he shall sende oute his voyce, and that a myghty voyce.

Ymbute the power vnto God, his glory is in Israel, and his might in the cloudes.

God is wonderfull in his sanctuarye, he is the God of Israel, he will gyue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

PSAL. LXVIII.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Solanim of Dauid.

A HElpe me, O God, for the waters are come in euen vnto my soule.

I stycke fast in the depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, & the floudes will drowne me.

I am wery of cryeng, my throte is drye, my sight fayleth me, for waytinge so longe vpon my God.

They that hate me without cause, are mo then the heares of my head: they ꝑ are myne ennemyes and wolde destroye me gyltlesse are myghty: I am fayne to paye the thynges that I neuer toke.

God thou knowest my simplenesse, and my B faultes are not hyd from the.

Let not them ꝑ trust in the, O Lorde God of hoostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thorow me O God of Israel.

And why? for thy sake wo I suffre reproke, shame coureth my face.

I am become a straunger vnto my brethren, and an aleaunt vnto my mothers children.

For the zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuked ꝑ, is fallen vpon me.

I wept and chastened my selfe with fasting and that was turned to my reproke. C

I put on a sack clothe, and therfore they iested vpon me.

They that sate in the gate, spake against me, and the dronkardes made songes vpon me.

But Lorde I made my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme.

Heare me, O God, with thy great mercy & sure helpe.

Take me out of the myre, that I sinke not: D Oh let me be delyuered frome them that hate me, and out of the depe waters.

Lest the water flonde drowne me, that the depe swalow me not vp, and that ꝑ pyt shut not her mouth vpon me.

Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louynge kyndnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me accordinge vnto thy great mercy.

Hyde not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: haste the to helpe me.

Drawe nyghe vnto my soule, and saue it: E delyuer me because of myne ennemyes.

Thou knowest my reproke, my shame and my dishonour: myne aduersaries are al in thy sight.

The rebuke breaketh my hert, and maketh me heuy: I loke for some to haue pitie vpon me, but there is no man: and for some to comforte me, but I fynde none.

They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thurstie, they gaue me vyneger to drinke. Roma.xi.d

Let their table be made a snare to take them selues with all, an occasion to fall and a rewarde vnto them.

Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not: and euer bowe downe their backes.

Powre out thyne indignacion vpon them, and let thy wrathful displeasure take hold of them.

Let their habitation be voyde, and no man to dwell in their tentes. Act.i.d

For they persecute him whō thou hast smyten, and beside thy woundes they haue gyuē him mo. F

Let theym fall frome one wyckednesse to an other, and not come into thy ryghteousnesse.

Let them be wyped out of the booke of the lyuynge, and not be writen amonge the righteous.

As for me, I am poore and in heynesse, let thy helpe defende me, O God.

That I may prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it with thankesgyuinge.

This shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hookes.

O consydre this and be glad (ye that be in adulterie) seke after God, & your soule shall lyue. G

For the Lorde heareth the poore, and despyseth not his prysoners.

Let heauen and earth prayse him, the see & all that moueth therin.

For God will saue Sion, and buylde the cyties of Juda, that men maye dwell there, & haue them in possession.

The sede of his seruauntes shall inheret it and they that loue his name, shall dwell therin.

¶ To the chaunter, of Dauid to bringe to remembraunce.

HAst the, O God, to delyuer me, and to helpe me, O Lorde. A

Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: ✳let them be turned backwarde, and put to confusion, that wysh me euyll. ✳Psalm.xl.e

Let them sone be brought to shame, ꝑ crye ouer me, there there.

But let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy sauynge healthe, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in mysery, hast ꝑ God for to helpe me.

Thou art my helpe, my redemer & my God O make no longe tarynge.

PSAL. LXX.

After the Hebrues.lxxi.

A IN the, O Lorde, is my truſt, let me neuer be put to confuſion, but rydd me, & delyuer me thorow thy righteouſnelle: enclyne thyne eare vnto me, and helpe me.

Be thou my ſtronge holde (where vnto I maye alwaye fle) thou that haſte promyſed to helpe me: for thou art my houſe of defence & my caſtell.

Delyuer me, O my God, out of the hande of the vngodly, out of the hande of ꝑ vnrighteous and cruell man.

For thou, O Lorde God, art the thing that I longe for, thou art my hope euen frome my youth.

I haue leaned vpon the euer ſythēs I was borne, thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, therfore is my prayſe alwaye of the.

B I am become a wonder vnto the multitude but my ſure truſt is in the.

O let my mouth be fylled with thy prayſe and honour all the daye longe.

Caſt me not awaye in myne olde age, forſake me not when my ſtrength fayleth me.

For myne ennemyes ſpeake againſt me, and they that laye wayte for my ſoule, take their councell togither, ſayenge: God hath forſaken him, perſecute him, take him, for there is none to helpe him.

Go not farre frome me, O God: my God, haſte the to helpe me.

Let them be confounded and peryſhe, that are againſte my ſoule: let theym be couered with ſhame and dyſhonoure, that ſeke to do me eupll.

C As for me I will pacyently abyde alwaye, and will euer encreaſe thy prayſe.

My mouth ſhal ſpeake of thy righteouſnes and ſauinge helth all daye longe, for I know no ende therof.

Let me go in (O Lorde God) and I will make mencion of thy power and righteouſnes onely.

Thou, O God, haſt lerned me frō my youth vp vntyll now, therfore will I tel of thy wōderous workes.

Forſake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am graye headded: vntyll I haue ſhewed thyne arme vnto chylders chyldren, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come.

Thy ryghteouſnelle, O God is very hyghe, thou that deſt great thinges: O God, who is lyke the?

D O what great troubles and aduerſities haſt thou ſhewed me? and yet dydeſt thou tourne and refreſh me: and broughteſt me frome the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou haſt brought me to great honoure, & comforted me on euery ſyde.

Therfore will I prayſe the and thy fayth-fulnelle, O God, playenge vpon the lute, vnto the will I ſinge vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Iſrael.

My lippes wolde fayne ſinge prayſes vnto the: and ſo wolde my ſoule whom thou haſt delyuered.

My tongue talke th of thy ryghteouſnelle all the daye longe, for they are confounded & brought vnto ſhame, that ſought to do me eupll.

PSAL. LXXI.

PSAL. LXXII.

¶ Psalme of Asaph.

A How louynge is God vnto Israel, to such as are of a cleane hert?
Neuertheleſſe my feete were almoſt gone, my treadinges had well nyghe ſlypte.
And why? I was greued at the wycked, to ſe the vngodly in ſuch welthe.
For they are in no pareli of deth, but ſtand faſt lyke a palace.
They come in no myſfortune lyke other folke, neyther are they plaged lyke other men.
And this is the cauſe that they be ſo puft vp in pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnrighteouſneſſe.
Their eyes ſwell for fatneſſe, they w euen
what they lyſt.
Corrupt are they, and ſpeake blaſphemyes B malycyouſly, proude and preſumptuous are their wordes.
They ſtretche forth their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tongue goeth throwe the worlde.
Therfore fall the people vnto theym, and there out ſucke they no ſmall vauntage.
Tuſh (ſaye they) how ſhulde God perceyue it? is there knowledge in the moſt hyghеſt?
Lo, theſe are the vngodly, theſe proſpere in the worlde, theſe haue eyeſelle in poſſeſſion.
Shoulde I then clenſe my herte in vayne (thought I) and waſche my handes in innocency?
Wherfore ſhuld I be then punyſhed dayely, and be chaſtened euery morninge?
C Yea I had almoſt alſo ſayde euen as they:
but lo, then ſhulde I haue condemned the ge neracion of thy childzen.
Then thought I to vnderſtand this, but it was to harde for me.
Vntyl I went into the Sanctuary of God and conſidred the ende of theſe men.
Namely, how thou haſte ſet them in a ſlyp pery place, that thou mayſt caſt theym wowne headlynges and deſtroye them.
O how ſodeynly do they conſume, periſh,
& come to a fearfull ende?
Yea euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, ſo makeſt thou their ymage to vanyſche out of the cyte.
Thus my hert was greued, and it went euen throw my reynes.
So folyſh was I and ignorant, and as it
D were a beaſt before the.
Neuertheleſſe I am alwaye by the, thou holdeſt me by my righthande.
Thou leadeſt me with thy counſel, and afterwarde receyueſt me vnto glory.
O what is there prepared for me in heaue?
there is nothinge vpon earth, that I deſire in comparyſon of the.
My fleſh and my hert fayleth, but God is the ſtrengthe of my herte, and my portion for euer.
For lo, they that forſake the ſhall periſhe:
thou deſtroyeſt all them that commyt fornication agaīſt the.
But it is good for me, to holde me faſt by God, to put my truſt in the Lorde God, and to ſpeake of all thy workes.

¶ An inſtruction of Aſaph.

O God, wherfore doeſt thou caſt vs ſo A cleane away? why is thy wrath ſo hote againſt the ſhepe of thy paſture?
O thinke vpon thyne aſſemble, whom thou haſte purchaſed frome the begynnynge: the ſtafe of thyne enheritaunce, whom thou haſt redemed, euen this hyl of Sion wherin thou dwelleſt.
Treade vpon them with thy fete, and caſte them downe to the grounde, for the ennemye hath deſtroyed all togyther in the Saunctuarye.
Thyne aduerſaries roare in thy houſes, & B ſet vp their bannets for tokens.
Men maye ſe the axes glyſter aboue, lyke as thoſe that hewe in the wod.
They cut downe all the ſlyrnge worke of the holy place with bylles and axes.
They haue ſet fire vpō the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.
Yea they ſayde in their hertes: let vs ſpoyle them al togither, thus haue they brent vp al
the houſes of God in the lande.
We ſe our tokēs no more, there is not one Prophet more, no not one that vnderſtādeth any more.
O God, how longe ſhall the aduerſarye do iii. Reg. xxv. c this diſhonoure? how longe ſhal the ennemy blaſpheme thy name? for euer?
Why withdrawеſt thou thyne hand? why C pluckeſt thou not thy righthande out of thy boſome, to conſume thyne ennemyes?
But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe is done vpon earth, he doth it him ſelfe.
Thou diuideſt the ſee throwe thy power, thou breakeſt the heades of the dragons in waters.
Thou ſmyteſt the heades of Leuiathan in peces, and gyueſt him to be meat for the people in the wildernelle.
Thou dryggeſt vp welles and brokes, thou dryeſt vp myghty waters.
The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne:
thou haſte prepared the lyghtes and the Sunne.
Thou haſt ſet al the borders of the earthe,
thou haſt made both ſomer and wynter.
Remembre this, O Lorde, how the ennemy rebuketh, and how the folyſh people blaſ pheme thy name.
O delyuer not the ſoule of thy turtle doue vnto the beaſtes, and forget not the aſſemble of the pore for euer.
Loke vpon the couenaunt, for the darcke houſes of the earth are full of wyckednelſe. D O let not the ſymple go awaye aſhamed:
for the poore and nedye gyue prayſes vnto thy name.

Aryse, O God, and mayntayne thyne owne cause, remembre how the folysh man blaspheme th the dayely.

When I maye get a conuenient tyme, I shall iudge accordinge vnto right.

The earth is weake and all that is therin, but I beare vp her pyllers.

I sayde vnto the mad people, deale not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp youre hornes.

Set not vp your hornes on hyghe, & speake not with a styf necke.

For promocion commeth neyther from the East ner frome the west, ner yet from the wildernesse.

And why? God is the iudge: he putteth B downe one, and setteth vp an other.

For in the hande of the Lorde there is a cup full of stronge wyne, and he poureth out of ſ same:

As for the dregges therof, all the vngodly of the earth shall drynke them, and sucke the oute.

¶ To the chaunter, for Iduthun a Psalme of Asaph.

I Cryed vnto God with my voyce, yea vnto God cryed I with my voyce, and he heard me. C

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde, I helde vp myne handes vnto him in ſ nyghte season, for my soule refused all other comforte.

When I was in heynesse, I thought vpō God: when my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou heldest myne eyes wakynge, I was so feble, that I coulde not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeres that were past. D

I called to remembraunce my songe in the night, I communed with myne owne hert, & sought out my spirite.

Wyll the Lorde cast out for euer?

Will he be no more intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone?

Is his promyse come vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hathe the Lorde forgotten to be gracious?

Or, hath he shut vp his louynge kyndnesse C in displeasure?

At the laste, I came to this poynte, that I thought: O why art thou so folysh? ſ right hande of the most hyghest can chaunge all.

Therfore will I remembre the workes of ſ Lorde, and cal to mynde thy wonders of old tyme.

I will speake of al thy workes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy mynges.

Thy waye, O God, is holye: who is so great and mighty as God?

Thou arte the God that wyth wonders, thou hast declared thy power among the people.

Thou with thyne arme hast delyuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph D Selah.

The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, and were afrayed, the deapthes were moued.

The thicke cloudes powred out water, the cloudes thondered, and thyne arowes went abroade.

Thy thonder was herde roundeabout, the lyghtlyghtynges shone vpon the grounde, the erth was moued and shoke withall.

Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the great waters, yet coulde no man know thy foteſteppes.

Thou leddeſt thy people lyke a flocke of sheepe, by the hande of Moſes and Aaron.

PSAL. LXXVII.

(An inſtruccion of Aſaph.

HEare my lawe, O my people, enclyne your eares vnto ꝯ wordes of my mouth I wyll open my mouth in parables, & ſpeake of thinges of olde.

Which we haue herde and knowen, & ſuche as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we ſhoulde not hyde theym frome the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to ſhewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myght and wonderfull workes that he hathe wrought.

He made a couenaũt with Jacob, and gaue Iſrael a lawe, which he cõmaunded our forefathers to teache their children.

That their poſteritie myght know it, & the children which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they might ſhewe their children the ſame.

That they alſo might put their truſt i God & not forget what he had wrought, but to kepe his commaundmentes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a frowarde and ouert hwarte generacion, a generacion that ſet not their hert a right, and whoſe ſpirite was not true towarde God.

Lyke as the children of Ephraim, which beynge harnelled and carynge bowes, tourned themſelues back in the tyme of bataple.

They kept not the couenaunt of God, and wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he hadde wrought, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde ſhewed for them.

Marueloꝰ thinges dyd he in the ſight of our fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in ꝯ felde of Zoan.

He dyuyded the ſee and let theym goo thorow it, and made the waters to ſtande lyke a wall.

In the day tyme he led them with a cloude and all the nyghte thorowe with a lyght of fyre.

He cloue the hard rockes in the wyldernes and gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters oute of the ſtony rocke, ſo that they guſhed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they ſynned againſte him, and prouoked the moſt myghtie in the wyldernelle.

They tempted God in their hertes, and required meat for their luſt.

For they ſpake againſt God, and ſayde: yea yea, God ſhall prepare a table in the wyldernes, ſhall he?

Lo, he ſmote the ſtony rocke, that the waters ſtreames guſhed oute, and the ſtreames flowed with all: but how can he gyue bred & prouyde fleſh for his people?

When the Lorde herde this, he was wroth ſo the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, and heuye diſpleaſure againſt Iſrael. Nume.xi.b

Becauſe they beleued not in God, and put not their truſt in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes above, & opened the wyes of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon theym for to eate, and gaue them bred frome heauen. Exo.xvi.c

Then ate they aungels fode, for he ſent thē meat ynough. Numer.xi.b.

He cauſed the eaſt wynde to blow vnder ꝯ heauen, and thorow his power he brought in the ſouth wynde. 1.Cozin.x.a

He made fleſh to rayne vpõ them as thicke as duſt, and fethered foules lyke as the ſande of the ſee. Numeri.xi.g

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde-about their habitations.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne deſire.

They were not diſappointed of their luſt.

But whyle the meat was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpõ them & ſlewe the welthyeſt of them, & ſmote downe the choſen men of Iſrael. Numeri.xi.g. D

But for all this they ſynned yet more, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therfore their dayes were conſumed in vanitie, & ſodenly their yeres were gone.

When he ſlewe them, they ſought him, and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their ſuccoure, and that the hyghe God was their redemer.

Neuertheleſſe they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, & dilſembled with him in their tongues.

For their hert was not hole with him, neyther continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was ſo mercyfull, that he forgaue their myſdedes, and deſtroyed them not.

Yea many a tyme tourned he his wrathe awaye, and wolde not ſuffre his hole diſpleaſure to aryſe.

For he conſydered that they were but fleſh: euen a wynde that palleth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

O how oft haue they greued him in ꝯ wyldernelſe? D

How many a tyme haue they prouoked him in the deſerte?

They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Iſrael.

They thought not of his hande, in ꝯ daye when he delyuered theym frome the hande of the ennemy.

How he hadde wrought his myracles in Egypte, and his wonders in the lande of Zoan. Exodi.i.d

Howe he turned their waters in to bloude ſo that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

How he ſent lyce amonge them, to eate them vp, and frogges to deſtroye them. Exod.viii.a.f

How he gaue their frutes vnto the Caterpyller, and their labour vnto the Grashoppe.

How he bet downe their vynyardes with hayle stones, and their Mulbery trees with the frost.

How he smote their catell with hayle stones, and their flockes with hoote thonder bolte. Exodi.ix.c. Exodi.vi.a.c.

How he sent vpon them the furyousnes of his wrath, anger and displeasure: with trouble and sayllynge in of euyll aungels.

When he made a waye to his fearefull indignacion, and spared not their soules from death, yea and gaue their catell ouer to the pestilence.

When he smote all the first borne in Egypt the most principal and myghtyest in the dwellynges of Ham. Exodi.xii.d.

His owne people, he lead theym forth lyke shepe, and caryed them in the wylderneſſe like a flocke. Exodi.xiii.c.

F

He brought thē out safely, that they should not feare, and ouerwhelmed their ennemyes with the see.

He caryed thē vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen in to this hyl, which he purchased with his right hande.

He dyd cast out the Heythen before them, caused their lande to be diuyded among them for an heritage, and made the trybes of Israel to dwell in their tentes. Josue.xiii.b.

For all this they tempted and displeased the most hyghe God, and kept not his couenaunt.

But tourned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, starting aside lyke a broken bowe.

And so they greued hym with their hyghe places, and prouoked him with their ymages.

When God herde this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitation wherin he dwelt among men. 1.Regū.viii.a.

G

He delyuered their power into captiuite, & their glory into the ennemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer into the swerde, for he was wroth with his heritage.

The fire consumed their yong men, & their maydens were not gyuen to mariage.

Their prestes were slayne with the swerde, and there were no wydowes to make lamentation.

So the Lorde awaked as one oute of slepe and lyke a gyaūt refreshed with wyne.

He smote his ennemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to a perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, & chose not the tryde of Ephraim.

Neuertheles, he chose the tryde of Juda, euen the hyll of Syon which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hyghe, and layde the foundacion of it lyke ỹ ground that it myght perpetually endure.

He chose Dauid also his seruaunt, & toke him awaye from the shepe folde.

As he was folowynge the yowes great with yonge, he toke hym, that he myght fede Jacob his people, and Israell his enheritaunce.

So he fed theym with a faithfull and true hert, and ruled them with al the diligence of his power.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

O God, the Heythen are brokē into thyne heritage: the holy temple haue they defyled, and made Jerusalem an heape of stones.

The ded bodyes of thy seruauntes haue they gyuen vnto the foules of the ayre to be deuoured, and the flesh of thy sayntes vnto ỹ beastes of the lande.

Their bloude haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no mā to bury them.

We are become an open shame vnto oure ennemyes, a very scorne and derision vnto them that are round about vs.

Lorde, how longe wilt thou be angry? shal thy gelousy burne lyke fire for euer?

Poure out thyne indignacion vpon the heythen that know the not, and vpon the kyngdomes that cal not vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layde wast his dwellynge place.

O remembre not our olde synnes, but haue mercy vpō vs, and that sone, for we are come to great myserp.

Helpe vs, O God our sauiour, for the glory of thy name: O delyuer vs, & forgyue vs our synnes for thy names sake.

Wherfore shall the Heythen say: where is now their God?

O let the vengeaūce of thy seruātes bloude that is shed, be openly shewed vpon the heythen in our sight.

O let the sorowfull syghynge of thy prysoners come before the, and according vnto the power of thyne arme, preserue those that are appoynted to dye.

And for the blasphemye wherewith oure neyghboures haue blasphemed the, rewarde theym, O Lorde, seuen folde into their bosome.

So we that be the people and shepe of thy pasture, shall gyue the thankes for euer, and will alwaye be shewynge forthe thy prayse more and more.

PSAL. LXXIX.

¶ To the chaunter, vpon Solanim, a Psalme of Asaph.

HEare O thou shepeherde of Israel, thou that leadest Jacob lyke a flocke of shepe shewe thy selfe, thou that sittest vpon the Cherubyns.

Before Ephraim, Ben Jamin, and Manasses: stere vp thy power, and come helpe vs.

Turne

Tourne vs agayne, O God, shewe the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

O Lorde God of hostes: howe longe wylte thou be angrye ouer the prayer of thy people?

Thou hast fed the with the breed of teares: yea thou hast gyuen them plenteousnes of teares to drinke.

Thou hast made vs a verye stryfe vnto our neyghbours: and our ennemyes laughe vs to scorne.

B Turne vs agayn thou God of hostes: shew the lyghte of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

Thou haste brought a vyneyarde forthe of Egypt: thou diddest cast out the Heithen, and plant it.

Thou madest rowme for it, and caused it to take rote, so that it fylled the lande.

The hylles were couered with the shadowe of it: and so were the strong Cedar trees with the boughes therof.

She stretched out her braunches vnto the see: and her boughes vnto the water.

Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge: that al they which go by, plucke of her grapes?

The wylde boze oute of the wod hathe roted it vp: and the beestes of the felde haue deuoured it.

Turne the agayn thou God of hostes: loke downe from heuen, beholde and visyte this vineyarde.

Mayntayn it that thy right hand hath planted: and the sonne whom thou madest so moch of for thy selfe.

For why? it is brent with fyre, and lyeth waste: O let them perish at the rebuke of thy wrathe.

Lette thy hande be vpon the man of thy rygdte hande: and vpon the man whom thou madest so moche of, for thyne owne selfe.

And so wyll not we goo backe frome the: Oh lette vs lyue, and we shall call vpon thy name.

Turne vs agayne, o Lorde God of hostes: shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce, and we shall be hole.

¶ Psalme and songe of the sonnes of Corah, to be chaunted vpon Mahalath, for affliction, an instruction of Heman the Ezrahyte.

O Lorde God my sauiour, I crye daye and A nighte before the: oh let my prayer enter in to thy presence, enclyne thyne eare vnto my callyng.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nygh vnto hell.

I am counted as one of them that go downe vnto the pit: I am euen as a man that hath no strength.

Free amonge the dead, lyke vnto them that lye in the graue: whiche be oute of remembraunce, and are cutte awaye frome thy hande.

Thou hast layde me in the lowest pit, in the B darcknesse, and in the depe.

Thyne indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me: and thou vexest me with all thy floudes. Selah.

Thou hast put awaye myne acqueyntaunce farre fro me: and made me to be abhorred of them: I am so faste in prysone, that I can not get forth.

My sight fayleth for very trouble: Lorde I cal dayly vpon the, and stretche out my handes vnto the.

Doest thou shewe wonders amonge the dead?

Can the Phisicions rayse them vp agayne, that they may prayse the?

Maye thy louynge kyndnesse be shewed C in the graue: or thy faythfulnesse in destruction?

Maye thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darcke? or the rightoulnesse in the land where all thynges are forgotten?

Ps. xcv. c

O Lorde, the verye heuens shall prayse thy wonderous worckes, yea and thy faythfulnesse in the congregacion of the sayntes.

For who is he among the cloudes, that may be compared vnto the Lorde?

Yea what is he amonge the goddes, that is lyke vnto the Lorde?

God is greatly to be feared in the counsel of the saintes, & to be had in reuerence of al them that are aboute him.

O Lorde God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the in power? thy truthe is rounde aboute the.

Thou abatest the ragynge of the see: thou stillest the waues therof, when they arise.

Thou breakest the proude lyke one that is wounded, thou scatterest thyne enemies abrode with thy mighty arme.

Geneſis.i.a The heuēs are thyne, the erth is thyne: thou hast layd the foundacion of the round worlde, and all that therin is.

Thou haste made the Northe and the Southe: Tabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name.

Thou hast a myghtye arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy ryght hande.

Ryghtousnesse and equitie is the habitacion of thy seate: mercye and truthe goo before thy face.

Blessed is ỹ people, o Lord, that can reioyse in the, and walketh in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

Their delyte is in thy name all the daye long, and thorow thy righteousnesse they shall be exalted.

For thou arte the glorye of their strengthe and thorowe thy fauoure shalte thou lyfte vp our hornes.

The Lorde is our defence: and the holy one of Israel is our kyng.

Then spakest somtimes in visions vnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue layde helpe vpon one that is mighty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue found Dauid my seruaunt: with my holy oyle I haue annoynted him.

1.Regū.xvi.c. Act.xiii.d My hande shall holde him fast: and myne arme shall strengthen him.

The ennemye shall not ouercome hym: and the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shal smyte downe his foes before his face: and plage them that hate him.

My truthe also and my mercye shall be with him: and in my name shall his horne be exalted.

I wil set his hande in the see: and his right hande in the floudes.

He shall call me: thou arte my father, my God, and the strengthe of my saluacion.

And I will make him my fyrstborne: hyer then the kynges of the erth.

My mercye wyll I kepe for him for euermore: and my couenaunte shall stande faste with him.

His seed wil I make to endure for euer, yea and his trone as the dayes of heuen.

But yf his chyldren forsake my lawe: and walke not in my iudgementes.

Yf they breake mine ordinaunces: and kepe not my commaundementes.

I wil visit their offences with the rod: and their synnes with scourges.

Neuertheles my louynge kyndnesse wyl I not vtterly take from him: ne suffre my truth to fayle.

My couenaunt wyll I not breake: nor disanulle the thynge that is gone oute of my lyppes.

I haue sworne ones by my holynesse, that I wil not fayle Dauid.

His sede shall endure for euer, and his seate also lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande faste for euermore as the moone: and as the faythfull wytnesse in heuen. Selah.

But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thine annoynted: and art displeased at him.

Thou haste tourned backe the couenaunte of thy seruaunte: and caste his crowne to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges: and brokē downe his strong holdes.

Al they that go by, spoyle him: he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou settest vp the ryghte hande of his ennemyes: and makest all his aduersaryes to reioyse.

Thou haste taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde: and gyuest him not victorye in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glorye: and cast his trone downe to the ground.

The dayes of his youthe haste thou shortened: and couered him with dishonoure. Selah.

Lorde, howe longe wylte thou hyde thy selfe? for euer? shall thy wrathe burne lyke fyre?

Remembre howe shorte my tyme is: haste thou made all men for nought? what man is he that lyueth, and shall not se deathe?

Haue a man delyuer his owne soule frome the hande of hell? Selah.

* Lorde, where are thy olde louynge kyndnesses, which thou sworest vnto Dauid in thy truthe?

Remembre, Lorde, the rebuke that the multytude of thy people doo vnto thy seruauntes, and howe I haue borne it in my bosome.

Wherwith thyne ennemyes blaspheme the: and sclaūder the fotesteppes of thyne annoynted.

Thankes be to the Lorde for euermore: Amen, Amen.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

Lorde

LOrde, thou art oure refuge frome one generacion to an other.

Before the mountaynes were brought forthe, or euer the earthe and the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlasting & worlde without ende.

Thou tourneſt man to deſtruction: & sayest: come agayne ye children of men.

For a thousande yeres in thy syghte, are but as yesterdaye that is past, and lyke as it were a nyght watche.

As soone as thou scatterest them, they are euen as a slepe: and fade awaye sodeynly lyke the grasse.

In the mornynge it is grene and groweth vp: but in the euenynge it is cut downe and wythered.

For we consume awaye in thy displeasure: and are afrayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou settest our mysdoedes before the: and our secrete synnes in the lyght of thy countenaunce.

For when thou art angrye, all our dayes are gone: we bringe oure yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are thre score yeres and ten: and thoughe men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeres, yet is their strength then but labour and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrathe, thy fearefull and terrible displeasure?

O teache vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applye oure hertes vnto wyſedome.

Turne the agayne, o Lorde, at the laſt: and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes.

O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that sone: so shall we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfort vs agayn now after the time that thou hast plaged vs: and for the yeres wherin we haue suffered aduerſitie.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke: and their children thy glory.

And the glorious maieſtie of the Lorde our God be vpon vs: O prosspere thou the worke of our handes vpon vs: o prosspere thou oure handy worke.

C of aduersitie, vntyll the pyt be digged for the vngodly.

For the Lorde will not fayle his people, neither wil he forsake his inheritaunce.

And why? iudgement shal be turned agayne vnto rightousnesse, and all suche as be true of herte shall folowe it.

Who ryseth vp with me agaynst the wycked? who taketh my parte agaynst the euyll doers?

Yf the Lorde had not helped me, my soule had almost ben put to sylence.

Whē I said: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (o Lorde) helde me vp.

In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my D soule.

Wylt thou haue any thyng to do with the stole of wickednes, which ymagineth mischief in the lawe?

They gather them togyther agaynst ꝑ soule of the ryghtous, and condemne the innocent bloude.

But the Lorde is my refuge, my God is the strength of my confidence.

He shall recompence them their wyckednesse: and destroye them in their owne malyce: yea the Lorde oure God shall destroye them.

PSAL. XCIIII.

O Come let vs prayse the Lord, let vs hertely reioyse in the strengthe of oure saluacion.

Let vs come before his presence with thankesgyuynge, and shewe our selfe glad in hym with psalmes.

For the Lorde is a greate God, and a greate kynge, aboue all goddes.

In his hande are all the corners of the earthe: and the strengthe of the hylles is his also.

The see is his, for he made it, and his handes prepared the drye lande.

O come, let vs worshyp and bowe downe our selues: let vs knele before the Lorde our maker.

For he is oure God: and we are the peo-
B ple of his pasture, and the shepe of his handes.

To day if ye wil heare his voyce, harden not youre hertes, as when ye prouoked in tyme of temptacion in the wildernesse.

Where youre fathers tempted me: proued me, and sawe my workes.

Fourtye yeres longe was I greued with that generacion, and sayde: they euer erre in C theyr hertes, they verely haue not knowen my wayes.

Therfore I sayd vnto thē in my wrath: that they sholde not entre in to my rest.

PSAL. XCV.

O Synge vnto the Lorde a newe songe: syng vnto the Lorde all the hole erth.

Syng vnto the Lorde, and praise his name: be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among the Heithē, and his wonders amonge all people.

For the Lorde is greate, and can not worthely be praysed: he is more to be feared then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythen: they B be but ydols: but it is the Lord that made the heuens.

Tham-

Thankesgyuynge and worshyp are before him: power and honoure are in his sanctuarye.

Ascrybe vnto the Lorde (O ye kynredes of the Heithen) ascrybe vnto the Lorde worshyp and strength.

Ascrybe vnto the Lorde the honoure of his name: bringe presentes, and come in to his courte.

O worshyp the Lorde in the beautye of holynesse: let the hole earthe stande in awe of hym.

Tell it oute amonge the Heithen: that the Lorde is kyng: and that it is he whiche hathe made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shal iudge the people rightously.

Let the heuens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yea and al that therin is.

Lette the felde be ioyfull, and all that is in it: let all the trees in the wodde leape for ioye.

Before the Lorde, for he commeth: for he cometh to iudge the earth: yea & righteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with his truthe.

PSAL. XCVI.

THe Lorde is kyng, the erth may be glad therof: yea the multitude of ꝑ yles may be glad therof.

Cloudes and darcknesse are rounde aboute him righteousnesse and iudgement are the habitacion of his seate.

There goeth a fyre before him, to burne vp his ennemyes on euery syde.

His lightninges giue shine vnto ꝑ worlde: the erth seeth it, and is afrayde.

The hilles melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the hole erth.

The very heuens declare his righteousnesse: and all the people se his glory.

Confounded be all they that worshyp ymages, and delite in their idols: worshyp him all ye goddes.

Sion heareth of it, and reioyseth: yea and al the doughters of Juda are glad because of thy iudgementes, o Lorde.

For thou Lorde arte the moost hyest ouer all the earth: thou art exalted farre aboue al goddes.

O ye that loue the Lorde, se that ye hate the thyng whiche is euyll: the Lorde preserueth the soules of his sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly.

There is spronge vp a lyghte for the righteous: and a ioyfull gladnesse for suche as be true herted.

Reioyse therfore in the Lorde ye righteous: and giue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

PSAL. XCVII.

¶ A Psalme.

SYng vnto the Lorde a new songe: for A he hath done marueylous thynges.

With his owne righte hande, and with his holye arme he hathe gotten the victorye.

The Lorde hath declared his sauing helth, & his righteousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heithen.

He hath remembred his mercye and truthe towarde the house of Israel: ✠ so ꝑ al the endes of the worlde se the sauynge helthe of our God. Esaye.lii.c.x.v.b

Shewe youre selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes: synge, reioyse, and giue thankes. B

Prayse the Lorde vpon the harpe: synge to the harpe with a Psalme of thankesgyuynge.

With trompettes also and shawmes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kynge.

Let the see make a noyse, and all that therin is: yea the hole worlde, and all that dwell therin.

Let the floudes clap their handes: and let all the hylles be ioyfull together:

Before the Lorde, for he is come to iudge the earthe.

Yea with righteousnesse shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with equitie.

PSAL. XCVIII.

THe Lorde is kynge, be the people neuer so vnpacyent: he sytteth vpon the Cherubyns, be the earthe neuer so vnquiet. A

The Lorde is great in Sion, and hye aboue all people.

O let men giue thankes vnto thy great and wonderfull name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou prepareſt equitie, thou executeſt iudgemēt and righteousnes in Jacob.

O magnifie the Lorde our God: fal downe before his fotestole, for he is holy.

Moses and Aaron amonge his Preestes: and Samuel amonge suche as call vpon his name: these called vpon the Lorde, and he herde them. B

He spake vnto them out of the cloudy pillar for they kepte his testimonies, and ꝑ law that he gaue them.

Thou herdeſt them, o Lorde our God, thou forgaueſt them, o God, & punisheſt their own inuencions.

O magnifie the Lord our God, and worshyp him vpon his holy hyll, for the Lord our God is holye.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

A MY songe shall be of mercye and iudgement: yea vnto the (O Lorde) will I synge.

O let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse, vntyll the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house wt an innocent herr.

I will take no wycked thyng in hande: I hate the synne of vnfaythfulnesse, it shall not cleue vnto me.

A frowarde hert shal depart from me: I will not knowe a wicked person.

B Who so priuely sclaundreth his neighbour, hym will I destroye: who so hathe a proude loke, and an hye stomacke, I maye not awaye with him.

Myne eyes shall loke for suche as be faythfull in the lande: that they maye dwell with me: and who so leadeth a godly lyfe, shal be my seruaunt.

There shall no disceptfull person dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes shall not tarye in my syght.

I shal soone destroye all the vngodly of the land: that all wicked doers may be roted oute of the city of the Lorde.

¶ A prayer of the afflyct, when he was in woo, and powred out his complaynte before the Lorde.

A HEare my prayer, o Lord, and let my crye enge come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face fro me in the time of my trouble: enclyne thyne eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that syghte soone.

For my daies are cõsumed awaye like smoke: and my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My herte is smytten downe, and wythered lyke grasse: so that I forget to eate my breed.

For the voyce of my groning: my bone will scarce cleue to my flesshe.

I am become lyke a Pellycane in the wylderneesse: and lyke an howle in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe sytting alone vpon the house top.

B Myne enemyes reuyle me al the day long: they laugh me to scorne, and are sworne together agaynst me.

I eate asshes with my breed, and mingle my drynke with wepinge.

And that bicause of thyne indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone like a shadowe: and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou, O Lorde, endurest for euer: and thy remembraunce thorowe oute all generacyons.

Aryse therfore and haue mercy vpon Sion: for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yea the tyme is come.

And why? thy seruauntes haue a loue to C her stones: and it pitieth them to se her in the duste.

The Heythen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, and all the kynges of the earthe thy maiestye.

For the Lorde shall buylde vp Sion, & shal appere in his glory.

He tourneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute: and despyseth not their desyre.

This shal be written for those that come after: that the people which shal be borne, may prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from his sanctuarye: out of the heuen dothe the Lorde beholde the earthe.

That he may heare the mournynges of suche as be in captiuitie: and delyuer the children of dearthe.

That they maye preache the name of the Lorde in Syon: and his worshyp at Ierusalem.

When the people are gathered toge- D ther: and the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde.

He hath brought downe my strength in my iourney: and shortened my dayes.

Yet will I saye, O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeres, they endure thorowe oute all generacions.

Thou Lorde in the begynning hast layd the E foundacion of the erth, and the heuens are the workes of thy handes.

*They shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall waxe olde as doth a garment, as a vesture shalte thou chaunge them, & they shall be chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yeres shall not fayle.

The children of thy seruauntes shall continue: and their sede shall prospere in thy syght.

¶ Of Dauid.

PRayse the Lorde, O my soule, and all that is within me, prayse his holye name.

prayse

Prayse the Lord, o my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Which forgiueth all thy synnes: and healeth all thyne infirmities.

Which saueth thy lyfe from destruction: & crowneth the with mercy, and louynge kyndnesse.

Which satisfyeth thy desyre with good thynges: makynge the yonge and lusty as an Egle.

The Lorde executeth righteousnesse & iudgement, for all them that suffre wronge.

He shewed his wayes vnto Moses: and his workes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

The Lorde is full of compassion and mercye: longe sufferynge, and of greate goodnesse.

He wil not alwaye be chiding: neither wil he kepe his anger for euer.

He hathe not dealte with vs after our synnes: ne rewarded vs accordynge to oure wickednesse.

For loke how hye the heuen is in comparisō of the erth: so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.

Loke howe wyde the East is frome the Weste: so farre hathe he sette oure synnes from vs.

Yea like as a father pitieth his owne children: euen so is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him.

For he knoweth wherof we be made: he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in his tyme is but as is grasse: and flourisheth as a floure of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone: and the place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyful goodnesse of the Lord, endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him. and his righteousnesse vpon their childers chyldren.

Suche as kepe his couenaunte: and thynke vpon his commaundementes, to doo them.

The Lorde hath prepared his seat in heuen: and his kyngdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lord ye aungels of his, ye that be mighty in strengthe: fulfyllynge his commaundement, that men may heare the voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruauntes of his, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule.

PSAL. CIII.

PRayse the Lorde, o my soule: o Lorde my God, thou arte become exceadynge glorious, thou arte clothed with maiesty and honoure.

Thou deckest thy self with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out ỹ heuen like a curtayne.

Thou boltest it aboue with waters, ỹ makest the cloudes thy charet, and goest vpon the wynges of the wynde.

*Thou makest thyne aungels spirites: and thy ministres flames of fyre. Hebr. 1.

Thou hast layde the erth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at any tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garment: so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flee, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayde.

(Then are the hylles sene aloft, and the valeys benethe in their place which thou hast appoynted for them.)

Thou haste set them their boundes, whiche they may not passe, that they turne not agayn to couer the erth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valeys, and the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That al beastes of the feld may haue drinke, and that the wylde asses maye quenche their thirst.

Aboue vpon the hylles haue the foules of ỹ ayre their habitacion, & sing among the braunches.

Thou waterest the hylles frome aboue: the earthe is fylled with the frutes of thy workes.

Thou bryngest forth grasse for the catel, and grene herbes for the seruice of men.

Thou bringest foode out of the erth: wine to make glad the hert of man, oyle to make him a chereful countenaunce, and breed to strengeth mans herte.

The trees of the Lorde are full of sape: euen the trees of Libanus which he hath planted.

There make the byrdes their nestes: and the fyre hylles are a dwellynge for the Storcke.

The hylles are a refuge for the wylde gotes: and so are the stonye rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, the Sunne knoweth his going downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be nyght: wherin all the beastes of the forest do moue.

Yea and the younge Lyons whiche roare after their praye: and seke their meate at God.

But when the sunne aryseth, they get them awaye togyther, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worke, and to tyll his lande vntyll the euenyng.

*O Lorde, how manyfolde are thy workes, right wisely hast thou made them all: yea the erth is full of thy rychesse. Psalm. cxli. a

So is this great and wyde see also, wherin are thinges creping innumerable, bothe small and great beastes.

There go the shippes ouer, and there is that Leuiathan, whom thou hast made to take his pastyme therin.

They wayte all vpon the, that thou mayste gyue them meate in due season.

When thou gyuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hand, they are filled with good.

But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorowfull: yf thou takest awaye theyr brethe, they dye, and are tourned agayne to their dust.

Agayne, whē thou lettest thy breth go forth, they are made: and so thou renuest the face of the earthe.

The glorious maiestye of the Lorde endureth for euer: and the Lorde reioyseth in his workes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him: he bothe but touche the hylles, and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue: I wyll prayse my God whyle I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes might please him, for my ioye is in the Lorde.

As for synners, they shall be consumed oute of the earth: and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule. Prayse the euerlastynge.

O Geyue thankes vnto the Lorde: and cal vpon his name: tel ỹ people what thinges he hath done.

O let your songes be of hym: prayse him, and let your talkyng be of all his wonderous workes.

Giue his holy name a good report, let their hertes reioyse that seke the Lorde.

Seke the Lorde and his strength: seke his face euermore.

Remembre the meruelous workes that he hath done, his wonders and the iugementes of his mouth.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye chyldren of Jacob his chosen.

He is the Lord our God, whose punishmentes are thorow out all the worlde.

He is alwaye myndefull of his couenaunt, and promyse that he made to a thousand generations.

Genes.xii.e.d Yea the couenaunte that he made with Abraham: and the othe that he swore vnto Isaac.

And appoynted the same vnto Jacob for a lawe: and to Israell for an euerlastynge testament.

Sayinge: vnto the will I giue the lande of Canaan, the lot of your heritage.

M When there was yet but a fewe of them: & the straungers therin.

What tyme as they went from one nacion to an other: from one kyngdome to an other.

1.Par.xvi.c.d He suffered no man to hurt them, but * repro-ued euen kynges for their sakes.

Touche not myne annoynted, no my Prophetes no harme.

4.Reg.i.e Moreouer he called for a dearthe vpon the lande: and destroyed all the prouysion of breed.

But he had sente a man before them, euen Joseph: whiche was solde to be a bonde seruaunt.

They hurt his fete in the stockes: the yron pearsed his hert.

Untyll the tyme that his worde came: and tyll the worde of the Lorde had tryed hym.

Then sent the kynge, and caused him to be deliuered: the prynce of the people bade lette him goo.

He made him Lorde of his house: and ruler of all his substaunce.

That he myghte enforme his princes after his wyll: and teache his senatours wysedome.

Israel also came in to Egypt: & Jacob was a straunger in the lande of Ham. E

But he increased his people exceedingly: and made them stronger then their ennemies.

Whose herte tourned so, that they hated his people: and dealte vntruly with his seruauntes.

Then sent he Moses his seruaunt, & Aaron whom he had chosen.

These dyd his tokens among them, & wonders in the land of Ham. Exod.

He sente darcknesse, and it was darcke: for they were not obedient vnto his worde. Exod.

He turned their waters in to bloud, & slewe their fyshe. Exod.

* Their landes brought forth frogges: yea euen in their kynges chambres. Exod.

* He spake the worde: and there came all maner of flyes and lyce in all their quarters. Exod.

He gaue them hayle stones for rayne: and flames of fyre in their hande.

He smote their vineyardes and figge trees: and destroyed the trees that were in their coastes.

* He spake the worde, and there were grashoppers and caterpyllers innumerable. Exod.

These ate vp all the grasse in their land, and deuoured their frutes of the grounde.

* He smote all the first borne in the land, euen the chefe of al their substaunce. Exod.

He brought them forth with siluer & golde: there was not one feble person among their tribes. P

Egypt was glad of their departing, for they were afrayde of them.

* He spredde out a cloude to be a couerynge: and fyre to gyue lyghte in the nyghte season. Exod.

* At their desire there came quayles: and he filled them with the breed of heuen. Exod.

* He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed oute: so that ryuers ranne in the wyldernesse. Exod.

Thus he brought forth his people with ioye and his chosen with gladnesse.

And gaue them the landes of the Heythen: obserue

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercye endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of ỹ Lord, or shewe forth all his prayse?

Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgemẽt, and do righteousnesse.

Remembre vs, o Lorde, according to the fauour that thou beaurest vnto thy people: o visite vs with thy sauing helth.

That we myghte se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myghte reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and gine thankes with thyne inheritaunce.

We haue synned with our fathers, we haue done amisse, we haue dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, they kepte not thy greate goodnesse in remẽbraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the red see.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake: that he myghte make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red see, and it was dried vp: so he led them thorow the depe, as in the wildernesse.

Thus he saued them from the hande of the hater: and delyuered them from the hande of the enuemye.

* As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then bileued they in his worde, and sange prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgat his workes, and wolde not abyde his counsell.

A lust came vpon them in the wylderneße: so that they tempted God in the desrete.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them mongh at their wylles.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the sayut of the Lorde.

So the earthe opened and swalowed vp Dathan: and couered the congregacion of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their company, the flame brent vp the vngodly.

* They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their glory in to the similitude of a calfe that eateth haye.

They forgat God their sauiour, whiche had done so great thinges in Egypt.

Wonderous workes in the land of Ham: & fearfull thinges in the red see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed them, hadde not Moses his chosen stande before him in the gappe: to tourne awaye his wrathfull indignacion, leest he shoulde destroye them.

Yea they thoughte scorne of that plesaunte lande, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and harkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyfte he vp his hande agaynst them, to ouerthrowe them in the wylderneße. Nume. xiiii.

To cast out their sede among the nations, & to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned them selues vnto Baal Peor: and ate the offrynges of the ded.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inuencions, & the plage was great amonges them.

* Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased. Nume. xxv.

And that was counted vnto him for rygteousnesse: amonge all posterities for euermore.

They angred him also at the waters of strife: so that Moses was punished for their sakes. Numeri. xx.

Because they prouoked his spirite, & he told them playnly with his lyppes.

Neither destroyed they the heithen: as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were myngled amonge the heithen: & lerned their workes.

In so moche that they worshypped their ymages: whiche tourned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offred their sonnes and doughters vnto deuyls.

And shed the innocent blond of their sonnes and of their doughters, whom they offred vnto the ymages of Canaan: so that the lande was defyled with blonde.

Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and went a hooring with their owne inuencions.

Therfore was the wrath of ỹ Lord kindled against his people, in so moche that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

And gaue the ouer in to the hand of the heithen: and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

Their enemies oppressed them, & had them in subiection.

Manye a tyme dyd he delyuer them: but they prouoked hym with their owne inuencions, and were broughte downe for their wyckednesse.

Neuertheles when he sawe their aduersite: he herd their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, and pytyed them: according vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led them awaye captiue, to pitie them. Deutr. xxx.

Deliuer vs, o Lord our God, and gather vs from amonge the heithen: that we may gyue thankes to thy holy name, and make our bost of thy prayse.

O Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let them gyue thankes whome the Lorde hath redemed: and delyuered from the hande of the ennemye.

And gathered them out of the landes, from the East, from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They wente astraye in the wyldernesse in an vntroden waye: and founde no citye to dwell in.

Hongry and thyrsty: and theyr soule faynted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them frome theyr distresse.

He ledde them forthe by the ryghte waye: that they myghte goo to the citye where they dwelte.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for ꝑ chyldren of men.

For he satisfied the emptye soule: and filled the hongry soule with good.

Suche as sate in darcknesse, and in the shadowe of deathe, being fast bounde in misery and yron.

Bicause they were not obedient to the commaundement of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most highest.

Their herte was vexed with labour: they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of theyr distresse.

He brought them forthe of darcknesse, and from the shadow of deth: and brake their bondes in sonder.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he dothe for the chyldren of men.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of their distresse.

For at his worde, the stormy wynde ariseth: and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are caried vp to the heuen, and downe agayne to the depe: their soule melteth away in the trouble.

They rele to & fro, they slacker like a dronke man: and are at their wittes ende.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the storme to cease: so that the waues are styll.

Then are they glad bicause they be at reste: and so he bringeth them vnto the haue where they wolde be.

O that men wold prayse the goodnesse of ꝑ Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the D chyldren of men.

That they wold exalte him in the congregacion of the people: and loue him in the seat of the elders.

Whiche turneth the floudes in to dry land, and dryeth vp the water sprynges.

A frutefull land maketh he barayn, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

Agayne, he maketh the wyldernesse a standynge water: and water sprynges of a dry grounde.

There he setteth the hongry, that they may buylde them a city to dwell in.

That they may sow their ground, plãt vineyardes to yelde them frutes of increase.

He blesseth them, so that they multyplye excedyngly, and suffereth not theyr cattell to decrease.

When they are minished and brought low thorowe oppression: thorowe anye plage or trouble.

Though he suffre them to be euil entreated thorow tyrauntes, or let them wandre out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore oute of misery (at the last) and maketh him an housholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The righteous wil consydre this & reioyce, the mouth of all wickednesse shal be stopped.

Who so is wise, and pondreth these thynges wel, shal vnderstande the louing kyndnesse of the Lorde.

A songe of a Psalme of Dauid.

O God, my herte is redy to synge, and to gyue prayse.

Awake, o my glorye, awake lute and harpe, I my selfe wil awake right early.

I wil gyue thankes vnto the, o Lord, among the people, I wyll synge prayses vnto the amonge the Heithen.

For the greatnesse of thy mercy is higher then the heuens, and thy faithfulnesse reacheth vnto the cloudes.

Set vp thy selfe, o God, aboue the heuens: and thy glory aboue all the erth.

That

That thy beloued maye be delyuered: helpe me with thy righthande and heare me.

God hath spoken in his sanctuary, whiche thinge reioyseth me.

I will diuide Sichem, & meate out the valley of Succoth.

Galaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strength of my head, Juda is my capitayne.

Moab is my washpot, ouer Edom will I stretche out my shue, Philistea shal be glad of me.

Who shall leade me into the stronge cytie? Who shall bringe me into Edom?

Shalt not thou do it (O God) whiche hast cast vs out: thou God, that wentest not forth with our hostes?

O be thou our helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man.

Through God we shall do great actes, for it is he that shall treade downe oure ennemyes.

PSAL. CVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

HOlde not thy tongue, O God of my prayse.

For the mouth of the vngodly, ye and the mouthe of the disceytfull is opened vpon me, and speake againste me with falce tongues.

They compase me aboute with wordes of hatred, and fyghte agaynste me without a cause.

For the loue that I hadde vnto them, they take now my cõtrary part, but I gyue my self vnto prayer.

Thus they rewarde me euyll for good, and hatred for my good will.

Set an vngodly man to be ruler ouer him, & let Satan stande at his righthande.

When sentence is gyuen vpon him, let him be condemned, and let his prayer be turned in to synne.

Let his dayes be fewe, and his bysshoprike let an other take.

Let his childrẽ be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a wydowe.

Let his children be vagabounds, and beg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be destroyed.

Let the extorcioner consume all that he hathe, and let straungers spoyle his laboure.

Let there be no man to pitye, ner to haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destruction, and in the nexte generacyon, his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the sight of the Lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye.

Let them alwaye be before the Lorde, but as for the memorial of them selues, let it perysh from out of the earth.

And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse, and him that was vexed at the herte, to slaye hym.

His delyte was in curising, and therfore shal it happen vnto him: he loued not blessing, & that shall be farre from him. Ꝯ

He clothed him selfe with curisinge lyke as with a rayment: yea it wente into his bowelles lyke water, and lyke oyle into his bones.

Let it be vnto him as ꝑ cloke that he hath vpon him, and as the gyrdle that he is gyrded withall.

Let it thus happen frome the Lorde vnto myne enemyes, and to thole that speake cuyl againste my soule.

But deale thou with me, Oh Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O delyuer me, for I am helpelesse and poore, & my hert is wounded within me.

I goo hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, and am dryuen awaye as the grashoppers. D

My knees are weake throgh fastinge, my flesh is dryed vp for want of fatnesse.

I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vpon me and shake theyr heades.

Helpe me, O Lorde my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they may know, how that this is thy hande, and that thou hast done it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded, that ryse vp againste me, but let thy seruaunt reioyse.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed with their owne shame, as with a cloke.

Certes, I will gyue thankes vnto ꝑ Lord with my mouth, and prayse him amonge the multitude.

For he standeth at the righthande of the poore, to saue him frome suche as condemne his soule.

I Will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde with my hole herte: secretly amonge the faithfull, and in the congregacion.

The workes of the Lorde are great, sought out of all them that haue pleasure therin.

His worke is worthy to be praysed and had in honoure, and his righteousnesse endureth for euer.

The mercyfull and gracious Lorde hath so done his meruelous workes, that they ought to be had in remembraunce.

He gyueth meate vnto theym, that feare him, he is euer mynדfull of his couenaunt.

B He sheweth his people ȳ power of his workes, that he maye gyue theym the heritage of the heythen.

The workes of his handes are verite and iudgemente, all his commaundementes are true.

BLessed are those that be vndefyled in the waye: whiche walke in the lawe of the Lorde.

Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke him with their hole herte.

Which walke in his wayes, and do no wickednelle.

Thou hast gyuen strayt charge to kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were stablysshed to kepe thy statutes.

So shoulde I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes.

I wyll thanke the with an vnfayned herte, because I am lerned in the iudgemētes of thy righteousnelle.

I will kepe thy statutes, O forsake me not vtterly.

BETH.

Where withall shall a yonge man amende his waye? Euen by rulyng him self after thy worde.

With my hole herte do I seke the, O let me not go wronge oute of thy commaundementes.

Thy wordes haue I hyd within my herte, that I shulde not synne against the.

Praysed be thou, O Lord, O teache me thy statutes.

With my lyppes will I be tellynge out all the iudgementes of thy mouth.

I haue as great delyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches.

I will exercyse my selfe in thy commaundementes, and haue respecte vnto thy fotepathes.

My delyte shalbe in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

GIMEL.

O do well vnto thy seruaunt, that I maye lyue and kepe thy wordes.

Open thou myne eyes, and so shall I lyue out wonderous thinges in thy lawe.

I am a straunger vpon earthe, O hyde not thy commaundementes frome me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desire that I haue allwaye vnto thy iudgementes.

Thou rebukest the proude, cursed are they that departe frome thy commaundementes.

O turne frome me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

Princes also sit and speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupyed in thy statutes.

In thy testimonies is my delyte, they are my counselers.

DALETH.

My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quycken thou me accordinge to thy worde.

I knowleged my wayes, and thou herdest me, O teache me then thy statutes.

Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heuynelle, Oh set me vp accordynge vnto thy worde.

Take frome me the waye of lyenge, and graunte me thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, thy iudgementes haue I layde before me.

I stycke vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not.

I will runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou haste comforted my hert.

HE.

Teache me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende.

O gyue me vnderstanding, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yea I shall kepe it with myne hole hert.

Leade me in the path of thy commaundementes, for that is my delyre.

Enclyne myne herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnes.

Oh tourne awaye myne eyes, least they beholde vanytye, and quycken me in thy waye.

O stablysh thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I maye feare the.

Take awaye the rebuke that I am afrayd of, for thy iudgementes are amiable.

Beholde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes, Oh quycken me in thy righteousnelle.

VAV.

Let thy louynge mercy come vnto me, Oh Lorde, and thy sauynge health accordyng vn to thy worde.

That I maye gyue answere vnto my blasphemers, for my trust is in thy worde.

O take not the word of truthe vtterly out of my mouthe, for my hope is in thy iudgementes.

So shall I alwaye kepe thy lawe, yea for euer and euer.

And I will walke at lybertie, for I seke thy commaundementes.

I will speake of thy testimonyes euē before kynges, and will not be ashamed.

My delyte shalbe in thy commaundemētes which I loue.

My handes also will I lyft vp vnto thy cō maundmentes which I loue, and my talking shalbe of thy statutes.

TEH.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt frendely with thy seruaunt, accordinge vnto thy worde.

O learne me thy kyndnesse, nourture and knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wronge, but now I kepe thy worde.

Thou art good & frendly, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude ymagen lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes with my hole herte.

Their hert is as fat as brawne, but my delyte is in thy lawe.

It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I may lerne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me then thousandes of golde and syluer.

IOD.

Thy handes haue made me and fashyoned me, O gyue me vnderstandinge, that I maye learne thy commaundmentes.

They that feare the, wyll be gladde when they se me, because I put my truste in thy worde.

I know, O Lorde, that thy iugementes are right, and that thou of very faithfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercyfull kyndnesse be my comfort, accordinge to the promes that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunt.

O let thy louynge mercyes come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte.

Let the proude be confounded, which handle me so falsly.

But let suche as feare the, and knowe thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.

O let myne herte be vndefyled in thy statutes that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

My soule longeth for thy sauinge helth, for my trust is in thy worde.

Myne eyes longe sore for thy worde, sayenge: O when wilt thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a botel in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? When wilt thou be auenged of myne aduersaries?

The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whi che are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundmētes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundmentes.

O quycken me after thy louynge kyndnesse, and so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

LAMED.

Oh Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truth also remayneth frome one generacion to an other: thou hast layd the foundacion of the earth, and it abydeth.

They continue this day according to thyne ordiordinaunce, for all thinges serue the.

Yf my delyte were not in thy lawe, I should perysh in my trouble.

I will neuer forget thy commaundementes for with them thou quickenest me.

I am thyne, Oh helpe me, for I seke thy commaundementes.

The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroye me, but I consyder thy testimonies.

I se that all thinges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceadinge broade.

MEM.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe? all the daye longe is my talkinge of it.

Thou thorowe thy commaundement hast made me wyser then myne ennemies, for it is euer by me.

I haue more vnderstandinge then all my teachers, for thy testymonies are my study.

Yea I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

I refrayne my fete frome euery cuyll waye, that I maye kepe thy wordes.

I wyncke not frome thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.

Oh howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte?

Yea more then hony vnto my mouth.

Thorow thy commaundementes I get vnderstandyng, therfore I hate all false wayes.

NVN.

Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.

I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse.

I am troubled aboue measure, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.

Let the free wyll offerynges of my mouthe please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.

My soule is alway in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe.

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me, but yet swarue not I frome thy commaundementes.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of my herte.

I applye myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

SAMECH.

I hate the vngodlye, but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou art my defence and shylde, my truste is in thy worde.

Awaye frome me ye wycked, I will kepe the commaundementes of my God.

O stablysh me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disappointed of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea I shall euer be talkinge of thy statutes.

Thou treadest downe all them that depart frome thy statutes, for they imagen but deceyte.

Thou puttest awaye al the vngodly of the earth lyke drosse, therfore I loue thy testimonies.

My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.

AIN.

I deale with the thinge that is lawful and ryght, O gyue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.

Be thou suertye for thy seruaunt to do him good, that the proude do me no wronge.

Myne eyes are wayted away with loking for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunt accordinge vnto thy louynge mercye, and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunte, O graunte me vnderstandinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the (Oh Lorde) to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.

For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone.

Therfore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes, and all false wayes I vtterlye abhorre.

PHE.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them.

When thy worde goeth forthe, it gyueth lyght and vnderstandinge, euen vnto babes.

I open my mouthe and drawe in my breth, for I desire thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyfull, as thou vsest to doo vnto those that loue thy name.

Ordre my goynges after thy word that no wyckednesse raygne in me.

O delyuer me frome the wrongeous dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes.

Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt, and lerne me thy statutes.

Myne eyes gussh out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

ZADE.

Ryghteous arte thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement.

The testymonies that thou hast commanded are exceadinge, righteous and true.

My zele hathe euen consumed me, because myne ennemyes haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, and thy seruaunt loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet doo not not I forget thy commaundementes.

Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righteousnesse, and thy lawe is true.
Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyte in thy commaundementes.
The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, O graunte me vnderstandinge, & I shall lyue.

KOPH.

I call with my hole hert, heare me, O Lorde I will kepe thy statutes.
Yea euen vpon the to I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies.
Early in the morninge to I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust.
Myne eyes preuente the nyght watches, ꝑ I myght be occupyed in thy wordes.
Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse, quicken me accordinge as thou art wont.
They drawe nygh that of malice persecute me, and are farre frome thy lawe.
Be thou nyghe at hande also, O Lorde, for thy commyses are faithfull.
As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euer sens the begynnyng, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

RES.

O consydre myne aduersite, and delyuer me for I do not forget thy lawe.
Mayntayne thou my cause and defende me quycken me accordinge vnto thy worde.
Healthe is farre frome the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes.
Great is thy mercy, O Lorde, quycken me as thou art wont.
Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue frome thy testimonies.
It greueth me, when I se, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.
Consydre, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaundementes, O quycken me with thy louynge kyndnesse.
Thy worde is true frome euerlastynge, all the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse endure for euermore.

SIN.

The princes persecute me without cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.
I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth great spoyles.
As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue.
Seuen tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.
Great is ꝑ peax that they haue which loue thy lawe, and they are not offended at it.
Lorde, I loke for thy sauynge healthe, and do after thy commaundementes.
My soule kepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceedyngly.
I kepe thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the.

THAV.

Let my complaynte come before the, O Lorde, gyue me vnderstandinge, accordinge vnto thy worde. Y O let my supplicacion come before the, delyuer me accordinge to thy promes.
My lyppes shall speake of thy prayse, seing thou hast taught me thy statutes.
Yea my tongue shal synge of thy worde, for all thy commaundementes are ryght.
Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.
I longe for thy sauynge healthe, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delyte.
Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgementes maye helpe me.
I go astraye, lyke a shepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

PSAL. CXLI.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my prayer, O Lorde, consydre my desire: answere me for thy truthe and righteousnesse sake.

And entre not into iudgement with thy seruaunt, for in thy sight shall no man lyuynge be iustified.

For the ennemye persecuteth my soule, he smyteth my lyfe downe to the grounde, he layeth me in the darknesse, as the deed men of ỹ worlde.

Therfore is my spirite vexed within me, and my hert within me is desolate.

Yet do I remembre the tymes past, I muse vpon all thy workes, yea I exercyse my selfe in the workes of thy handes.

B I stretche forth myne handes vnto the, my soule coueteth vnto the out of the thirsty lande. Selah.

Heare me, O Lorde, and that sone, for my spyrite waxeth faynte: hyde not thy face fro me, least I be lyke vnto them that go down into into the graue.

O let me heare thy louyng kyndnesse by tymes in the mornyng, for in ꝓ is my trust: shewe thou me the waye that I shulde walke in, for I lyft vp my soule vnto the.

Deliuer me, o Lord fro myne ennemies, for I flye vnto the.

Teache me to do the thynge that pleaseth the, for thou art my God: let thy louyng spirite leade me forth vnto the lande of rightousnesse.

Quicken me, o Lorde for thy names sake, & for thy rightousnesse sake bringe my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse scatter myne ennemies abrode, & destroye all them that vexe my soule, for I am thy seruaunt.

PSAL. CXLII.

¶ Of Dauid.

BLessed be the Lorde my refuge: whiche teacheth my handes to warre, and my fyngers to fight.

My hope and my castell, my defence and my deliuerer, my shylde in whome I trust: whiche gouerneth the people that is vnder me.

Lorde what is man, that thou hast suche respect vnto him? or the son of man, that thou so regardest him?

Man is like a thing of naught, his time passeth awaye lyke a shadow.

Bowe thy heuens, o Lorde, & come downe touche the mountaynes, that they may smoke with all.

Sende forthe the lyghtenynge and scatter them: shoute oute thine arowes and consume them.

Sende downe thyne hande frome aboue, deliuer me and take me oute of the greate waters: frome the hande of straunge chyldren.

Whose mouth talketh of vanitie, and theyr right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That I may synge a newe song vnto the, o God, and synge prayses vnto the, vpon a ten stringed lute.

Thou that gyuest victory vnto kynges, and hast deliuered Dauid thy seruaunt from the peryll of the swerde.

Saue me and deliuer me from the hande of straunge chyldren, whose mouthe talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the younge plantes: and that oure doughters maye be as the polyshed cozners of the temple.

That our garners may be ful and plentious with all maner of store: that our shepe maye bringe forth thousandes, and hundreth thousandes in our villages.

That our oxen maye be stronge to laboure, that there may be no mischaunce, no decay, & no complaynting in our streetes.

Happy are the people that be in such a case: yea blessed are the people whiche haue ꝓ Lord for their God.

¶ A prayse of Dauid.

I Wyll magnifie the, o God my kyng, I will prayse thy name for euer and euer.

Euerye daye wyll I gyue thankes vnto the: and prayse thy name for euer and euer. A Great is the Lorde, and marueylous worthy to be praysed, there is no ende of his greatnesse.

One generacion shal prayse thy workes vnto an other, and declare thy power.

As for me I wyll be talkynge of thy worshyp, thy glorye, thy prayse, and wonderous workes.

So that men shall speake of the myghte of thy marueylous actes: and tell of thy greatnesse. B

The memoriall of thyne aboundaunt kyndnesse shall be shewed, and men shal sing of thy rightousnesse.

The Lorde is gracious and mercyfull, long suffering, and of great goodnesse.

The Lorde is louyng vnto euery man, & his mercy is ouer all his workes.

All thy workes prayse the, o Lorde, and thy saynctes gyue thankes vnto the.

They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome, and talke of thy power. C

That thy power, thy glorye and myghtynesse, of thy kyngdome, might be knowen vnto men.

Thy kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome: and thy dominion endureth thorowe out all ages.

The Lorde vpholdeth all suche as shoulde fall: and lyfteth vp all those that be downe.

The eyes of all wayte vpon the: and thou gyuest them their meate in due season.

Thou openest thyne hande, & fyllest al thinges liuing with plenteousnesse. D

The Lorde is righteous in all his wayes: & holy in all his workes.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that call vpon hym: yea all suche as call vpon hym faythfully.

He fulfylleth the desyre of them that feare hym: he heareth their crye, and helpeth them.

The Lord preserueth al them that loue him, but scattereth abrode all the vngodly.

My mouthe shall speake the prayse of the Lorde: and let all flesche gyue thankes vnto his holy name for euer and euer. Prayse the euerlasting.

Psalm.cxiii.a

PRayse the Lorde, O my soule: whyle I lyue will I prayse the Lorde: yea as long as I haue any being, I wil syng prayses vnto my God.

Psal.cxviii.a

✱O put not youre truste in Prynces, nor in anye chylde of man, for there is no helpe in them.

For when the breth of man goeth forth, he shall turne agayne to his erth, and so all his thoughtes perysshe.

Act.xiiii.c.and Apoca.xiiii.b.

Blessed is he that hathe the God of Jacob for his help: ✱and whose hope is in the Lord his God.

Whiche made heauen and earthe, the see, and all that therin is, whiche kepeth his promyse for euer.

Whiche helpeth them to ryghte that suffre wronge, whiche fedeth the hongrye. B

The Lord loseth me out of prison, the Lord gyueth sight to the blynde.

The Lorde helpeth them vp that are fallen: the Lorde loueth the ryghteous.

The Lorde careth for the straungers, he defendeth the fatherlesse and widowe: as for the waye of the vngodly, he turneth it vp syde downe.

The Lorde thy God, o Sion, is kyng for euermore, and throw out all generations.

¶ Prayse the euerlastynge.

A OPrayse the Lorde, for it is a good thing to synge prayses vnto oure God: yea, a ioyfull and pleasaunt thyng it is to be thankfull.

The Lorde shall buylde vp Jerusalem, and gather togither the outcastes of Jsrael.

He healeth the contrite in hert, and bindeth vp their woundes.

He telleth the nombre of the sterres, & calleth them all by their names.

Great is our Lord, and great is his power: yea his wysdome is infinite.

The Lord setteth vp the meke, and bringeth the vngodly downe to the grounde. B

O synge vnto the Lorde with thankesgyuyng: synge prayses vpon the harpe vnto our God.

Whiche coureth the heauen with cloudes, prepareth rayne for the earthe: and maketh the grasse to growe vpon the mountaynes.

Job.xxxix.a

Which gyueth foddre vnto the catell, ✱and fedeth the yonge rauens that call vpon him.

He hathe no pleasure in the strengthe of an horse, neyther delyteth he in any mannes legges.

But the Lordes delite is in them that fear him, and put their trust in his mercy.

Prayse the Lorde, o Jerusalem, prayse thy God, o Sion.

For he maketh fast the barres of the gates, & blesseth the children within the.

He maketh peax in the borders, and filleth ỹ with the floure of whete.

He sendeth forth his cõmaundement vpon earth, his worde runneth swyftly.

He gyueth snow like woll, and scattereth the hore frost like asshes.

He casteth forth his yse lyke morsels: who is able to abyde his frost?

He sendeth out his worde and melteth the: he bloweth with his wynde, and the waters flowe.

He sheweth his worde vnto Jacob, his statutes and ordinaunces vnto Jsrael.

He hath not dealte so with all the Heithen: neither haue they knowlege of his lawes.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CXLVI.

After hymnes.

¶ Prayse the euerlastinge.

OPrayse the Lorde of heuen: prayse him in the heygth. A Prayse him all ye aũgels of his, prayse him all his hoste.

Prayse him sunne and moone: prayse hym all ye sterres and light.

Prayse him all ye heuens, & ye waters that be vnder the heuens. Dn

Let them prayse the name of the Lorde, for he commaunded, and they were made.

He hath made them fast for euer and euer: he hath gyuen them a lawe whiche shall not be broken.

Prayse the Lorde vpon erth, ye whales & fyshes, and all depes.

Fyre and hayle, snowe and vapors, wynde & storme, fulfyllynge his worde. B

Mountaynes and all hylles, frutefull trees and all Cedres.

Beestes and catell: wormes and fethered foules.

Kynges of the erth and all people, princes and iudges of the erth.

Yonge men and maydens, olde men & children: let them prayse the name of the Lord, for his name onely is excellent, & his prayse aboue heuen and erth.

He exalteth the horne of his people: all his sayntes shall prayse him, the children of Jsrael, euen the people that serueth him.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CXLVII.

After hymnes.

¶ Prayse the euerlastinge.

OSynge vnto the Lorde a newe songe: let the congregacyon of sayntes prayse hym. g

Let Jsrael reioyse in him that made hym: and let the children of Sion be ioyfull in their kynge.

Let them prayse his name in their daũce, let them synge prayses vnto him with tabrettes and harpes.

For the Lorde hath pleasure in his people: and helpeth the meke herted.

Let the prayses of God be in their mouth, & sharpe swerdes in their handes.
To be auenged of the heithen, & to rebuke the people.
To bynde their kinges in cheynes, and their nobles with lynckes of yron.
That they may be auenged of them, as it is wrytten, suche honour haue all his sayntes.
Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CXLVIII.

¶ Prayse the euerlastynge.

1 O prayse the Lorde in his sanctuarye: prayse him in the fyrmament of his power.
Prayse him in his noble actes, prayse him in his excellent greatnesse.
Prayse him in the sounde of the Trompet: prayse him vpon the Lute and Harpe.
Prayse hym in the Cymbales, and daunse: prayse hym vpon the strynges and Pype.
Prayse hym vpon the well tuned Cymbales: prayse hym vpon the loude Cymbales.
Let euery thynge that hathe breathe, prayse the Lorde.
Prayse the euerlastynge.

¶ The ende of the Psalter.

THE PROVERBES OF SALOMON.

CAPI. I.

A THe Prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel: to lerne wysdome, instruction, vnderstanding, prudence, ryghtousnesse, iudgement and equitie.

That the very babes might haue wit, & that yonge men myght haue knowlege and vnderstandynge.

By hearynge, the wyse man shall come by more wysdome: and by experience he shall be more apte to vnderstande a parable, and the interpretacyon therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speaches of the same.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: but fooles despyse wysdom and instruction.

My sonne heare thy fathers doctrine, & forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shal bringe grace vnto thy heed, & shall be a cheyne about thy necke.

Psalme .cx. d
Ecclesiast. i. b

B My sonne, consent not vnto synners, if they entyse the, and saye: come with vs, lette vs laye wayte for bloude, and lucke pryuely for the innocent without a cause: lette vs swalowe them vp lyke the helle, let vs deuoure them quycke and hole, as those that go downe in to the pyt.

So shal we fynd all maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses with spoyles.

C Caste in thy lot amonge vs: we shall haue all one purse.

My son, walke thou not with them, refrayn thy fote from their wayes.

For their fete runne to euyll, and are hasty to shed bloude.

Esaye. lix. b

But in vayne is the net layde for the before the byrdes eyes.

D Yea they theym selues laye wayte one for an others bloude: and one of them wold slee an other.

These are the wayes of all suche as be couetous: that one wolde rauysshe an others lyfe.

Wysdome.

Wysdom crieth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes.

She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorowe the city, sayinge:

O ye chyldren, how longe wyl ye loue chyldysshnesse? How longe wyll the scorners delite in scornynge, and the vnwyse be ennemyes vnto knowlege?

O turne you vnto my correction: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes.

Esaye. lxv. c. e
Jeremy. vii. c

* Seynge then that I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched oute my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my counselles haue ye despysed, and set my corrections at nought.

Therfore shall I also laughe in your destruction, and mocke you, when the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be a frayde of, falleth on you depnyly lyke a storme, and youre misery lyke a tempest: yea when trouble and heynesse commeth vpon you. E

Then shal they call vpon me, but I wil not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me.

And that bycause they hated knowlege: and receyued not the feare of the Lorde, but abhorred my counsell, and despysed my correction.

Therfore shal they eate of the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with theyr owne counsels.

For the turning away of the vnwise shal slee them: and the prosperite of fooles shal be their owne destruction.

But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and haue ynoughe without anye feare of euill.

CAPI. II.

MY sonne, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes, and kepe my commaundements by the: that thyne eare maye harken vnto wysdome, applye thyne herte vnto vnderstandynge. F

For yf thou crepest after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowlege of God.

For it is the Lord that gyueth wysdom, out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstandynge.

He preserueth the welfare of the ryghtous, and defendeth them that walke innocently: he kepeth them in the right path, and preserueth the waye of his sayntes. G

Then shalt thou vnderstande ryghtousnesse, iudgement and equitie, yea and euerye good pathe.

Yf wysdome entre in to thyne herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstandynge shall kepe the.

That thou mayst be deliuered from the euil waye, and frome the man that speaketh frawarde thynges.

Frome suche as leaue the hye strete, and walke in the wayes of darcknesse: which reioyse in wyng euill, and delyte in wicked thynges: whose wayes are croked, & their pathes slaunderous. H

That thou mayst be deliuered also from the straunge woman, & from her that is not thyne owne: which gyueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God.

For her house is enclyned vnto deth, & her pathes vnto hell.

All they that goo in vnto her, come not agayne, neither take they holde of the waye of lyfe.

That thou mayste walke in the good waye: and kepe the pathes of the ryghtous.

For the iuste shall dwelle in the lande, and the innocentes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted oute of the lande, and the wycked doers shall be taken oute of it.

CAPI. III.

MY sonne, forget not my lawe: but se that thyne hert kepe my commaundementes.

For they shal prolonge the dayes and yeres of thy lyfe, and bring the pear.

Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, and wrype them in the tables of thyne herte.

So shalte thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstandynge in the syghte of God and men.

Put thy truste in the Lorde with all thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandynge.

In al thy wayes haue respect vnto him, and he shall ordre thy goinges.

Be not wyse in thyne owne conceyte, but feare the Lorde, and departe frome euyll: so shall thy nauell be hole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the Lorde with thy substaunce, and with the fyrstlinges of all thyne encrease: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plentcousnesse, and thy pressis shall flowe ouer with swete wyne.

My sonne despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neither faynt when thou art rebuked of him.

For whom the Lorde loueth, him he chastneth: and yet delyteth in him euen as a father in his owne sonne.

Well is hym that fyndeth wysdome, and optayneth vnderstandynge, for the gettynge of it, is better then anye marchaundise of syluer, and the profyte of it is better then golde.

Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and al thynges that thou canst desyre are not to be compared vnto her.

Upon her ryghte hande is longe lyfe: and vpon her lefte hande is rychesse and honoure.

Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable.

She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hathe the Lorde layde the foundacyon of the earthe: and therowe vnderstandynge he hathe establyshed the heuens.

Therowe his wysdome, the deapthes breake vp: and the cloudes dropp downe of the dewe.

My sonne, let not these thinges depart frome thyne eyes, but kepe my lawe and my counsell: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouth.

Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye, and thy fote shall not stomble.

Yf thou slepest, thou shalte not be afrayde, but shalt take thy rest, and slepe swetely.

Thou nedest not to be afrayde of anye sodayne feare: neyther for the violente ruysshynge in of the vngodlye, when it commeth.

For the Lorde shal besiege the, and kepe thy fote that thou be not taken.

Refuse not to do good vnto him that shold haue it: so longe as thyne hande is hable to wo it.

Saye not vnto thy neyghboure: goo thy waye, and come agayne, to morowe wyll I gyue the: where as thou haste nowe to gyue him.

Intende no hurt vnto thy neyghbour, seing he hopeth to dwell in rest by the.

Striue not lightly with any man, where as he hath done the no harme.

Folowe not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde, but his secrete is amonge the ryghtous.

The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the ryghtous.

As for the scornefull, he shall laughe them to scorne: but he shall gyue grace vnto the lowly.

The wyse shall haue honour in possession: but shame is the promotion that fooles shall haue.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare, o ye chyldren the fatherly exhortacion: and take good hede that ye may learne wysdome.

Yea I shall gyue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe.

For when I my selfe was my fathers dere sonne: and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge:

Lette thyne herte receyue my wordes: kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalte lyue.

Get the wysdome, get the vnderstandynge forget not the wordes of my mouth, & shrynke not from them.

Forsake not her, and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the.

The chefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to obteyne wysdome, and before all thy goodes, to get the vnderstandynge.

Make moche of her, & she shal promote the: yea yf thou imbrace her, she shal bringe the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracyous heed: & garnisshe the nyshe the with a crowne of glorye.

Heare my sonne, and receyue my wordes: that the yeres of thy lyfe maye be manye.

I will shewe the, the waye of wysdome, and lede the in the ryght pathes.

So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytnesse hynder the: and whē thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.

Take fast holde of doctryne, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe.

Come not in the pathe of the vngodly, and L walke not in the waye of the wicked.

Eschewe it, and go not therin: depart aside, and passe ouer by it.

For they can not slepe, excepte they haue fyrst wone some mischefe: neither take they anye reste, excepte they haue fyrste done some harme.

For they eate the breed of wickednesse, and drynke the wyne of robbery.

The pathe of the rightous shyneth as the light, and is euer brighter and bryghter vnto the perfect daye.

But the waye of the vngodlye is as the D darcknesse, wherin men fall or they be aware.

My sonne, marke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges.

Let them not departe frome thyne eyes: kepe theym euen in the myddest of thyne herte.

For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them: and helthe vnto all theyr bodyes.

Kepe thyne hert with al diligence: for therupon hangeth lyfe.

Put awaye frome the a frowarde mouther and let the lyppes of sclaunder be farre frome the.

Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is eyght: and let thyne eye lyddes loke streyght before the.

Ponder the path of thy fete: so shal all thy wayes be sure.

Turne not a syde, neyther to the ryghte hande, ne to the lefte, but withholde thy fote frome euyll.

CAPI. V.

MY sonne, gyue hede vnto my wysdom, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy lyppes may kepe nourtoure.

For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge honye combe, and her throte is softer then oyle.

Hor: dome.

But at the laste, she is as bytter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde.

Her fete go downe vnto deth, and her steppes pearse thorowe vnto hell.

She regardeth not the pathe of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou canste not B knowe them.

Heare me therfore (o my sonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.

Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dores of her house.

That thou gyue not thyne honour vnto an other, and thy yeres to the cruell.

That other men be not fylled with thy goodes: and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house.

Yea that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and goodes) and then saye:

Alas, why hated I nourtoure? why did my herte despyse correction?

Wherfore was not I obedient vnto ỹ voice
L of my teachers: and harkened not vnto them that informed me?

I am come almoost in to all myschefe: in the myddest of the multitude and congregacion.

Drynke of the water of thyne owne well: Wyne and of the ryuers that run out of thyne owne spryngs.

Let thy welles flowe out abrode, that there maye be ryuers of waters in the stretes: but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the.

Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with ỹ the wyfe of thy youth.

Louynge is the hynde, and frendly is
D the Roo: lette her brestes alwaye satysfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue.

My sonne, why wylte thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and imbrace the bosome of another woman?

* For euery mannes wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth all theyr goynges.

The wyckednesses of ỹ vngodly shal catche him self, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped.

Bycause he wolde not be reformed he shall dye: and for his greate folyshnesse he shall be destroyed.

CAPI. VI.

MY sonne, yf thou be surety for thy neighboure, thou hast fastened thyne hande with an other man: yea thou art bound with thyne owne wordes: & taken with thyne owne speche.

Therfore, my sonne, do this: discharge thy selfe, for thou arte come in to thy neyghbours daunger.

Goo thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neyghbour: let not thyne eyes slepe, ne thyne eye lyddes slomber.

Haue thy selfe as a Doo from the hande, and as a byrde frome the hande of the fouler.

Go to the Pysmere (thou sluggarde) consyder her wayes, and lerne to be wyse.

She hathe no gyde, no teacher, no leader: yet in the Sommer she prouydeth her meate meat, and gathereth her fode togyther in the B harueſt.

* Howe longe wylte thou ſlepe thou ſluggyſhe man?
When wylte thou aryſe oute of thy ſlepe?
Yea ſlepe on tyl a litle ſlombre a lytle, fold thyne handes togyther yet a lytle, that thou mayſt ſlepe.
So ſhal pouerte come vnto the, as one that trauayleth by the waye, and neceſſitie lyke a weaponed man.
A diſſemblynge perſon, a wycked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fyngers, he is euer ymagenynge miſchiefe and frowardneſſe in his herte, and cauſeth diſcorde.
Therfore ſhall his diſtruction come haſtely vpon him: ſodeynly ſhall he be all to broken, and not be healed.
There be ſixe thynges whiche the Lorde
F hateth: and the ſeuenth he vtterly abhorreth.
A proude loke, a diſſemblynge tonge, han-des that ſhede innocent bloude, an herte that goeth aboute with wycked ymagynacions, fete that be ſwyfte in rennynge to wo myſ-chiefe, a falſe wytneſſe that bringeth vp lyes, and ſuche one as ſoweth diſcorde amonge brethren.
G My ſonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forſake not the lawe of thy mother.
Put them vp togyther in thyne herte: and bynde them aboute thy necke.
That they maye leade the where thou goeſt, preſerue the when thou art a ſlepe, and that when thou awakeſt, thou mayſte talke of them.
For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea chaſtenynge and noue-thure is the waye of lyfe, that they maye kepe the from the euil woman, and from the flattering tong of the harlot: that thou luſt not after her beautye in thyne herte, and leſt thou be taken with her fayre lokes.
H An harlot wyll make a man to begge his breed: but a maryed woman wyll hunte for the precious lyfe.
Maye a man take fyre in his boſome, & his clothes not be brent?
Or can one go vpon hote coles, and his fete
D not be hurte?
Euen ſo, who ſo euer goeth in to his neygh-bours wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vngylty.
Men do not vtterly deſpyſe a theefe that ſtealeth to ſatiſfye his ſoule, when he is hungry: but yf he maye be gotten, he reſtoreth agayne ſeuen tymes as muche, or elles he maketh recompence with all the good of his houſe.
But who ſo committeth aduoutrye with a woman, he is a foole, and bringeth his lyfe to deſtruction.
He getteth him ſelfe alſo ſhame & diſhonour, ſuche as neuer ſhall be put out.

For the gelouſye and wrathe of the man wil not be intreated: no thoughe thou woldeſt offre him greate gyftes to make amendes, he wyll not receyue them.

CAPI. VII.

MY ſonne, kepe my wordes, and laye vp A my commaundementes by the.
Kepe my commaundementes, and my lawe euen as the apple of thyne eye: and thou ſhalt lyue.
Bynde them vpon thy fyngers: and wryte them in the table of thyne herte.
Saye vnto wyſdome, thou arte my ſyſter, and call vnderſtandynge thy kynſwoman:
* that ſhe maye kepe the frome the ſtraunge Pro.ii.b.v.a woman, and frome the harlot whiche gyueth ſwete wordes.
For oute of the wyndowe of my houſe I lo- B ked thorowe the trealeſſe, and behelde the ſymple people: and amonge other yonge folkes, I eſpyed one yonge foole gonge ouer the ſtretes: by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes houſe in the twylyght of the euenynge, when it began nowe to be nyghte and darcke.
And beholde, there met him a woman in an Gene.xxxviii harlots apparel (a diſceptful womã, wanton & The harlot.
vnbridled ſtaſt womã, whoſe fete could not abide in the houſe: now is ſhe without, now in the ſtretes, and lurketh in euery corner) ſhe caught the yonge man, kyſſed him, and was not aſha-med, ſaying: I had a vow to paye, & this daye
I performe it. C
Therfore came I forthe to mete the, that I myght ſeke thy face: and ſo I haue founde
the.
I haue decked my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egypt.
My bed haue I made to ſmell of Myrre, A-locs, and Cynamon.
Come let vs lye togyther, and take our plea
ſure tyll it be daye lyght.
For the goodmã is not at home: he is gone farre of.
He hathe taken the bagge of money with hym: who can tell when he commeth home?
Thus with many ſwete wordes ſhe ouer- D came him: and with her flatterynge lyppes ſhe wan him.
Immediatly he folowed her, as it were an ore ledde to the ſlaughter (and lyke as it were to the ſtockes where fooles are punyſhed) ſo long tyll ſhe had wounded his lyuer with her darte: lyke as yf a byrde haſted to the ſnare, not knowynge that the peryl of his lyfe lyeth therupon.
Heare me now therfore, o my ſonne, & marke
the wordes of my mouth.
Let not thyne herte wander in her wayes, & be not thou diſceiued in her pathes. E
For many one hathe ſhe wounded and caſte downe: yea manye a ſtronge man hathe ſhe ſlayne.

Her houses is the way vnto hell, where men go downe in to the chambres of death.

CAPI. VIII.

a DOthe not wysdome crye? dothe not vnderstandynge put forth her voyce?

Standeth she not in the hye places in the stretes and wayes? dothe she not crye before the whole cite, and in the gates where men go out and in?

It is you, o ye men (sayth she) whome I call.

Unto you (o ye children of men) lyfte I vp my voyce.

b Take hede vnto knowlege, o ye ignorannt: be wyse in herte, o ye fooles.

Gyue eare, for I wyll speake of great mateers. and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght.

For my throte shal be talking of the truthe, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse.

All the wordes of my mouthe are ryghtous: there is no frowardnesse nor falsehed therin.

They are all playne to suche as wyll vnderstand: and right to them that fynd knowlege.

Receyue my doctryne therfore, and not syluer: and my knowlege, more then fyne golde.

For wysdome is more worth then precyous stones: yea all the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto it.

c I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowlege: and prudente counsell is myne owne.

With me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschewynge of cuyll.

As for pryde, disdayne, and cuyl waye, and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them.

I can gyue counsell and be a gyde: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength.

Thorow me, kynges reygne: thorowe me, prynces make iust lawes.

Thorow me, lordes beare rule: and al iudges of the erth execute iudgement.

I am louing vnto those that loue me: and they that seke me early, shall fynde me.

Ryches and honour are with me: yea excellent goodes and ryghtousnesse.

My frute is better then golde and precyous stone: & myne encrease more worth then fyne syluer.

I walke in the waye of ryghtousnesse: and in the strete of iudgement.

That I maye sende prosperitie to those that loue me: and to encrease theyr treasure.

Sapiē.xv.b The Lorde him selfe had me in possession in the beeynning of his wayes, or euer he began his workes afore tyme.

I haue ben ordeyned from euerlasting: and from the begynnynge or euer the earthe was made.

When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor sprynges of water.

Before the foundacyons of the mountaynes were layde, yea before all hylles, was I borne.

d The earthe, and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made: no not the grounde it selfe.

For when he made the heuens, I was present, when he set vp the depthes in order: whe he hanged the cloudes above, when he fastened the sprynges of the depe.

When he shut the see within certayne bondes, that the waters sholde not go ouer theyr markes.

When he layde the foundacyons of the earthe, I was with him, ordrynge all thynges: delytynge dayly, and retoysynge alwaye before hym.

As for the round compasse of his worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be among the children of men.

Therfore harken vnto me, o ye children, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes.

O gyue eare vnto nourtour, be wise, and refuse it not.

e Blessed is the man ꝑ heareth me, watching dayly at my gates: and gyuing attendaunce at the postes of my dores.

For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe: and shal obteyn fauour of the Lorde.

But who so offendeth agaynste me hurteth his owne soule.

All they that hate me, are the louers of deathe.

CAPI. IX.

f Wysdome hath buylded her self an house, and hewē oute seuen pyllers: she hathe killed her vitayles, poured out her wine and prepared her table.

She hath sent forthe her maydens to crye vpon the hyest place of the citye: who so is ignorannt, let him come hyther.

And to the vnwise she said: O come on your waye, eate my breed, & drynke my wyne which I haue poured out for you. g

Forsake ignorannce, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye goo in the waye of vnderstandynge.

Who so reproueth a scornefull person, getteth hym selfe dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodlye, stayneth hym selfe.

Reproue not a scorner, leest he owe the evil wyll: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wyll loue the.

Gyue a discrete man but an occasion, and he wyl be the wyser: teache a ryghtous man and he wil encrease.

h The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: and the knowlege of holy thynges is vnderstandynge.

For thorowe me thy dayes shall be prolonged: and the yeres of thy lyfe shall be manye.

Yf thou

yf thou be wyse, thy wysdome shall do thy self good: but if thou thinkest scorne therof, it shall be thyne owne harme.

A folysshe reckelesse woman, full of wordes, and suche one as hath no knowlege, sytteth in the doores of her house vpon a stoole, aboue in the cyty to cal suche as go by, & walke streyght in theyr wayes.

Who so is ignorant (sayth she) let him come hither, and to the vnwyse she sayth: stolen waters are swete, and the breed that is priuily eaten, hath a good taste.

But they consydre not that deth is there, and that her gestes go downe to hell.

CAPI. X.

¶ The parables of Salomon.

A Wyse son, maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is the heuynesse of his mother.

Treasures that are wickedlye gotten, profyte nothyng, but righteousnesse delyuereth from deth.

The Lorde wyl not let the soule of ỹ righteous suffre hongre: but he putteth the vngodly from his desire.

An ydle hande maketh poore: but a quycke labouring hand maketh ryche.

Who so gathereth in sommer, is wyse: but he that is sluggish in harnest bringeth him self to confusion.

Louynge and fauourable is the face of the ryghtous, but the forehead of the vngodlye is full shame and presumptuous.

The memorial of the iust, shal haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodlye shall stynche.

A wyse man wyll receyue warnynge: but a foole wyll sooner be smytten in the face.

He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrong waye, shall be knowen.

He that wincketh with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shal be beaten.

The mouth of a ryghtous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouthe of the vngodlye is full shame, and presumptuous.

Cuyl wil stereth vp stryfe, but loue coureth the multitude of synnes.

In the lyppes of hym that hathe vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome: but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the foolysshe.

Wyse men laye vp knowlege: but the mouthe of the foolysshe, is nyghe destruction.

The riche mans goodes, are his strong hold: but pouertie oppresseth the poore.

The ryghtous laboureth to doo good: but the vngodlye vseth his encrease vnto synne.

To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nourture, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed goeth wronge.

Dyssemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh any sclaunder, is a foole.

Where moche bablynge is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyppes, is wysest of all.

An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe.

The lyppes of the ryghtous fede a hole multytude: but fooles shal dye in their owne folye.

The blessynge of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothing therto.

A foole dothe wickedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayde of shall come vpon them: but the ryghtous shall haue their desire.

The vngodly is lyke a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more sene: but the righteous remayneth sure for euer.

As vynegre is to the tethe, and as smoke is vnto the eyes: euen so is a sluggysh person to them that sende him forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe: but the yeres of the vngodlye shall be shortened.

The patient abydinge of the righteous shall be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of ỹ vngodly shal perysshe.

The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly: but it is a feare for wycked doers.

The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen: but the vngodly shall not remayne in ỹ lande.

The mouthe of the iuste wyll be talkynge of wysdome: but the tonge of the frowarde shall perysshe.

The lyppes of the ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

CAPI. XI.

A False balaunce is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but a true weyght pleaseth him.

Where pryde is, there is shame also, and confusion: but where as lowlynesse is, there is wysdome.

The innocent dealynge of the iust shal leade them: but the vnfaythfulnesse of the despisers shall be their owne destruction.

Ryches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce: but ryghtousnesse delyuereth from deathe. Prouer. x. a Eccles. v. c

The eyghtousnesse of the innocent ordreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse.

The ryghtousnesse of the iust, shall delyuer them: but the delypsers shal be taken in their owne vngodlynesse.

Sapien. v. b * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of rychesse shall perysshe.

The ryghtous shall be delyuered oute of trouble: and the vngodlye shall come in his stede.

Thorowe the mouthe of the dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed: but thorowe knowlege, shall the iuste be delyuered.

When it goeth wel with the ryghtous, the city is mery: and when the vngodly perysshe, there is gladnesse.

When the iuste are in welthe, the citye prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth.

A foole bryngeth vp a sclaunder of his neyghboure: but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete.

A dissemblynge person wyl discouer priuye thinges: but he that is of a faythful hert, wil kepe counsel.

Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can gyue counsell, there is welth.

He that is suretye for a straunger, hurteth him selfe: but he that medleth not with suretyshyp is sure.

A gracyous woman mayntayneth honestye: as for the myghtye, they mayntayne rychesse.

He that hath a gentle lyberall stomacke: is mercyful: but who so hurteth his neyghbour is a tyraunt.

The labour of the vngodly prospereth not: but he that soweth ryghtousnesse, shal receyue a sure rewarde.

Lyke as righteousnesse bringeth life: euē so to cleue vnto euyll bryngeth deth.

The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte: but he hathe pleasure in theym that are vndefyled.

It shall not helpe the wycked, though they laye all theyr handes togyther: but the seed of the ryghtous shall be preserued.

A fayre woman withoute discrete maners: is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for pear and tranquillitie: but the vngodly for disquietnesse.

Some man gyueth out his goodes, and is the rycher: but the vngard (hauyng ynough) wil departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in pouertie.

He that is lyberall in gyuynge, shall haue plentye: and he that watereth, shall be wateted also him selfe.

Who so hoordeth vp his corne, shal be cursed among the people: but blessing shal lyght vpon his heed that selleth it.

He that laboureth for honestie, fyndeth his desire: but who so seketh after myschiefe, it shall happen vnto him.

He that trusteth in his rychesse, shall haue a fall: but the ryghtous, shal florysshe as the grene leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnesse in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage: and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse.

The frute of the ryghtous, is as the tree of lyfe: a wyse man also, wynneth mens soules.

* Yf the ryghtous be recompensed vpon earthe: howe moche more then the vngodlye and the synner? 1. Petri.

CAPI. XII.

Who so loueth wysdome, will be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole.

A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde: but the wicked wil be condemne.

A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the ryghtous shal not be moued. 1. Petri.

A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corruption to his bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghtous are ryght: but the ymagination of the vngodly, are disceptfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they may laye wayte for bloude: but the mouth of the ryghtous wyll delyuer them.

Or euer thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghtous shall stande.

A man shal be commended for his wisdome: but a foole shal be despised.

A symple man whiche laboureth and worketh: is better then one that is gorgious and wanteth breed. Ecclesi.

A ryghtous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell: but the vngodlye haue cruell hertes.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plentousnesse of breed: but he that followeth ydelnesse, is a very foole. Ecclesi.

The desire of the vngodly hunteth after mischiefe: but the rote of the ryghtous bryngeth forth frute.

The wicked falleth in to the snare, thorow the malyce of his owne mouth: but the iuste shall escape out of peryll.

Euerye man shall inioye good, accordynge to the innocencye of his mouthe, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hand, he thinketh it well done, but he that is wyse, wyll be counselled.

A foole vttereth his wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man forgyueth wronge.

A iust man wyll tell the truthe: and shewe the thynge that is ryght: but a false witnesse disceyueth.

A sclaunderous person prycketh lyke a swerde: but a wyse mans tong is wholsome.

A true mouth is euer constant: but a dissemblyng tonge is soone chaunged.

They

They that ymagen euil in theyr mynde, wil dyscepue: but the counsellours of peax shall haue ioye folowynge them.

There shall no myschefe happen vnto the iust: but the vngodly shall be fylled with mysery.

The Lorde abhorreth dyscepefull lyppes: but they that laboure for truthe, please hym.

He that hath vnderstandynge, can hyde his wysdome: but an vndiscrete herte telleth out his folyshnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the ydel shall be vnder tribute.

Heuynesse discourageth the herte of man: but a good worde maketh it gladde a-gayne.

The ryghtous is lyberall vnto his neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodly will dyscepue them selues.

A dyscepefull man shall fynde no vauntage: but he that is content with that he hathe, is more worth then golde.

In the waye of ryghtousnesse there is lyfe: as for anye other waye, it is the pathe vnto deathe.

CAPI. XIII.

A Wyse sonne wyll receyue his fathers warnynge, but he that is scornefull, wyl not beare when he is reproued.

A good man shall enioye the fruite of his mouthe: but he that hath a frowarde mynde shall be spoyled.

He that kepeth his mouthe, kepeth his lyfe: but who so speaketh vnaduysed, findeth harme.

The sluggarde wolde fayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligēt shall haue plentye.

A ryghtous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodlye shameth bothe other and hym selfe.

Ryghtousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothynge: agayne, some men are poore, hauynge great rychesse.

With goodes euerye man delyuereth his lyfe: and the poore wyll not be reproued.

The lyghte of the ryghtous maketh ioyfull: but the candle of the vngodlye shall be put out.

Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe: but among them that do all thinges with aduisement, there is wysdome.

Hastely gotten goodes are sone spent: but they that be gathered togyther with the hand shall increase.

Longe tarynge for a thynge that is differred, greeueth the herte: but when the desire commeth, it is a tree of lyfe.

Who so despyseth the worde, destroyeth hym selfe: but he that feareth the commaundemēt shall haue peax.

The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyse: that it maye kepe hym frome the snares of deathe.

Good vnderstandynge geueth fauour: but harde is the waye of the despisers.

A wyse man dothe all thynges with discrecyon: but a foole wyll declare his folye.

An vngodlye messaunger dyngeth myschyefe: but a faythfull ambassadour is holsome.

He that thynketh scorne to be reformed, commeth to pouertie and shame: but who so receyueth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desyre is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but fooles abhorre hym that eschueth euyll.

He that goeth in the company of wise men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companyon of fooles, shall be hurte.

Myschiefe followeth vpon synners, but the ryghtous shall haue a good rewarde.

Which theyr chylders children shall haue in possession: for the richesse of the synner is layd vp for the iust.

There is plentousnesse of foode in the feldes of the poore: and shall be encreased out of measure.

He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth him, holdeth him euer in nourtoure.

The ryghtous eateth, and is satisfyed: but the belye of the vngodlye hathe neuer ynough.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Wyse woman vpholdeth her house, but a foolysshe wyfe plucketh it downe. Iob.xii.a.

Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the ryght path: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde.

In the mouth of the foolysshe is the bosting of Lordshyp: but the lyppes of the wyse, wil beware of suche.

Where no oxen are, there the cryb is empty: but where the oxen laboure, there is moche fruite.

A faythfull witnesse will not dissemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye.

A scornefull body seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by, vnto hym that wyl vnderstande.

Se that thou medle not with a foole: and doo as thoughe thou haddest no knowlege.

The wisdome of him that hath vnderstanding, is, to take hede vnto his waye, but the folyshnesse of the vnwyse disceyueth.

Fooles make but a sporte of synne, but there is fauourable loue among the righteous.

The herte of him that hath vnderstanding will neither dispayre for anye sorowe, ne be to presumptuous for any sodeyn ioye.

The houses of the vngodly shall be ouer-throwen: but the tabernacles of the righteous shall florysshe.

There is a waye, whiche some men thynke to be right, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe.

The herte is sorowfull, euen in laughter, & the ende of mirth, is heuynesse.

An vnfaythful person shal be filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of suche.

An ignorannt bodye byleueth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstandynge, loketh well to his goynges.

A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euyll: but a foole goeth on presumptuously.

An vnpacyent man dealeth folysshely: but he that is well aduysed, doethe other wayes.

The ignorannte haue folysshenesse in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowlege.

The euyll shall bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall wayte at the dores of the righteous.

The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghboures: but the ryche hathe manye frendes.

Who so despyseth his neyghbour, dothe a mysse: but blessed is he that hathe pity of the poore.

They that ymagen wyckednesse, shall be disappoynted: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen mercye and faythfulnesse.

Diligent laboure bryngeth rychesse, and where many bayne wordes are, truely there is scarcenesse.

Rychesse is an ornament vnto the wyse: but the ignorannce of fooles is verye folysshnesse.

A faythfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a lyar disceyueth them.

The feare of the Lorde is a strong hold, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of deth.

The encreace and prosperitie of the comens, is the kynges honoure: but the decaye of the people, is the confusyon of the Prynce.

Pacyence is a token of wysdome: but wrathe and hasty displeasure is a token of folysshnesse.

A merye hert is the lyfe of the body: but rancour consumeth awaye the bones.

He that doth a poore man wrong, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pitye of the poore, doth honour vnto God.

The vngodlye is afrayde of euerye peryll: but the righteous hathe a good hope euen in deathe.

Wysdome resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstandyng, and he wyll teache them that are vnlerned.

Righteousnesse setteth vp the people: but wyckednesse bryngeth folke to destruction.

A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

CAPI. XV.

A Softe answere putteth downe displeasure: but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto angre.

A wyse tonge commendeth knowlege: a folysshe mouthe blabbeth out nothynge but folysshenesse.

The eyes of ꝑ Lord loke on euery place, both vpon the good and bad.

A holsome tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A foole despiseth his fathers correction: but he that taketh hede when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandyng.

In the house of the righteous are greate treasures, but in ꝑ increase of the vngodly there is myscheefe.

A wyse mouth poureth out knowlege: but the hert of the folysshe doth not so.

The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly: but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto him.

The waye of the vngodly is an abhomination vnto the Lorde: but who so followeth righteousnesse, him he loueth.

He that forsaketh the right streete, shall be sore punished: and who so hateth correction, fall eth into deth.

The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lorde: how moche more then the hertes of men?

A scorneful body e loueth not one that rebuketh him: neyther wyl he come among the wyse.

A merye herte maketh a cheerefull countenaunce: but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy.

A wyse herte wyll seke after knowlege: but the mouthe of fooles medleth with folysshnesse.

All the dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quyete herte is as a contynuall feast.

Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure, for they are not without sorowe.

Better is a messe of potage with loue: then a fat ore with euyl wyll.

An angrye man stereth vp stryfe, but he that is patient, stylleth discorde.

The waye of the slouthfull is full of thornes: but the streete of the righteous is well cleansed.

A wyse sonne maketh a gladde father: but an vndiscrete bodye shameth his mother.

A foole reioyseth in foolysshe thynges: but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goynges.

Vnadui sed thoughtes shall come to nought: but where as men are that can gyue counsell councell, there is stedfastnesse.

O how ioyfull a thinge is it, a mā to gyue a conuenient aunswere?

O how pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season.

The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heaue, that a man shulde beware of hell beneth.

D The Lorde will breake downe the house of the proude, but he shal make fast the borders of the wydow.

The Lord abhorreth the ymaginations of the wycked, but pure wordes are pleasaūt vn to him.

The couetous man roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shal lyue.

A ryghteous mā museth in his mynde how to doo good, but the mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme.

The Lorde is farre frome the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the heete, so doth a good name fede the bones.

The eare that harkeneth vnto holsom warnynge, and enclyneth therto, shall dwell amonge the wyse.

He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correction, is wyse.

CAPI. XVI.

A THe feare of the Lorde is the right science of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure.

A man maye well purpose a thinge in his herte, but the answere of the tonge commeth of the Lorde.

A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane but it is the Lorde that fashioneth the myndes.

Committe thy workes vnto the Lord, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall prosperе.

The Lorde doeth all thinges for his owne sake, yea and when he keperh the vngodly for the daye of wrath.

The Lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hertes, there maye neyther strengthe ner power escape.

With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse synnes be forgyuen, and who so feareth ỹ Lorde eschueth euyll.

When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he B maketh his very ennemyes to be his frendes.

And lo, it was all couered with nettels, & stode full of thistels, and the stone wall was broken downe.

This I sawe, and consydered it well: I loked vpon it, and toke it for a warnynge.

Yea slepe on styll a lytle, slombre a lytle, folde thyne handes togyther yet a lytle: so shall pouerte come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessite lyke a weaponed man. Prou.

CAPI. XXV.

¶ These

¶ These also are the sayenges of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezekiah kyng of Juda gathered to gether.

IT is the honour of God to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honour is to searche out a thing.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges herte is vnsearcheable.

Take the drosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessell therof.

Take awaye vngodlynesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablysshed with rygh-teousnes.

Put not forthe thy selfe in the presence of the kynge, and preace not in to the place of greate men.

Better is it that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hyther, then thou to be sette downe in the presence of the prynce whome thou seyst with thyne eyes.

Be not hasty to go to the lawe, lest happly thou ordre thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neyghbour put the to shame.

Handle thy mater with thy neyghbour hym selfe, and dyscouer not another mans secrete, lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thyne euell name do not cease.

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a syluer dysshe.

The correction of the wyse is to an obedient eare, a golden cheyne and a Jewell of golde.

Lyke as the wynter coole in the harueste, so is a faythfull messaunger to hym that sent him, and refreshyth his maysters mynde.

Who so maketh great bostes and geueth nothynge, is lyke cloudes and wynde without rayne.

With pacience maye a prynce be pacifyed, and with a softe tonge maye rygorousnesse be broken.

Yf thou fyndest hony, eate so moche as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouer full, & perbreake it out agayne.

Withdrawe thy foote frome thy neyghbours house, lest he be weery of the, and so abhorre the.

Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynste his neyghbour, he is a very speare, a swearde, and a sharpe arowe.

The hope of the vngodlye in tyme of nede is lyke a rotten toth and a slypperye foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wycked hert, clotheth hym with ragges in the colde, and poureth vyneger vpon chalke.

Yf thyne enemye honger, fede hym: yf he thyrste, geue hym drynke: for so shalte thou heape coles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lorde shall rewarde the.

The Northe wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, euen so doth an earnest sober countenaunce a backbyters tonge.

It is better to sytte in a corner vnder the rofe, then with a braulyng woman in a wyde house.

A good reporte out of a farre countree, is lyke colde water to a thyrstie soule.

A ryghtous man fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well and a sprynge that is destroyed.

Lyke as it is not godd to eate to moch hony, euen so he that wyll searche out hye thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym.

He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytie whiche is broken downe, and hathe no walles.

CAPI. XXVI.

LYke as snowe is not mete in sommer, nor rayne in harueste: euen so is worshyp vnsemely for a foole.

Lyke as the bryde and the swalowe take theyr flyghte and flee here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyghte vpon a man.

Vnto the horse belongeth a whyppe, to the asse a brydle, and a rodde to the fooles backe.

Geue not the sole an answere after his folyshnesse, lest thou become lyke vnto hym: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse, lest he be wyse in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea dronken is he in vaine, that committeth any thynge to a foole.

Lyke as it is an vnsemely thynge to haue legges, and yet to halte, euen so is a parable in the fooles mouth.

He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euen as yf a man dyd caste a precious stone vpon the galous.

A parable in a fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that pricketh a dronken man in the hande.

A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth sothe one as wyll take no hede.

Lyke as the dogge turneth awaye to his vomyte, euen so a foole begynneth his folysshnesse agayne a fresh.

Yf thou seest a man that is wyse in his owne conceate, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, and a lyon in the myddest of the stretes.

Lyke as the doore turneth aboute vpon the threshold, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in his bedde.

Ecclesi.xix.c * The sleuthfull body thrusteth his hand in to his bosome, and it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth.

The flogarde thynketh hym selfe wyser, then .vii. men, that lyt and teache.

Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens stryfe, ye is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.

Lyke as one shoteth deadly arowes and darres out of a preuy place, euen so doth a dissembler with his neyghboure.

And then sayth he: I dyd it but in sporte.

Where no wod is, there ỹ fyre goeth oute, and where the backbyter is take awaye, there the stryfe ceaseth.

Eccl.xxviij.b * Coles kyndle heate, and wod the fyre: euen so doth a braulynge felowe steer vp variaunce.

C A slaunderers wordes are lyke flatterye,

D but they pearce the inwarde partes of the body.

Uenymous lyppes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potsherde coucred with syluer drosse.

An ennemye dissembleth with his lyppes, and in the meane season he ymagineth mischefe: but when he speaketh fayre, beleue him not, for there are seuen abhominations in his herte.

Who so kepeth euell wyll, seeretlye to be hurte, his malyce shall be shewed before the whole congregacion.

*Eccle.x.b. Eccle.xxvii.d * Who dyggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that weltreth a stone, shall stomble vpon it hymselfe.

A dissemblynge tonge hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flatterynge mouthe worketh mischefe.

CAPI. XXVII.

A MAke not thy boost of to morowe, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye.

Let an other man prayse the, and not thyn owne mouthe, yea other folkes lyppes, and not thyne.

The stone is heuye, and the sande weyghtye, but a fooles wrathe is heuyer then they bothe.

Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furiousnesse is a verye tempest: yea who is hable to abyde enuye?

An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Faythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an ennemye are dysceatfull.

Job.vi.b He that is full, abhorreth an honye combe,

B but vnto hym that is hongrye, euerye sower thynge is swete.

He that ofte tymes flytteth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her nest.

The hert is glad of a swete oyntment and sauoure, but a stomache that can geue good councell, reioyseth a mans neyghboure.

Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende forsake not, but go not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalte make me a glad herte: so that I shal make answere vnto my rebukers.

A wyse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffer harme.

Prou. * Take his garmente that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake.

He that is to hastye to prayse his neyghboure aboue measure, shall be taken as one C that geueth hym an euell reporte.

A braulynge woman and the rofe of the house droppynge in a rayny daye, maye well be compared together.

He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hande.

Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another.

Who so kepeth his fygge tre, shall enioye the fruites therof: he that waiteth vpon his master, shall come to honoure.

Lyke as in one water there appeare diuerse faces, euen so diuerse men haue diuerse hertes.

Lyke as hell and destruccion are neuer full, Eccle. euen so the * eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed.

Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openly prayed to his face.

Though thou shuldest braye a fole with a pestell in a morter lyke otemele, yet wyll not D his foolyshnesse go from hym.

Be that thou know the nombre of thy catell thy selfe, and loke well to thy flockes.

For ryches abyde not alway, & the crowne endureth not for euer.

The hey groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes.

The lambes shall clothe the, and for the gotes thou shalte haue money to thy husbandry.

Thou shalt haue gotes mylke ynough to fede the, to vpholde thy household, and to susteyne thy maydens.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THe vngodlye fleeth no man chasynge hym, but the righteous standeth styll as a lyon.

Because of synne the lande bothe ofte chaunge her prynce: but thorowe men of vnderstandynge and wysdome a realme endureth longe.

One poore man oppressynge an other by violence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute.

Thy

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodlye, but suche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them.

Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lorde, perceyue all thynges

A poore man ledynge a godlye lyfe, is better then the ryche that goethe in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstandynge: but he that fedeth ryotous me, shameth his father.

Who so increaseth his ryches by vsurye and wynnynge, let hym gather them to helpe the poore withall.

He that turneth awaye his eare frome heasynge the lawe, his prayer shall be abhorred.

Who so ledeth the ryghtuous into an euel waye, shall fall in to his owne pytte, but the iust shall haue the good in possession.

The ryche man thynketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstanding, can perceaue hym well ynough.

When ryghtuous men are in prosperitie, then doth honoure florysshe: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth.

He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prospere: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

Well is hym that standeth alway in awe: as for hym that hardeneth his harte, he shall fall in to myschefe.

Lyke as a rorynge lyon and an hongry beare, euen so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prynce is without vnderstandynge, there is greate oppression and wrong: but yf he be soch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne.

He that by violence sheddeth any mannes blonde, shall be a rennagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be able to succoure hym.

Who so leadeth a godly and an innocente lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall ones haue a fall.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that followeth ydelnesse, shall haue powerte ynough.

A faythfull man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to moche haste for to be ryche shall not be vngyltie.

To haue respecte of personnes in iudgemẽts not good.

And why? he wyll do wronge, yee euen for a pece of breade.

He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and consydereth not, that powerte shall come vpon hym.

He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the laste, then he that flatereth hym.

Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a murtherer.

He that is of a proude stomacke, stereth vp stryfe, but he that putteth his truste in the Lorde, shalbe well fedde.

He that trusteth in his owne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes frome soch as be in necessite, shall suffer greate powerte hym selfe.

When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selfes: but when they perysshe, the ryghtuous increase.

CAPI. XXIX.

HE that is styfnecked and wyll not be reformed, shall sodenly be destroyed without any helpe.

Where the ryghtuous haue the ouerhand, the people are in prosperitie: but where the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne.

Who so loueth wysdome, maketh his father a glad man, * but he that kepeth harlotes, spendeth awaye that he hath. * Prou.v.6 Luke.xv.c

With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes, he turneth it vpsyde downe.

Who so flatereth his neyghbour, layeth a nette for his fete.

The synne of the wycked is his owne snare, but the ryghtuous shall be glad and reioyse.

The ryghtuous consydereth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge.

Wycked people bringe a cytie in decaye, but wyse men set it vp agayne.

Yf a wyse mã go to law with a foole (whether he deale with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.

The blond thyrstie hate the ryghtuous, but the iust seke his soule.

A foole poureth oute his spyryte all together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

Yf a prynce delyte in lyes, all his seruauntes are vngodly.

The poore and the lender mete together, the Lorde lyghteneth bothe theyr eyes.

The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall contynue sure for euermore.

The rodde and correction myneistre wysdome, but yf a childe be not loked vnto, he bringeth his mother to shame.

When the vngodly come vp, wyckednesse increaseth, but the ryghtuous shall se theyr fall.

Nurtoure thy sonne with correction, and he shall comfort the, yea he shall do the good at thyne herte.

Where no Prophete is, there the people perysshe: but well is hym that kepeth the lawe.

A seruaunt wyll not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande, yet wyll he not regarde them.

Yf thou seyll a man that is hastye to speake vnaduysed, thou mayst trust a sole more then him.

D He that delycately bringeth vp his seruaut frome a childe, shall make him his master at length.

Iob.xxii.d An angry man steereth vp stryke, and he that beareth euyll wyll in his mynde, doeth moche euyll.

After pryde commeth a fal, but a lowly spirite bringeth great worshyp.

Who so kepeth company with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blasphemies and telleth it not forth.

He that teareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his trust in the Lorde shall come to honoure.

Many there be that seke the Princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement commeth frome the Lorde.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for thole that be in the right waye, ỹ wycked hate them.

CAPI. XXX.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jakeh.

A

THe prophecie of a true faythfull man, whome God hathe helped, whome God has comforted and nourished.

For thoughe I am the leest of all, and haue no mans vnderstandynge (for I neuer lerned wysdome) yet haue I vnderstandynge, and am well informed in godly thynges.

Who hathe clymmed vp in to heuen?

Who hath come downe from thence?

Who hathe holden the wynde faste in his hande?

Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment?

Who hathe sette all the endes of the worlde?

What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell?

* Psal.xix.c *All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, Deut. iii.a.& xii d. for he is a shyld vnto all them, that put their truste in hym.

Prou.xviii.c Put thou nothynge therfore vnto his wordes, leste he reproue the, and thou be founde a lyar.

Two thynges I requyre of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye.

Remoue frō me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, onely graunte me a necessary lyuynge.

B Leste yͤ I be to full, I denye the, and saye: what felowe is the Lorde?

And leste I beyng constrayned thorow pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forswearе the name of my God.

Accuse not a seruaunte vnto his master, leste he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte.

He that bringeth vp an euell reporte vpon the generacion of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacion that thynke themselues cleane, shal not be clensed from their fylthynesse.

There are people that haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eye lydes.

This peoples tethe are swerdes, and with their chaftbones they consume and deuoure the simple of the earth, and the poore frome amonges men.

This generacion (whiche is lyke an horsleche) hath two daughters: the one is called, fetch hyther, and the other, bringe hyther.

There be thre thynges that are neuer satisfyed, and the fourth sayth neuer hoo. C

The hell, a womans wombe, and the earth hath neuer water ynough.

As for fyre, it sayeth neuer, hoo.

Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundemente at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the yonge Aegles.

There be thre thynges to hye for me, and as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledge.

The waye of an Aegle in the ayre, the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shyppe in the see, and the way of a man with a yong woman.

Soch is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, which wipeth her mouth lyke as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: I haue done no harme.

Thorowe thre thinges the earth is disquieted, and the fourth maye it not beare.

Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorowe a foole that hath great ryches, thorowe an yll houlwyfe, and thorowe an handmayden that is heyre to her maistres. D

There be foure thinges in the earthe, the whiche are verye lytle: but in wysdome they exceade the wyse.

The Pysmyres are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate to gether in the harueste.

The Conyes ar but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes.

The grethoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes.

The spyder laboureth with her handes, & that in the Kynges palace.

There be thre thynges that go stylly, but the goynge of the fourthe is the godlyest of all.

A Lyon, whiche is kynge of beastes, and geueth place to no man: A Locke readye to fyght: A ramme and a kyng that goeth forth with his people.

Yf thou be so folysh to magnifie thy selfe, or medlest with any soche thynge, then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.

Who

Who so chymeth mylcke, maketh butter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede: and he that causeth wrathe, bryngeth forthe ryfe.

The wordes of kynge Lamuel / and the Prophecye that his mother taught hym.

Kynges ought to iudge iustly. The propertye of an honest maryed wyfe.

CAPI. XXXI.

MY sonne, thou sonne of my body: O my deare beloued sonne, gyue not ouer thy substaunce & myndе vnto wemen, which are the destruction euen of kynges.

O Lamuel, gyue kynges no wyne, gyue kynges and princes no stronge drinke: least they dronke forget the lawe, and regarde not the cause of the poore, and of all suche as be in aduersitie.

Gyue stronge drinke vnto suche as are condemned to death, & wyne vnto those ỹ mourne that they maye drinke it, and forget theyr mysery and aduersitie.

Be thou an aduocate, and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be dumme and succouries.

With thy mouth defende the thinge that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

ALEPH.

Who so fyndeth an honest faythfull woman, she is moche more worthe then perles.

BETH.

The herte of her housbande maye safely trust in her, so that he shall haue no nede of spoyles.

GIMEL.

She will do him good and not euyll al the dayes of her lyfe.

DALETH.

She occupyeth woll and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her handes.

HE.

She is lyke a marchauntes shyp, that bringeth her vitayles frome a farre.

VAV.

She is vp in the nighte season, to prouyde meate for her household, and fode for her maydens.

ZAIN.

She consydereth lande, and byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde.

HETH.

She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, and coureageth her armes.

TETH.

And yf she perceyue that her housewyfery dothe good, her candle goeth not oute by nyght.

IOD.

She layeth her fingers to the spyndle, and her hande taketh holde of the rocke.

CAPH.

She openeth her hande to the poore, yea she stretcheth forth her handes to suche as haue nede.

LAMED.

She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her house, for all her household folkes are double clothed.

MEM.

She maketh her selfe fayre ornamentes, her clothynge is whyte silcke and purple.

NVN.

Her housbande is moche set by in the gates, when he sytteth amonge the rulers of the lande.

SAMECH.

She maketh clothe of silke and selleth it, and deliuereth a girdle vnto the marchaunt.

AIN.

Strength and honour is her clothinge, and in the latter daye she shall reioyse.

PHE.

She openeth her mouth with wysdome, & in her mouth is the lawe of grace.

ZADE

She loketh well to the wayes of her household, and eateth not her bred with ydelnes.

KOPH.

Her children arise, and call her blessed: and her husbande maketh mocke of her.

RES.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue them all.

SIN.

As for fauoure, it is deceytfull, and beautye is a vayne thinge: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be prayed.

THAV.

Geue her of the frute of her handes, and let her owne workes prayse her in the gates.

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

All that is in this worlde is vanitie.

CAPI. I.

THese are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. All is but vanitie (sayth the preacher) all is but playne vanite: for what els hath a man, of all his laboure that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacion passeth awaye, an other commeth, but the earth abydeth styl. The Sunne ariseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he maye there eyse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his cōpase about vnto the North, and so turneth in to him selfe agayne. All floudes run into the see and yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters run, thence they come agayne. All thinges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. The eye is not satisfyed w sight, the eare is not fylled with hearinge. The thinge that hath bene, commeth to passe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thinge vnder the Sunne. Is there any thinge wherof it may be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue bene before vs. The thinge that is past, is out of remēbraūce Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Ierusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out and searche for the knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and labour hathe God gyuen vnto the children of men, to exercyse them selues therin.

Thus I haue consydred al the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vanitie and vexacion of mynde. The croked can not be made straight, and the faultes can not be nombred. I cōmoned with myne owne hert, sayenge: lo, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wysdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yea my hert had great experience of wysdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applyed my mynde, that I might know what were wysdome & vnderstandinge, what were errour and folyshenes. And I perceyued that this also was but a vexacion of mynde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also great trauayle and disquietnesse: & the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

The aboundaunce of riches, of pleasure, and of buildynge, are vayne thynges.

CAPI. II.

THen sayd I thus in my hert: Nowe go to, I will take myne ease & haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanitie also: in so moche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou art mad, and to myrth: what west thou? So I thought in my hert, to withdraw my flesh frome wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehende folyshnes vntyll the tyme that (among al the thinges which are vnder the sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen. I made gorgious fayre workes. I buylded me houses, & planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maydens, and had a great houshold. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaūce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered siluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me singers and women whiche couloe playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & pastyme. I gat me drinkinge cuppes also and glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshyp, then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysdome remayned with me and loke what so euer myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer my hert delyted or had any pleasure, I withheld it not frome it. Thus my herte reioyced in all my labour, and this I toke for the portion of all my trauayle. But when I consydred all the workes that my handes had wrought, and al the labours that I had taken therin: lo, all was but vanitie and vexacion of mynde, and nothing of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consydre wysdome, errours & folyshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me the kynge in suche workes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth folyshnesse, as farre as lyght doth darckenes For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the fole goeth in the darckenesse. I perceyued also that they both had one ende. Then thought I in my mynde: Yf it happen vnto the fole as it doth vnto me, what needeth me then to labour any more for wysdome? so I cōfessed within my hert, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the folysh, and al the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse mā dyeth as well as the fole. Thus began I to be wery of my lyfe, in so moche that I could away w nothing that is done vnder the Sun for al was but vanite & vexacō of mynde: Yea I was wery of all my labour, which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I shuld be fayne to leaue thē vnto an other mā, that cōmeth after me, for who knoweth, whether he shall be a wyse mā or a fole? & yet shal he be lorde of al my labours, which I w such wysdom haue taken vnder the Sūne. Is not this a vayne thing?

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde frō all suche trauayle, as I toke vnder the sunne

D for so moche as a man shoulde werye him selfe with wysdome, with vnderstandinge and opor tunitie, and yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto an other, that neuer swete for the. This is also a vayne thinge and a great mysery.

For what getteth a man of all the laboure and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vn der the Sunne, but heuynes, sorowe and disquyetnes al the dayes of his lyfe? In so moch that his herte can not rest in the nyght. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Is it not better the for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merye in his labour? Yea I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God: For who may eate drinke, or bringe any thinge to passe without him? And why? he gyueth vnto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysdome, vnderstandinge, or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he gyueth wearynes and sorowe, that he maye gather and heape togither the thinge, that afterwarde shalbe gyuen vnto him whome it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yea a very disquietnesse & veracion of mynde.

¶ All thynges come in theyr tyme and passe away in theyr tyme.

CAP. III.

A Euery thinge hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, hathe his conuenient season.

There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge, that is planted

A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole.

A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunse.

A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones togither.

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne frome embracynge.

A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese.

B A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende.

A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe togither

A tyme to kepe sylence, and a tyme to speake.

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peax.

What hath a mā els (that doth any thing) but werynesse and laboure? For as touching the trauayle & carefulnesse which God hathe gyuen vnto men, I se þ he hath gyuen it them to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordened maruelous goodly, to euery thinge his due tyme. He hath planted ignorannce also in the hertes of men, that they shuld not fynde out the grounde of his workes, which he doth frō the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceyued,

L that in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man, then to be mery and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea what so euer a man enioyeth of all his laboure, that same is a gyfte of God. I cōsidered also that what so euer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothing can be put vnto it nor taken frome it: and þ God doth it to the intente, that men shoulde feare him. The thinge that hath bene, is now and the thinge that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne þ thing that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgemēt and iniquite in steade of rightousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate þ rightous frome the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of all councels and workes. I commened with myne owne herte also concerninge the children of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them apeare: as thoughe they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea they haue both one maner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no preeminēce aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. Who knoweth the spirite of man þ goeth vpwarde and the breth of the beaste that goeth downe into the earth? Wherfore I perceyue, þ there is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyful in his laboure, for that is his portion. But who wil bringe him to se the thinge that shal come after him?

¶ The mysteryes of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The chyld þ is poore and wyse.

CAP. IIII.

I So I turned me, and consydred all the violent wronge that is done vnder þ sunne and beholde the teares of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them or that wolde delyuer and defende the frome the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happy then suche as be a lyue: yea him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seyth not the myserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labour was hated of euery mā. This is also a vayne thinge, and a veracion of mynde.

The fole foldeth his handes togither, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handful (saith he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with laboure and trauayle.

Moreouer, I tourned me, and beholde yet an other vanitie vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but him selfe alone, haynge neyther childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes canne not be satisfied with ryches, (yet doeth he not remembre him selfe, and saye:) For whome do I take suche trauayle? or whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thinge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyt of their laboure. Yf one of theym fall, his companyon helhelpeth him vp agayne. But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hathe not an other to helpe him vp. Agayn, when two slepe togither they are warm: but how can a body be warm alone? One may be ourrcome, but two maye make resistence: a thre fold cable is not lightly brosken. A poore chylde being wyse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. Some one cōmeth out of prison, & is made a king: and an other which is borne in the kingdome, cōmeth vnto powertie. And I perceyued that all men lyuing vnder the sunne, go with the seconde chyld, that cōmeth vp in the stede of the other.

As for the people that haue ben before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorowe him. This is also a vayne thynge, and a vexacion of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy fote, & drawe nye, that thou mayste heare that is better then the offrynges of fooles, for they know not what euyll they do.

¶ Admonicion to beware of rashe communicacion. We ought not to marueill at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfyed & his rychs.

CAPI. V.

BE not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thyne herte speake any thynge rashly before God. For God is in heuen, and thou vpon erth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. Yf thou make a vow vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folysshe vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou promyse any thynge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then ỹ thou shouldest promyse and not paye. Vse not thy mouthe to cause thy flesshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the aungell: my folysshnesse is in the fault. For then God wil be angrye at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes of thyne handes. And why? where as are manye dreames and many wordes, there are also dyuers vanities: but loke ỹ thou feare God. Yf thou seest the poore to be oppressed, & wrongfully dealte withall, so that equitie and the right of the law is wrasted in the lande: marueil not thou at suche iudgement, for one great man kepeth touche with an other, & the mighty helpe them selues togither. The hole land also with the feldes, and all that is therin, is in subiection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delyteth in rychesse, shall haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as moche rychs is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he ỹ possesseth them, saue that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouring man slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or moche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) rychesse kepte to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For ofte tymes they perisshe with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a chyld, it getteth nothinge. Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carieth nothing away wt him of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, sycknesse and sorowe. Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thynge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God gyueth him, for this is his porcion. For vnto whome so euer God gyueth rychesse, goodes and power, he gyueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is now the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moche how long he shall lyue, for so moche as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

Job. xx. e

Job. xl. 1. Timoth. vi. b

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The differense of a foole and a wyse man.

CAPI. VI.

THere is yet a plage vnder the sunne, and it is a generall thyng among men: whē God gyueth a man richesse, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of al that his herte can desire: and yet God giueth him not leue to enioye the same, but an other man spendeth them. This is a vayne thynge, and a miserable plage. Yf a man beget an hundred chyldren, & lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him, I say, that an vntymely byrthe is better then he. For he commeth to nought, and goeth his waye in to darcknesse, & his name is forgotten. Moreouer he seeth not the sunne, and knoweth of no rest neither here ne there. Yea though he lyued two thousād yeres, yet hath he no good life. Come not al to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer filled after his mynde. For what hath the wise more then the fole? What helpeth it the poore that he knoweth to walke before the lyuing? The sight of the eyes is better, then that the soule shold so depart awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victorye of him that is mightier then he. A vaine thing is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

¶ That whiche passeth oure strengthes and wyttes ought we not to seke after.

CAPI. VII.

FOr who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whiche is but a shadow? Or who wil tell a man a man what shall happen after him vnder the sunne? A good name is moze worth then a pre-Prou.xxii.a Eccl.i.a cious ointment, and the day of deth is better then the daye of byrth. It is better to go in to B an house of mournynge, then in to a banket-tynge house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuynge taketh it to hert. It is better to be sorye then to laugh, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the herte is ioyful. The hert of the wyse is in the mourning house, but the hert of the folysh is in the house of myrth. It is better to gyue eare to the chastening of a wyse man, then to heare the song of foles. For the laughing of foles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thing. Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to goo oute of his wyt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thyng is better the the begynnynge. The patient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde: for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Say not thou: what is the cause ꝑ the dayes of ꝑ old tyme were better then they be now? for that were no wise question. Wysdome is better then rychesse, yea moche moze worthe then the eye sight. For wysdome defendeth as wel as money, and the excellent knowlege & wisdome giueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. C onsidre ꝑ worke of God how that no man can make the thynge strayghte, which he maketh croked. Use wel the tyme of C prosperitie, and remembre the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thinges also haue I cõsidered in the time of vanitie: that ꝑ iust man perisheth for his righteousnesse sake, and the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou neither to righteous ne ouer wyse, that thou perysshe not: be neither to vngrghtous also, ne to foolysshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, and not to let that go from thy hande. For he that feareth God, shal escape them all.

Wysdome giueth more courage vnto the wise then ten mightye men of the citye: * for 1.li.Reg.viii.e ii.Paral.vi.g Prou.xx.b 1.Joh.i.d there is not one iust vpon erth that doth good, & synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft times spoken euil by other men. All these thinges haue I proued because of wisdom: for I thought to be wise, but D she went farther fro me then she was before, yea and so depe ꝑ I might not reache vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to take oute science, wysdome and vnderstanding: to knowe the folysshnesse of the vngodly, and the errour of doetynge fooles. And I ☞ founde that a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a deep angle, her hert is a net, and her handes are chaynes. Who so pleaseth God, shall escape from her: but the synner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde (sayth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued, that I might come by knowlege: which as yet I seke, & finde it not. Among a thousand men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that God made man iust & right, but they seke dyuers subtelties, where as no man hath wysdome and vnderstanding to gyue an answere therevnto.

¶ The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the cheefe thinges vnder the son.

CAPI. VIII.

Wysdome maketh a mannes face to shyne, but malyce putteth out of fauour. Kepe the kynges commaundement (I warne the) and the othe ꝑ thou hast made vnto God. Be not hastye to go out of his sight, & se thou continue in no euill thinge: for what so euer it pleaseth him, that doth he. Lyke as when a kynge gyueth a charge, his commaundement is myghtye: Euen so who may saye vnto hym: what doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mannes herte discerneth tyme and maner. For euerye thynge wyll haue opportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell hym? Nei-
B ther is there anye man that hathe power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite, ne to haue anye power in the tyme of deathe: it is not be also that can make an ende of the batayle, neither may vngodlynesse deliuer him that vseth it withall.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applied my minde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sunne: how one man hathe lordshyp vpon an other to his own harme. For I haue oft sene the vngodly brought to their graues, & fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moch ꝑ they were forgotten in the city, where they were hayl in so hye and great reputacion. This is also a vayne thing. Bicause now that euil workes are not hastely punished, the hert of man gyueth him selfe ouer vnto wickednes. But thoughe an euyll person offende an hundred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I
C sure that it shall go well with them that feare God, bycause they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel with him, neither shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitie vpon earthe: There be iuste men, vnto whome it happeneth, as thoughe they hadde the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as thoughe they had the workes of the righteous. This me thyncke also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, bycause a man hathe no better thynge vnder the sunne, then to eate and drynche, and to be merry: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God gyueth him vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the tra-
D uayle that is in the worlde (and that of suche

a facion

a facion, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe neither daye ne nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, that it is not possible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: & though he bestow his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto thē: yea thoughe a wyse man wolde vndertake to know them, yet might he not fynd them.

¶ A man woteth not, by the ryghteousenesse of his owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wife. A prayse of wysdome.

CAPI. IX.

A For all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The righteous & wyse, yea and their workes also, are in the hand of God: and there is no man that knoweth either ꝑ loue or hate of the thing that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: It goeth with the ryghteous as with ꝑ vngodly: with the good and clene, as with the vncleane: with him that offereth, as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with ꝑ vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the pertured: so happeneth it also vnto him that is afrayde to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a miserye, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are ful of wickednesse, and mad foolyshnesse is in theyr hertes as long as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

B And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is carelesse: for a quicke dog (saye they) is better then a ded lyon: for they that be liuing, know they shall dye: but they that be deed, knowe nothynge, neither deserue they any more. For their memorye all is forgotten, so that they be neither loued, hated, ne enuyed: neither haue they any more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go thou thy way thē eate thy breed with ioye, and drinke thy wine with gladnes, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alwaye whyte, and let thy hed want none oyntment. Vse thy self to liue ioyfully with thy lyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that God hath gyuen the vnder the sunne all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this life, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder ꝑ sunne. C What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for among the ded where thou goest vnto, there is neither worke, counsell, knowlege, ne wysdome.

So I tourned me vnto other thynges vnder the sunne, and I sawe that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be swyft: in batell, it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedynge it helpeth not to be wyse: to rychesse, it helpeth not to be subtyle: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be cunning: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysshe are taken with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perylous tyme, when it commeth sodeynly vpon them.

This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thing. D There was a litle citie, and a fewe men within it: to there came a great king, and besieged it, & made great bulwarkes agaynste it. And in the citye there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which with his wysdome delyuered the citye: yet was there no body that had any respect vnto suche a symple man. Then sayde I: wysdome is better then strength. Neuertheles a symple mans wysdome is despyced, and his wordes are not herde. A wyse mans counsell that is folowed in silence, is farre above ꝑ crienge of a capitayne among fooles. For wisdome is better then harnesse: but one synner alone destroyeth moche good.

* Sayde vnto me. Ecclesiastes. 1. Regi. xxiii.

¶ The difference betwyxt a fole and a wyse man. Fortunate and happye is that realme which hath a wyse prynce.

CAPI. X.

A Ded flyes that corrupt swete oyntment and make it to stynche, are some thynge more worthy then the wysdome and honour of a foole. A wise mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert is vppon ꝑ left. A dotyng foole thynketh that euery man doth as foolyshly as him selfe. If a principall spirite be gyuē the to beare rule, be not negligēt then in thyne office: for so shal great wickednesse be put downe as it were with a medicine. An other plage is there, which I haue sene vnder B the sunne: namely the ignorauncе that is cōmenly among princes: in that a foole sytteth in great dignitie, and the ryche are set downe benethe: I se seruauntes ryde vpon horses, & princes going vpon their fete as it were seruātes. But he that diggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin himself: and who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal byte him. Who so remoueth stones, shal haue trauayle withall: & he that heweth wod, shal be hurt therwith.

Prouerb. xxvi. Eccle. xxvii.

When an yron is blont, and the poynt not sharpened, it must be wher agayne, and ꝑ with might: Euen so dothe wysdome folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a C serpent ꝑ stingeth without hyssing. The wordes of a wise mans mouthe, are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole will destroye hym selfe. The begynning of his talking is foolishnesse, & the last word of his mouth is great madnesse. A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not tel what ende he wil make: who wil the warne him to make a conclusion? The labour of the foolish is greuous vnto them, while they know not how to go in to the city.

Wo be vnto the (o thou realme and lande) D whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose prynces are early at their banketes. But well is the (o thou realme and lande) whose kynge is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for strengeth and not for lust. Thorowe slouthfulnesse the balkes fal downe, and thorowe ydle handes it raineth in at the house.

Meate

Meate maketh men to laugh, & wyne maketh them merye: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wish the kinge no euil in thy thought and speake no hurte of the ryche in thy priuye chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

¶ Wychesse ought to be destribute vnto the nedy.

CAPI. XI.

A SEnde thy vytayles ouer the waters, and so shalte thou fynde them after many yeres. Dyue it awaye among seuen or eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon earthe. When the cloudes are full, they poure out rayne vpon the erthe. And when the tree falleth (whether it be towarde the southe or northe) in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, shall not sowe: and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes shal not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, ne how the bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, whiche is the workemaister of all.

B Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sowe thy seed, whether it be in the morning or in ỹ euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, and yf they bothe take, it is the better. The lyght is swete, and a pleasaunt thynge is it for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. Yf a man lyue many yeres, & be glad in them all, let him remembre ỹ daies of darcknesse, which shall be many: and when they come, all thinges shal be but vanitie. Be glad then (o thou yonge man) in thy youthe, and let thyne hert be merye in thy yong dayes: folow the wayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure that God shall bringe the in to iudgement for all these thynges.

¶ From our youth ought we to consider and regarde the godnesse of God.

CAPI. XII.

A PUt awaye displeasure out of thyne herte, and remoue euil from thy body: for childhode and youthe is but vanitie. Remembre thy maker in thy youthe, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeres drawe nye when thou shalte saye: I haue no pleasure in them before the sunne, the lighte, the moone & sterres be darckned, and or the cloudes tourne agayn after the rayne: when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bow them selues whē the mylles stande still, because they be so few and when the lighte of the wyndowes shall waxe dymme: when the dores in the stretes shal be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layde downe: when men shal rise vp at the voyce of ỹ byrde, and when al the doughters of musyke shall be brought low: when men shal feare in hye places, and be afrayde in the stretes: when the almonde tree shall be despised, the grashopper borne out: and when great power shal breke in: when man goeth to his longe home, & the mourners go about the stretes. Or euer the siluer lace be taken awaye, & or the golden bande be broken: or the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the cesterne: or dust be turned agayne vnto the erth from whence it came, & or the spirite returne vnto God, whiche gaue it. All is but vanitie (sayth the Preacher) all is but playne vanitie.

C The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out ỹ grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynd out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, & the wordes of truthe. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke pryckes & nayles that go thorowe, wherwith men are kept togither: for they are gyuē of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many and innumerable bokes, nor take diuers doctrines in hand, to wery thy body withall.

D Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: feare God, and kepe his commaundementes, For that toucheth all men: for God shal iudge all workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or euil.

That thy mouth wold gyue me a kysse, for thy brestes are moze pleasaũt then wyne, and that bycause of the good and pleasaunt sauoure. Thy name is a swete smellyng oynt mẽt, therfoze do the maydens loue the: yea that same moueth me also to runne after the.

☞ The spouselle to her companyons.

The kynge hath brought me in to his pryuy chambre. We wyll be glad and reioyce in the, we thinke moze of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

☞ The voyce of the church in persecucion.

I am blacke (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) like as the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hanginges of Salomon: but yet am fayre and welfauoured withal. Maruell not at me that I am so blacke, and why? the sun hath shyned vpon me.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childre had euil wyl at me, they made me ỹ keper of the vineyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vineyard, which was not myne owne.

☞ The voyce of the churche to Chryste.

Tel me (o thou whõ my soule loueth) where thou feedst, where thou restest at the none dayes lest I go wrong, and come vnto the flockes of thy compantons.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

If thou knowe not thy selfe (o thou fayrest among women) then go thy waye forth after the fotesteppes of the shepe, as thoughe thou woldest fede the gotes beside the shepeherdes tẽtes. There wil I tary for ỹ, my loue, wt myne host and with my charettes, whiche shal be no fewer then Pharaos. Then shall thy chekes & thy necke be made fayre, and hanged with spãges and goodly iewels: a neckbande of golde wyl we make the, with syluer botons.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

When the kyng sytteth at the table, he shal smel my Nardus: for a bundel of Myrre (o my beloued) lyeth betwixt my brestes. A cluster of grapes of Cypers, or of the vineyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me, o my beloued.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

O how fayre arte thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes.

☞ The churche to Chryst.

O how fayre arte thou, my beloued, howe welfauoured art thou? Our bed is decke with floures, the ioinges of our houses are of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

CAPI. II.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

I Am the floure of the felde, and lyly of ỹ valeys: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue among the doughters.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wod, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My delite is to syt vnder his shadowe, for his frute is swete vnto my throte. He bringeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refresh me with grapes, comforte me wt apples, for I am sycke of loue. His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heed, and his ryght hand embraceth me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

I charge you (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) by the Roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hopping vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the litle hylles. My beloued is lyke a roo or a yong hart. Beholde he standeth behynde oure wall, he loketh in at the wyndowe, and pepeth thorowe the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

O stand vp my loue, my doue, my beautiful, and come: for lo the wynter is now past, and the rayne is awaye and gone. The floures are come vp in the felde, the twilling time is come, the voyce of the turtle doue is heerd in our lãde. the fig tree bryngeth forth her frygges, the vynes beare blossoms, and haue a good smell. O stande vp my loue, my beautifull, and come (o my doue out of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce, and heare thy voyce: for swete is thy voyce, and fayre is thy face.

☞ The voyce agaynste the heretykes.

Get vs the foxes, yea the lytle foxes ỹ hurt the vines, for our vines beare blossomes.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

My loue is myne, & I am his, which fedeth among the lilyes vntyl the daye breke, and tyl the shadowes be gone. Come againe pryuyly (o my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yong hart, vnto the mountaynes.

CAPI.

CAPI. III.

☞ The voyce of the churche whiche is chosen out of the Heathen.

A By nyght in my bed I sought him whome my soule loueth: yea diligently sought I him, but I founde him not. I wyll get vp (thought I) and go about the city, vpon the market, and in all the stretes will I seke hym whom my soule loueth: but when I sought him, I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city, founde me.

☞ The churche speakynge of Christe.

B Sawe ye not him whome my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I found him whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, & wil not let him go, vntil I bringe him in to my mothers house, and in to her chābre that bare me.

☞ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Ierusalem, by the Roes and Hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the Synagog, marueylynge in it selfe at the churche of Christe.

C Who is this that commeth out of the wildernesse like pilers of smoke, as it were a smel of Myrre, frankencense, and all maner spices of the Apotecary?

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Beholde, aboute Salomons bedstede there stand. lxx valeaunt mē of the mighty in Israel. They holde swerdes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery mā hath his swerde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the night. King Salomon hathe made him selfe a bedstede of the wod of Libanus, the pyllers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the ground pleasauntly paued for the doughters of Ierusalem.

☞ The churche speakynge of Christ.

Go forth, o ye wughters of Sion, & beholde king Salomon in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned him in the daye of his mariage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

CAPI. IIII.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

A Howe fayre art thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast wues eyes, beside þ which lyeth hyd within. Thy heery lockes are lyke a flocke of shepe that be clypped, whiche go first vp from the washynge place: where euery one beare two twynnes, and not one vnfruitfull amonge them. Thy lyppes are lyke a rose coloured ribonde, thy wordes are louely: thy chekes are like a pece of a pomegranet, besides that whiche lyeth hyd within. Thy B necke is like the tower of Dauid builded with bulwarkes, wherupon there hang a thousande shyldes, yea al the weapons of the gyauntes.

Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of yong Roes which fede among the lilyes.

☞ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght goo to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of frankencense: tyll the daye breake, and tyll the shadowes be past awaye.

☞ The voyce of Christe speakynge to the church.

Thou art al fayre, o my loue, and no spot is there in the. Come to me from Libanus, o my C spouse, come to me from Libanus: come soone the next waye from the top of Amana, frō the top of Sanir and Hermō, from the lyons wones, & from the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hert, o my syster, my spouse, thou hast wouñded my hert with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy necke. O how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaūt then wyne, and the smell of thyne oyntmēts passeth al spices. Thy lyppes, o my spouse, drop as the hony combe, yea mylke and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankencense. Thou art a D wel kepte garden, o my syster, my spouse, thou art a well kepte watersprynge, a sealed well. The frutes that sproute in the, are lyke a very Paradise of pomegranettes, with swete frutes: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffron, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, & all the best spices. Thou art a wel of gardins, a well of lyuynge waters, whiche ren downe from Libanus.

☞ Christe calleth the Heythen.

Vp thou north wynde, come þ south wynde, & blowe vpon my garden, that the smel therof may be caried on euery syde: yea that my beloued may come in to my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therin.

CAPI. V.

☞ Christe speaketh to the churche.

Come in to my garden, o my syster, my G spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre w my spyce. I wyll eate my hony, and my hony combe, I wyll dryncke my wyne and my mylke.

☞ Christe speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, o ye frendes, drynke and be mery, o ye beloued.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

As I was a slepe and my herte wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloued, when he knocked.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Open to me (sayd he) o my syster, my loue, my doue, my derlynge, for my hed is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are ful of the night droppes.

☞ The voyce of the spousesse.

I haue put of my cote, how can I doo it on agayne(I haue waſched my fete, how ſhall I B fyle them agayne?

☞ The voyce of the churche ſpeakynge of Chriſt.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moued towarde him: ſo ꝑ I ſtode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ran downe my fyngers vpon the locke. Neuertheleſſe, when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone his waye.

Now like as a ſoze tyme when he ſpake, my hert could not longer refrayne: Euen ſo now I ſought hym, but I couldē not fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheleſſe he gaue me no anſwere.

☞ The churche complayneth of her perſecutours.

So the watche men that went aboute the city found me, ſmote me, and wounded me, yea they that kepte the walles, toke away my gar
C ment fro me.

☞ The ſpouſeſſe ſpeaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfoze, o ye doughters of Je
C ruſalem, yf ye find my beloued, that ye tel him how that I am ſicke foz loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, o thou fayreſt among women? Oꝛ what can thy loue do moze then other louers, that thou chargeſt vs ſo ſtraytly?

☞ The churche, anſwerynge of Chriſte.

As foz my loue, he is whyte and red colou
D red, a ſyngular perſon amonge many thouſan des: his heed is the moſt fine golo, the lockes of his heere are buſhed, browne as the eue ning: his eyes are as ꝑ eyes of doues by ꝑ wa ter brokes, waſchen with myłke, and remay ning in a plenteous place: his chekes are like a garden bed, wherin the Apotecaryes plante all maner of ſwete thynges: his lyppes drop
D as the floures of that moſt principall Myrre, his handes are full of golde rynges & precious ſtones. His body is as the pure yuery, clere ouer with Saphirs: his legges are as the pyllers of marble, ſet vpon ſockettes of golo His face is as Libanus, and as the beautie of the Ce dze trees: His thzote is ſwete, yea he is all to gither louely: Such one is my loue, o ye dough ters of Ieruſalem, ſuche one is my loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge ſpeakynge to the churche.

Whither is thy loue gone then (o thou fay reſt among women) whither is thy loue depar ted, that we may ſeke him with the.

CAPI. VI.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

A My loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the ſwete ſmellynge beddes, that he maye refreſſhe him ſelfe in the gar den and gather floures. My loue is myne and I am his, whiche feedeth amonge the ly lyes.

☞ Chryſte to the churche.

Thou art pleaſaunt (o my loue) euē as loue lyneſſe it ſelfe, thou art fayze as Ieruſalē, glo rious as an army of men with their banners. (Turne away thine eyes fro me, foz they make me to prouꝺe) Thy heery lockes are lyke a flok of gotes vpon the moūt of Galaad. Thy teth B are like a flocke of ſhepe that be clipped, which go out of ꝑ waſching place: where euerye one beareth two twynnes, and not one vnfruteful amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a po megranet, beſides that which lieth hid with in. There are thze ſcoze quenes, foure ſcoze concu bynes, and yong womē without nombze. But one is my doue, my derlinge. She is the onely C beloued of her mother, and dere vnto her that bare her. When the doughters ſawe her, they ſayd ſhe was bleſſed: yea the quenes and con concubynes prayſed her.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge

What is ſhe this that pepeth out as ꝑ moz ninge? fayze as the moone, excellent as the ſunne, glozyous as an armye men with theyr banners.

☞ Chryſte to the Synagoge.

I went downe in to the notte garden, to ſe what grew by the bzokes, to loke yf the vine yard flouriſhed, and if the pomegranettes were ſhot forth.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the pzynce of my peo D ple, made me ſodeynly afrayde.

☞ The voyce of the churche callynge a gayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, o thou Sula mite: turne agayn, turne agayn, that we may loke vpon the.

CAPI. VII.

☞ Chryſt to the Synagoge

What pleaſure haue ye moze in the Sula A mite, then when ſhe daūſeth among the men of warre?

☞ Chryſt to the churche.

O how pleaſaunt are thy treadinges with thy ſhoes thou pzinces doughter? thy thighes are like a fayze iewell, wyich is wzought by a cunning wozkmaſter: thy nauel is lyke a roūd goblet whiche is neuer without dzynke: Thy wombe is lyke an hepe of whete, ſet about w lilyes: thy two bzeſtes are lyke two twynnes of yonge Roes: Thy necke is as it were a to B wer of yuery: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Heſebon, beſide the pozt of Bathzab bim: Thy noſe is lyke the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damaſcus: That heed that ſtandeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel: the heere of thy heed is lyke the kynges purple fol den vp in plates.

O how fayze & louely art thou, my derling, in pleaſures? Thy ſtature is like a date tree, & C thy bzeſtes lyke the grapes.

☞ The ſpouſe ſpeakynge of the croſſe.

I ſayde

I sayd: I wyl clym vp in to the date tree, & take hold of his braunches.

☞The spouse speakynge to the spouselesse.

Thy brestes also shal be as the vine grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke the smell of apples, and thy throte lyke the best wyne. This shall be pure and clere for my loue, his lyppes and tethe shall haue their pleasure. Where wil I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall tourne him vnto me.

☞The churche speakynge to Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the morowyng wil we rise bytymes, and go se the vineyarde, yf it be sprongē forthe, yf the grapes be growen, and yf the pomegranettes be shot out. There wyl I gyue the my brestes: there shal the Mandragoras gyue their smell beside oure doores: there, o my loue, haue I kepte vnto the all maner frutes, bothe newe and olde.

CAPI. VIII.

☞The voyce of the Patriarches speakynge of Christe.

O That I might fynde the without & kisse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche suckte my mothers brestes: and yt thou woldest not be offended, if I toke the & brought the in to my mothers house: yt thou myghtest teache me, and that I might giue the drinke of spyced wyne, & of the swete sape of my pomegranettes. His left hand lieth vnder my heed, and his right hand embraceth me.

☞The voyce of Christe.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Ierusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, til she be content her selfe.

☞The Synagog speakyng of the churche.

What is she this that commeth vp frō the wildernelle, and leaneth vpon her loue.

☞The voyce of the spouse, before the spouselesse.

I am the same that waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

☞The churche speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mygtye as the deth, and gelouly as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: for many waters are not able to quenche loue, neither may the stremes drowne it. Yea if a man wolde gyue all the good of his house for loue, he sholde count it nothyng.

☞Christ speaking of the churche to the Synagog.

When oure loue is tolde, oure yonge sister whose brestes are not yet growen, what shall we do vnto her?

☞The answere of Christe for the churche.

Yf she be a wall, we shal buyld a syluer house worke therupon: yf she be a tower, we shal hangen her with borders of Cedre tree.

☞The churche answereth to the Synagoge.

Yf I be a wall, and my brestes lyke towers, then am I as one that haue founde fauour in his syght.

☞The Synagog speakynge to the churche.

Salomon had a vineyard at Baal Hamon, this vineyarde deliuered he vnto the kepers: & that euery one for the frute therof sholde gyue him a thousand peces of syluer.

☞The voyce of Christe.

But my vineyard, o Salomon, gyueth the a thousande, and two hundred to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, o let me heare thy voyce, that my companions may harken to the same.

☞The voyce of the churche, speakynge to Christ.

O get the awaye, my loue, as a Roo or a yonge hart vnto the swete smellynge mountaynes.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ESAYE.

¶ Esaye prophecyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Ierusalem because of theyr sinnes

CAPI. I.

A THe vysyon of Esay the son of Amos, whiche he sawe vpon Juda and Ierusalem. In the tyme of Oziah, Joathā Achaz, & Ezechias kynges of Juda. Heare, o heuens, harken, o erth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue nourysshed and brought vp chyldren, and they are fallen awaye fro me. An oxe knoweth his Lorde, and an asse his masters stal, but Israel knoweth nothyng, my people B hath no vnderstanding. Wo be to this synfull people, whiche are expert in blasphemyes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto angre, and are gone backewarde. Wherefore shoulde ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The hole heed is sycke, and the herte is deep heupe. From the sole of the fote vnto the heed, there is no hole parte in all youre bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and styppes, whiche can neither be helped, bounde vp, molified, ne eased with anye oyntment.

Youre lande lyeth waste, youre cityes are C brente vp, youre ennemyes deuoure youre lande, and ye muste be fayne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with ennemyes in a batell. Moreouer the doughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyarde, lyke a watcheyouse in tyme of warre, lyke a besieged city. And except the Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe aliue: we sholde haue ben as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye tyraunts of Sodoma, and harken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am stuffed with the brent offerynges of wethers, and with the fatuelle of fed beestes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gotes. When ye appeare before D me, who requyreth these thinges of youre handes, that ye sholde walke in my courtes. Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. I abhore youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre Newe moones, youre Sabbothes and solemne dayes. Youre assemblees are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holydayes and fastynges, euen fro my verye herte. They make me werye, I can not abyde them. Thoughe ye holde out youre handes, yet tourne I myne eyes frome you. And thoughe ye make manye prayers, yet heare I nothynge at all, * for youre handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euyll thoughtes out of my syght, E cease frome doynge of euyll and violence. Lerne to do ryghte, applye youre selues to equitie, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryghte, lette the widowes complaynte come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) we wyll talke togyther. Is it not so? Thoughe youre synnes be as redde as scarlet, shall they not be whyter then snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be lyke whyte wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louynge and obedient, ye shall enioye the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shal be deuoured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hathe promysed with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that the ryghtous F citye (whiche was full of equitie) is become vnfaythfull as an hoore? rightousnes dwelte in it, but nowe murther. Thy syluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne myxed with water. Thy princes are traytours and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes all togyther and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his ryght, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before the. Therfore speaketh the Lorde God of hostes, Jere. v. g the myghty one of Israel: Ah, I muste ease me of myne ennemyes, and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shal I laye my hand vpon the, and burne out the drosse frome the tynell and purell, and put out all the leade, and set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme, & thy senatours as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalte thou be called the ryghtous city, the faythfull citye. But Syon shall be redemed with equitie, and her captiuitie G with ryghtousnesse. For the transgressioures & vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaythful vnto the Lorde, must all togyther be vtterly destroyed.

And onlesse ye be ashamed of the olyues wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens ye haue chosen: ye shall be an oke, whose leaues are fallen away, and as a garde that hath no moysture. And the glory of these thinges shall be tourned in to dyse strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall bothe burne togyther, so that no man shal be able to quenche them.

¶ Of the commynge and deth of Christ: and of the callynge of the Heathen.

CAPI. II.

A MOreouer this is the worde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, vpon Juda and Ierusalem. It wyll be also in the last dayes: That the hyll where the house of the Lorde is buylded, shal be the chyefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hylles. And all the weathen shal preasse vnto him, and the multitude of ỹ people shall go vnto him, speakynge thus one to an other: arise, let vs goo to the hyll of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come oute of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall gyue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall reformme the multytude of people: So that they shall breake theyr swerdes and speres, to make sythes, sicles and sawes therof. From that time forth shall not one people lyft vp weapen agaynste an other, neither shall they learne to fight frome thence forth. It is to the that I crye (o house of Jacob) arise, let vs walke in the lyghte of the Lorde. But thou arte scattered abrode with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye goo farre beyonde youre fathers, whether it be in sorceres (whome ye haue as the Philistines hadde) or in calkers of mennes byrthes, wherof ye haue to manye. As soone as youre lande was full of syluer and golde, and no ende of your treasure: so soone as youre lande was full of stronge horsses, and no ende of youre charettes: Immediatly was it full of ydolles, also, euen workes of youre owne handes, whiche ye youre selues haue facyoned, and youre fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so that thou canste not bringe hym awaye thence.

And therfore gette the soone in to some rocke, and hyde the in the grounde from the syght of the fearefull iudge, and frome the glory of his maiestye: Which casteth downe the hyghe lokes of the presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and he onely shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shall goo ouer all pryde and presumpcion, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall bringe them all downe: vpon hyghe and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hyghe hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is glorysous and pleasaunt to loke vpon.

And it shall bringe downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumpcion tuill lowe, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the ydolles shall vterly be rooted oute. Men shall crepe in to holes of stone, and in to caues of the earthe, frome the syghte of the fearfull iudge, and from the glorye of his maiestye: what tyme as he shall arise to shake the erth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddes of syluer & golde, (which neuertheles he had made to honour them) vnto Moles and Backes: that he may the better crepe in to the caues and rockes, & in to the cliffes of hard stones, from the syght of the fearefull iudge, and frome the glorye of his maiestie.

Luc. xxiii. d
Ozee. x. b
Apoca. vi. b

The prophecyeth that at the commynge of Christ all strength and power shall be put forth of Jurye.

CAPI. III.

EVerye man can eschewe a person moued in angre, for what dothe he wisely? Euen so shall the Lorde of hostes take awaye from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate and drynke, the capitayne and the souldyour, the iudge and the Prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the worshipful of fyfty yeres olde, and the honourable: the senatours & men of vnderstanding: the masters of craftes and oratours. and I shall gyue you chyldren to be youre prynces (sayethe the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euer be doing violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frend of his owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be our heed, for thou mayste kepe vs frome this fall and perill.

Then shall he swere and saye, I can not helpe you. Moreouer there is neither meate ne clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye, bycause that bothe theyr wordes and counseis are agaynste the Lorde, they prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto angre. The chaungynge of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them, yea they declare theyr owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they shal be heuily rewarded. Then shal they saye: O happye are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of theyr studyes. But woo be to the vngodly and vnryghtous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. O my people, ỹ rybaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders disceyue the, and treade out the waye of thy fotesteppes. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to gyue iudgement with the people. The Lorde shall come forthe to reason with the senatours and prynces of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: Ye is ye that haue burnt vp my vyneyarde, the robberye of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore doo ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hostes reuyle them.

Moreouer thus saythe the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Syon are become so proude, and come in with stretched oute neckes, and with wanton eyes: seynge they come in cryppynge so nycely with theyr feete: Therfore shall the Lorde shaue the heedes of the doughters of Sion, and make theyr beautye bare in that daye. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgyousnesse of theyr apparell and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, collers, & braceletes and hoodes, the goodly floured, wyde and broidered rayment, bruthes and perfumes, rynges and and garlandes, holy daye clothes and bales, kerchues and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonnettes and taches.

And in stede of good smell there shall be stynche amonge them. And for theyr gyrdles there shall be loose bandes. And for well set heere, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sake cloth, and for their beauty witherednesse and sunneburning. Their husbandes, and their mightye men shall perysh with the swerde in battell.

¶ For wante of men seuen women desyre to haue one man.

CAPI. IIII.

AT that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and they shall syt as desolate folke vpon the earthe. Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyll laye all oure meate and clothynge together in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, and that this shamefull reprose may be taken from vs. After that time shal the braunche of the Lorde be beautyfull and myghtye, and the fruite of the erth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall scrynge therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all suche as are wrytten amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Sion, and pourge the blood out frō Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and fyre. Yoke ouer vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Sion, and vpon their hole congregacion, shal the Lord prouyde a cloude and smoke by day, and the shynynge of a flamyng fyre by nyght: for all theyr glorye shall be preserued. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

¶ Of Christ and his vyneyarde, with an execratiō of couetousenese and of dronckennes.

CAPI. V.

NOw well then, I wyll synge my beloued frende a songe of his vyneyarde. My beloued frende hathe a vyneyarde in a drey frutefull plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it shoulde brynge him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shewe you now my cause (o ye cytezyns of Jerusalem and hole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwene me and my vyneyarde. What more coulde haue ben done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then haue it gruen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well I shall tell you how I wyl do with my vyneyarde: I wyll take the hedge frome it, that it maye perysshe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be twyned nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineyarde of the Lorde of hostes, it is the house of Israell, and hole Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equitie, but se there is wronge: for ryghtousnesse, loo, it is but miserye.

Woo be vnto you that ioyne one house to an other, and brynge one lande so nygh vnto an other, tyll ye can gette no more grounde. Wyl ye dwell vpon the earthe alone? The Lord of hostes rounded me thus in the eare: shal not manye greater and more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shal dwel in them? And ten akers of vynes shal gyue but a quarte, and thirty bushels of sede shal gyue but three.

Woo be vnto them that ryse vp earlye to vse them selues in dronckennesse, and yet at nyghte are more superfluous with wyne. In those companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consyder not the worke of his handes. Therfore commeth my folke also in captiuitie, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glorye shall be myxte with hunger, and theyr pryde shall be marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that pryde, dossyng and wisdome with suche as reioyse therin, may descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be brought lowe, and the hyghe lookes of the proude layd downe. But the Lord of hostes, that holy God, shall be exalted, and vntouched, when he shall declare his equitie and ryghtousnesse after this maner: Then shall the lambes eate theyr appoynted fodder, and shall fede plenteously in the mountaynes. Woo be vnto vayne persons that draw wickednesse vnto them, as it were with a corde, and synne, as it were with a cart rope, which vse to speake on this maner: lette hym make haste now, and go forth with his worke, that we may se it. Let the counsel of the holy one of Israel come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Woo be vnto them that call euyl good, and good euyll: whiche make darcknesse lyghte, and lyghte darcknesse: that make sower swete, and swete sower. Woo be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Woo be vnto them that are cunnynge men to suppe out wyne, and expert to set vp dronkennesse. These gyue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iuste cause of the ryghtous.

Therfore lyke as fyre licketh vp the straw, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: euen so (when theyr roote is full) theyr blossome shall vanysshe awaye lyke dust or smoke: for they despise the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

F Therfore is the wrathe of the Lorde kindled also agaynste his people, and he stretcheth his hande at them: yea he shal smyte, so that the hylles shall tremble. And theyr carkases shall lye in the open stretes lyke myre. After all this, the wrathe of God shall not cease, but he shall stretche his hande wider. And he shall gyue a token vnto a straunge people, & call vnto them in a farre countrey: and beholde they shall come hastely & spede. There is not one faynt nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor slipperey person. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ne lose his latchet of his shoo. Their arowes are sharpe, and theyr bowes bente. Theyr horses hofes are lyke flynt, and theyr cart wheles lyke a storme wynde. Their cry is as it were of a lyon, and the roryng of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall rore & hauntche vp the pray, and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so fearce vpon them as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde it shal be all darcknesse and sorowe. Yf we loke to heuen: beholde, it shall be darcke with careful desperation.

¶ Esay sawe the glorye of the Lorde, and was sent to Prophecye the desolation of Jurye.

CAPI. VI.

A IN the same yere that kynge Ozias dyed, I sawe the Lorde sytyng vpon an hygh and gloryous seate, and his trayne fylled the palace. From aboue stacked the Seraphins, wherof euery one hadde sire wynges. With twayne eche couered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one toother on this maner: holy holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The hole

B worlde is ful of his glory. Yea the gelles and Apocalyp. xiii.e dorechokes moued at theyr crienge, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O wo is me, for I was astonyed: that I (which am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lippes also) sholde se the kynge and Lorde of hostes with myne eyes.

Then flew one of the Seraphins vnto me hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouthe, and sayd: loo, this hath touched thy mouth, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiuen. After this I herd the voyce of ✠ Lorde

C takyng aduisement on this maner: Whome shall I sende, and who wyll be oure messenger? Then I sayd: here am I, send me. And so he sayd: go and tell this people: ye shal

Math. xiii.b Marc. iiii.b Luc. viii.b Iohn. xii.b Iohn. xx. viii.f Rom. xi.b. heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande, ye shall playnely se, and not perceyue. Harden the herte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, and shute theyr eyes: that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? he answered vntyll the cityes be vtterly without inhabitoures, and the houses without men, tyl the land be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shall lye waste. Neuertheles, the tenth part shal remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be frutefull. And lyke wyse as the Terebyntes and okettees byrng forth theyr frutes, so shal the holy sede haue frute.

¶ The Syrians moue battayle agaynste Jerusalem. A syrgyn shall beare a chylde.

CAPI. VII.

IT happened in the time of Achaz the sonne of Joatham, whiche was the sonne of Ozias kynge of Juda: that Razin the kyng of Syria, and Phaked the sonne of Romeliah kynge of Israel, wente vp towarde Jerusalem to besiege it, but wanne it not. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Achaz) herde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate togyther: his herte quaked (yea, and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde that is moued with the wynde.

Then said God vnto Esay: go mete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the heed of the ouer pole, in the fote pathe by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him, take hede to thy selfe, and be stil, but feare not, neither be faynt herted, for these two tables, that is, for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnesse of Razin the Syrian, and Romelies sonne: bicause that the kyng of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saying: We wyl go downe in to Juda, vexe them, & bringe them vnder vs, and set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus saythe the Lorde God therto: It shall not so go forth, neither come so to passe: for the heed cirye of the Syrians is Damascus, but the heed of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue and thre score yere, that Ephraim be no more a people. And the chyefe cirye of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heed of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye byleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Achaz, saying: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth, or towarde the heygth aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wyll requyre none, nether wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then hear to ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not inough for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the

E Lorde shall gyue you a token of hym selfe: Beholde, a virgin shall conceyue and beare a sonne, and shall call his name ✠ Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he may knowe the cupll, and chose the good. But or

cute that chylde come to knowledge, to eſchue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou art so afrayde for) shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda,) thorowe the kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are about the water of Egipt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the valleyes, in the bawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shall the Lorde shaue the heare of the heade and the fete and ſ beerde cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water, namelye, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two sheepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the land shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges,) shall be turned to breers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the land with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become breers and thornes. And as for all hylles that nowe are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of breers and thornes. But the catell shalbe dryue thyther, and the sheepe shall fede there.

¶ The delyueraunce of the land by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at whiche many shall stomble.

CAPI. VIII.

MOreouer the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that ye spede hym to robbe, and haste hym to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me sayethfull wytnesses: Uriah the preste, and Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had conceyued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: Maherschalal haschbas (that is: a spedy robber, an hasty spoyler.) For why, or euer the chylde shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Im, (that is father and mother,) shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye, thorowe the kynge of the Assirians.

The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayeng: for so moche as the people refuseth the styll renynge water of Silo, and put theyr delyte in Rezin and Romelies sonne. Beholde, the Lorde shall bryng mygtye and greate floudes of water vpon them, namelye, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Whiche shall poure oute his furtounes vpon euerye man, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vppon Juda, increasynge in power, tyll he get him by the throte. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande with his brode wynges, O Emanuell. Go together ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and gather you: muster you, and gather you, take youre councell together, yet must youre councell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prospere. Except Emanuell, (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde chastised me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayde moreouer: counde with none of them, who so euer saye: ponder people are bound together. Neuertheles feare them not, neyther be afrayd of them, but sanctifye the Lorde of Hostes, let hym be youre feare and drede. For he is the sanctifyeng, and stone to stomble at * the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea they shalbe snared and taken. * Luc.ii.e Roma.ix.g i.Petri.ii.b

Nowe laye the wytnesses together (sayde the Lorde) and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte vpon ſ Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the children whych the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israell, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon. Hebreu.ii.d

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske councell at the sothesayers, wytches, charmers and conurers, then make them this answere: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God, whether it be cō cernynge the dead, or the lyuynge. Yf any mā wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the law and testimony, whether they speake not after this meanyng: Yf he do not this, he stombleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger, he is out of patience, and blaspheneth his kynge & his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, & downe warde to the earth, and beholde there is trouble and darken esse, vexacion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of errour. And oute of soche aduersite, shall he not escape.

¶ He prophecyeth of Christes natyuytye and domynyon.

CAPI. IX.

EVen lyke as in tyme paste it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulō and the lande of Nephtali (whiche thorowe the see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to ſ land of Galilee) was at the fyrst in lytle trouble, but afterwarde sore vexed.

Neuertheles the people that haue dwelte in darkenesse, shall se a great lyght. As for the that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the lyght shyne. Shalt thou multiplye the people, and not increase the ioye also? They shal reioyse before the cue as men make merye in haruest, and as me that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the peoples peoples burthen: the staf of his shulder and the rod of his oppressoure, as in the †daye at Judi.vii.f Madian.

B Wherefore all temerarious and seditious power, (yea where there is but a cote spied with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a childe shalbe borne, and vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen: Upon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name. The wonderous geuer of councell, the myghty God, the euerlasting father, the prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablyshe it with equite and righteousnesse, frome thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe.

C The Lorde sente a worde in to Jacob, the same is come into Israell. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stomackes, on this maner. The syle worke is fallē down, but we will builde it with harder stones. The Wolbery trybze is broken, but we shall sette it vp agayne with Cedze. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so ordre their aduersaryes, that the Sirians shall saye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lorde shall not ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, neyther doo they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therfore the Lord shall rote oute of Israell bothe heade & tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, and by the tayle, the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which entourme the people that they be in a ryghte case, such be disceyuers. Suche as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge theese, are but caste awaye.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their yonge men, neyther fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are all together vprightes and wycked, & all their moutes speake folye. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched out styll. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a redde bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde.

D For this cause shall the wrath of the Lorde of hostes fall vpon the lande, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no mā shall spare his brother. If a mā do turne hym to the ryght hande, he shall hampth, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shal not haue ynoughe. Euery man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme, Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Juda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

¶ He threatneth the oppressours of the poore, and prophecyeth agaynste Sennacherib.

CAPI. X.

WO be vnto you that make vnrighteous lawes, and deuyse thynges, which be to harde for to kepe: wher thorow the poore are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people at therwith robbed of iudgement, that wydowes maye be your praye, and that ye may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitacion and destruction, that shall come from farre? To whō wyll ye renne for helpe, or to whome wyll ye geue your honoure, that ye maye kepe it: that ye come not amonge the prysoners, or lye amonge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lorde ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched oute styll.

Wo be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staf of my wrath, in whose hand is the rod of my punyshmente. For I shall sende hym amonge those ypocrytysh people, amonge the people that haue deserued my displeasure, shall I sende hym, that he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe lyke the myre in the strete. Howe be it, his meanynge is not so, neyther thynketh his herte of this kynde. But he ymagyneth onely, howe he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moch people, for he sayeth: are not my prynces all kynges. Is not Calno as easye to wynne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who saye: I were able to wynne the kyngedome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Jerusalem and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and their ymages as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: As soone as I haue perfourmed my hole worke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I also vysyt the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he standeth thus in his owne concepte. This do I, thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome. For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the landes of the people, I robbe their prynces, and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dryue them frome their syte seates. My hande hath founde out the hostes of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, that darre be so bolde, as to touche a fether, that darre open his mouth, or ones whysper.

But doth the axe boost it selfe, agaynste hym that heweth therwith, or doth the saw make any krackynge, agaynste hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rod dyd exalte it selfe agaynste hym that beareth it, or as thoughe the staf shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wod. Therfore shall the Lorde of hostes sende hym poucrte in his ryches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, & his Sanctuary shalbe the flamme and it shall kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and breers in one day, yea all the glory of his woddes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. As for hymselfe, he shalbe as one chased away. The trees also of his felde shal be of soche anombre, that a chylde maye tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israell, and soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke no more comforte at hym that smote them, but shal cõfort themselues with faythfulnelle and trouth in the Lorde, the holy one of Israell. The remnaunt, yea and the posterite of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For thoughe thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the see, yet shall but the remnaunt of them onely conuerte vnto hym. Perfect is the iudgemẽt of hym that floweth in ryghtousnelle, and therfore the Lorde of hostes shall perfectlye fulfyll the thynge, that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayed for the synge of the Assirians, he shall wag his staf at the, yea and beate the with the rod, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme. But soone after, shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfylled agaynst theyr blasphemyes.

Moreouer the Lorde of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the punyshment of Madian vpon the mount of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egyptiãs. Then shall his burthen be taken frõ thy shoulders, & his yocke frõ thy necke, yea the same yocke shall be corrupte for very fatnelle. He shall come to Aiath, and go thorowe towarde Migron. But at Machmas shall he muster his hoste, & goo ouer the foorde. Gabaah shall be theyr restynge place, Ramah shall be afrayed, Gabaah Saul shall fle awaye. The voyce of the noyle of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytezins of Gabim are mãly, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lyft vp his hand agaynste the mounte Sion, and agaynste the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of hostes shal take away the proude frõ thence with feare. He shall hewe downe the proude and fell the hye mynded. The thornes of the wod shalbe roted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghty fall.

The prophecyeth of the natyuytye of Chryste, and of his people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the fayth of the Heathen or gentyles.

CAPI. XI.

A Fter this there shall come a rod forthe of the hynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of his rote. The spyrete of the Lord shall lyght vpon it, the spyrete of wysdome & vnderstandynge: the spyrete of councell, and strength: the spyrete of knowledge, and of the feare of God: and shall make hym feruent in the feare of God

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thynge that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reprouue a mater at the fyrst hearyng: but with ryghtousnelle shall he iudge ỹ poore, and with holynes shall he reboureme the symple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the staf of his mouth, and with the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the wycked. Rygh tousnelle shal be the gyrdle of his loynes, trouth and faythfulnelle, the gyrdynge vp of his raynes. Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe, and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, Lyons, and catell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shal dryue them forth. The cowe and the bere shall fede together, and theyr yonge ones shall lye together. The lyon shall eate streawe lyke the oxe, or the cow. The chylde whyle he sucketh, shall haue a delyte to the serpentes nelle, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cockatryce denne. No man shall doo euell to another, no man shall destroye another, in all the hyll of my Sanctuary. For the earthe shall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as thoughe the water of the see flowed ouer the earth.

Then shall the Gentyles enquere after the rote of Jesse (which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles) for his dwellynge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande a iourney, to conquere the remnaunt of his people, (whiche are lefte alyue.) From the Assirians, Egyptiãs, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochians, and Ilanders of the see. And he shall set vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israell, yea and the outcastes of Juda from the foure corners of the world. The hatred of Ephraim and the emnite of Juda shall be cleane roted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euell wyll to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the West, and spoyle them together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall lay theyr handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleue the tunges of the Egyptyans see, and with a myghty wynd shall he lyfte vs his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall be make a way for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed oute of the lande of Egypte.

The songe of the churche for the obteynynge of the byctozy and ouer comynge of the worlde.

CAPI. XII.

A So that then thou shalt saye: O Lorde, I thāke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but thou hast refrayned thy wrath, & hast mercy vpon me. Beholde, God is my healthe, in whom I trust, and am not afrayde. For the Lorde is my strength, and my prayse, he also shall be my refuge. Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sa-
B uiours, and then shall ye saye: Lette vs geue thankes vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, and declare his councelles amonge the people, and kepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellente. O synge prayses vnto the Lorde, for he doth greate thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye oute, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for great is thy prynce, the holy one of Israell.

The prophecyeth the destruction of Babilon, the captyuytye, and the commyng agayne of the people.

CAPI. XIII.

A THis is the heuye burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos dyd se. Make some tokens to the hye hylles, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the prynces maye go in at the dore. For I wyll sende for my debites and my grauntes (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrathe I wyll call for suche, as triumphe in my glorye.

With that, me thought I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a rushynge, as thoughe the kyngdomes of all naciōs had come together. (And the Lorde of hoostes was the Captayne of the hole armye.) As they had come not only out of farre cōtrees, but also from the endes of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hymselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer frome the Almyghtye. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpō them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman
B that trauayleth with chylde. One shall euer be abashed of another, and theyr faces shall burne lyke the flamme.

For lo, the daye of the lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shall not geue theyr lyght, the sunne shall be quenched in the ryssynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punyth the wyckednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye stomaches of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boastynge of tyraun
C tes. I wyll make a mā dearer then fyne gold, and a man to be more worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreouer I wyll shake the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue oute of her place.

Thus shal I go with Babylon, in ye wrath of the Lorde of hoostes in the daye of his feare full indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased Doo, & as a flocke without a shepeherde. Euery mā shal turne to his owne people, and flee echone in to his owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow. And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swearde. * Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr eyes, theyr houses spoyled, and theyr wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall bringe vp the Medes agaynste them, whyche shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Then shall yong mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shall haue no pytie vpon wemen with chylde, & theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. * And Babylon (that glorye of kyngdomes and bewtye of the Caldees honour) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, neyther shall there be any more dwellynge there, frome generacion to generacion.

The Arabians shall make no mo tentes there, neyther shall the shepeherdes make theyr foldes there any more, but wyld beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of greate Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, & Apes shall daunse there: the lytle Oules shal crye in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absent.

Ezechi. xxxii. Math. xxiiii. & Marck. xiii. Luc. xx.

The retourne of the people from captiuitye. The prosperytye of the people of God, and affliction of theyr ennemyes. The pryde of Babilon.

CAPI. XIIII.

BVt the Lorde wyll be mercyfull vnto Jacob, & wyll take vp Israell agayne, & set them in theyr owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carye them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take those prysoners, whose captyues they had bene afore, & rule those that hadde oppressed them. When the Lorde nowe shall bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden withall, then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golde tribute come to an ende? Doubteles the Lorde hath broken the staf of the vngodlye, and the scepter of the lordlye. Whych when he is wroth, smyteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them, and rameth them continually. And therfore the hole worlde is now at reste and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yea euen the fyrre trees and Cedres of Li
C banus reioyse at thy fall, sayenge: Nowe that thou arte layde downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy cō mynge, all myghtye men and princes of the earth, earthe, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earthe stande vp from theyr seates, that they maye all (one after another, synge and speake vnto the: Arte thou wounded also as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell. Wormes shalbe layd vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde? hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, theu that (not withstandyng) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, & make my seate aboue the starres of God, I wyl syt vpon the glorious mounte towarde the North, I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet darre I say, that thou shalte be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narowlye loke vpon the, and thynke in them selues, sayenge: Is this ꝑ man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cyties to the ground, which let not his prysoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshyp, and thou art cast oute of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch, lyke as dead mens rayment that are shot thorow with the swearde, as they that go downe to the stones of the depe, as a deade coarse that is troden vnder fete, & art not buried with them? Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wycked shalbe without honour, for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroy theyr chyldren, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the land, and fyll the worlde full of castels & townes.

I wyll stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & root out the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll geue it to the Otters. and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destructiō, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath sworne an othe, sayeng: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfylled, as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade them vnder fote. Wherthorowe his yocke shall come frome you, and his burthen shalbe taken frō your shoulders. This deuyse hathe God taken thorowe the hole worlde, and thus is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hostes determen a thynge, who wyll dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his hande, who wyl holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kinge Achaz dyed, God thretened by Esaye on this maner: Reioyse not (thou hole Palestyna) as though the rod of hym that beateth the were broken, for out of the serpentes rote, there shall ware a kockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyrie worme. But the poore shall fede of the best hynges, and the symple shall dwell in safetye. Thy rotes wyl I destroye with hongre, and it shall slaye thy remnaunt. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cyties, & feare thou (O hole Palestyna), for there shal com frō the North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then mayntayne the messages of the Gētyles? But the Lorde stablysheth Sion, and the poore of my people shall put theyr trust in hym.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Moab.

CAPI. XV.

THis is the heuye burthen vpon Moab, A Ar of Moab was destroyed, (as me thought) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab perysshed in the nyght, and vanysshed awaye. They went to Baith and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne frome Nebo to Medba. * All theyr heades were colled, and all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes were they gyrded about with sack clothe. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes was there nothynge, but mournynge and weppynge. Heschbon and Eleale cryed, that theyr voyce was heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleated and cryed for verye sorowe of theyr myndes. Wo is my herte for Moabs sake. They fled vnto the cyte of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fayre frutefull bullock, they wente vp to Luhith, C weppynge. The way towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, ꝑ grasse was wythered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessarye greene thynge there was belyde. In lyke maner the thynge that was left them of theyr substaunce, they caryed it by water to Araby. The crye went ouer the hole lande of D Moab, frome Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but mournyng. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye hath sent thyther a bonde of men, which as a lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunt of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

Jere. xlviii. & Ozee. vii.

¶ The destruction of Moab.

CAPI. XVI.

THen sent the Lordes of the lande a mā of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth towarde the deserte, vnto the hyll of the A daughter Syon. (For as for the daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblyng bryde, that is put oute of her nest, by the fery of Arnon,) whiche messaunger sayde: gather youre counsell, come together, couer vs with youre shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth: hyde the chased, and betraye not them that are fled, lette the persecuted Moabites B dwel among you, be our ouer refuge agaynst the destroyer, for the aduersary oppresseth vs, the robber vndoth vs, and the tyraunte dryueth vs oute of oure lande. But the throne of youre kyngdome is full of grace, therfore he that syt teth vpon it with faythfulnesse and

trouth

trouthe in the house of Dauid, knowe the thynge, and do his diligence to helpe forthy, accordynge to equite and ryghtousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well knowen. And all thoughe they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded, yet is theyr strength nothynge lyke. And therfore Moab complaynyeth vnto Moab, wher thorowe they come all to mourne, and now that they be smytten, they take theyr deuyce benethe by the byrckwall, and make theyr complaynte.

Jere. xlviii. c.

The suburbes also of Hesebon were made wall, and the prynces of the Gentyles hewed downe the vyneyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the deserte, whose braunches stretched theyr selues forthe beyonde the see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vyneyardes of Sibma with greate sorowe I poured my teares vpon Hesebō and Eleale, for all theyr songes were layde downe, in theyr harueste and gatheryng of theyr grapes. Myrth and chere was gone out of the felde and vyneyardes, in so moche, that no man was glad nor songe. There wet no treader into the wynepresse, theyr mirye chere was layde downe. Wherfore my belye rombled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs sake, & myne inward membres, for the byrckwalles sake. For it happened thus also, when Moab sawe that she was turned vnlyde downe, she wēt vp on hye in to her Sanctuarye, to make her prayer there, but she myght not be helped. This is the deuyce, whiche the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayth thus: In thre yere shal the powre of Moab with theyr pompe (whych is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lesse then a fewe, and not rekened moch worth.

Jere. xlviii. c.

¶ I prophecye agaynste Damascus.

CAPI. XVII.

THis is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a cytie, but an heape of broken stones. The cyties of Aroer shalbe waste: the cattell shall lye there, & noman shall fraye them awaye. Ephraim shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glorye of the remnaunt of the Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the chyldren of Israell, sayeth the Lorde of Hoostes. At that tyme also shall the glorye of Jacob be verye poore, and his fatnes leane. It shall happen to them, as when one shearyth in harueste, which cutteth his handē full with the sickle, and when one gathereth the sheaues together in the valleye, of Rephaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer. Or as when one shaketh an olyue tree, whiche fyndeth but two or thre olyue berryes aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker, and turne his eyes to the holy one of Israell. And shall not turne to ỹ aulters that are the worke of his owne handes, neyther shall he loke vpon groues and ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall theyr stronge cyties be desolate, lyke as were ones the forlake plowes & corne, whiche they forsoke, for feare of ỹ chyldren of Israell.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate, because thou haste forgotten God thy Sauyoure, and hast not called to remembraūce the rocke of thy strength. Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plāt, & grafted a straūge braūch. In the daye when thou dyddest plante it, it was great, & gaue soone the frute of thy sede. But in the daye of harueste, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and miseryes.

Wo be to the multitude of moche people, that rushe in lyke ỹ see, & to the heape of folke, that renne ouer all lyke greate waters. For though so many people increase as ỹ flowing waters, & though they be armed, yet they flee farre of, and vanysh away lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hyll, and as the whyrle wynd thorow a storme. Though they be fearfull at nyght, yet in the mornynge it is gone with them. This is theyr porcion, that do vs harme, and heritage of them, that robbe vs.

¶ I prophecye agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XVIII.

WO be to the lande of flyenge chyppes, which is of this syde ỹ floude of Ethiopia, which sendeth her message ouer the see in chyppes of redes vpon the water, and sayth: goo sone, and doo youre message vnto a straunge and harde folke, to a fearfull people, and to a people that is further then this, to a desperate and pylled folke, whose lande is deuided from vs with ryuers of water. Yea all ye that syt in the compasse of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth, when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes, then loke vp, & when the horne bloweth, then herken to, for thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. I layde me downe, & pondred the matter in my house, at the Noone daye when it was hote. And there fell a myslynge shower, lyke a dewe, as it happeneth in Haruest. But the frutes were not yet rype cut of, and the grapes were but ronge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yea he hewed downe also the boughes and the braunches, and dyd caste them awaye. And thus they were layd waste, for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earthe togyther. So that the foules sat therupon, and the beastes of the earthe wintered there. Then shall there be a present broughte vnto the Lorde of Hoostes: euē that harde folke, that fearefull folke and that further is then this: that desperate and pilled folke (whose lande is deuyded frō vs with floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of Hoostes: euen vnto the hill of Syon.

The

The prophecyeth styll agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XIX.

THis is the heuye burthen vpon Egypt. Beholde, the Lorde wyll ryde vpon a swyfte cloude, & come into Egypt. And the goddes of Egypte shall trebble at his comynge, & the herte of Egypt shal quake within her. For thus sayth the Lorde: I wyll sette vp the Egyptiās one agaynst another among them selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynste his brother & neyghbour, yea one cyte agaynst another, & one kyngdō agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. When they aske councell at theyr goddes, at theyr prophetes, at theyr sothsayers and wytches, then wyll I brynge theyr councell to naught.

I wyll delyuer Egypte also in to the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell kyng shall haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawen out. Nilus shall synke awaye, and be dronken vp. The ryuers also shall be drawen oute, the welles shall decrease & drye awaye. Rede and rushy shall fayle, the grasse by the waters syde, or vpō the ryuers banke, yea and whatsoeuer is sowen by the waters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, and brought to naught. The fyshers shall mourne, all suche as cast angles in the water, shall complayne, & they that spreade theyr nettes in the water, shalbe sayne vexed. Suche as laboure vpon flax and spick, shall come to powerte, and they also that wetue tyne workes. All ỳ poundes of Egypte, all the pollycye of theyr Rotes and dyches shall come to naught.

Yea the vndiscrete Princes of Zoan, the councell of the wyse Senatoures of Pharao, shall turne to foolyshnesse. Howe darre ye saye and say of Pharaos behalf, I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall progenye. But where are now thy wyse men? Let them tell the & shewe the, what the Lord of Hostes hath take in hande agaynst Egypt. Fooles are those Princes of Zoan, & proude are the princes of Noph, yea they disceyue Egypte with the nobilite of theyr flocke. For the Lorde hath made Egypte dronken with the spirite of errour, & they shall vse it in all matters, euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spuynge aboute. For Egypte shall lacke good councell, so that they shall not knowe what to do, neyther begynnyng nor ende, neyther vpon the lande ne water. Then shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and astonyed, at the lyfting vp of the hand, which the Lorde of Hostes shall lyft vp ouer them. The land of Juda also shall make the Egyptyans afrayde, who so euer but speake vpon it, shall put them in feare. And that because of the councell, which the Lord of hostes hath deuyled agaynste them. Then shall the fyue cyties of Egypte speake with the Cananytes tunge, and sweare by the Lorde of Hostes, & Heliopolis shall be one of them. At the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes haue an aulter in the middest of the lande of Egypt, with this cytie thereby: Vnto the Lorde. This shal be a token or testimony vnto the Lorde of Hostes in the lande of Egypte, when they shall crye vnto hym, because of those that oppresse them, that he shall sende them a sauyeare & a Saueoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shall be brought vnto the Lorde, & the Egyptyans also shall knowe the Lorde at the same tyme, they shal do him reuerence with peace offrynges, & with meat offrynges, they shall promyse hym offrynges, yea & paye hym also. Thus the Lorde shall smyte Egypt, & heale it agayne, & so shal they turne to the Lorde, & he also shall haue mercy vpō them, & saue them. Then shall there be a cōmen waye out of Egypte in to Assyria. The Assyriās shall come into Egypte, & the Egyptyans into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shall both haue one Gods seruyce. Then shall Israell with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte & Assur. And ỳ Lorde of hostes shall blesse them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptyās, Assur is the worke of my hādes, but Israell is myne enheritaunce.

¶ Agaynste Egypt and Ethiopia.

CAPI. XX.

IN the same yere that Tharthan came to Asdod, where Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians lent hym, what tyme as he also besieged Asdod, & wanne it the same season. Then spake the Lorde vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sayenge: go & lose of that sacke from thy loynes, & put of thy shoes frō thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked & barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaūt Esaye goeth naked & barefote, it is a token & signifyeng of the thyng, that afterthis yere shall come vpō Egypte and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kynge of the Assyrians dryue both yonge and olde, as prysoners naked and barefote, out of Egypte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at theyr wittes ende, and ashamed one of another, the Egyptyans of the Moryans, and the Moryans of the Egyptyans, at the sygnte of theyr glory. Moreouer they that dwell in the Iles shall se euen the same daye: beholde, this is our hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be delyuered from the kyng of the Assirians. Howe wyll we escape?

¶ Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

CAPI. XXI.

THis is the heuy burthē of the waste see. A greuous visiō was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynde and rayne rusheth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lande. Who so maye disceyue (sayde the voyce) let hym disceyue. Who so may destroye, let hym destroye. Vp Elam, besege it O Madai, for I wyll styll all theyr grouynges. With this, the veynes of my backe were full of payne. Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. When I herde it

I was abashed: and whē I loked vp, I was afrayde. Myne herte panted, I trembled for feare. The darkenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yea soone make ready the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watche, eate and drynke. Vp ye captaynes, take you to youre shylde, for thus the Lorde hath charged me, go thy way, and set a watchman, that he maye tell what he seeth. And whē he had wayted diligently, he sawe two horsmen, the one rydynge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And ỹ Lyon cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the hole daye, and haue kepte my watche all the nyght. With that came there one rydyng vpō a charet, which answered, and sayd: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her goddes are smytten to the grounde. This (O my felowe threshers and fannes) haue I heard of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell, to shew it vnto you.

¶ The heuy burthen of Duma.

D One of Seir cryed vnto me: Watche man, what haste thou espyed by nyght, watch mā, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watch men answered: The day breaketh on, and the nyght is commynge. Yf youre requeste be earnest, then aske and come agayne.

¶ The heuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wod, in ỹ way toward Dedanim. Mete the thirsty with water (O ye cytesyns of Thema) mete those with bread that are fled. For they shal runne away from the weapen, from the drawen swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battell. For thus hath the Lorde spokē vnto me, ouer a yere shall all the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunte goeth oute. And the remnaunte of the good Archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe. For the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken it.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXII.

A THe heuy burthen vpon the valleye of visions. What haste thou there to doo, that thou clymmeste vp in to the house toppe, O thou cyte of myracles, ledycerous & wylfull? seinge thy slayne men are neyther kylled with swearde, nor dead in batell? For all thy Captaynes gat them to theyr horses from the ordynaunce, yea they are all togeather rydden awaye, and fled farre of. When I perceyued that, I sayde: awaye fro me, that I maye wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comforte me, as touchynge the destruccion of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of Hostes, wherin he wil plage, treade down, B and wede out the valley of visyons, & breake downe the walles, with suche a crack, that it shall geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamytes take the quyuers to carte and to horse, and that the walles were bare from harnesse. The goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse men made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couering of Juda put from thence, & then was seene the sege of the tymbre house. There shall ye se the cyttes in the walles of the cyte of C Dauid, wherof there shall be many. Ye shall gather together ỹ waters of the lower pole, and tell the houses of Jerusalem, and breake D of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pyt betwyxt the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & not eyng regarde hym, that toke it in hande, and made it. And at the same tyme shall the Lord of hostes call men to weppynge, mournyng, to baldnesse and puttyng on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyll theyr lustes & wylfulnes, slaughter oxen, they kyll shepe, they eate costly meate, and drynke wyne, + let vs eate & drinke, for to morow we shall dye. Neuertheles when the Lorde of hostes heard of it, he sayd: yea, yf this wyckednes of yours shalbe remitted, ye must dye for it. This hath the Lorde God of hostes spoken.

+ Esa. xxii. c. Eccle. ii. c.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Go in to the treasury vnto Sobna the gouernour E and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here to do? and from whence comest thou? that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for him selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen oute of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall caste the oute by violence, he wyll decke the of another fashyon, and put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall cary the into a farre countre, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an end, f thou vylleyne of the house of the Lorde. I wyll shutte the oute of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

After this wyll I call my seruaunte Eliakim, the sonne of Helkiah, & araye hym with thy cote, and gyrde hym with thy gyrdle, and I wyll geue thy power in to his hande. He shalbe a father of the cytesyns of Jerusalem, and of the kynred of Juda. I wyll also laye the + keye of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, and yf he open, no man shall shut, & yf he do shut, no mā shall open. I wyll fast him G to a nayle in the place of the most hygh fastfulnesse, & he shalbe vpon the glorious trone of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of the chyldren & chyldren chyldre, all apparel small and great, all instrumentes of measure & musyke. This shall come to passe (sayth ỹ Lorde of hostes,) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hyghest fastfulnesse, shalbe pluckt of. And when the weyght that hāgeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewen in peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayd it.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Tyrus, and a promyse to restore it agayne.

CAPI. XXIII.

AN heuy burthen vpō Tyrus. Mourne H ye shippes of Tharsis, for the is thrawen downe to the grounde, & conquered of them that are come from Cethim. The

The indwellers of the Ilandes, the marchãtes of Sidon, and they that occuppe the see, (of whome thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by see were there brates brought vnto the, and all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yea and all the power of the see complayneth, and sayth: O that I had neuer trauayled with chylde, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther nourysshed boye, nor broughte vp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceyueth it, she wyll be as sore as Tirus it self. Go ouer the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cyte, whiche hath bene of longe antiquite? whose naturs dwellynge farre of, commend her so greatly? Who hath deuised such thynges vpon Tirus the crowne of all cytes, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the vyghest and principall of the worlde? Euen the Lorde of Hostes hath deuysed it, that he maye put downe all pompe, and mynysshe all the glory of the worlde. Go thorow thy land (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a gyrdle more.

Thus the Lorde that remoueth the kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agayns that myghty Canaan to rote it out, hath stretched out his hande ouer the see, and sayde: Frome hence forth shalte thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sidon,) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stand vp therfore, and go where the enemye wyll cary the, where thou shalt also haue no reste. Beholde, (for thyne ensample.) The Chaldees were suche a people, that no man was lyke them, Assur buylded them, he set vp his castels and palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shyppes of the see,) for your power shalbe throwen downe.

After that, shall the. lxx. yeres of Tirus (euen as longe as theyr kynges lyke was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. yeres, it shall happē to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpō a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) & go about the cyte, thou arte yet an vnknowen wenche, make pastyme with diuerse balettes, whereby thou mayst come in to acqueyntaūce. Thus shall it happen after. lxx. yeres. The Lorde shall vysyt the cyte of Tyrus, & it shal come agayne to her marchaundyse, & shal occuppe with all the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occuppeng and wynnyng shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shal they laye vp nothynge behynde them nor vpō heapes, but the marchaundyse of Tirus shall belonge vnto the cytezyns of the Lord, to the fedynge and sustenynge of the hongrye, and to the clothynge of the aged.

¶ A prophecye vpon the tribulation that shall fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

BEholde, the Lorde shall waste & plage the worlde, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, and scattre abrode the inhabitours therof. Then shall the preste be as the people, the master as the seruaunte, the dame lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke vnto hym that boroweth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yea myserably shall the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in hym selfe. The earth shalbe heuye and decaye. The face of the earth perysh and fall awaye, the proude people of the world shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her indwellers.

For why? they haue offended the law chaūged the ordinaunces, and made the euerlastynge testamente of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure the earth, for they that dwel theron haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brent also, and those that remayn shal be very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shall be weake, and all that haue bene mery in herte, shall syghe. The myrth of tabrettes shalbe layd downe, the chere of the topfull shall ceasse, and the pleasure of lutes shall haue an ende, there shall no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beere shalbe bytter to them that dronke it, the wycked cytes shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyfte vp a crye because of wyne, all mens chere shall vanysh awaye, and all ioye of the earthe shall passe. Desolacion shall remayne in the cytes, and the gates shalbe smytten with wastnesse. For it shall happē vnto all landes and to all people, lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues, that are lefte vpon the tree, or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatherynge is oute. And those same (that remayne) shall lyfte vp theyr voyce, and be gladde, and shall magnifye the glorye of the Lorde, euen frome the see, and prayse the name of the Lord God of Israell, in the valeys and Ilandes. We heare songes longe to the prayse of the righteous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake: O myne vnfrutefulnesse, O my powerte. Wo is me, all is full of synners, whiche offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt, and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shall fall into the pyt. And yf he come oute of the pyt, he shall be taken with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shalbe opened, and the foūdacion of the earthe shall mone. The earthe shall geue a greate crack, it shall haue a sore rupne, and take an horrible fall. The earthe shall stacker lyke a dronken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her mysdeedes shall lye so heuye vpon her, that she muste fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lorde muster together the hye hoste aboue, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prysoners be, and shall be shut in ore warde and punyshed innumerable dayes. The Moone & the Sunne shalbe ashamed, whē the Lord of Hostes shall rule the at Ierusalē vpō ỹ mount Sion, before, & with his excellent councell.

Jere. xlviii.

¶ Thankesgyuynge to god for his workes,

CAPI. XXV.

A O Lorde, thou arte my God, I wyll prayse the, and magnify thy name. For thou bryngeste maruelous thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne olde councels, trueye and stedfastlye. Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone, and of beade cyties, broken walles. The palaces of the wycked destroyest thou out of the cytie, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnifye the, and the cyties of the cruell Hethen muste feare the. For thou arte the poore mans helpe, a strengthe for the nedefull in his necessite.

Thou art a defence againste euell wether, B a shadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the pie sumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge wyntle wynde, that casteth downe the bostynge of the vngodly, thou kepest men frō heate, with the shadowe of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the braunches of tyrauntes.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall ones prepare a feast for all people vpon the hyll. A C pleteous, costly, pleasaunte feast, of fat and well fed beastes, of swete & most pure thynges. Upon the hyll shall he take awaye the lyde vaile that hangeth before the face of all people, and the couerynge wherwith all Gentyles are couered. As for death, he shall vtterly consume it. The Lorde God shall wype awaye the teares frō all faces, & take awaye the confusion of his people thorowe the hole worlde. For the Lord hym selfe hath sayd it.

Apoca. vii. d and. xxi. b At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, this D is our God in whome we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lord that we haue wayted for. Let vs reioyse and delite in his healthe. For the hande of the Lord ceaseth vpon this hyll. But Moab shall be threstlyen downe vnder hym, lyke as the straw is trodē vnder fete in a donge hyll. For he shall stretch oute his handes vpon hym, lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme. And with the power of his handes shall he caste downe hys hye pompe. As for his stronge holdes and hye walles, he shall bowe them, caste them downe, & fell them to the grounde in to dust.

¶ Songe for the delyuerauuce of the people,

CAPI. XXVI.

A THen shall this songe be songe in the lande of Juda: We haue a stronge cytie, the walles and the ordinaunce shall kepe vs. Open the gates, that the good people may go in, which laboureth for þ trouth. And thou, which art the dore, & hast the matter in hande, shalt prouyde for peare, euen the peare that men hope for in the. Hope styll in the Lord, for in the Lord God is euerlasting strengeth. For why, it is he, that bryngeth low the hye mynded cytesyns, & casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth them to the ground, yea euen into the myre, that they may be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the steppes of the poore. Thou (Lorde) consydrest B the path of þ righteous, whether it be right, whether þ way of þ righteous be right. Therfore (Lord) we haue a respecte vnto the way of thy iudgemētes, thy name and thy remembraunce reioyse the soule. My soule lusteth after the all the nyght longe, and my mynde hasteth to the. For as soone as thy iudgement is knowen to the worlde, then the inhabitours of the earthe lerne righteousnesse. But the vngodly (thoughe he haue receaued grace) yet lerneth he not righteousnesse, but in that place where he is punyshed, he offendeth, and feareth not the glory of the Lorde.

Lord, they wyll not se thyne hye hand, but they shall se it, & be confounded, when thou shalt deuoure them with þ wrath of thy people, & with the fyre of thyne enemyes. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peare, for thou worketh in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though suche lordes haue dominacion C vpō vs as knowe not the, yet graunt that we may hope onely in the, & kepe thy name in remēbraunce. The malicious Tyrauntes when they dye, are neyther in lyfe nor in the resurrection, for thou vysytest them & rootest them oute, & destroyest all the memoriall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, (O Lord) thou encreasest the people, thou shalte be praysed and magnified in all the endes of the world. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite whiche they cōplayne of is vnto them a chastening before the. Lyke as a wyfe with chylde (when her trauayle cōmeth vpō her) is ashamed, cryeth, & suffreth the payne. Euen so are we, O Lorde, in thy syght. We are with chylde, we trauayle, and D beare, & with the spirite we bryng forth healthe where thorowe the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the worlde perysshe not.

But as for thy dead men & ours, that be departed, they are in lyfe & resurrection. They lye in the earthe, they wake, & haue ioye, for thy dew is a dew of lyfe and lyght. But the place of the malicious tyrauntes is fallen awaye. So go nowe my people into thy chambre, and shut the dore to the, & suffre nowe the twynckelyng of an eye, tyll the wrath be ouerpast. For behold, the Lord wyll go out of his habitacio, and vysyt the wyckednesse of them Micheas that dwell vpon earth. He wyll dyscouer the bloude that the hath deuoured, she shall neuer hyde them, that she hath murthered.

¶ The prophecyeth that all realmes shal be destroyed about the commynge of Christe.

CAPI. XXVII.

THen the Lorde with his heuy, greate, & A long swearde shall visyt Leuiathā that inuincible serpēt, euen Leuiathan that croked serpente, and shall slaye the whalfysh in the see. At the same tyme shall men synge of the vyneyerde of Muscatell. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it in due season. I watche daye and nyght, that no man breake into it. I beare no euell wyll in my mynde. Who wyll compell me, that I greatly forgetynge

all

all sayethfulnesse, shulde burne it vp at ones with thornes and bushes? Or who wyll enforce me to kepe or make peace? It wyll come to this poynt, that Jacob shalbe rooted agayn and Israell shalbe grene, and beare flowres, and they shall fyll ỹ hole worlde with theyr frute. Smyteth he not his smyter, as ouell as he is smyten hymselfe. Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Euerye man recompenseth with the measure that he receueth: he museth vpon his sore wynde, as vpō the dayes of extreme heate. And therfore shal the iniquite of Jacob be thus reconcyled.
And so shall he take away all the frute of his synnes.

As for auter stones, he shall make them al as stones beaten to pouldre, the groues and Idols shall not stande. The stronge cyties shalbe desolate, and the sayre cyties shall be lefte lyke a wyldernes. The catell shall fede and lye there, and the shepe shall eace it vp.
Theyr harneis shall be brente, theyr wyues whiche were theyr bewtie when they came forth, shalbe defyled. For it is a people without vnderstandyng, & therfore he that created them, shall not fauoure them & he that made them shall not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lorde shute frō the swyft water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte.
And there shal the chyldren be chosen out one by one. Then shal ỹ great trompet be blowē, so that those which haue ben destroyed in the Assirians lande, and those that be scatred a brode in Egypt, shall come & worshyp ỹ Lord at Jerusalem, vpon the holy mounte.

¶ Agaynste the pryde of Ephraim, and agaynste false Prestes and preachers.

CAPI. XXVIII.

WO be to the crowne of pryde, to the dronken Ephraemytes, and to the fadyng floure, to the glory of his pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valleye, whiche men be ouerladen with wyne.
Behold, the strength and power of the Lord shall breake into the lande on euery syde, lyke a tempest of hayle, that beareth downe stronge holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghtye, & ouer flowynge water. And the proude crowne of the dronken Ephraemites, shall be troden vnder fote. And as for the fadynge floure, the glorye of his pompe, whiche is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley, it shal happen vnto him, as to an vntymely frute before the harueste come. Whiche as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans hande.

And then the Lorde of Hostes shall be a ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto the remnaunte of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shalbe a spryte of iudgemente, and vnto them that dryue away the enemyes frō the gates, he shalbe a spryte of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of strong drynke. Yea euen the prestes and prophetes them selues go amisse, they are dronken with wyne, and weake drayned thorow stronge drynke. They erre in sepnge, & in iudgemēt they sayle. For all tables are so full of vomite & spitthynes, that no place is cleane. What is he amonge them, that can teache, instruct or enfourme the chyldren, which are weened frō suck or taken frō the brestes, of any other fashion then. Cōmaunde that maye be cōmaunded, byd that may be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbyd-den, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lispyng lyppes & with a straung language vnto this people, to whō he spake afore of this maner. This shal bring reste, yf one refreshe the weery, yea this shall bringe reste. But they had no wyll to heare.
And therfore the Lorde shall answere theyr stubbournes. (Cōmaunde that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that may be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle) That they may go forth, fall backward, be brosed, snared & taken. Wherfore heare the worde of the Lorde, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, which is at Jerusalē. For ye comfort your selues thus: Tush, death & we are at a poynt, & as for hell, we haue made a condicō with it, as though there breake oute any sore plage, it shal not come vpon vs. For wity dis-ceyte wyll we escape, & with nymblenes wyll we defende oure selues. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundacion, that who so putteth his trust in hym, shall not be confounded. Ryghtousnes wyll I set vp agayne in ỹ balaunce, and iudgemēt in the weyghtes. The tempest of hayle shall take away your refuge, that ye haue to disceaue withall, & the ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe your stronge hol-des of dissimulacō. Thus the appoyntmente that ye haue made with death, shalbe done away, & the condition that ye made with hel, shall not stand. When the greate destruction goeth thorowe, it shall all to treade you. Je shall take you quyte awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornyng, & cōtynue onely that daye and that nyght. And the very feare onely shall teach you, when ye heare it.
For the bed shalbe so narowe that a man can not lye vpō it. And ỹ couerynge to small, that a man maye not wynde hym selfe therin. For the Lorde shall steppe forthe as he dyd vpon the mōt *Perazim, & shall take on as he dyd vpō the *dale of Gabaō, that he may bryng forth his deuyce, his straung deuyce, & fulfyll his worke, his wonderfull worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuite increase not, for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destructiō & plage vpō ỹ hole earth. Take hede, & heare my voyce, ponder & marke my wordes well. Goeth not the housbande man euer in due season earnestly to his lande? he moweth & ploweth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it w fetches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Bar-lye in their place, Millium & Rye also in their place. And that he maye do it right, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he treadeth not the fytches out w a wayne, neither bringeth he the carte here & there ouer the comin but he threshyth the fytches out with a flayle and the comyn with a rod. But the whete he grindeth to make breed therof: In as moch as he can not bring it to passe with treadyng out. For neither the brosing that þ cart wheles make, ne his beastes can grinde it. This and suche lyke thinges come of the Lorde of hostes, whiche is marueylous in counsell, and great in rychtousnesse.

¶ The destruction of Jerusalem. Agaynste the commaundementes of men.

CAPI. XXIX.

a WO be vnto the, o Ariel, thou citye that Dauid wan. Take yet some yeres, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: thē shal Ariel be besieged, so that she shall be heuye & sorowful, and shall be vnto me cuē as a lyon. For I wyll laye syege to the rounde about, & kepe the in with towres, and graue vp dykes agaynste the. And thou shalte be brought lowe, and speke out of the erth, and thy wordes shal go humbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce shall come out of the erth, like þ voyce of a wytche, and thy talking shall grone out of the myre. For the multitude of thyne ennemies shal be like meledust. And the nombre of tyraunttes shal be as the dust that the wynde b taketh awaye sodeynly. Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hostes with thonder, erthquake, and with a great cracke, w the whirle winde, tempest, and with the flame of a consumynge fyre. But now the multitude of al the people that wil out agaynst Ariel the hole hoste, the strong holdes and siege is lyke a dreme which appereth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an c hungry man dremeth þ he is eating, and whē he awaketh, he hath nothyng: lyke as when a thirsty man dremeth that he is drinkinge, & when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his soule vnpatient.

So is the multytude of all people that muster them selues agaynst the hyll of Sion. But ye shall be at youre wyttes ende, ye shall be abashed, ye shall stacker and rele to & fro. Ye shall be dronken, but not of wyne. Ye shal rail, but not thorowe dronkennesse. For the Lorde shall graue you an harde sleepynge spirite, & holde downe youre eyes: namely youre Prophetes and heades which sholde se, them d shall he couer. And all visions shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is lerned, and sayth: rede vs this lettre. Then he ☞ answereth: I can not rede it, for it is shut. But yf it be gyuē to one that is not lerned, & sayd vnto him: rede this lettre: Then sayth he: I can not rede.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For as moche as the people draweth nye me with their mouth, and prayeth me hyghly w their lyppes (where as their herte neuertheles is farre fro me, and þ feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes and doctrines) therfore wyll I also shewe vnto this people a marueylous terrible & great thynge. (Namely this:) I will destroye the wysdome of their wise, and the vnderstanding of their lerned men shall perysshe. e Wo be vnto them e Esaie. xxx. that seke so depe, to hyde their ymagynacion before the Lorde, whiche reuerse their counsels in the darcknesse, & saye: who seeth vs, & who knoweth vs? Whiche ymaginacyon of yours is euen as whē the potters clay taketh a duplement, as though the worke might saye to the workmaster: make me not, & as when an erthen vessell sayth of the potter: he vnderstandeth not. Se ye not that it is harde by, that Libanus shalbe turned into Charmell, and that Charmell shall be taken as a f wod? Then shall deaf men vnderstande the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynd shall se without any cloude & darknes. The oppressed shal holde a merry feast in the Lord, and the poore people shall reioyse in the holy one of Israell.

Then shall the furyous people ceasse, and the mockers shall be put awaye, and all they that do wronge shalbe plucked out, suche as laboure to draw men vnto synne, and that desceaue hym, which reproueth them in the gate and suche as turne good persounes to vanite. Ruth. And therfore the Lorde (euen the defender g of Abraham) sayth thus vnto the house of Jacob. Nowe shall not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seeth amonge his chyldren (whome my handes haue made) such as halowe my name amonges them, that they maye sanctify the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell, & that they whiche afore tyme were of an erroneous spirite, haue now vnderstandyng, and that suche as before coulde not speake, are now lerned in my law.

¶ Curse agaynste them that forsake the counsell of God and sticke vnto the counsel of men. He threteneth the rest of the people, whiche after the destruction of Jerusalem wente into Egypt.

CAPI. XXX.

WO be to those wynkynge chyldren (sayth a the Lorde) whiche seke counsell, but not at me, which take a webbe in hande, but not after my wyll, that they maye heape one synne vpon another. They go downe into Egypte, (and aske me no counsell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shall be youre confusion, and the comforte in the Egyptians shadowe shalbe youre owne shame. Your rulers haue ben at Zoan, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall al be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche shall not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confusion.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpon b eyen

theyr backes towarde the south, thorowe the waye that is full of perill and trouble, bycause of the lyon and lyoneſſe, of the cockatrice and flyenge dragon. Yea the Mules bare youre substaunce, & the Camels brought your treasure vpon theyr croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egyptians helpe shall be but vayne and lotte. Therfore I tolde you also that youre pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherfore goo hence and wryte theym this in their tables, and note it in a boke: that it maye remayne by theyr posteritie, and be styll kepte. For it is an obstinate people, vnfaythfull children, children that wyll not heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They dare say to the Prophetes: Meddle with nothyng, and vnto the sothsayers, tell vs of nothyng for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preache vs false thinges. Trede out of the waye, go out of ỹ path, turne the holy one of Israel frō vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: forasmoch as ye haue cast of youre beaute, and comforted your selues with power and nimblenesse, and put your confidence therin: therfore shal ye haue this mischiefe agayne for your destruction and fall, lyke as an hygh wal that falleth bicause of some rysse (or blast) whole breaking commeth sodeynly.

And your destruction shall be as an erthen pot, whiche breaketh, no man touchyng it, yea and breaketh so sore, that a man shall not fynd a sheuer of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water therwith out of the pyt. For the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel hathe promysed thus: With styll syttynge and rest shall ye be healed, in quietnesse and hope shal youre strengthe lye. Notwithstandynge ye regarde it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrayned to flee vpon horses. And therfore shal ye flee, we must ryde vpon swift beastes, and therfore your persecuters shal yet be swifter. A thousande of you shall flee for one, or at the most for fyue, which do but only giue you euil wordes: til ye be desolate as a shyp mast vpon an hye mountayne, and as a token vpon an hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge, that he maye haue mercye vpon you, and lyfteth hym selfe vp, that he maye receyue you to grace. For the Lorde God is righteous, happye are all they that wayte for hym. For thus (o thou people of Syon, and ye citizens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in heuynesse, for doubtlesse he wyll haue mercye vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyll helpe the. The Lorde gyueth you the breed of aduersitie, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructer keeth not farre frome the, yf thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and thyne eares harken to his worde, that cryeth after the, and sayeth: this is the waye, goo this, and turne neyther to the ryght hand neyther to the lefte.

Moreouer yf ye destroye the syluer workes of your idolles, and caste awaye the golden copes that ye deck them with (as fylthynesse) an saye, get you hence: Then wyll he gyue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earthe, and gyue you breed of the increase of the earthe, so that all shall be plenteous and aboundaunt. Thy catell also shall he fede in the brode medowes, yea thyne oxen and Mules that tyll the grounde shall eate good fodder, whiche is pourged with the fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flowe oute of all his mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towres shall fall, the moone shall shyne as the sunne, and the sunne shyne shall be seuen fold and haue as moche shyne as in seuen dayes besyde.

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the brooked sores of the people, and heale theyr wounds. Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde shall come frome farre, his face shall burne that no man shall be able to abyde it, his lyppes shall wagge for verye indignation, and his tonge shall be as a consumynge fyre. His breth lyke a vehement floude of water, whiche goeth vp to the throte. That he maye take awaye the people, whiche haue tourned them selues to vanitie, and the bridle of errour, that lyeth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as the vse is in the nyghte of the holy solemnitie. Ye shall reioyse from your hert, as they that come with the pype, when they goo vp to the mounte of the Lorde, vnto the rocke of Israell. The Lorde also shall sette vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angrye countenaunce, yea and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earthequake, tempest of wynde and hayle stones. Then shall the Assirians feare also, bycause of the voyce of the Lorde, whiche shall smyte hym with the rodde. And the same rod whiche the Lorde wyll sende vpon him, shall moue the hole foundacion: with trompet, with noyse of warre and battayle to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynning, yea euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wyde, the nourishing therof is fyre and wod innumerable, which ỹ breth of the Lorde kyndleth as it were a match of brymstone.

¶ He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

CAPI. XXXI.

WO be vnto them that goo downe in to Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & comforte them selues in charettes, bycause they be many, and in horsemen, bicause they be lustye and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheleſſe plageth the wycked, and yet goeth not from his worde, when he steppeth forthe and taketh the victorye agaynst the houshold of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euil doers

doers. Now the Egyptians are men, and not God, and theyr horses flesshe, and not spirite.
B And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that sholde haue ben helped, and shall all together be destroyed. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe rozeth vpon the praye that he hathe gotten, and is not afrayde, thoughe the multitude of shepherdes crye oute vpon him, neither abasshed for all the heape of them: So C shall the Lorde of hostes come downe frome the mounte of Sion, and defende his hyll.
Lyke as byrdes flutter aboute their nestes, so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, saue, defende and delyuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye children of Israel, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your goynge backe. For in that day euery man shall caste oute his ydolles of syluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with youre synnefull handes. Assur also shall be slayne with the swerde, not with a mannes D swerde. A swerde shall deuoure hym, but not a mannes swerde. And he shall flee frome the slaughter, and his seruauntes shall be taken prysoners. He shall go for feare to his strong holdes, and his princes shall flee frome his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and his fyre in Hierusalem.

¶ The condicions of good rulers and officers.

CAPI. XXXII.

A BEholde, the kynge shall gouerne after the rule of rightousnesse, and the princes shal rule according to the ballaunce of equitie. He shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, & as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ruer of water in a thirsty place, & the sha dow of a great rok in a dry land. The eyes of seynge shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shal take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwyse shal attayn to knowlege, and the vnperfyte tong shal speke playnely & distinctly. Then shal the nyggarde be no more B called gentle, ne the churle lyberall. But the churle will be churlyshly mynded, and his hert wyl worke euil and playe the hypocrite, and ymagin abhominacions agaynst God, to make the hungrye leane, and to withholde drynke from the thyrstye: These are the perylious weapons of the coueytous, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceptfull workes, yea euen there as he sholde gyue sentence vp the poore.
But the lyberal plon ymagineth honest thin-ges, and commeth vp with honestye.

Aryse (ye ryche and ydle cityes) harken vn-C to my voyce. Ye careleslle cityes, marke my wordes. After yeres and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careleslle cityes. For harueste shall be oute, and the grape gatherynge shall not come. O ye ryche ydle cityes, ye that feare no perill, ye shall be abasshed and remoued; when ye se the barennesse, the nakednesse and preparynge to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon your breastes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the fruitfull vine-yarde. My peoples felde shall bryngе thornes and thystles, for in euerye house is disluptuousnesse, and in the citye wylfulnesse.
The palaces also shall be broken, and the greatly occupyed citye desolate. The tow-D res and bulwarkes, shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be tourned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spirite be powred vpon vs frome aboue.

Then shall the wyldernesse be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be recke-ned for a wode. Then shall equitie dwell in the deserte, and rightousnesse in a frutefull lande. And the rewarde of rightousnesse shall be peax, and her fruite, reste, and quyetnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innes of peax, in my tabernacle and plea sure where there is ynoughe in them all. And when the hayle falleth, it shal fal in the wod and in the citye. O howe happye shall ye be when ye shal safely sowe your sede besyde all waters, and dryue thither the fete of your oxe and asses.

¶ Threatninge agaynste the Assyryans. A descrip tion of them that shall be the Lordes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

THerfore wo be vnto the, o robber, shalt A not thou be robbed also? and vnto the that layest wayte, as who saye, there sholde no wayte be layde for the? Woo vnto the whiche doest hurte, euen so shalte thou be hurte also. And as thou layest wayte, so shall wayte be layde for the also.

Lorde be mercyfull vnto vs, we wayte for the. Thyne arme is at a poynte to vphyde vs, but be thou our helth in the tyme of trouble.
Graunt that the people maye flee at the auggre of thy voyce, and that at thy vplandyng the Gentyles maye be scattered abrode, and that theyr spoyle maye be gathered, as the grashoppers are commenly gathered together in to the pyt. Stand vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be fylled with equi tie and rightousnesse. Let truth and faithfuln-nesse be in her tyme: power, helth, wisdome, knowlege, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, theyr aungels crye without, B the messengers of peax wepe bytterly. The stretes are waste, there walketh no man ther in, the appoyntment is broken, the cityes are despysed, they are not regarded, the desolate earthe is in heynesse. Libanus taketh it but for a spoyle, that it is hewen downe: Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Charmel are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore saith the Lorde: I wyll vp, nowe wyll I get vp, now wyll I aryse. Ye shall conceyue stubble and breare strawe, and youre spirite shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnte lyke lyme, as thor nes burne that are hewen of, and caste in the

in the fyre.

Now harken to ye that are farre of, howe I wo with them, and consydre my glorye, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayde, a sodeyne fearfulnesse are come vpon the ypocrites. What is he amonge vs, saye they, that wyll dwelle by that consumynge fyre? Whiche of vs maye abyde that euerlastynge heate? He that leadeth a godlye lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the truthe: He that abhorreth to doo violence and discepte: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no reward: whiche stoppeth his eares ℔ he heare no counsell agaynst the innocent: which holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyll. He it is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be gyuē the ryght true meat and drynke. His eyes shal se the kynge in his glorye: and in the wyde worlde, and his herte shal delyte in the feare of God. ✳ What shall then become of the Scribe? of the Senatour? What of him that teacheth chyldren? There shalt thou not se a people of a straunge tonge to haue so diffused a language that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speche, but it shall be perceyued.

There shall Sion be sene, the heed cītye of oure solemne feastes. There shall thyne eyes se Jerusalem, that glorypous habytacyon: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out world without ende, whose cordes euerychone shal neuer corupte: for the glorypous maieslye of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs. In that place where kayre brode ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Galey rowe, ne greate thyppe sayle. For the Lorde shall be oure Capptayne, the Lorde shall be oure lawe gyuer. The Lorde shall be our kynge, and he hym selfe shall be oure Sauyoure. There are the cordes so layde abrode, that they can not be better. The masse set vp of suche a facion, that no banner nor sayle hangeth theron: but there is dealed great spoyle, yea lame men runne after the praye. There lyeth no man that saythe: I am sycke, but all euyll is taken away from the people that dwell there.

¶ The laste destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kyngdome and preesthode of that people was translated to the Churche and congregacyon of Chryste.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

COme ye heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Harken thou earth and all that is therin: thou rounde compasse & all that groweth therupon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, and his displeasure is kyndled agaynst all the multytude of them, to curse them, and to sley them. So that their slayne shall be caste oute, and theyr bodyes stynke: that euen the very hylles shal be wet with the bloud of them. All the sterres of heuen shall be consumed, & the heuen shall folde togyther lyke a roll, and all the sterres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vines and rygge trees. For my swearde (sayth he) shall be bathed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

And the Lordes swearde shall be full of bloude, and be rustye with the fatnesse and bloud of lambes and gotes, with the fatnesse of the kydneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a great offeryng in Bosra, and in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Unicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the gyauntes) and their land shall be washed with bloude, and their grounde corupte with fatnesse. Unto the also (O Syon) shall come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yere when thyne owne iudgementes shall be recompensed. Thy stoudes shall be tourned to pytche, and thyne earth to brymstone, and therwith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor nyght: But smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall goo thorowe thy lande for euer: But Pelicanes, Storkes, great oules, and Rauens that haue it in possession, and dwell therin.

For God shall sprede out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and wey it with the stones of emptynesse. When kynges are called vpon, there shall be none, and all prynces shall be awaye. Thornes shall growe in theyr palaces, nettles and thistles in their stronge holdes, that the dragons maye haue theyr pleasure therin, and that they maye be a courte for Estriches. There shall straunge bisures and and monstruous beastes mete one an other, and the wyld kepe company togyther. There shall the Lampaye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the hedgehog buylde, brygge, be there at home, and brynge forthe his ponge ones. There shal the kites come togither eche one to his lyke.

Seke thorowe the scripture of the Lorde, and rede it. There shall none of these thynges be lefte out, there shall not one (ne suche lyke) fayle. For what his mouthe commaundeth, that same dothe his spirpte gather togyther (or fulfylleth.) Upon whome so euer the lot falleth, or to whome he dealeth it with the lyne: those shall possesse the enheryaunce from generacion to generacyon, and dwell therin.

¶ Of the tyme and kyngdome of Chryste.

CAPI. XXXV.

BUt the wyldernesse shall reioyse, the waste grounde shall be glade, and florysshe as the lylye. She shall florysshe pleasauntly, and be ioyfull, and euer be gyuynge of thankes more and more. For the glorye of Lybanus, the beautye of Charmel and Saron shall be gyuen her. These shall shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maiestie of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearefull herte: be of good chere and feare not. Beholde your God commeth to take vengeaūce and to rewarde, God commeth his owne self, and wyll delyuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an Harte, and the domme mans tong shall gyue thankes.

In the wyldernesse also there shall welles spryng, and floudes of water in the deserte. The dry ground shall turne to ryuers, and the thurstye to spryngs of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shal growe swete floures and greene rushes. There shal be fote pathes and common stretes, this shall be called the holye waye. No vncleane personne shall goo thorowe it, for the Lorde him self shall goo with them that waye, and the ignorante shall not erre. There shall be no lyon, and no rauyshynge beest shall come therin, nor be there, but men shall goo there free and safe. And the redemed of the Lorde shall conuert, and come to Syon with thanksgyuynge. Euerlastyng ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnesse shall be among them. And all sorowe and heuynesse, shall vanysshe awaye.

¶ Jerusalē is assieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Ezechias.

CAPI. XXXVI.

IN the fourtenth yere of kynge Ezechias, came Sennacherib kynge of the Assirians downe, to laye siege vnto all the strong cytyes of Juda. And the kynge of the Assirians sent Rabsakeh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynst kynge Ezechias, with a greuous hoste, whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpole, in the waye that goeth thorow the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkiahs son, the Presidēt, Hobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabsakeh sayd vnto them: Tell Ezechias that the greate kynge of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: What presumption is this that thou trustest vnto? Thou thynkest peraduenture, thou haste counsell and power ynough to maynteyn this warre: or els wher to trustest thou, that thou castest thy selfe of fro me? lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reed (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to his hande, & thoteth him thorow. Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that truste in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me: we trust in the Lorde our God: A goodly God in dede: whose hye places and aulters Ezechias toke downe, and cōmaunded Juda and Jerusalem to worshyp onely before the aulter. Abyde the, thou shalt make a condicion with my Lorde the kynge of the Assyrians, that he shoulde gyue the two thousande horsses: arte thou hable to set men vpon them? Seynge nowe that thou canste not resyste the power of the smallest pynce that my Lorde hath, how darest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egypte? Moreouer, thynkest thou I am come downe hyther to destroye this land without the Lordes wyll? The Lorde sayd vnto me, go downe in to ȳ land, that thou mayste destroye it.

Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsakeh: Speake to vs thy seruaunnes (we praye the) in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, leest the folke heare, whiche syeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thynke ye that the kynge sent me to speake this onely vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also that lye vpō the wall: that they be not cōpelled to eate their owne donge, and drynke their owne stale with you?

And Rabsakeh stode styll, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and sayd. Nowe take hede howe the greate kynge of the Assirians gyueth you warnynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias disceyue you, for he shall not be hable to delyuer you. Moreouer let not Ezechias comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayth: The Lorde without doubte shall defende vs, and shall not gyue ouer this cītye in to the hande of the kynge of the Assirians, byleue hym not. But thus sayth the kynge of Assiria: Obteyne my fauoure, encline vnto me: so may euery man enioye his vyneyarde and frygge trees, and drynke the water of his cesterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bringe you in to a lande that is lyke youre owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, whiche is bothe sowen with sede, and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Ezechias disceyue you, when he sayth vnto you: the Lorde shall delyuer vs.

Myght the goddes of the Gentyles kepe euerye mannes lande frome the power of the kynge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was hable to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or whiche of all the Goddes of the landes, hath delyuered their countrey out of my power, so that ȳ Lorde shold deliuer Jerusalem fro my hand? Unto this Ezechias messengers helde their tonges, and answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged them that they shulde gyue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the Presidēt, Sobna the Scribe, & Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rēt clothes, and told him the wordes of Rabsakeh.

¶ Ezechias humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennacherib is slayne of the Aungel of the Lorde: and he him selfe is kylled of his owne sonnes.

CAPI

CAPI. XXXVII.

A When Ezechias herde that, he rente his clothes, and put on a sackcloth, & went in to the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the Presidente, Sobna § Scribe with the eldest preestes clothed in sack vnto § Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz, and they sayd vnto him: Thus sayth Ezechias: This is the day of trouble, of plage, and of wrath: lyke as when a chylde commeth to the byrth, but the woman hathe no power to bringe it forthe. The Lorde thy God, no doubte, hath well consydered the wordes of Rabsakeh, whome his lorde the kynge of Assirians hath sent, to defye and blaspheme the lyuynge God: with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath herd ryght well. And therfore lifte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that yet are lefte. So the seruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Esaye.

B And Esaye gaue them this answere: Say thus vnto your Lord: thus sayth the Lorde: Be not afrayde of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherewith the kynge of the Assyryans seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I wyll cause a wynde goo ouer him, as soone as he heareth it, he shall go agayne in to his countrey, there wyll I destroye him with the swerde. Nowe when Rabsakeh returned, he founde the kynge of Assiria layenge siege to Lobnah, for he hadde vnderstande, that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rummour, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre against him,

C And when the kynge of Assiria herde that, he sent other messengers to kynge Ezechias, with this commaundement: Saye thus to Ezechias kynge of Juda: Let not thy God deceyue the in whome thou hopest, and sayest: Jerusalem shall not be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Assiria. For thou knowest well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentyles (whome my progenytours conquered) delyuered at anye tyme for owe theyr goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, whiche dwelle at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemah, and the kynge of Arphad, & the kynge of the citye of Sepharuaim, Ena and Ana?

Nowe when Ezechias hadde receyued the letter of the messengers, and red it, he wente vp in to the house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lorde. And Ezechias prayed before the Lorde, on this maner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou only hast created heuen and erth. Enclyne thyn eare, Lorde, and consider, open thyne eyes, o Lorde, and se and pon dre all the wordes of Sennacherib, whiche D hathe sente his embassage to blaspheme the lyuynge God.

It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assiria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, and caste theyr goddes in the fyre. Notwithstandyng those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wod or stone, therefore haue they destroyed them. Delyuer vs then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that al kyngdomes of the erth maye knowe that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sent vnto Ezechias, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib this is the aunswere, that the Lorde hathe gyuen concernynge him:

Delyded arte thou and mocked, o doughter of Syon, he hath shaken his heed at the, o doughter of Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defyed and blasphemed? and agaynst whome thou hast lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lokes? euē agaynste the holye one of Israell. Thou with thy seruauntes haste blaspheined the Lorde, and thus boldest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes and sydes of Libanus with my horsemen.

And there wyll I cutte downe the hygh Cedre trees, and the fayrest Fyre trees. I wyll vp in to the heygth of it, and in to the chyefe of the lymbre woddes. Yf there be no water, I wyll graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shal drye them vp with the fete of myne hoste. Yea (sayest thou) hast thou not herde what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of old tyme? That same wyll I doo nowe also: waste, destroye, and bringe stronge cityes vnto heapes of stones. For theyr inhabitoures shall be lyke same men, broughte in feare and confounded. They shall be lyke the grasse and grene herbes in the felde, lyke the haye vpon house toppes, that wytthereth afore it be growē vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comming home, yea and thy madnesse agaynst me. Therfore thy fulfoulnesse agaynst F me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyll put a rynge in thy nose, and a bytle byt in the chawes of the, and turne the aboute euen the same waye thou camest. I wyll gyue the also this token, O Ezechias, this yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in store, and the nexte yere suche as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe and repe, yea ye shall plante vyneyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And suche of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take roote beneathe, and bringe forthe frute aboue. For the escaped shall go oute of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from § mount Syon.

And this shall the gelousye of the Lorde of G hostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to the city, and shall shoute no arowe in to it, there shall no shylde hurt it, neither shall they bygge about it. The same waye that he came, shall he re-

tourne, and not come at this cittye, sayethe the Lorde. And I wyll kepe and saue the cytye (sayth he) for myne owne, and for my seruant Dauids sake.

* Thus the aungell went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hoste, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose vp early (at Jerusalem,) beholde all laye full of deed bodyes. So Sennacherib the kynge of ꝑ Assirians brake vp and dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God, and Adramalech and Sarezer his owne sonnes, slewe hym with the swerde, and fledde in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar hadon his sonne raygned after hym.

NOt long after this, was Ezechias sycke vnto the deathe: and the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne house in ordre, for thou must dye, and shalte not escape. Then Ezechias tourned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre, O Lorde, that I haue walked before the in trouthe, and stedfast herte, and haue doone the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: Goo and speake vnto Ezechias: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue herde thy prayer, and consydred thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the cittye also, from the hande of the kynge of Assyria, for I wyll defende the cittye. And take the this token of the Lorde, that he wyll doo it, as he hathe spoken: Beholde I wyll retourne the shadowe of Achaz dyall, that nowe is layde out with the sunne, and bryng it tenne degrees backwarde. So the sunne tourned tenne degrees backwarde, the whiche he was descended afore.

¶ A thankesgyuinge, whiche Ezechias kyng of Juda wrote, whan he hadde bene sycke and was recouered.

I Thought I shold haue gone to the gates of hel in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeres.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer vysyte the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me lyke a shepeherdes cottage: my lyfe is hewen of, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webbe.

Whyle I was yet talkynge my selfe, he hewed me of, and made an ende of me in one daye.

I thought I wold haue lyued vnto ꝑ morowe: but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, & made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe: and lyke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes in to the heyght: O Lorde (sayd I) violence is wrong vnto me, be thou surety for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he made this to? that I may lyue out all my yeres, yea in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lorde) men shoulde lyue in bitternesse: and all my lyfe muste I passe ouer therin, for thou raysest me vp, & wakest me.

But loo, I wyll be well content with this bytternesse.

Neuertheles my conuersacion hath so pleased the, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my lyfe, so that thou hast cast al my synnes behynde thy backe.

For hell prayseth not the, death dothe not magnifye the.

They that goo downe in to the graue prayse not thy trouthe: but the lyuynge, yea the lyuynge knowlege the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father telleth his children of thy layth fulnesse.

Delyuer vs (O Lorde) and we wyll synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of our lyfe.

And Esaye sayde: take a playster of figges, and laye it vpon the sore, so shall it be hole.

Then sayde Ezechias: O what a greate thynge is this, that I shall goo vp into the house of the Lorde.

¶ Ezechias is reproued of Esaye, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadours of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXIX.

AT the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladams sonne kynge of Babylon, sent letters and presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how he had ben sycke, and was recouered agayne. And Ezechias was glad therof, and shewed them the cōmodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spyces and coostes of precyous oyles, all that was in his cuphordes and treasure houses. There was not one thynge in Ezechias house, and so throwe out all his kyngdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esaye the Prophete to kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue the men sayde, and frome whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esaye sayde: what haue they loked vpon in tyme house? Ezechias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayd Esaye vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the worde of the Lorde of hostes. Beholde the tyme wyll come that euery thynge whiche is in thyne house, and all that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caryed to Babylon, and no thynge lefte behynde. This sayth the Lorde. Yea, and parte of thy sonnes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte: Then sayd Ezechias to Esay: Nowe God prospere his owne worde, whiche he hath spoken. He sayd moreouer: so there be peax and saythfulnesse in my tyme.

CAPI. XL.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (sayth your God) comfort Jerusalem, and tell her that her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lordes hande sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lord in the wildernesse, make streyght the pathe for our God in the desert. Let all vales be exalted, and euery mountayne and hyll be layde lowe. What so is croked, let it be made streight, and let the rough places be made playne feldes. For the glory of the Lorde shall appere, and all flesshe shal se it, for why? the mouth of ꝯ Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And I sayd: what shall I crye? Then spake it: that all flesshe is grasse, and that all the beautye therof, is as the flour of the felde. The grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the brethe of the Lord bloweth vpon them. The grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye: But the word of our God endureth for euer. Moreouer the voyce cryed thus: Go vp vnto the hyll (o Sion) thou that bryngest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, and say vnto the cytyes of Juda: behold your God, behold the Lorde, euen the almighty shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde he bringeth his treasure with him, & his workes goo before him. He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambes togither with his arme, and cary them in his bosome, and shall kyndly entreate those that beare ponge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyste? Who hath measured heuen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earthe of the worlde in thre fyngers? Who hathe weyed the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath re- D kouered the mynde of the Lorde? Or who is of his counsell to teache him? At whom hath he asked counsell, to make him vnderstande, and to lerne him the waye of iudgement: to teache him science: and to instruct him in the waye of vnderstandyng? Beholde, all people are in comparison of him, as a drop to a boket full; and are counted as the leest thynge that the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the Iles are in comparison of him, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to mynister fyre for his offerynge, and all the beastes therof are not ynoughe to one sacrifyce. All people in comparison of him, are rekened as nothynge, yea vayne vanitie and emptynesse.

Know ye not this? Herde ye neuer of it? Hathe it not ben preached vnto you from the beginning? Haue ye not ben informed of this sithens the foundacion of the erth was layde: that he sitteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitauntes of the worlde are in comparison of him but as grashoppers: That he spreadeth oute the heauens as a co- F uering: that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: that he bryngeth princes to no thyng, and the iudges of the erth to duste: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neither their stocke roted agayne in the erth? For as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the strawe in a whyrlwynde.

To whom now wil ye lyken me, and who shal I be like, saith the holy one? Lift vp your eyes on hye, and consider. Who hath made those thinges, whiche come out by so greate heapes? and he can call them all by their names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strengthe, and myghte. How G maye then Jacob thyncke, or howe maye Israell saye: My wayes are hydde frome the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, or hast thou not herd, that the euerlastyng God, the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earth, is neyther werye nor faynt: and that his wysdome can not be comprehended: but that he gyueth strength vnto the werye, and power vnto the faynt? Chyldren are wery and faynt and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strengthe be encreased, Eagles wynges shall growe vpon them: When they runne, they shall not fall: and when they goo, they shall not be werye.

CAPI. XLI.

A BEstyll (ye Jlandes) and harken vnto me. Be stronge ye people: Come thyther and shewe your cause, we wyll goo to the lawe togyther. Who rayseth vp the iuste from the rysynge of the sunne, and calleth him to goo forthe? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde with his swearde, and scattre them lyke stubble with his bowe? He followeth vpon them, and goeth safely him selfe, and commeth in no foote pathe with his fete. Who hathe made, created, and called the generations frome the begynnynge? Euen J the Lorde, whiche am the fyrst, and with the last.

B Beholde ye Jles, that ye maye feare, and drawe nye, and come hyther. Euery man hath exhorted his neighboure, and brother, and bydden him be stronge. The smyth comforted the moulder, and the pesn smyth the hammer man, saying: Jt shall be good that we fasten this caste worke: & euen they fastened it with nayles, that it shulde not be moued. And thou Jsrael my seruaunte: Jacob my chosen seed of Abrahaam my beloued, whom J tooke from the endes of the earthe by the hande: for J called the frome farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalte be my seruaunte, J haue chosen the, and wyll not caste the awaye: be not afrayde, for J wyll be with the. Loke not behynde the, for J wil be thy God to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the with this right hande of myne. Esaye. xliii. a xlviii. a. Apo. ii. d. xxii. c Beholde, all they that withstande the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thyne aduersaries shall be destroyed and broughte to noughte. So that who so seketh after them, shall not fynde them. Thy destroyers shal perish, and so shall they that vndertake to make bataple against the. For J thy Lord and God wil strengthen thy right hande. Euen J that saye vnto the. Feare not. J will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou lytle wormе Jacob, & thou despised Jsrael, for J wil helpe the, sayth the Lorde and the holy one of Jsrael thyne auenger. Beholde, J wil make the a treding carte, and a newe sharpe, that thou mayst threshe and grynde the mountaynes, and bryng the hylles to poulder. Thou shalt fan them, & the wynde shall carry them awaye, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalte reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt glorie in prayeing the holye one of Jsrael.

Whan the thyrstye and poore seke water and fynde none, and whan theyr tonge is dryc of thyrste: J gyue it them, sayth the Lorde. J the God of Jsrael will forsake them not. J bryng forth floudes in the hylles, and welles in the playne feldes. J tourne the wyldernesse to ryuers, and the dryc lande to fountaines of water. J plante in the waste grounde trees of Cedre, Boxe, Myrre, and Olyues. And in the dry, J set Fyrre trees, Elmes and Hawthornes togither. All this do J, that they all togither may se and marke, perceyue with their heades and consydre, that the hand of the Lorde maketh these thynges, and that the holy one of Jsrael bringeth them to passe. C Stande at your cause, sayth the Lorde, & bring forth your strongest grounde, counseleth the king of Jacob. Let the goddes come forth themselues, and shew vs the thinges that are past what they be: let them declare them vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Eyther leate them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tel vs what shal be done hereafter: so shall we know that they be goddes. Shewe some thynge, eyther good or bad: so wyll we bothe knowlege the same and tell it out. C Esaye. xlv. a Beholde, ye goddes are of noughte, and your makynge is of noughte, but abhommacion hathe chosen you. Neuertheles, J haue waked vp one from the north, & he shal come. And an other from the East, whiche shall call vpon my name, and shal come to the princes, as the potter to his clape, and as the potter treadeth downe the myre: Who tolde that afore? So wil we confesse and saye, that he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thinge, there is none also that heareth youre wordes. Beholde, J wyll fyrste graunte them of Syon and Jerusalem to be Euangelistes. But when J consyder: there is not one amonge them that prophecyeth, neither (when J aske him) that aunswereth one worde. Lo, wycked are they and vayne, with the thinges also that they take in hand: yea wynd are they, and emptinesse, with their ymages togither. D E F G

CAPI. XLII.

BEholde, nowe therfore, this is my seruaunt, whome J wyll kepe to my selfe: myne electe: Jn whome my soule shall be pacified. J wyll gyue him my spirite, that he maye shewe forthe iudgement and equitie amonge the Gentyles. He shal not be an outcryer, nor an hye mynded person. His voyce shall not be herde in the streetes. A broken rede shall he not breake, and the smokynge flaxe shall he not quenche: but faythfully and truly shal he gyue iudgement. He shal neither be ouersene ne hastye, that he maye restore righteousnes vnto the erth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayth God the Lorde vnto him (euen he that made heuens, and spredde them abrode, and set forth the earthe with her increase: whiche gyueth breathe vnto the people that is in it, and to them that dwell therin) J the Lord haue called the in righteousnesse, and ledde the by the hande. Therfore wyll J also defende the, and gyue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the A Esaye. xlii. a be the lyght of ꝑ Gentyles. That thou mayst open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prysoners, and them that syt in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, whiche gyue my power to none other, neyther myne honour to the Goddes: Beholde you these newe tydynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thankes gyuynge: blowe oute his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, and all that is therin, prayse him, the Iles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernesse with her cityes lyfte vp her voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glade that sytte vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hygh mountaynes: ascrybyng almightynesse vnto the Lord, and magnifieng him among ꝑ Gentyles. The Lord shal come forth as a gyaūt, and take a stomak to him lyke as a stith man of warre. He shall roze and crye, & ouercome his ennemies.

I haue longe holden my peax (sayth the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, and kepe silence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and ones wyll I destroye and deuour. I wil make waste both mountayne and hyll, and dryue vp euery greene tryng that groweth theron. I wyll dryye vp the floudes of water, and drinke vp the spuers. I will bryng the blynde in to a strete that they knowe not: and lede them in to a fotepath, that they are ignorannt in. I shall make darcknesse lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges wyll I doo, and not forget them. And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in ydolles, and saye to factioned ymages: ye are our goddes.

Heare, o ye deafe men, and harpen youre syghtes to se, o ye blynde. But who is blynder then my seruaunte? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sente vnto them? For who is so blynde as my people, and they that haue the rule of them? They are lyke as yf thou vnderstodest moche, and keptest nothing: or yf one herde well, but were not obedient. The Lorde be mercyfull vnto them for his ryghtousnesse sake, and that his worde might be magnified and praysed. But it is a mischeuous and wicked people. Their yonge men belong all to the snare, and shall be shut in to prysō houses. They shal be caryed away captiue, & no man shall lose them. They shall be troden vnder fote, and no man shal labour to bryng them agayne. But who is he among you that ponderyth this in his mynde that consydereth it, and taketh it for a warning in time to come.

Who suffered Jacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lorde? Now haue we synned agaynst him, and haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, neither ben obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hathe he poured vpon vs his wrathful displeasure, and stronge batayle, whiche maketh vs haue to doo on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet synketh it not in to our hertes.

¶ God promyseth to send his Chryst, whiche shal deliuer his people. He forgyueth synnes for his owne sake.

CAPI. XLIII.

BVt nowe the Lorde that made the, O Jacob, and he that factioned the, o Israel sayth thus: Feare not, for I wyll defend the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy sauiour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliueraunce, the Morians and the Sabees for the: bycause thou wast deare in my syght, and bycause I set by the, and loued the. I pylled all men for the, and deliuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. I wyll bryng thy sede frome the East, and gather the togyther from the West. I wyll saye to the North, let goo. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: but bryng me my sonnes from farre, and my doughters frome the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, facyoned, and made for myne honour.

Bryng forthe that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blynde, deafe, or haue eares. All nacions shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge yonder goddes shall declare suche thynges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them bryng their wytnesses, so shall they be free: for then men shal heare it, and saye it is trouthe. But I bryng you wytnesses (sayth the Lorde) euen those that are my seruauntes, whome I haue chosen: to thintent that ye myght be certyfyed, and gyue me faythfull credence: yea and to consydre, that I am he, before whome there was neuer anye God, and that there shall be none after me. I am onely the Lorde, and without me is there no sauioure. I gyue warnynge, I make bole, I teache you that there shoulde be no straunge God among you. And this recorde must ye beare me your selues, sayth the Lorde, that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, and there is none that can take anye thynge oute of my hande. And what I do, can no man chaunge.

Deu. xiii. b

Thus sayth the Lorde, the holye one of Israell youre redemer: For youre sake I wyll sende to Babylon, and bryng all the strongest of them frome thence: Namely the Chaldees that boste them of their shyppes: Euen I the Lorde youre holye one whiche haue made Israell, and am youre kynge. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde, euen he that maketh a waye in the see, and a foote pathe in the mydstye waters: whiche bryngeth forth the chaygettes and horses, the hoste and the power, that they maye fall a slepe, and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

Apoc. xxi. b

Ye remembre not thinges of olde, and regarde not thynge that is paste. Therfore beholde, I shall make a newe thynge, and shortly shall it appere: ye shall well knowe it, I haue tolde it you before, but I wyll tell it you agayne. I wyll make stretes in the deserte, and ryuers of waters in the wildernesse. The wylde beestes shall worshyp me: the dragon and the Estriche. For I shall gyue water in the wyldernesse, and stremes in the deserte: that I maye gyue drynke to my people, whō I chose, this people haue I made for my selfe, and they shall shewe forthe my prayse.

D

For thou (Jacob) wouldest not call vpon me, but thou waddest an vnlust towarde me, o Israel.

Thou gauest me not thy younge beastes for burnt offerynges, neyther honouredest me with thy sacrifyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spices with thy moneye, neyther powredest the fatte of thy sacrifyces vpon me. Howbeit I haue not ben chargeable vnto the in offerynges, neyther greuous in incense.

But thou haste laden me with thy synnes: and wearyed me with thyne vngodlynesse.

Where as I yet am euen he onely, that for myne owne selues take away thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: to that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them. Put me now in remembraunce (for we wyll reason together) and shewe what thou haste for the to make the qupte. Thy fyrst father offended fore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynste me. Therfore I eyther suspended, or slewe the chiefest pryntes: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel in to reproue.

¶ Chryst promyseth to deliuer his churche, whiche he hath redemed. Idolatrye and kneelyng before Images. &c. are confuted.

CAPI. XLIIII.

SO beare nowe, o Jacob my seruannt, and Israell, whome I haue chosen. For thus sayth the Lorde that made the, facioned the, and helped the euen frome thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayd, o Jacob my seruant, thou rightous, whome I haue chosen. For I shall poure water vpon the drye ground, and ryuers vpon the thyrsty. I shall poure my spirite vpon my seed, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall growe together lyke as the grasse, and as the wyllowes by the waters syde: One wyll saye I am the Lordes. An other wyll call vnder the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall describe with his hand vnto the Lorde, and gyue him selfe vnder the name of Israel.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde spoken: euen the kynge of Israell, and his auenger, the Lorde of hostes: I am the fyrste and the laste, and without me is there no God. For what is he that euer was lyke me, whiche am frome euerlastynge? Lette hym shewe his name, and wo where therowe he maye be lykened vnto me. Let him tell you forth playnly, thynges þ are past, and for to come: yea and that wythoute anye feare or stoppe. For haue not I euer tolde you hytherto, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde youre selues. Is there anye God except me? or anye maker that I shoulde not knowe hym?

Wherfore all caruers of ydolles are but vayne, and their labour lost. They must beare recorde them selues, that (seyng they can neyther se ne vnderstande) they shall be confounded. Who shoulde nowe make a God, or faction an ydoll, that is profitable for nothyng? Beholde, all the felowshyp of them must be brought to confusion. Let all the workmasters of them come and stande together from amonge men: they must be abashed and confounded one with an other. The smith taketh yron, and tempre it with whote coles, and facyoneth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the strengthe of his armes: yea sometyme he is faynte for verye hunger, and so thurstye that he hathe no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh mete of the tymbre: and syzedeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some coloure: he playneth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordynge to the beautie of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Imag

Moreouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees: he bryngeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the wodde. Or elles the fyre trees whiche he planted hym selfe, and suche as the rayne hathe swelled, whiche wodde serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fire of it to bake bread. And afterwarde maketh a God therof to honour it: and an ydoll to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with an other he rosteth flesshe, that he maye eate roste his belye full: with the thyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue ben at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh him a God and an ydoll for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayth: deliuer me for thou art my God.

L

Yet men neyther consydre ne vnderstande, bycause theyr eyes are stopped, that they can not se: and theyr hertes, that they can not perceyue. They ponder not in theyr myndes, for they haue neyther knowledge nor vnderstandynge, to thynke thus: I haue brente one pece in the fyre: I haue baked breed with the coles therof, I haue rosted flesshe wythall, and eaten it: shall I nowe of the residue make an abhominacion, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wod? The keppynge of dulle, and foolyshenesse of herte hath turned them asyde, so that none of them can can haue a fre conscience to thynke: may not I erre?

D Consydre this, O Jacob and Israel, for thou arte my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me: & I will deliuer the.

Be glad ye heuens whom the Lorde hathe made, leste all that is here benethe vpon the erth be toykull. Helopse ye mountaynes and woodes, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and shewe his glorye vpon Israell. For thus sayethe the Lorde thy redemer, euen he that facyoned the from thy mothers wombe: I am the Lorde, whiche do all thynges my selfe alone. I onely haue spredde oute the heuens, and I onely haue layde the foundacyon of the earthe. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the sothsayers goo wronge. As for the wyse, I tourne them backwarde, and make their cunnynge folysnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my seruauntes, and fulfyll the counsell of my messengers. I saye to Jerusalem: tourne agayne. And to the cytyes of Juda: be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre theyr decayed places. I saye to the grounde: be dryc. And I dryc vp thy water floudes. I saye to Cyrus: thou art myne herdman: so that he shall fulfyll all thynges after my wyll. I saye to Jerusalem: be thou buylded, and to the temple: be thou fast grounded.

¶ The deliueraunce of the people by Cyrus. The comynge of Chryste and callynge of the Gentyles

CAPI. XLV.

THus sayethe the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whom he ledeth by the right hande: that the people may fal downe before him: I wyll loose the gyrdle of kynges: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not to shut theyr dores. I wyll goo before the, and make the croked strayghte: I shall breake the brasen wores, and burste the yron barres. I shal gyue the the hyd treasure, and the thynge whiche is secretly kept: that thou mayst knowe that I the God of Israell haue called the by name: and that for Jacob my seruauntes sake, and for Israel my chosen.

For I called the by thy name, and ordey-
B ned the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whome there is none other: for without me ther is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me: that it myght be knowen from the rysynge of the sonne, to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothynge without me. For I am the Lorde, and there is elles none. It is I that created the lyght and darknesse: I make peax and trouble: yea euen I the Lorde do al these thynges. The heauens aboue shall droppe downe, and the cloudes shal rayne righteousnesse. The earthe shall open it selfe, and bryngc forthe helthe, and thereby shall ryghtousnesse flourysh. Euen I the Lord shal bring it to passe.

Wo be vnto him that chydeth with his maker, the potsherde with the potter: Sayth the clayc to the potter, what makest thou? or thy worke seruely for nothyng? Wo be vnto him Roman.ix.& that sayth to his father: why begettest thou? Jere.xviii.a and to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayth the Lorde, euen the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thinges for to come, to cerrynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce, as touching the workes of my handes: I haue made the erthe, and created man vpon it. With myne handes haue I spred forth heuen, and guien a commaundement for all the host therof. I shal wake him vp with rightousnesse, and order all his wayes. He shall buylde my city, and let out my prysoners, and that neyther for gift nor rewardes, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The Lorde hathe sayde moreouer: The occuppers of Egypt, the marchauntes of the C Moryans and Sabees, shall come vnto the with treyoute, they shall be thyne, they shall folowe the, and go with cheynes vpon theyr fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. O how prohounde art thou, o God, thou God and sauyour of Israel? Confounded be ye, and put to dishonoure: goo hence together with shame, all ye that be worke-maisters of errour: (that is worshyppers of ydols.) But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, whiche is the euerlastynge saluacion: They shal not come to shame nor confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayethe the Lorde: euen he that created heuen, the God that made the earth, that facyoned it and set it forth: I haue not made it for nought, but I made it to be inhabyted. Euen I the Lorde, without whome there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earthe. It
D is not for nought, that I sayde vnto the seed of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, whiche when I speake, declareth the thinge that is ryghtous and true. Let them be gathered and come togyther, let them drawe nye hyther that are escaped of the people: Haue they anye vnderstandynge that sette vp the stockes of theyr ydolles, and praye vnto a God that can not helpe them? Lette men drawe nye, let them come hyther, & aske counsell one at an other, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynnyng? Haue not I the Lorde done it: without whom there is none other God? the true God and sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therfore tourne you vnto me (all ye endes of the erth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is elles none. I swere by my selfe: oute of my mouth Roma.xiiii.b commeth the worde of rightousnesse, and Philipp.ii.b that may no man tourne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tunges shall swere by me, sayinge: Verely in the Lorde is my ryghteousnesse and strengthe. To hym shall men come: but all they that thynke scorne of hym shall be confounded, and the hole sede of Israell shall be iustifyed and praysed in the Lorde.

¶ Idolatrye is reproued. The helth that commeth by Christe is prophecyed.

CAPI. XLVI.

A NEuertheles Bell shall fall, and Nabo shalbe broken, whose ymages are a burthen for the beestes and cattell to ouerlade them, and to make them wery. They shal synke downe, and fall together, for they may not ease them of theyr burthen, therfore must they go in to captiuitie.

B Harken vnto me, O house of Iacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel, whome I haue borne from youre mothers wombe, and brought you vp from your byrthe, tyll ye were growen: I whiche shall beare you vnto your laste age: I haue made you, I wyl also nourysshe you, beare you and saue you. Whome wyll ye make me lyke in facyon or ymage, that I maye be lyke hym? Ye fooles (no doubte) wyll take oute syluer and golde oute of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a goldesmyth to make a God of it, that men maye kneele downe and worshyp it.

C Yet muste he be taken on mennes shoulders and borne, and set in his place, that he maye stande and not moue. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto him whiche gyueth no answere: & deliuereth not the man that calleth vpō him from his trouble.

Baruch.vi.a

Consydre this well and be ashamed. Goo in to youre owne selues (O ye runnagates.) Remembre the thynges whiche are past sence the begynnynge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elles no God, yea and that there is nothynge lyke vnto me. In the begynnynge of a thyng, I shewe the ende therof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuyse accomplyshed, and fulfilleth all

D my pleasure. I cal a byrde out of the East, and all that I take in hande, oute of farre countreys, as soone as I commaunde, I bryngе it hither: as sone as I thynke to deuyse a thyng I do it.

Heare me, O ye that are of an hye stomacke, but farre from ryghteousnesse, I shall bryngе forth my ryghteousnesse. It is not far, and my helthe shall not tarye longe awaye. I wyll laye helthe in Syon, and gyue Israel my glorye.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynste Babilon.

CAPI. XLVII.

A BUt as for the (O doughter, thou byrgyn Babylon.) Thou shalte syt in the dust, thou shalt syt vpō the ground, and not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalte no more be called tender and pleasaunte. Thou shalte bryngе forthe the querne and grynde meele, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalte wade thorowe the water ryuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thy vnryghtes shall be sene. For I wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall let me, sayth our redemer, whiche is called the Lorde of hostes, the holye one of Israel.

Numeri.xi

Hyt styll, holde thy tonge, and get the in to some darcke corner, O doughter Chaldea, for thou shalte be no more called ladye of kyngdomes. I was to wrothe with my people, that I punysshed myne inheritaunce, and gaue them in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewedest them no mercye, but euen the very aged men of them hyndest thou oppressest ryght sore with your yoke, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be ladye for euer.

B

And beside all that, thou haste not regarded these thynges, neyther cast what shulde come after. Heare nowe therfore thou wylfull, that syttest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thyne herte: I am alone, and without me is there none: I shall neuer be wydowe, nor desolate agayne. And yet bothe these thynges shal come to the vpon one daye, in the twynklynge of an eye: namely wydowehed and

They shall myghtyly fall vpon the for the multitude of thy wytches, and for the great heape of thy coniurers. For thou haste comforted thy selfe in thy deceytfulnesse, and haste sayde: No man seeth me. Thyne owne wysdome and connynge hathe deceyued the. In that thou haste said: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shal trouble come vpon the, and thou shalte not knowe frome whence it shal aryse. Mischiefe shal fal vpon the, whiche thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodeyn miserye shall come vpon the, or euer thou be aware.

Nowe goo to thy conjurers, and to the D multytude of thy wytches (whome thou haste ben acqueynted withall from thy youthe) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou haste hytherto hadde manye counsellers of them: se lette the heuengasers, and the beholders of sterres come on nowe and deliuer the: yea and let them shewe when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde they shall be lyke strawe, whiche yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye rydde it for the vehemencie of the flambe: and yet it gyueth no synders to warme a man by, ne clere fyre to syt by. Euen so shall they be vnto the, whome thou haste vsed and occupyed from thy youthe. Euerye one shall shewe the his erroneous waye, yet shall none of them defende the.

¶ The ypocrysye of the Iewes is reproued. The Lorde alone wyll be worshypped, whiche hath chosen vs, and which loueth vs for his owne sake.

Heare

A HEare this, O thou houſe of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Iſraell, and are come out of one ſtocke with Iuda, whiche ſweare by the name of the Lorde, and beare wytneſſe by the God of Iſrael (but not with trouth and ryght) whiche are called fre men of the holy cytie, as they that loke for comforte in the God of Iſraell, whoſe name is the Lorde of Hoſtes.

The thinges that I ſhewed you euer ſence the begynnyng. Haue I not brought them to paſſe, immediatlye as they came oute of my mouthe, & declared them? And they are come. Howbeit I knewe that thou arte obſtinate, and that thyne necke hath an yron veyne, and that thy browe is of braſſe. Neuertheles I haue euer ſence the begynning ſhewed the of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to paſſe, that thou ſhuldeſt not ſaye: myne Idoll hathe done it, my carued or caſte ymage hath ſhewed it. Heare and conſyder al theſe thinges whether it was B ye that prophecyed them: But as for me, I colde the before at the begynnynge, newe and ſecrete thinges, that thou knewеſt not of. And ſome done nowe not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer herdeſt, before they were brought to paſſe, that thou canſt not ſaye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be ſome wherof thou haſt neyther herde nor knowen, neyther haue they ben opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme. For I knewe that thou woldeſt maliciouſlye offende, therfore haue I called the a tranſgreſſoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names ſake, I haue wt.hdrawē my wrath, and for myne honours ſake I haue ouerſene the, ſo that I haue not rooted the out. Beholde, I haue pourged the, and not for moneye. I haue cholen the in the fyre of pouerte. And that only for myne owne ſake, for I geue myne honoure to none other, that thou ſhuldeſt not deſpyſe me. Herken vn to me O Jacob, and Iſraell whome I haue called. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrſte C and the laſte. My hande is the foundacion of the earth, and my ryght hande ſpanneth ouer the heauens. As ſoone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and herken: Whiche of yonder goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll do by the kynge of Babylon (whome he loueth and fauoureth) and by the Caldees his arme? I my ſelf alone haue tolde you this before. Yea I ſhall call hym, and bringe hym forth, and geue hym a proſperous iourneye. Come nye, and heare this: haue I ſpoken any thynge darkly ſence the begynnyng? when a thynge begynneth, I am there.

D Wherfore the Lorde God with his ſpirite hath ſent me. And thus ſayth the Lorde God thyne auenger, the holy one of Iſraell: I am the Lorde thy God, which teache the profita ble thinges, and leade the the way, that thou ſhuldeſt go. If thou wylte nowe regarde my commaundemente, thy welthynes ſhall be as the water ſtreame, & thy ryghteouſnes as the waues flowynge in the ſee. Thy ſede ſhall be lyke as the ſande in the ſee, and the frute of thy body, lyke the grauell ſtones therof. Thy name ſhall not be roted out, nor deſtroyed before me. Ye ſhall go awaye frome Babylon, and eſcape the Caldees with a merye voyce. ¶ The Jewes are reproued, and also called.

CAPI. L.

A THus sayth the Lorde: Where is the byll of youre mothers deuorcement, that I sent vnto her, or who is the dsurer, to whome I solde you? Beholde, for your owne offences are ye solde, & because of youre transgression is youre mother forsaken. For why wolde no man receyue me, when I came? and when I called, no man gaue me an answere. Was my hand clene smyten of, that it might not helpe? or had I not power to delyuer? lo, at a worde I drynke vp the see, and of waters floudes I make dryye lande, so that for waute of water, the fysh corrupte and dye of thurst. B Esa. As for heauen, I clothe it with darknesse, and put a sack vpon it.

The Lorde God hath geuen me a wel lerned tunge, so that I can comforte them which are troubled, yea and that in due season. He waked myne eare vp by tymes in the mornynge (as the scolemasters do) that I myght herken. The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye naye, nor withdrawe my selfe, but I offre my backe vnto the smyters, and my cheekes to ꝑ nyppers. I turne not my face from shame and spittyng, for the Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confoūded. I haue hardened my face lyke a flynte stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyll then go with me to lawe? Let vs stande one agaynste another, yf there be any that wyl reason with me, let him come here forthe to me. Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me? lo, they shalbe all lyke as an olde clothe, D which the mothes shall eate vp.

Therfore who so feareth the Lord among you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darkenesse, and no lyght shyneth vpon hym, let hym hope in the Lord, and holde hym by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gyrded youre selues with the flame. Ye walke in the glysterynge of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cōmeth vnto you fro my hande, namelye that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

¶ Consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the faythfull

CAPI. LI.

HErken vnto me, ye that holde of righteousnes, ye that seke the Lorde. Take hede vnto the stone, whereout ye are hewen, and to the graue whereout ye are dygged. Consydre Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you, howe that I called hym alone, prospered hym wel, and encreased hym, howe the Lorde comforted Syon, and repayred all her decaye, makyng her delerte as a paradyse, and her wyldernesse as the garden of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye was there, thankesgeuynge and the voyce of prayse. Hauken- B specte vnto me then, O my people, and laye thyne eare to me, for a lawe & an ordynaunce shall go forth fro me, to lyghte the Gentyles. It is at hande, that my health and my righteousnesse shall go forthe, and the people shalbe ordred with myne arme.

The Ilandes (that is the Gentyles) shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lyft vp your eyes towarde heauen, and loke vpon the earth beneth. For the heauens shall vanysh awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall ware lyke a clothe, & they that dwell therin, shall perysshe in lyke maner. But my healthe shall endure for euer, and my ryghtousnes shall not fayle. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that have pleasure in ryghtousnes, thou people that bearest my law in thyne herte. Feare not the taulte of men, be not afrayd of theyr blasphemyes and reuylynges, for wormes and mothes shall eate them vp lyke cloth & wull. But my ryghtousnesse shall endure for euer, and my saufynge healthe from generation to generation. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strōg, O thou arme of the Lorde, wake vp, lyke as in tymes paste, euer and sence the worlde began.

Arte not thou he, that hast wounded that proude Lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces? Arte not thou euen he, whiche hast dryed vp the depe of the see? which hast made playn the see grounde, that the delyuered myght go thorowe? That the redemed of the Lorde, which turned agayne, myght come with ioye vnto Syon, there to endure for euer? That myrthe and gladnesse myght be with them, that sorowe and wo myght fle from them? Yea I, I am euen he, that in all thynges geueth you consolacion. What arte thou then, that feareste a mortall man, the chylde of mā, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure? And forgettest the Lord that made the, that spred out the heauens, and layde the foundacion of the earthe. But thou arte euer afrayde for the fyght of thyne oppresloure, which is ready to do harme. Where is the wrathe of the oppresloure? It commeth on fast, it maketh haste to appeare. It shall not perysh, that it shulde not be able to destroye, neyther shall it fayle for faute of nourysshynge. I am the Lorde thy God, that make the see to be styll, and to rage, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and defende the with the turnynge of my hande, that thou mayest plante the heauens, and laye the foundacions of the earthe, and saye vnto Syon: thou arte my people.

Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Jerusalē, thou that from the hande of the Lorde haste dronken oute the cuppe of his wrathe, thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the slombynge cuppe to the botome. For amonge all the sonnes whome thou haste begotten, there is not one to leade the by the hande, of all the sonnes that thou hast norysshed. Borthe these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sory for it? Yea, destruction, wastyng, hunger, & swearde, but who hath cōforted the? Thy sonnes lye comfortles at the heade of euery strete, lyke a taken benyson, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lorde, and punyshmente of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and dronken (howe be it not with wyne.) Heare this: Thus sayth the Lorde: thy Lorde and God, the defender of his people: Beholde, I wyll take the slombrynge cuppe out of thy hande, euē the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath, that from hence forth thou shalt neuer drynk it more, and wyll putte it in theyr hande that trouble the, whiche haue spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go ouer, make thy body euen with the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

The consolacion and comfort to the people of God.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: My people went e downe afore tyme in to Egypte, there to be straungers. Afterwarde dyd the kyng of the Assyrians oppresse them, for naught. And nowe what profyt is it to me (sayth the Lord) that my people is freely caryed awaye, and brought in to bondage by theyr rulers, & my name euer styll blasphemed? sayth the Lorde. But that my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe wyll speache in that daye. Behold, here am I. O howe beutyfull are the fete of the Embassadour, that bryngeth the message from the mountayne, and proclaymeth peace, that bryngeth the good tydinges, and preacheth healthe, and sayth vnto Syō: Thy God is the Kynge. We shall reken hym so symple and so vyle, that we shall hyde oure faces from hym. How be it (of a trouth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmite, and beareth oure payne. Yet we shall iudge hym, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God, where as he (not withstandyng) shalbe wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednes. Luke.xxiii.d

THerefore be glad now, thou baren that bearest not, Reioyce, synge and be mery, thou that art not with chylde. For the desolate hath moo chyldren, then the maryed wyfe, sayth the Lorde. Make thy tente wyder, and sprede out the banginges of thyne habitacion, spare not, laye forth thy cordes, & make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt breake out on the ryght syde and on the lefte, & thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possession, & dwell in the desolate cyties. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded. Be not ashamed, for thou shalte not come to confusion. Yea thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth and shalt not remembre the dishonour of thy wedowhead. For he that made the, shalbe thy Lorde and husbande, (whose name is the Lorde of hostes,) and thyne auenger shall be euen the holy one of Israell, the Lorde of the hole worlde. For the Lorde shall call the, beynge as a desolate sorowfull woman, and as a ponge wyfe that hathe broken her wedlocke, sayth thy God.

A lytle whyle haue I forsake the, but with greate mercyfulnes shall I take the vp vnto me. When I was angry, I hyd my face from the for a lytle season, but therowe euerlastyng goodnes shall I pardon the, sayth the Lorde thyne auenger. * And this muste be vnto me, as the water of Noe, for lyke as I haue swore that I wyll not brynge the water of Noe any more vpon the worlde, so haue I swore that I wyll neuer be angry with the, nor reproue the. The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylles shall fall downe, but my louyng kyndnesse shall not moue, & the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull louer. Beholde thou poore, vexed, and despysed. I wyll make thy walles of precyous stones, and thy fondacion of Saphires, thy wyndowes of Christall, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, and thy borders of pleasaūt stones. * Thy chyldren shall all be taught of God, and I wyll geue them plentyousnes of peace. In ryghtousnes shalte thou be grounded, & be farre from oppression, for the whiche thou nedest not be afrayed, neyther for hynderaunce, for it shall not come nye the. CAPI. LV.

COme to the waters all ye that be thursty, and ye that haue no money. Come bye, that ye maye haue to eate. Come, bye wyne and mylke, without any money, or money worth. Wherefore do ye laye out youre money, for the thynge that fedeth not, and spende youre laboure aboute the thynge that satisfyeth you not? But herken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the beste, and youre soule euen the sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I shall geue hym for a wytnesse among the folke, for a Prynce and Captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalte call an vnknowen people, and a people that hadde no knowledge of the, shall runne vnto the, because of the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, which glorifyeth the. Seke the Lord, wyle he maye be founde, and call vpon hym wyle he is nye. Let the vngodlye man forsake his wayes, and the vnrighteous his ymaginacions, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde, he shall be mercyfull vnto hym and to our God, for he is ready to forgyue. For thus sayth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not youre thoughtes, & youre wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes exceade youres, & my thoughtes yours. And lyke as the rayne and snow commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it frutefull, and greene, that it maye geue corne and bread vnto the sower. So the worde also that commeth oute of my mouth shal not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplyth my wyll and prosperе in the thynge, wherto I sende it. And so shall ye goo forthe with ioye, and be led with peace. The mountaynes and hylles shall syng with you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall clappe theyr handes. For thornes, there shall growe. Fyrre trees, and the Myrte tree in the steade of brieres. And this shall be done to the prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastynge token, that shall not be taken awaye.

¶ An exhortacion to iudgement and righteousnesse, and to the spirituall keping of the Sabboth. Against Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flocke.

CAPI. LVI.

THus sayth the Lorde: Kepe equite, and do ryght, for my saluynge healthe shall come shortly, and my ryghtousnes shalbe opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans chylde which kepeth the same. Be that taketh hede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth, (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe that he do no euell. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, saye: Alas, the Lord hath shut me cleane out from his people. Neyther shall the gelded mā saye: Lo, I am a dyre tree. For thus sayth the Lorde, vnto ỹ gelded that kepeth my Sabboth: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunt. Vnto them wyll I geue in my housholde and within my walles, a better heretage & name then yf they had bene called sonnes & doughters. I wyll geue them an euerlastyng name, that shall not perysshe. Agayne, he sayth vnto the straungers that are disposed to flyche to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue his name. That they shalbe no bonde men. And all they, which kepe themselues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunte. Then wyll I bringe to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnte offrynges and sacrifices shall be accepted vpon myne aulter, for my house shalbe an house of prayer for all people. Math.xxi.b Marc.xi.c Luke.xix.b

Thus sayth the Lorde God which gathereth together the scattered of Israell. I wyll bringe yet another congregacion to hym. All the beastes of the felde, and all the beastes of the wood, shall come to deuoure hym. For his watche men are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandynge, they are all domme dogges, not beynge able to barcke, they are sleperye, slogysh are they, and lye snorynge, they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnes with all his power. Come (saye they) I wyll fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues, that we maye be dronken. And do to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea & much more. D Jeremy.vi.a Sapience.ii.b

¶ The Jewes are rebuked for theyr iniurye done to Chryste.

CAPI. LVII.

BVt in the meane season the ryghtous perysheth, and no man regardeth it in his herte. Good godly people are taken awaye, and no man consydreth it. Namelye, that the ryghtous is cōueyed awaye tyrow the wycked, that he hym selfe myghte be in rest, lye quyetly vpon his bed, and lyue after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers chyldren, ye sonnes of the aduoutrer and the hore. Wherin take ye youre pleasure? Vpon whom gape ye with youre mouth, and bleare out youre tonge? Are ye not chyldren of aduoutry, and a sede of dissimulatiō? Ye take your pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, the chylde beynge slayne in the valleys and dennes of stone. Thy part shalbe with the stony rockes by the ryuer. Yea euen these shall be thy parte. For there thou haste poured meate and drynkoffeynges vnto them. Shulde I ouerse that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thyther, and there haste thou slayne sacrifices. Behynd the dores and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce. A *Math.xii.d B

When thou haddest discouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest downe and made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou dyddest catue the certayne of yonder Idols, and louedest theyr couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest strayght to kynges with oyle and dyuerse oynmentes, (that is) thou hast sente thy messengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou haste had trouble for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or healthe)

For when wylt thou be abashed or feare, seyng thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, neyther hast me in thyne herte? Thynkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace, (as afore tyme) that thou fearest me not? Yea verely I wyll declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shall not profyt the when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape delyuer the. And therfore thus he sayethe: Make ready, make ready, and clese the streete, take vp what ye can oute of the waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlastyngnelle, whose name is the holye one. * I dwell hye aboue and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contrite and humble sprite, that I maye healc a troubled mynde, and a contrite herte. For I chyde not euer, and am not wroth without ende. But the blastynge goeth fro me, thoughe I make the breath. I am wroth with hym for his couetoulnes and luste, I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angry, when he turneth him selfe, and foloweth the by waye of his owne herte. But yf I maye se his ryght waye agayne, I make hym hole, I lede hym and restore hym vnto them whome he maketh toyfull, & that were sory for hym. I make the frutes of thankelgeuynge. I gene peace vnto them that are farre of, & to them that are nye, saye I the Lord, that make him hole. Yt pleaseth not me, tyll thou deale thy bread to the hongry, and bryng the poore fatherlelle home into thy house, and when thou seest the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne owne flesh.

Then shall thy lyght breake forth as the morynge, and thy health florysh ryght fore lye, thy ryghteoulnelle shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: Here I am. Yea yf thou layest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, and ceasest from blasphemous talkynge, yf thou hast compassion vpon the hongry, and refreshest the troubled soule. Then shall thy lyght springe out in the darkenelle, and thy darkenelle shalbe as the none daye. The Lorde shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfye the delyre of thyne herte, & fyll thy bones with mary. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and the buylder agayne of the waye of the Sabboth.

Yea yf thou turne thy fete from the Sabboth, so that thou do not thyne owne wyll in my holy daye, then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holy, and glorious Sabboth of the Lorde, where thou shalt be in honoure, so that thou do not after thyne owne ymagination, neyther seke thyne owne wyll, nor speake thyne owne wordes. thens the spyders webbe. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them, ther cometh vp a serpent. Their web maketh no clothe and they maye not couer them w̄ their labounes. Their dedes are the dedes of wickednesse, and the worke of robbery is in their handes. Their fete runne to euil, and thy make hast to shed innocēt blood Their counsels are wycked counsels, harme and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no equyte, their wayes are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth no thinge of peace.

D And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that the rightousnesse cōmeth not nygh vs. We loke for lyght, lo, it is darknesse: for the morninge shyne, se, we walke in the darcke. We grope like the blynde vpon ꝑ wall, we grope euen as one that hathe none eyes. We stomble at the none day, as though it were towarde night: in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe dead. We rore all lyke Beares, & mourne styll lyke doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for healthy, but it is farre frō vs. For our offences are many before the, and our sinnes testify agaynste vs. Yea we muste confesse ꝑ we offēde & knowledge ꝑ we w̄ amysse: Namely transgresse & dissemble agaynste the Lorde, & fall away from our God: vsynge presumptuous and traytorous imaginacions, & castinge false matters in our hertes. And therfore is equite gone aside, & rightousnesse standeth farre of: truth is fallē downe in the streete, & the thing that is playne and open may not be shewed. Yea the truth is layde in prison, & he ꝑ refrayneth him selfe from euel must be spoyled.

E When ꝑ Lorde saw this, it displeased him sore, that there was no where anye equyte. He sawe also: that there was no man, which had pitie therof, or was greued at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and cleued to his owne righteousnesse. ✠ He put righteousnes vpon him for a brest plate, & set ꝑ helmete of healthy vpon his heade. He put on wrath in stede of clothyng, & toke gelousye about him for a cloke (lyke as when a man goeth for the wrothfully to recompence his enemyes, & to be auenged of his aduersaryes) Namely, that he myght recompence & rewarde the Ilandes where thorow the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the rysinge of the Sunne, and his magestye, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent waterstreame, which the wynde of the Lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, & vnto them in Jacob that turne from wickednes, sayeth the Lorde. I wyll make this couenaunte with them (sayth the Lord) My spirite that is come vpon the, and the wordes whiche I haue put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor out of the mouth of thy chylders childzen, from this tyme forth for euermore.

¶ Of the redemption promysed to the people.

CAPI. LXIII.

WHat is he this, that commeth from E-
A dom, vi stayned reade clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly cloth (& commeth in so nymbly wt al his strēgth: I am he ỹ teacheth ryghteousnes & am of power to helpe. Wherfore thē is thy clothing red, & thy rayment like his ỹ treadeth in ỹ wine presse? I haue trodden downe myne ennemyes in my wrathe, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacio: And theyr bloude sprange vpon my clothes, and so Apoca.xix.

so haue I strayned al my rayment. For the day of vengeaunce that I haue taken in hande, and the yeare of my delyueraunce is come. I lokid about me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe, I fell downe, and no mā helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrathe, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so moche that I haue shedde theyr blonde vpon the earthe.

I wyll declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath gyuen vs, for the greate good that he hathe done for Israel: whiche he hath gyuen them of his owne fauour, and according to the multytude of his louynge kyndnesses. For he sayde: These no doubte wyll be my people, and no shrinkynge chyldren, and so he was their sauyoure. In theyr troubles he for sooke them not, but the angell that went forth from his presence deliuered them: Of very loues kyndenesse that he had vnto thē, redemed he them. He hathe borne them, & carryed them vp euer sence the worlde began. But after they prouoked hym to wrathe and vexed his holy mind, he was theyr enemy, & fought agaynste them him selfe. Yet remembred he þ olde tyme of Moses and his people: how he brought them frome the water of the see, as a shepeherde doth with his shepe: how he had gyuen his holy spirite amonge them: how he had led Moses by the righte hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gate him selfe an euerlastynge name) howe he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, þ they shulde not stumble. The spirite of the Lorde led them, as a tame beaste goeth in the vale.

Thus (O God) hast thou led my people, to make thy selfe a glorious name with all. Loke downe then frome heauen, and behold the dwellynge place of thy sanctuarye and thy glorye. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multytude of thy mercyes and thy louynge kyndnesse, wyl not be intreated of vs. Yet arte thou oure father: For Abrahā knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lorde art oure father and redemer, & thy name is euerlastynge. O Lorde wherfore haste thou led vs out of thy waye? wherfore hast thou hardened our hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generation of thyne heritage. Thy people hathe had but lytle of thy Sanctuarye in possessiō, for oure enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from the begynnynge: but thou arte not theyr Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The Prophete (vnder the person of the Jewes) bewayleth theyr exyle and bannyshment. Thannes righteousnesse is lyke a cloth fylled with the flowres of a woman.

CAPI. LXIIII.

O That thou woldest clene the heuen in sondre, and come downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre, & that the malicious myght boyle, as the water doth vpon þ fyre: Whereby thy name myght be knowen amonge thyne ennempes, and that the Gentyles myght trēble before the. That þ myghtest come down vñ thy wōderous straūge workes, then shulde thy hylles melte at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the worlde there was none (excepte thou O God) that hearde or perceyued, ✝ neither hathe any eye sene what thou wolte for them, that put their truste in the. A ✝ 1. Cor. ii. B

Thou helpest hym that doth ryghte with cherfulnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou arte angrye, for we offend and haue bene euer in synne, ✝ and there is not one hole. We are all as an vncleane thynge, and all oure ryghtousnesses are as þ clothes stayned with the floures of a womā: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs awaye lyke the wynde. But nowe O Lorde, thou father of oures: ✝ we are the claye, and thou arte oure potter & we all are the worke of thy handes. Be not so sore displeased (O Lorde) and kepe not oure offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consydre that we al are thy people. The cities of thy Sanctuary lye wast, Sion is a wylderneste, and Jerusalem a desert. Our holy house whiche is oure beautye, where oure fatheres praysed the, is brent vp: yea all our commodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wilt thou not be intreated (Lorde) for all this? CAPI. LXV.

THey shal seke me, that hytherto haue not asked for me: they shall fynde me, that hytherto haue not sought me. The shall I say immediatly to the people that neuer called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus long haue I euer holden oute my handes to an vnfaythfull people, that go not the right way, but after theyr owne imaginations: To a people that is euer defying me to my face. ✝ They make theyr oblations in gardens, and coyr smoke vpon altares of brycke, they lurke among the graues and lye in the dēnes all nyght. All these men when I am angrye shall be turned to smoke and fyre, that shal burne for euer. Beholde it is wrytten before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompēsed. I shal B Jeremy. vii. a Mat.xxiij.a. Eccle.xx.d. rewarde it them in to theyr bosome: I meane youre mysdedes, and the misdedes of youre father together (sayth the Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blasphemed me vpō the hylles: therfore wyll I measure theyr olde dedes in to theyr bosome agayne. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as when one wold gather holy grapes, men saye vnto him: breake it not of, for it is holy: euen so wyll I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyll not destroy the all: But I wyll take a sede out of Jacob, and oute of Juda one, to take possession of my hil. My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and My seruauntes shall dwell there. Saron shal be a shepefolde, and the valleye of Achor shal gyue the stallynge for the catell of my people that seare me. ✶ But as for you, ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lorde, & forgotten my holy hyll. Ye haue set vp an aultare vnto fortune, and gyuen vnto drynckofferynges vnto treasure. Therfore wyll I nombre you with the swearde, that ye shall be destroyed all togyther. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake ye harkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, & chose the thynge that pleased me not.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my seruauntes shall drincke but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruauntes shal be merye, but ye shal be confounded. Beholde, my seruauntes shall reioyse for verye quyetnesse of herte: But ye shall crye for sorowe of herte, and complayne for vexacion of mynde. Youre name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God the Lorde shall slaye you, and call his seruauntes by an other name. Who so reioyseth vpon earthe, shall reioyse in the true God. And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall swere in the true God. For the olde emnyte shal be forgotten, and taken away oute of my syght. For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, & a newe earthe. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thoughte vpon, ne kepte in mynde: but men shall be glad and euermore reioyse, for the thynges that I shall do.

Apoca.xxi.a. For why: Beholde, I shall make a ioyfull Jerusalem, yea I my selfe will reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weppynge and waylynge shal not be herde in her from thence forth. There shal neuer be chylde ne olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chylde commeth to an hundreth yeare olde, it shall dye. And yf he that is an hundreth yere of age do wronge, he shall be cursed. They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plante vineyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, & another possesse. They shal not plāt & other eate: But lyke of my people shalbe lyke a tree, & so shall the worke of theyr handes.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor begette with trouble: for they are the hye blessed sede of the Lord, and theyr frutes with them. And it shall be, for euer they call, I shall answere them. While they are yet but thynckynge howe to speake, I shal heare them. The Wolfe and the Lambe shall fede to gyther, and the Lyon shall eate hay lyke the bullocke. But earthe shall be serpentes meate. There shall no man hurt ne slaye an other, in all my holy hylle, sayth the Lorde.

¶ God dwelleth not in temples, made by mannes hande. He despyseth sacrifyces done without mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Christen, the Sabboth is conty nuall.

CAPI. LXVI.

THus sayth the Lorde: Heauen is my seate, and the earthe is my fote stole. Where shall nowe the house stande ye wyll buylde vnto me? And where shall be the place, yt wil I dwell in? As for these thinges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayth the Lorde. Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen him that is of a lowly troubled spirite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ox for me, dothe me so greate dishonoure, as he yt kylleth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me choketh a dogge. He that bryngeth me meate offeringes, offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of incense, prayseth the thinge that is vnryghte. Yet take they such wayes in hande, and theyr soule delyteth in these abhominacions.

Therfore wyl I also haue pleasure i laughynge them to scorne, and the thynge that they feare, wyl I bryng vpon them. For whē I called, no man gaue answere: whē I spake they wolde not heare: But dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thing which he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you, and caste you oute for my names sake, saye Let the Lorde magnyfy him selfe, that we maye se youre gladnesse: & yet they shall be confounded.

For as touchynge the cytie and the temple I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that wyll reward, and recompense his enemyes: like as when a wyfe bryngeth forth a man childe, of euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and anguyshe of the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe suche thynges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? Or are the people borne all at ones, as Syon beareth her sonnes? For thus sayth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and bare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren? sayth thy God. Reioyce with Jerusalem, and be gladde with her, all ye that loue her. Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, & haue delyte in the plentcousnesse of her power. For thus sayth the the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll let peax in to her, like a water floude, and the myght of the heathen like a flowyng streme.

Then

Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be borne vpon her sydes, and be toyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, your herte shall retoyce, and your bones shall flayth lyke an herbe.

E Thus shal the hand of the Lord be knowe amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charet shall be lyke a whyrle wynde, that he maye recom-G pence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swearde, and there shall be a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abominacions, shalbe taken awaye together, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll f come to gather all people and tunges with theyr workes and imaginacyons, these shall come, and se my glorye. Unto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentyles, in to Cilycia, Affryca and Lidya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Greke
lande.

G The Iles farre of, that haue not hearde speake of me, and haue not sene my glorye, shal preache my prayse among the Gentyles, and shall bringe all youre brethren for an offrynge vnto the Lorde, out of all people, vpō horses, charettes and horse lyttters, vpō Mules and cartes to Jerusalem my holye hyll (sayth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Israell bringe the offrynge in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

And I shall take oute certayne of them for to be Prestes and Leuytes, sayth the Lorde. Apoca.xxi.d For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I wyll make, shalbe fast stablyfshed by me, (sayth the Lorde.) So shall youre sede and youre name contynue, and there shal be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, & all flesh shall come to worshyppe before me, (sayth the Lorde.)
And they shall goo forthe and loke vpon the carcyons of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. For theyr worm- Mar.ix.b

shall theyr fyre be quenched, and all flesshe

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esaye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IEREMYE.

¶ The Boke of Jeremy, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe and wolde refuse the office of a Prophete, because he is younge and vnexperte. He is taught of the Lorde, and becommeth bolde. God openeth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babilonians, is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

CAPI. I.

A THese are the Sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the Preest, one of them that dwelte at Anathoth in the lande of Benjamin, when the Lorde had fyrste spoken with hym, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, in the xiij. yere of his kyngdome, and so duryng vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntyl the .xj. yeres of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was take, euen in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before I fashyoned the B in thy mothers wombe, I dyd know the. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctifyed the, and ordeyned the, to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge. For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, and whatsoeuer I cõmaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylbe with the, to deliuer the, sayth the Lorde.

And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & sayd moreouer vnto me: Behold, I put my wordes in thy
C Jere. i. viii. a mouthe, and this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyngdomes, that thou mayst rote oute, breake of, destroye, and make waste, and that thou mayest buylde vp and plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Jeremy, what seest thou? And I sayde: I se a wakyng roode. Then sayde the Lorde: thou hast sene ryght, for I wyll watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I se a seething pot, lokyng
Jeremy. iiii. a from out of the North vpther warde. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyll call all the officers of the kyngdomes of the North (sayth the Lorde.) And they shall come, & euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, & in all their walles rounde about & thorowe
D all the cyties of Juda. And thorow them shal I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wycked welle of those men that haue forsake me, that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of their owne handes.

And therfore gyrde vp thy loynes, aryse, and tell them all, that I geue the in commaundemẽt. Feare them not, I wyll not haue the to be afrayed of them. For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fensed towne, an yron pyller, & a wal of stele agaynst the hole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the preestes & people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayth the Lorde.

¶ God reherseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynste Preestes and Prophetes, or preachers that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, and because they ranne a hore hunteynge after Idolles.

CAPI. II.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye
I in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde: I remẽbre the for the kyndnesse of thy youth, & because of thy stedfast loue, in that thou folowdest me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrste frutes. All they that deuoured Israell, offended: myschyefe fell vpon them, sayth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israell. Thus sayth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaythfulnesse found your fathers in me, that they went so farre awaye fro me,
J fallyng to lyghtnesse, & beyng so vayne? They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we lefte the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypt, that led vs thorow the wyldernesse, thorow a desert & rough lande, thorow a dyre & a deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wherin no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasaũt welbuyloed land, that ye might enioye the frutes & all the cõmodities of the same, ye went forthe & defyled my lande, and brought myne heritage to abomination.

The Preestes them selues sayde not ones: Where is the Lord? They that haue the law in their handes, knowe me not. The shepherdes offende agaynste me. The Prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal, and folowe suche thynges as shall bringe them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayth the C Lorde) to make my cõplaynte vpon you, and vpon your chyldren. Go in to the Iles of Cethim, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede, and se, whether suche thynges be done there, whether the Gentyles them selues deale so falsly & vntruely with their goddes, (whiche yet are no goddes in dede.) But my people hath geue ouer their hye honoure, for a thynge that maye not helpe them.

Be

Be astonished, o ye heuens, be afrayde and abashed at suche a thynge, sayth the Lorde. For my people hath wone two euyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of lyfe, and digged them pittes, yea vile and broken pittes that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him as a lyon? They haue made his land waste, his cityes are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellynge in them. Yea the chyldren of Noph and Taphnes haue vkyled thy necke.

Commeth not this vnto the, bycause thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he ledde the by the waye? And what haste thou nowe to do in the strete of Egypte? to dryncke foule water? Eyther what makest thou in the waye of Assiria? To dryncke water of the floude? Thyne owne wickednelle shal reproue the, and thy turnyng away shall condemne the: that thou mayste knowe and vnderstande how euyll and hurtfull a thynge it is, that thou haste forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared him sayth the Lorde God of hostes.

I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayste thou, I will no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hylles, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the oute of noble grapes, and good rotes. How art thou tourned then in to a bitter, vntrutefull, and and straunge grape? Yea, and that so sooze: that though thou waithe the with Nitrus, & make thy selfe so sauour with that swete smel lynge herbe of Borith: yet in my syght thou art stayned with thy wickednelle, sayth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not nowe: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the woddes, valeys, & dennes: so shalt thou knowe what thou hast wone. Thou arte lyke a swyfte Dromadary that goeth easely his way: and thy wantonnelle is lyke a wylde asse that vseth the wildernelle, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shal not fayle, but fynde ꝑ in thyne owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy fote from nakednelle, and thy throte from thyrst, and thinkest thou in thy selfe: tush, I wil take no sorowe, I will loue the straunge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with the dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the commen people, their kynges and rulers, their prestes and prophetes. For they saye to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotte me: yea they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face.

But in the tyme of their trouble, whē they saye: stande vp and helpe vs, I shal answere them: Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made the? vpp them stande vp and helpe the in the tyme of nede. For loke how many cities thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyll ye goo to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynste me sayth the Lorde? It is but lolte labource, that I smyte youre chyldren, for they receyne not my correction. Youre owne swerde destroyeth youre Prophetes, lyke a deuourynge lyon. Ye ye be the people of the Lorde, then harken vnto his worde: Am I then become a wildernelle vnto the people of Israel? or a lande that hathe no lyghte? Wherfore sayth my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyll come no more vnto the? Dothe a mayden forget her raymente, or a bryde her stomacher? And dothe my people forget me so longe? Why dooleste thou thy wayes so hyghly (to obtayne fauoure there thorowe) when thou hast yet stayned them with blasphemyes? Jerem. xix.

Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all places. Yet dareste thou saye I am gyltelelle: Tushe, his wrathe can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyll reason with the, bycause thou dareste saye: I haue not offended. O howe euyll wyll it be for the to abyde it: when it shall be knowen how ofte thou hast gone backwarde? Deute. xxiiii. b Jeremy. viii. a Ezech. xxi. d

For thou shalte be confounded as well of Egypte, as of the Assirians: Yea, thou shalte goo thy waye frome them, and smyte thyne handes togyther vpon thy heed: Bycause the Lorde shall bryngе that confydence and hope of thyne to nought, and thou shalte not prospere withall.

¶ God beynge mercyfull, calleth vnto repentaunce his people, whiche he hadde forsaken for theyr hoordome with poolles. He exhorteth Israell vnto repentaunce, promptynge them shepeherdes that shoulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God, confessynge theyr offence.

CAPI. III.

COmmenly when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth frome him and marryeth with an other, then the question is: Shoulde he resort vnto her any more after that? Is not this felde then defiled and vnclene? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet tourne agayne to me sayth the Lorde. Lyft vp thyne eyes on euerye syde, and loke yf thou be not defiled. Thou hast wayted for them in the stretes, & as a muetherer in the wildernelle. Thorowe thy hoordome and shameful blasphemies is the lande defiled. A

This is the cause, that the rayne and euenynge dewe hathe ceased. Thou haste gotten an hoores forehead, and canste not be ashamed. Elles woldeste thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou arte he that hast broughte me vp, and ledde me fro my youthe: Wylte thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for euer? B euer? Or wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheselle thou speakest suche wordes, but thou art euer doing worse and worse.

C * Jeremy.a. Jeremye.ii. d. xiii. Ezechie.xvii. b

* The Lorde sayde also vnto me: in the tyme of Josiah the kynge: Hast thou sene what that wrynckynge Israell hathe doone? howe she hathe eunne vp vpon all the hylles and amonge all thycke trees, and there played the harlot? Haste thou sene also (when she hadde doone all this) howe I sayde vnto her: that she shoulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not returned? Juda that vnfaythfull sister of hers also sawe this: Name ly that after I hadde well sene the aduoutrye of the wrynckynge harlotte Israell, I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of deuorcement.

For all this her vnfaythfull sister Juda was not ashamed, but went backe and played the hoore also. Yea, and the noyse of her horedome hathe defyled the hole lande. For she hath committed her aduoutrye with stones and stockes.

Neuertheselle her vnfaythfull sister Juda is not tourned agayne vnto me with her hole hert, but fayndly: sayth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayd vnto me. The backslyder Israell is more ryghtous then the vnfaythfull Juda: and therfore goo preache these wordes towarde the Northe, and saye: Thou wrynckynge Israell, tourne agayne (sayth the Lorde) and I wyll not tourne my face from you: for I am mercyful, sayth the Lord, and I wyll not alwaye beare displeasure agaynst the: but on this condition, that thou knowe thy greate blasphemye: Namely, that thou haste vnfaythfully forsaken the Lorde thy God, and haste made thy selfe parte taker of straunge Goddes vnder all grene trees, but hast hadde no wyll to heare my voyce, sayth the Lorde.

Ezechiel.ii.e. Dcc.xxiii.a

* O ye wrynckynge children, tourne agayne, sayth the Lorde: and I wyl be mayed with you. For I wyll take one oute of the citye, and two out of one generation from amonge you, and bryng you out of Syon: and wyll gyue you herdemen after myne owne mynde, whiche shall fede you with lernynge and wysdome.

E

Moreouer, when ye be encreased and multiplyed in the lande, then (sayth the Lorde) there shall no more boste be made of the Arcke of the Lordes Testament: No man shall thynke vpon it, neyther shall any man make mention of it: for from thence forthe it shall neyther be visited, ne honoured with gyftes.

Then shall Jerusalem be called the Lordes seate, and all Heathen shall be gathered vnto it, for the Lordes names sake, whiche shall be set forthe, they shall folowe no more the ymagination of their owne frowarde herte.

F

Then those that be of the house of Juda, shall goo vnto the house of Israell: and they shall come togyther oute of the Northe in to the same land that I haue gyuē your fathers. I haue shewed also howe I tooke the vp, beyng but a child, and gaue the a pleasaunt land for thyne herytage: yea, and a goodly host of the Heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou sholdest * call me father onely, and not to wrynke fro me.

Wul.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer, so are ye vntaythfull vnto me (O ye house of Israell) sayth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the chyldren of Israel was herde on euerye syde, weepinge and waylinge: for they haue defiled theyr waye, and forgotten God theyr Lorde.

G

O ye wrynckynge chyldren, tourne agayne (sayinge: lo, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde our God:) And so shal I heale youre backeturnynges. The hylles fall, and all the hye pryde of the mountaynes, but the helthe of Israell standeth onely vpon God our Lorde.

Confusion hathe deuoured oure fathers laboute frome oure youthe vp: yea, theyr shepe and bullockes, theyr sonnes and wughters. So now we also slepe in oure confusion, and shame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from our youthe vp vnto this daye, haue synned agaynste the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

¶ The true repentaunce or returnynge to God. He exhorteth to the circumcision of the herte. The destruction of Jewrye is prophecyed, for the malyce of theyr hertes.

CAPI. IIII.

O Israell, yf thou wylte turne the, then turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. And yf thou wilt put awaye thyne abhominations out of my syght, thou shalte not be moued: And shalte swere. The Lorde lyueth: in truth, in equitie and ryghtousnesse: and all people shal be fortunable and ioyfull in him, for thus sayth the Lorde, to all Juda and Jerusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not among the thornes.

I

Be circumcised in the Lorde, and cutte awaye the foreskynne of youre hertes, all ye of Juda, and all the indwellers of Jerusalem: that my indignacion breke not out lyke fire, and kyndle, so that no man maye quenche it, because of the wickednesse of your ymaginations.

Deut.x. Jerem.ix

Preache in Juda and Jerusalem: crye oute and speke: blowe the trompettes in the lande crye that euery man may heare, and saye: Gather you togither, and we wyl go in to strong cities. Set vp the token in Syon, spede you, and make no tarryeng: for I wil bryng a great plage, & a greate destruction from the Northe. For the spoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon oute of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cityes, so that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfore gyrde youre selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne and wepe, for the fearfull feareful wrath of the Lorde shal not be withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayethe the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the Prynces shall be gone, the preestes shal be astonished, and the Prophetes shall ye sooze afrayde. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, hast thou then disceyued this people, and Jerusalem, sayinge: ye shall haue peax, and nowe the swerde goeth thorowe their lyues? Then shall it be sayd to the people, and to Jerusalem: there commeth a warme wynde frome the Mozthe thorow the way of my people, but neither to fan, ne to clense.

After that there shall come vnto me a stronge wynde, and then wyll I also gyue sentence vpon them. For loo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charettes are lyke a stormy wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Egle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, wash thyne herte from wickednesse, that thou mayst be helped. How longe shall thy noysome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce frome Dan, and from the hyll of Ephraim speaketh oute, and telleth of a destruction. Beholde the Heathen gyue Jerusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are commynge frome farre countreys. They tell the cities of Juda the same also, they shall gyue them warnynge in euerye place, lyke as the watche men in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrathe, sayth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this: this is thyne owne wyckednesse and disobedience that hath possessed thyne herte: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalte thou crye) howe is my herte so sore? my hert panteth within me, I can not be still, for I haue herd the cryinge of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the hole lande shal perysshe. Immediatly my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twinklynge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes.

Neuertheles, this shall come vpon them, because my people is become foolysshe, and haue vtterly no vnderstandynge. They are the chyldren of folysshnesse, and without any discretion. To do euil, they haue wit ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wysdome. I haue loked vpon the earthe: and se, it is waste and voyde. I loked towarde heuen, and it had no lyght.

I behelde the mountaynes and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea al their cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrathe.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The hole land shal be desolate, yet wil I not then haue done. And therfore let the erth mourne, and let the heuen be sorye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shal not repent me, and I will not go fro it. The hole lande shal flie for the noyse of horsemen and bowmen: they shal run in to the busshes in to woodes, and clyme vp the stony rockes. All the cityes shall be voyde, & no man dwellynge therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy selfe with scarlet, & deckest the with golde: though thou paintest thy self with colours, yet shalt thou trym thy self in vayne. Jeremy.iii.c.

For those that hitherto haue ben thy great fauourers shall abhorre the, and goo aboute to slee the. For (me thynke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were a woman trauelynge, or one labouryng of her fyrst chylde: Euen a voyce of the doughter Sion, that calleth out her armes, and sobneth, sayinge: Ah, wo is me, how sore vexed and saynt is my herte, for the that are slayne?

¶ In Jewrye is there no ryghtous or faythfull man founde, eyther amongest the people, or the rulers, for whose sake the Lorde shoulde spare the cytye: wherfore Jewrye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

CAPI.

LOke thorowe Jerusalem: beholde and se: Seke thorowe her stretes also within, yf ye can fynde one man that dothe equalland ryghte, or that laboureth to be faythfull: and I shall spare him (sayethe the Lorde.) For though they can saye: the Lorde lyueth, yet they sweare to disceyue: Where as thou (o Lorde) lokest onely vpon faythe and truthe. A

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast correct the for amendment, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, & wolde not amende.

Therfore I thoughte in my selfe: peraduenture they are so symple and foolysh, that they vnderstande nothynge of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfore wyll I goo vnto their heedes and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the Lorde, and the iudgementes of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yoke, and burste the bandes in sonder. B

Wherfore a lyon out of the wod shal hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenynge shall destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shall lye lurkynge by their cities, to teare in peces all them that come therout. For their offences are manye, and their departynge awaye is greate. Shoulde I then for all this haue mercye vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, and swome by them that are no godes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and hanted harlottes houses. C

In

In ꝯ desire of vnclenly lust they are become like the stoned horse, euery man neyeth at his neyghbourss wyfe: sholde I not correct this sayth the Lorde?

Sholde I not be auenged of euery people, Ezechi.xxiij.c. that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon their walles beate them downe, but destroye them not vttetly: cut of their braunches, bycause they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hathe the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, sayethe the Lorde. They haue denied the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he. Nulthe, there shall no myshortune come vpon vs: we shall se neyther swerde nor honger. As for the warnyng of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde: yea there is none of these, which wil tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

D Wherefore thus sayethe the Lorde God of hostes: bycause ye speake suche wordes: beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouthe wil I turne to fire, and make the people to be wod, that I may consume them.

Lo, I will bryuge a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayethe the Lorde) a myghtye people, an olde people, a people whose speche thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they saye. Their arowes are sodeyne deathe: yea they them selues be brepe graunted. This people shall eate vp thy feute and thy meate: yea they shall deuour thy sonnes and thy doughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes and fygges. Yea for thy stronge and well seased cytyes wherin thou vpddest truste, they shall destroye theym with the swearde. Neuertheles I wyll not haue doone with you, sayethe the Lorde. But yf they saye: Wherfore dothe the Lorde oure God all this vnto vs?

E Then aunswere them: bycause that lyke Jeremi.v.vi.b as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes in youre owne lande: euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge land. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it oute in Juda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foolysshe and vndiscrete people) Esay.vi.b. Johñ.ix.d. ✠ ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

ffeare ye not me, sayethe the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? whiche bynde the see with the sande, so that it can not passe his boundes: For thoughe it rage, yet can it do nothynge, and thoughe the waues therof do swell, yet may they not go ouer.

But this people hathe a false and obstynate herte, they are departed and gone F awaye fro me. They thynke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde oure God that gyueth vs rayne earlye and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer styl the harueste for vs perely.

Neuertheles youre mysdes haue tourned these from you, and youre synnes haue robbed you hereof. For amonge my people are founde wycked personnes, that prypply laye snares, and wayte for men, to take them and destroye them. And lyke as a swete is full of byrdes, so are their houses full of that whiche they haue gotten with falshed and disceyte.

Hereof commeth their greate substaunce G and ryches: hereof are they fatte and welthye, and are run awaye fro me with shamefull blasphemyes. They mynistre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesses cause, they iudge not the poore accordynge to equite.

Shulde I not punish these thinges, sayth ꝯ Esai. Zach. Lorde? Sholde I be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible and grenous thinges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falsely, and the preestes folowe them, and my people hathe pleasure therin. What wyll come therof at the last?

¶ The synnes for whiche Jerusalem is afflycte. Vncircumcysed eares. Couetousnesse. Disceyte. The Lorde reiecteth the sacrifyces of the Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonyans is prepreced agayne.

CAPI. VI.

COme forth of Jerusalem, ye stronge chil A dren of Ben Jamin: blow vp the trompettes ye Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Bethcarem, for a plage and a greate miserye bursteth out from the North.

I wyll lyken the doughter of Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, & to her shall come the shepeherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pytche rounde aboute her, and euerye one shall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynste her (shall they saye.) Aryse, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the B nyght shadowes fall downe: Aryse, lette vs go vp by nyght, and destroye her stronge holdes: for thus hath the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and set vp bulwarkes agaynste Jerusalem. This is the cytye that muste be punyshed, for in her is all vnrighteousnesse. Lyke as a Condyte aboundeth in water, euen so this cytye aboundeth in wyckednesse. Robberye and vnryghteousnes is herde in her, sorow and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the, O Jerusalem, lest I withdraw my hert from the, and make the desolate: and thy land also, that no man C dwel in it. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: The residue of Israel shal be gathered as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore tourne thyne hande agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom shall I speake, whom shal I warne, that he maye take hede? Their eares are so vncircumcysed, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take ꝯ word of God but for a scorne, a home, and haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so ful of indignatiō, o Lord, that I may suffre no longer. Shede out thy wrathe vpon the chyldren that are without, and vpon all yonge men.

Yea the man muste be taken prysoner with the wyfe, and the aged with the creple. Their houses with their landes and wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, when I stretche oute myne hande vpon the inhabitauntes of this lande, sayethe the Lorde. For frome the leest, vnto the mooste, they hange all vpon couetousnesse: and frome the Prophete vnto the Preest, they goo all aboute with falsehed and lyes.

And beside that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayinge: peax peax, when there is no peax at all. Therfore they muste be ashamed, for they haue committed abhominacion. But howe shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothing, neyther of shame, nor of good nourtoure? And therfore they shall fall amonge the slayne: and in the houre when I shall vysyt them, they shall be brought downe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde: goo in to the stretes, consyder and make inquisicion for the olde way, and yf it be the good and right waye: then goo therin, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we will not walke therin, and I wyll set watche men ouer you, and therfore take heed vnto the voyce of the trompet: But they saye we wil not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion shalte knowe, what I haue deuysed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I wyll cause a plage come vpon this people, euen the frute of their own ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes, and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore bringe ye me incense frome Saba, and swete smellynge Calamus frome farre countreyes? Youre burnte offerynges displease me, and I reioyse not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make this people fal, and there shal fall from amonge them the father with the chyldren, one neyghboure shall perysshe with an other.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde there shal come a people from the North, and a great people shall aryse frome the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shall they be weapened: It is a roughe and fearce people, an vnmercyfull people: their voyce roreth lyke the see, they ryde vpon horses well appoynted to the batayle agaynst the, o doughter Sion.

Then shall this crye be hearde: Oure armes are feble, heuynesse and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauey-lynge with chylde. No man goo forthe in to the feld, no man come vpon the hye strete/ for the swerde and feare of the enemye shall be on euery syde.

Wherfore gyrde a sacke clothe aboute the (O thou doughter of my people) syrynckle thy selfe with asshes, mourne and wepe bytterly, as vpon thy onely beloued sonne: For the destroyer shall sodenly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouer of my hard people, to seke out, and to trye their wayes. For they are all vnfaythfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon fylthy lucre, they are clene brasse and yron, for they hurte and destroye euerye man. The bellous are brente in the fire, the lead is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the euyll is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shall they be called noughtye syluer, bycause the Lorde hathe caste them oute. G Amos. viij. b.

Ieremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, whiche trusteth in the outwarde seruyce of the temple, that helpeth nothynge. The euyls that shall happen to the Iewes for the despysynge of their prophetes. Sacrifyces doth not the Lorde chefely requyre of the Iewes, but that they shoulde obey his worde. Cophery.

CAPI. VII.

A These are the wordes that God spake vnto Ieremye: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, and crye out these wordes there with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde all ye of Juda that go in at this dooze, to honour the Lorde. Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel. Amende youre wayes and youre counselles, and I wyll lette you dwelle in this place. Trust not in false lyenge wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde. Iere. xxvi. d.

B * For yf ye wyll amende youre wayes and counsels, yf ye wyll iudge ryghte betwyxte a man and his neyghboure: yf ye wyll not oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse and the wydowe: yf ye wyll not shedde innocente bloode in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue to straunge goddes to youre owne destruction: then wyll I let you dwell in this place: yea, in the land that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. Exod. xxii. c. Zacha. viij. c. Leuit. xix. g. Job. xxiij. d.

But take hede, ye truste in counselles that begyle you, and do ye no good. For when ye haue stollen, murthered, commytted aduoutrye, and periurye: When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge and vnknowen Goddes: Then come ye, and stande before me in this house, (whiche hath my name gyuen vnto it) and saye: Tusshe we are absolued qwyte, thoughe we haue doone all these abhominacions.

C * What, thynke you this house that beareth my name, is a den of theues? And these thinges are not done priuyly, but before mine eyes sayth the Lorde. Go to my place in * Silo, whereunto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke well what I dyd to the same place for the wyckednesse of my people of Israell. Esay. lvi. b. * Job. ii. b. Math. xxi. b. Jere. xxxii. f. Psalm. xviij. a Jere. xxvi. a. 1. Reg. iii. iiij. v and vi.

And

And nowe, thoughe ye haue wone all these dedes (sayth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer bytymes to warne you, and to common with you, yet wolde ye not heare me:
Prouer.i.c I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore Isa.lxv.b.c. euen as I haue done with Siloh, so wyll I
1.Regū.iiij.b. do to this house, that my name is gyuen vn-Iere.xiij.b to, (and that ye put your trust in) ye vnto the place that I haue gyuen to you and your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my sighte as I haue cast out all your brethren the hole sede of Ephraim.

D Therfore thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalte neyther gyue thanckes nor bydde prayer for them: thou shalte make no intercessiō to me for them: for in no wyse wyll I heare the. Seest thou not what they doo in the cityes of Juda, and without Jerusalem? The chyldren gather stickes, the fathers kindle the fire, the mothers knede the dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heuen.

They poure oute drynckeoffrynges vnto straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe: How be it they hurte not me (sayth the Lorde) but rather confounde and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God:
beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon mē and cattell, vpon the trees of the felde, & al frute of the land, & it shal burne so that no mā may quenche it.

E Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye heape vp your burntoffrynges with youre sacrifyces, and eate the flesshe.
But when I brought youre fathers oute of Egypt, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offrynges and sacrifyces: but this I commaunded them, saying: harken and obey my voyce, and I shall be your God, and ye shal be my people: so þ ye walke in all the wayes which I haue commaunded you, that ye may prospere.

Iere.xvi.c But they were not obedient, they inclyned not their eares thereunto, but wente after their owne ymaginations, and after the mocions of their owne wycked hert, and so tour ned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they doone, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt vnto this daye.

F Neuertheles I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp erlye & sente them worde, yet wolde they not harken ne offre me their eares, but were obstinate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalt cry vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalte thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lord their God, ne receyueth his correction.
Faythfulnesse and truthe is clene rooted out of their mouth.

G Wherfore cut of thyne heere, and caste it away, take vp a complaynt in the hole land:
for the Lorde shall cast awaye and scatter the people, that he is displeased withall. For the chyldren of Juda haue doone euyll in my syghte, sayth the Lorde. They haue set vp their abhominacions in the house that bathe my name, and haue defyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter at Tophet, whiche is in the valleye of the chyldren of Hennon:
that they myghte burne their sonnes and doughters, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thoughte.
and therfore beholde, the dayes shall come (sayth the Lorde) that it shall no more be called Tophet, or the valeye of the chyldren of Hennon, but the valey of the slayne, for in Tophet they shall be buryed, bycause they shall elles where haue no rowme. Yea, the deed bodyes of this people shall be eaten of the foules of the ayre, and wylde beestes of the earthe, and man shall fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrthe and Eyrth gladnesse of the cityes of Juda and Jerusalem, the voyce of the bydegrome, and of the bryde: I wyll make them cease, for the lande shall be desolate.

¶ The destruction of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendement, reckening vp their synnes. Reproueth the lyinge doctryne of the Prophetes and Prestes, and their couetyse.

CAPL VIII.

AT the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, the bones of the kynges of Juda, the bones of his Princes, the bones of the prestes and Prophetes, yea and the bones of the citezyns of Jerusalem, shalbe brought out of their graues, and layde agaynst the sunne, the moone, and all the heuenly hoste, whome they loued, whom they serued, whō they ran after, whome they soughte and worshypped.
They shall neither be gathered togyther, ne buried, but shall lye vpon the earthe to their shame and dysplynge.

And all they that remayne of this wycked generacion, shall rather chose to dye then lyue where so euer they remayne, and where as I scatter them, sayth the Lorde of hostes. This shalte thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayth the Lorde: Do men fall so, that they aryse not vp agayne? And turne they so farre away that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so far backe, that they tourne not agayne. They are euer the longer, the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loked and considered: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for his synne, that wyll so moche as saye: wherfore haue I done this? But euery man (as soone as he his turned backe) runneth forth full, like a wylde horse in a batayle. The Storke knoweth his appoynted time, the turtle mue, the swalowe and the crane considre the tyme of their trauayle, but my people wil not knowe the time of the punishmēt of the Lord? How dare

ye saye then: we are wyse, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde, the disceytfull penne of the scribes, setteth forth lyes: therfore shall the wise be confounded, they shall be afrayde and taken: for lo, they haue cast oute the worde of the Lorde: what wysdome can then be among them? Wherfore I wyl geue their wyues vnto straungers, and their feldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folow al fylthy lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preest, they deal all with lyes. Neuer thelesse, they heale the hurte of my people in swete wordes, saying: peax peax, where there is no peax at all.

Fye for shame, how abhominable thynges do they? & yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodyes saith the Lorde.

Moreouer I wil gather them in, sayth the Lord, so that there shal not be one grape vpō the vine, ne one fyg vpon the fyg tree, & the leaues shall be pluct of.

Then wil I cause them to depart and saye: why prolong we the time? Let vs gather our selues togither, and go in to the stronge cittie, there shall we be in rest: For the Lorde oure God hathe put vs to sylence, and gyuen vs water mixte with gall, to drynke, because we haue synned agaynst him.

We loked for peax, and we fare not þ better, we wayted for the tyme of helth, and lo, here is nothing but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his horses be herde frome Dan, the hole lande shall be afrayde at the neying of his stronge horses: for they shall goo in and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cityes, and those that dwell therin. Moreouer, I wyll sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayth the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuynesse vexeth my herte: for loo, the voyce of the crynge of my people, is herde frome a farre countreye: Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) with their ymages, and foolysshe straunge facions?

The harueft is gone, the sommer hathe an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am heuye, and abasshed: for there is no more Tyriacle at Galaad, and there is no Physicyon that can heale the hurte of my people.

¶ The complaint and bewayling of the Prophete for the malyce of the people. In the knowlege of God ought we only to reioyce. The vncircumcision of the hert.

CAPI. IX.

O Who wyll gyue my heed water ynoughe, and a well of teares for myne eyes: that I may wepe night and day, for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cotage some where farre from folke, that I myghte leaue my people, and goo frome them: for they be all aduoutrers and a shrynckynge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. As for the truthe, they may nothyng away withall in the worlde. For they go from one wyckednesse to an other, and holde nothynge of me, sayth the Lorde.

Yea, one muste kepe him selfe frome an other, no man maye safely trust his owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth an other, and one neyghboure beggyleth an other. Yea, one dissembleth with an other, and they deale with no truthe. They haue practised their tonges to lye, and taken great paynes to woo mischiefe. They haue set their stole in þ middest of disceyte, and for verye dissemblynge falsehed they wyll not knowe me, saythe the Lorde.

Therfore thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: beholde, I wyll melt them and trye them, for what shold I els to to my people? Their tunges are lyke sharpe arowes to speake disceyt. With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neighbour, but priuily they laye wayte for him.

Shulde I not punish them for these thinges, sayth the Lorde? Or shulde I not be auenged of anye suche people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion & sorowful cry, and a mournyng vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernesse: Namely, bicause they are so brent vp, that no man goeth there any more: yea a man shal not heare one beest crye there.

Byrdes and cattell are all gone frome thence. I wil make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wil make the cityes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwel therin. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this and saye: O thou lande why perisshest thou so? Wherfore arte thou so brent vp, and lyke a wyldernesse, that no man goeth thorowe?

Yea the Lorde him selfe tolde the same vnto them that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaundement, neither lyued therafter: but folowed the wyckednesse of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore thus saythe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll fede this people with wormewod, and gyue them gall to drynke. I wil scattre them also among the Heathen, whom neither they ne their fathers haue knowen: and I wyll sende a swerde amonge them, to persecute them, tyl I bringe them to noughte. Moreouer thus saith the Lorde of hostes: loke ye call for mourning wyues, and send for wyse women: that they come shortly, and synge a mournyng songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of our eyes, and that oure eye lyddes maye gusshe out of water.

F For there is a lamentable noyse herde of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed? O howe are we so piteously confounded? We muste forsake oure owne naturall countrey, and we are shut oute of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women, and lette youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouthe: that ye maye lerne youre doughters to mourne, and that euery one maye teache her neyghbours to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Deathe is clymmynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the childe before the dooze, and the younge man in the strete.

G But tell thou playnly, thus sayth ỹ Lorde: The deed bodyes of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and there shall be no man to take them vp.

1. Corinth. 1. d. 2. Corint. 5. d. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysdome, ne the stronge man in his strength, neither the riche man in his ryches: But who so wyll reioyse let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, which do mercy, equitie and rightousnesse vpon the erth. Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thinges, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll vysyt all them, whose foreskyn is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shauen Madianites that dwel in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in ỹ flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

¶ The constellacyons of the sterres are not to be feared. Of the weyknesse of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of euyll curates.

CAPI. X.

A HEare the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde: Ye shall not lerne after the maner of the Heathen, & ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of heuen: for the Heathen are afrayde of suche: yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothynge but vanitie. They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the handes of the workeman, & facyon it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles and hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as styffe as the palme tree, it can neither speake ne goo, but must be borne. Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can doo neyther good ne euyll. But there is none like vnto to the, O Lorde, and great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? Or what kynge of the Nacyons wolde not obey the?

Elaie. xlvii. c. Elay. xliii. b. Sapien. xiii. Baruch. vi. iiii. Re. xvii. g Iudi. vi. b. Epoca. xv. b.

For amonge all the wyse men of the Nacyons, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all togyther vnlerned & vnwyse. All their conning is but vanitie: namely wod, sylver, whiche is broughte out of Tharsis, and beten to plates: and golde frome Ophir, a worke that is made with the hande of the craftes man and the caster, clothed with yelowe sylke and scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men all togyther. But ỹ Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, and an euerlastynge kynge. Yf he be wrothe, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it may well be sayd of them: they are goddes that neither made heuen ne earthe: therfore shall they perysshe from the earthe, and frome all thynges vnder heuen. But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with his wisdome hathe he fynished the hole compasse of the worlde, with his discreecion hath he spred out the heuens. Jerem.

C At his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre, he drayeth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the erth: he turneth ligh tenynge to rayne, and bryngeth forthe the wyndes out of their treasures. His wisdome maketh all men foles. And confounded be al casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thynge, and hathe no lyfe. The vayne crafte smen with their workes, that they in their vanitie haue made, shall perysshe one with an other in the tyme of visitacion. Neuertheselle Jacobs porcion is not suche: but it is he that hath made al thinges, and Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce: The Lorde of hostes is his name. Put away thyne vnclennesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the strong cityes. For thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll nowe thrust oute the inhabitauntes of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them in suche sorte, as they shall no more be founde. Plain.

D Alas how am I hurt? Alas how paynefull are my scourges vnto me? For I consider this sorow by my selfe, and I muste suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spreade oute my tente, or to set vp my hangynges. For the herdemen haue done foolyshly, that they haue not sought the Lorde. Therfore haue they dealte vnwysely with their catell, and all are scattered abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at hande, and great sedicion out of the North: to make the cities of Juda a wilderneslle, and a dwellinge place for dragons.

H Nowe I knowe, O Lorde, that it is not in mans power to ordre his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steppes and goinges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but with fauoure and not in thy wrathe, bringe vs not vtterly to nought. Poure out thyne indignacion rather vpon the Heathen that know the not, & vpon the people that call not on thy name: Plain. Plain.

And

And that by cause they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Jacob, and haue roted out his glorye.

¶ I curse of them that obeye not the worde of Goddes promesse. The people of Juda folowynge the steppes of theyr fathers, worshyppeth straunge goddes. The Lorde saythe he wyll not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

CAPI. XI.

THis is an other sermon, which ✠ Lorde commaunded Jeremye to preache, saynge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt and speake vnto all Juda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye vnto them Thus saythe the Lorde God of Israell: Cursed be euery one that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypte, from the yron fornace, sayinge: Be obedient vnto my voice and do accordyng to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I wyll be your God, and wyll kepe my promesse that I haue sworne vnto youre fathers: Namely that I wolde gyue them a lande wherin floweth with mylke and honye, as ye se, is come to passe this daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne: preache this in the cityes of Juda, and rounde aboute Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted youre fathers, euer sythens the tyme I brought them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge betymes, sayinge: Harken vnto my voyce: Neuertheles they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wyckymaginations of theyr owne hertes.

And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunte that I gaue them to kepe, wherin they (not withstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is found out, that hole Israel, and all these cityzyns of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of theyr fore fathers, whiche had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped the. The house of Israell and Juda haue broken my couenaunte, whiche I made with theyr fathers.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll sende a plage amonge you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape: and thoughe ye crye vnto me, I wyll not heare you. Then shall the townes of Juda, and the cityzyns of Jerusalem go and call vpon theyr goddes vnto whom they made their oblacions, but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. For as many cityes as thou hast, O Juda, so manye goddes hast thou also. And loke how many stretes there be in the, O Jerusalem, so many shamefull aulters haue ye set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for this people: byd neyther praise ne prayer for them, for though they crye vnto me in their trouble, yet wyl I not heare them. Jeremy. ii.e

Jere. xiiii.b.

O thou beloued, why wrought thou so shamefull greate blasphemyes in my house? Euen as thoughe that holye flesshe myght absolue the, specially when thou hast made thy bosse of thy wyckednesse. The Lorde called the a grene olyue tree, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodly one: but nowe that there is a contrarye reporte of the abrode, he wyll burne the vp, and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath ruysed a glage for the (O thou house of Israell and Juda, for the euyll that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrathe, in that ye dyd seruice vnto Baal.

D

This, O Lorde, haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it: for thou hast shewed me their ymaginations. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowing that they hadde deuised suche a counsell agaynste me, sayinge: we wyll destroye his meate with wodde, and dryue him oute of the lande of the lyuynge, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon.

Esay. liii.c

Therfore I wyll beseche the nowe, O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of the cityzyns of Anathoth, that sought to slee me, sayinge: Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll vysyte you. Youre younge men shall perysshe with the swerde, youre sonnes and youre doughters shall vtterly dye of hongre, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cityzyns of Anathoth wyll I brynge a plage, the yere of their visitacion.

Sapien. ii.d. Jeremy. xx.c

¶ The Prophete marueyleth at the prosperitye of the wycked, althoughe he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynste Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threteneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered Jewrye, whiche troubled and vexed it.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde, thou arte more ryghteous, then that I shoulde dispute with the: Neuertheles, lette me talke with the in thynges reasonable. How happeneth it that the way of the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so wel with them which (without any shame) offend and lyue in wickednes? Thou plantest them, they take roote, they growe, and bringe forthe fruite. They boaste moche of the, yet doest thou not punish them. But thou Lord (to whom I am wel knowē) thou that hast seue, and proued my hert, take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and appoynt them for ꝑ daye of slaughter.

How long shall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perish, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin? The cattell and the byrdes are gone, yet they saye: tushe, God wyll not destroye vs vtterly.

Seinge thou arte weerye in runnynge with the fote men, how wylte thou then run with horses? In a peaceable sure lande thou maist be safe, but how wylt thou do in the iurions pryde of Iordane? for thy brethren and thy kynred haue all togyther despysed the, and cryed oute vpon the in thyne absence. Bileue them not, thoughe they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellynge place, and lefte myne heritage. My syke also that I loued so well, haue I giuen in to the handes of myne ennemyes. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, ther fore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuers coloures is vpon it. Go hence and gather all ꝑ beestes of the felde togyther, that they maye eate it vp.

Dyuers herdemen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpon my portion. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wyldernesse. They haue layde it waste: and nowe that it is waste, it syghyth vnto me. Yea, the hole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it.

The destroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the swerde of the Lorde shall consume from the one ende of the land to the other, and no fleshe shall haue rest. They shall sow whete, and reepe thornes. They shal take heritage in possession, but it shall do them no good. And ye shal be confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the greate wrathe of the Lorde.

Thus saythe the Lorde vpon all myne euyll neyghbours, that laye hande on myne heritage, whiche I haue giuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyll plucke them (namely Israell) oute of theyr lande, and put out the house of Iuda frome them. And when I haue rooted them oute, I wyll be at one with them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: and bringe them agayne (euerye man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande.

And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll lerne the wayes of them to swere by my name: The Lord lyueth (lyke as they lerned my people to swere by Baal) then shall they be reckened among my people. But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyll I rote out the same folke, and destroye them saythe the Lorde.

¶ The destruccyon of the Iewes is prefygured, and theyr sparpynge abrode. Why Israel was receyued to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

CAPL XIII.

Moreouer, thus said the Lord vnto me: go thy way and get the a lynen brethe, and gyde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a brethe, according to the commaundemēt of the Lord, and put it aboute my loynes. After this the Lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take ꝑ brethe that thou hast prepared, aboute the, and get the vp, and goo vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the roche. So wente I, and hyd it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me: Aryse, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the brethe thence, whiche I commaunded the to hyde there. Then wente I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke ꝑ brethe from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde the brethe was corrupte, so that it was vnprofytable for nothynge.

Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thus sayth the Lorde: euen so wyll I corrupt the pryde of Iuda, and the haute mynde of Ierusalem. This people is a wycked people, they wyll not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacions of theyr owne hert, and hange vpon straunge goddes, them haue they serued and worshypped: and therfore they shall be as this brethe that serueth for nothynge.

For as straytly as a brethe lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straytly dyd I bynd the hole house of Israell, and the hole house of Iuda vnto me, sayth the Lord: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name: that they myghte be in honoure: but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore laye this sydle before them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Euery pot shall be filled with wyne. And they shall saye: thynkest thou we knowe not that euerye pot shall be fylled with wyne? Then shalte thou saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall fyll all the inhabitauntes of this lande with dronkennesse, the kynges that syt vpon Dauids stole, the preestes and prophetes, with all that dwell at Ierusalem. And I wyl shote them one against an other, yea the fathers against the sonnes, sayth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them: ne haue pitye vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedient, gyue eare, take no disdayne at it, for it is the Lorde him self that speaketh: Honoure the Lorde youre God herein, or he take his lyght from you, and or euer youre feete stomble in darckenesse at the hyll: lest when ye loke for the lyghte, he tourne it in to the shadowe and darckenesse of deathe. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that gyue you secrete warnynge, I wyll mourne from my hole herte, for youre stubbornesse.

pytcously wyl I wepe, and the teares shal gusshe oute of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be caryed awaye prysoners. Tell the kynge, and the rulers: Humble youre selues, sette you downe lowe: for the crowne of your glorye shall fall from youre heed. The cityes towarde the south shall be shut vp, & no mā shal opē thē. Al Juda shal be caryed awaye prysoners, so that none shall remayne.

Lyft vp your eyes and beholde them that come from the Nozth: Lyke a fat flocke shal they fall vpon the. To whome wylte thou make thy mone, when they come vpon the? for thou hast taughte them thy selfe, & made them maysters ouer the. Shall not sozowe come vpon the, as on a woman trauelynge with chylde? And yf thou woldest saye then in thyne herte. Wherfoze come these thinges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shal thy hynder partes and thy feete be discouered.

For like as the man of Inde may chaunge his skynne, and the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercised in euyl, doo good. Therfoze wyll I scatter you, lyke as the stubble that is taken awaye with the South wynde. This shall be youre porcion, and the porcion of your measure, wherwith ye shall be rewarded of me, sayth the Lozde: bycause ye haue forgotten me, and put your truste in disceytfull thynges. Therfoze shall I tourne thy clothes ouer thy heed, and discouer thy thyghes, that thy priuitye maye be sene, thy aduoutry, thy vedly maysce, thy beastlynesse and thy shamefull hoozedome. For vpon the feldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominacions. Woo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylte thou euer be clensed any moze?

¶ Of the derth that shoulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people, askynge mercye of the Lorde. The vnfaythfull people are not hearde. Of prayer, fastynge, and of false Prophetes that disceyue the people.

CAPI. XIIII.

The worde of the Lozde shewed vnto Jeremye, concernynge the derth of the frutes. Juda shall mourne: men shall not goo moche moze thozowe his gates: the lande shall be no moze had in regarde, & the crye of Jerusalem shall breake out. The lozdes shall sende theyr seruauntes to fetche water, and when they come to the welles, they shall fynde no water, but shall carye theyr vessels home emptye. They shall be ashamed and confounded, and shall couer their heedes. For the ground shal be dried vp, bycause there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shall be ashamed, and shall couer their heedes. The hynde shal forsake the yong fawne that he bryngeth forth in the felde, bycause there shall be no grasse. The wylde asses shal stande in the mosse, and drawe in their winde lyke the dragons, their eyes shall fayle for want of grasse.

B Doubtlesse our owne wickednesse rewarde vs: But Lord do thou according to thy name, though our transgressions and synnes be many. For thou art the comfort and helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wylte thou be as a straunger in the land, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, and commeth in onely to remayn for a night? Why, wilt thou make thy selfe a cowarde, and as it were a gyaunte that yet may not helpe? For thou art ours (o Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lozde, concerning this people, that haue pleasure to go so nymbly with their feete, and leaue not of, and therfoze displease the Lozd: in so moch that he wil now bryng agayne to remembraunce all their mysdedes, and punish all their synnes. Yea, euen thus sayd the Lozde vnto me: Thou shalte not pray to doo this people good. For though they fast, I wyll not heare their prayers. And though they offre burnt offerynges and sacrifices, yet will not I accepte them. For I will destroye them with the swerde, honger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lozde God, the Prophetes saye vnto them: Nay, ye shall se no swerde, and no honger shal come vpō you, but the Lozde shal gyue you continuall reste in this place. Jermy. vii. c. C Jere. xxiii. a. xxvii. c. xxix. e.

And the Lozde sayde vnto me: The Prophetes preache lyes vnto them in my name. I gaue not spoken with them, neither gaue I them any charge, neither spo I send them: yet they preache vnto you false visions, charmynge, vanitie, and deceyptfulnesse of theyr owne herte: Therfoze thus sayth the Lozde As for those Prophetes that preache in my name (whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that saye: Swisshe there shal neither batayle ne honger be in this land: With swerde and with honger shall those Prophetes perysh, and the people to whom they haue preached, shal be cast out of Jerusalem, dye of honger, and be slayne with the swerde (and there shall be no man to burye them) both they and theyr wyues, theyr sonnes and theyr doughters. For thus wyll I poure their wickednesse vpon them. This shalt thou saye also vnto them: Myne eyes shall wepe without ceasynge, daye and nyght. For my people shall be destroyed with great harme, and shal perisshe with a great plage, for if I goo in to the felde: lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: Yf I come in to the citye: lo, they be all famished of honger. D Ezech. i. f, & ii. f.

Yea, their Prophetes also and prestes shall be led in to an vnknowen lande.

Haste thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? (sayd I) Doth thou so abhorre Sion? Or hast thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed no more? We loked for peace, and ther commeth no good, for the tyme of helthe: and lo, here is no thynge but trouble. We knowlege (O Lorde) all oure mysdoedes, and the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased (O Lozde) for thy names sake, Jeremi. viii. e forget not thy louynge kyndnesse: Remembre the trone of thyne honour, breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made with vs. Are there anye amonge the Goddes of the Panyms, that send rayne, or gyue the shewers of heauen? Nosse not thou it, O Lorde oure God, in whom we trust? Yea Lorde, thou wilt all these thinges.

¶ The Lorde wyll not heare Moses or Aaron, yf they praye for the people, but wyll wrappe them in manye myseryes. The cause of suche greate myseryes.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me, and saide: Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Dryue them awaye, that they maye goo out of my syghte. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go, then tell them: The Lorde gyueth you this answere: Some vnto deathe, some to the swerde, some to honger, some in to captiuitie. For I wyll bringe foure plages vpon the, sayth the Lorde. The swerde shall strangle them, the dogges shall deuoure them, the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earthe shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyll scatter them about also, in al kyngdomes and landes to be plaged, bycause of Manasses the sonne of Ezechias kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

Zacha. xi. b.

B Who shall then haue pitie vpon the, O Jerusalem? Who shall be sorye for the? Or who shall make intercession to obteyn peace for the: seing thou goest fro me, and turnest backewarde, sayethe the Lorde? Therfore I wyll stretche out myne hande agaynst the, to destroye the, and I wil not be entreated. I will scatter the aboue with the fanne on euerye syde of the lande, I wyl waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no luste to turne from their owne wayes. I wyll make their wydowes moo in nombre then the sandes of the see.

Amos. viii. c.

The sunne shall fayle her in the clere daye, when she shall be confounded and faynte for very heuynesse. As for those that remayne, I wil deliuer them vnto the swerde of their enemyes, sayth the Lorde. O mother, alas that

C euer thou didest beare me, an enemy & hated of the hole lande: Thoughe I neuer lente ne receyued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euill vpon me.

And the Lorde answered me: Lede not I the then vnto good? Come not I to the when thou art in trouble, and helpe the whē thyne ennemye oppresseth the? Doth one yron hurt an other, or one metall that commeth frome the Northe another? As for youre riches and treasure, I wyll gyue them oute in to a praye, not for anye money, but bycause of all youre synnes that ye haue wone in all youre coastes. And I wyll bringe you with youre ennemyes in to a lande that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remembre me, and visit me, deliuer me fro my persecuters: Receyue not my cause in thy longe wrathe, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When D I had founde thy wordes, I ate them vp gredely: they haue made my herte ioyfull & glad. For I cal vpon thy name, o Lord God of hostes. I dwel not amonge the scorners, neither is my delite therin: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with bytternes. Shal my heurnes endure for euer? Are my plages then so great, that they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water þ faileth, and can not continue?

Upon these wordes, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Yf thou wylt turne agayne, I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylte take oute the thynge that is precious frome the vile, thou shalte be euen as myne owne mouthe. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: & so shall I make the a strong wall of stele agaynst this people. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not preuayle. For I my selfe wyl be with the to helpe the, and delyuer the sayth the Lorde. And I wyll rydde the oute of the handes of the wycked, and delyuer the out of the hande of tyrauntes.

¶ The prophecyeth the misery of the Jewes. He sheweth, that the worshyppinge of Idoles and the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of their myserie. He prophecieth the captiuitie of Babilon, and their delyuerraunce from thence agayne. The callinge of the Gentiles.

CAPI. XVI.

MOreouer thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: A Thou shalte take the no wyfe, ne begette chyldren in this place: For of the chyldren that are borne in this place, of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayethe the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible deathe, no man shall mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perysshe thorowe the swerde and honger, and theyr bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earthe. Agayne, thus sayth the Lorde: Go not vnto them, that come together for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace frome this people (sayth the Lorde) yea my fauour and my mercy. And in this land shal they dye, olde and ponge, and shall not be buryed: no man shall bewayle, no man shall clyp or shaue him selfe for them.

Ther-

There shall not one bysyte an other, to mourne with them for their deed, or to comforte them. One shall not offre an other the cuppe of consolacion, to forget theyr deutnes for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feaste house, to syt downe, moch lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Behold, I shall take awaye oute of this place, the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the bryde grome and of the bryde: yea and that in youre dayes, that ye may se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde deuysed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and syn that we haue done agaynste the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayth the Lorde) & haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kepte my lawe. And ye with your shamefull blasphemyes, haue exceded the wyckednes of youre fathers. For euerye one of you foloweth the frowarde and euyll ymagination of his hert, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therfore wyll I caste you oute of this lande, into a lande that ye and your fathers knowe not: and there shal ye serue straunge goddes daye and nyght, there wyll I shewe you no fauoure. Beholde therfore (sayth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, wyche broughte the childzen of Israell oute of the lande of Egypte: but, it shall be sayde, the Lorde lyueth, that broughte the childzen of Israel from the Northe, and frome al landes where I had scatered them. For I will bring them agayne in to the lande, that I haue vnto their fathers.

Beholde (sayth the Lorde) I will sende oute many fyshers to take them, and after that wyll I sende out many hunters to hunte them oute, frome al mountaynes and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither cā their wicked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte. But fyrste wyll I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemyes & synnes, wherwith they haue defyled my lande: Namely with their stinkyng Idols and abhomynacions, wherwith they haue fylled myne heritage, O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verelye oure fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, their Idols are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a man make vnto his goddes, whiche are not able to be goddes. And therfore I wyll ones teache them, sayth the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lorde.

¶ The frowardnesse of the Iewes. Cursed be those that put their confydence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. Mannes hert is wycked. God is the searcher of the hert. The lyuyng waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

CAPI. XVII.

YOure synne (O ye of the tribe of Juda) is wrytten in the table of your hertes, and grauen so vpon the edges of youre alters with a penne of yron and with an Adamant clawe: that youre childzen also may thynk vpon your alters, woddes, thicke trees, vpon hylles, mountaynes and feldes. wherfore I wyll make all youre substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the greate synne that ye haue done vpon your hygh places thorow out all the coostes of youre lande. Ye shall be caste out also frome the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the hevy bondage of youre ennemyes, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue myngled fyre to my indignacion, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayth the Lorde: Cursed be the man that putteth his truste in man and that taketh flesh for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth frome the Lorde. He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thing that is for to come he shal not se it: but dwell in a dryc place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupied lād.

✠ O blessed is the mā, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. ✠ For he shall be as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whiche sprcdeth oute the rote vnto moystnesse, whome the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are greene. And though there grow but lytle frute because of drouthe, yet is he not carefull but he neuer leaueth of to bring forthe frute. Amonge all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most disceptfull and vnserchable herte.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes, and rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes, and accordinge to the frute of his counsels.

The disceptfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no young: he commeth by riches but not ryghtously. In the mydest of his life muste he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be foūd a very foole. But thou (O Lord) whose trone is moste gloryous, excellent and of moste antyquite, whiche dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: Thou arte the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earthe, for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be hole: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Behold, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lord? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles ledinge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer delyred any mans death, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not nowe terrible vnto me, O Lorde, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in peryl. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayde, and not me. Thou shalte bringe vpon them the tyme of theyr plage, and shalte destroy them right sore.

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate, where thorow the people and the kynges of Juda go out and in, yea vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the word of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda, and all ye citesens of Jerusalem, that go thorowe this gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also oute of youre houses in the Sabboth. Ye shall do no labour therin, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neither herke ned they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor receyued my correction. Neuertheles, yf ye wyll heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no burthen in to the cyte thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: If ye wyll halowe the Sabboth, So that ye do no worke therin: then shal ther go thorow ỹ gates of this city, kiges and prynces, that shall syt vpon the stoole of ỹ Dauid: They shalbe carryed vpō charettes and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and theyr prynces. Yea whole Juda and all the citesins of Jerusalem shal go here thorowe, and this citye shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda, from aboute Jerusalem, and from the land of Ben Jamin, from the playne feldes, from the mountaynes and from the wyldernesse: whiche shall bringe burntoffrynges, sacrifices, oblacions, and incense, and offre thankesgyuynge in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabboth, so that ye wyll beare youre burthens thorowe the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the tye houses of Jerusale, and no man shalbe able to quenche it.

¶ God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the despysers of his worde, and to helpe them agayn when they amend. The conspiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremye. His prayer agaynst his aduersaryes.

CAPI. XVIII.

THis is an other communycacion, that God had with Jeremy, sayinge: Arise, and go downe in to the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Nowe when I came to to the Potters house I founde him makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes: So he beganne a newe, and made an other vessell, according to his mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hand, euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye anye people or kingdome: yf that people (agaynste whome I haue thus deuyled) conuerte from theyr wickednesse: Immediatly, I repent of the plage that I deuyled to bryng vpon them. Agayne when I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Immedyatly, I repent of the good, that I deuyse to do for them.

Speake nowe therfore vnto hole Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuysynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thinge in hande agaynst you.

Therfore let euery man turne frome his euyll waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do rygot. But they say: No more of this, we wyll folowe oure owne ymaginacyons, and do euerye man according to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske amonge the Heathen, yf any man herde suche horryble thynges, as the daughter of Syon hath done. Shal not the snow (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Lybanus) moysten the feldes? Or may the sprynges of waters be so grauen away, that they runne no more gyue moysture, ne make fruteful? But my people hath forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goodes. And whyle they folowed their owne wayes, they are come oute of the hygge strete, and gone in to a fore waye not vsed to be troden. Where thorowe they haue brought their lande into an euerlastynge wyldernesse and scorne: So that whosoeuer trauayleth therby, shall be abashed, and wagge their heades. With an Easte wynde will I scatter them, before their enemyes. And when they destruction cometh I will turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagyn some thinge agaynst this Jeremye. Yea this dyd euen the prestes, to whome the law was committed: the Senatours, that were the wyseste: and the Prophetes whiche wanted not the word of God. Come (sayde they) let vs cut oute his tunge, and let vs not regarde his wordes. Consyder me, O Lorde, & heare the voyce of myne ennemyes. Do they not recompence euyll for good, when they dygge a pyt for my soule? Remembre, howe that I stode before the, to speake for them, and to tourne awaye thy wrath frome them.

Therfore let theyr children dye of hunger, and let them be oppressed with the swearde. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr children, and and become wydowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yonge men be kylled with the swearde in the felde. Let theyr noyse be herde out of their houses, when ꝑ murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them: For they haue digged a pit to take me, and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, thou knowest all their counceil, that they haue deuysed to slaye me. And therfore forgyue them not their wycked nes, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the gylty: This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Ierusalem. for contempt and despytynge of the worde of God.

CAPI. XIX.

MOreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto Jeremye: Go thy waye, and bye the an erthen pitcher, and bringe forth the Senatours, and chefe prestes into the valley of the chyldren of Hēnon, which lyeth before the port that is made of bryche, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and say thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lord, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytezins of Ierusalem: Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Behold, I wil bring suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it, shall glowe. And that be cause they haue forsake me, and vnhalowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto straūge goddes: whome neither they, their fathers, ne the kynges of Juda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, for they haue set vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their childre for a burnt offeryng vnto Baal, whiche I neither com maunded, ne charged them, neyther thought ones therupon.

Behold therfore, the tyme commeth (saith the Lorde) that this place shall no more be called Topheth, ne the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place will I slaye the Senatoures of Juda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr ennemyes, and of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcases wyll I gyue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. And I will make this cytye so desolate, and despyted: that who so goeth therby, shal be abasshed and iesse vpon her, because of al her plages.

* I will fede them also with the flesshe of their sonnes and their doughters. Yea euerye one shall eate vp an other in the besegynge & straytnesse, wherwith their ennemyes (that seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: euen so will I destroye this people and cytye: as a Potter breketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

In Topheth shall they be buried, for ꝑ they shall haue none other place. This wyll I do vnto this place also, sayth the Lorde, and to them that dwell therin: Yea I wyll doo to this cytye, as vnto Topheth (For the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, like as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlets they dyd sacrifyce vnto all the hoste of heauen, and poured out drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremy came from Topheth where the Lorde had sent him to prophecye & stode in the court of the house of the Lorde and spake to all the people: Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel: Behold, I wyll bringe vpon this cytye and vpon euery towne about it, al the plages that I haue deuysed agaynst theym: for they haue bene obstynate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges. iii. Reg. xxiii.

Jeremye is smytten and cast in to prison, for preachynge of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captiuite of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mockynge stocke, for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spyrite to preache the worde, wyll he wyll he not.

CAPI. XX.

WHen Phashur the preste, the sonne of Emer, chefe in the house of the Lorde, herde Jeremye preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremye, and put him in the stockes, that are by the hygh gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lorde. The next daye folowynge Phashur brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremye vnto him: The Lord hath cal the no more Phashur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearefull and afrayed) euerye where. For thus sayth the Lorde: behold, I wyll make the afrayed, the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: which shall perysshe with the swearde of their ennemyes, euen before thy face.

And I wyll gyue hole Juda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, whiche shal cary some vnto Babylon prysoners, and slay some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all their precyous and gorgeous workes, all iewlynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I gyue into the handes of theyr enemyes whiche shall spoyle them, and carye theym vnto Babilon. But as for the (O Phashur) thou shalte be caryed vnto Babylon with al thine houshoolde, and to Babilon shalte thou come where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and al thy fauourers, to whom thou hast preched lyes. O Lorde, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, and makest me strong agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed and laughed to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached long agaynste malicious tyranny, and shewed them of destruccō. For the whiche cause they call the worde of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst worde.

Wherfore, I thought from hence forthe not to speake of him, ne to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my herte and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue stopped I myght not. For why, I herde so many detisyons and blasphemyes, yea euen of mine owne companyons, and of suche as were conuersaunt with me: whiche went aboute, to make me afrayed, sayinge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to teare hym, and make him holde his tonge: that we may ouercom him and be auenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by my me, lyke a myghtye gyaunt: therfore my persecutters fell, and coulde do nothynge. They shalbe sore confoũded, for they haue wne vnwisely, they shal haue an euerlastyng shame. And now, O Lorde of Hostes, thou ryghteous sercher (whi the knowest the reynes and the very hertes) let me se them punyshed, for vnto the I commytte my cause.

Iere. xxiii. b

Jeremy. xi. d.

D Synge vnto the Lorde and prayse hym, for he hathe delyuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the vyolent. Cursed be the daye, wherin I was borne: vnhappye be the daye wherin my mother broughte me forth. Cursed be the man, that broughte my father ỹ tydynges, to make him glad, sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpsyde downe (when he had hearde longe the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrthe might not haue come out, but remayned styl in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of laboure and sorowe? and to lede my lyfe with shame?

Job. iii. a.

¶ The prophesyeth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytye burned.

CAPI. XXI.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what tyme as king Zedekiah sent vnto him Phashur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah the son of Maasiah preaste, sayinge: Aske counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besiegeth vs, if the Lorde (peraduenture) wyll deale with vs, accordyng to his meruelous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Gyue Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I wyll turne backe the weapons, that ye haue in youre handes, wherwith ye fyghte agaynste the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, which besege you roũd about the walles, and I wyll bringe the together into the myddest of this cytye, and I my selfe will fyght agaynst you, with an out stretched hande, and with a myghtye arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrathe; and wyll smyte them, that dwell in this citie: yea bothe men and catteil shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayth the Lorde) I shall delyuer Zedekiah the kyng of Juda and his seruauntes, his people (and suche as are escaped in the cytye, from the pestylence, sweard, and honger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yea in to the handes of their enemyes, in to ỹ handes of thole that folowe vpon their lyues, whiche shall smyte them with the sweard: they shal not pyty them, they shall not spare them, they shal haue no mercye vpon them.

B

And vnto this people thou shalte saye: Thus sayth the Lorde: ✠ beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and death. Who so abydeth in this cytye, shall perysshe: either with the sweard, with honger, or with pestylence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shal wynne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynste this cytye (sayth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It muste be gyuen in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be brent with fyre.

C Deut. xi. Jer. xxi.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, saye thus: Heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayth ỹ Lorde: Mynyster ryghtousnesse, and that soone, delyuer the oppressed frome vyolent power: or elles my terryble wrath breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednesse of youre ymaginations. Beholde, (sayth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldes, and say: Tushe: who wil make vs afrayed? or who wyll come in to our houses? For I wyl vyset you (sayth the Lorde) because of the wyckednesse of youre inuentions, and wyll kyndle suche a fyre in youre wod, as shall consume all, that is about you.

D

¶ The exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghtousnesse. why Jerusalem is brought in to captiuyte. The death of Selum the sonne of Josia is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXII.

Thus sayde the Lorde also: Go wyne ¶ into the house of the kynge of Juda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kynge of Juda that syttest in the kyngly sete of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Jerem. Lorde commaundeth: kepe equite and ryghtousnes, delyuer the oppressed from the power of the vyolent: do not greue ne oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ne the widowe and shede no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thynges faythfully then shall there come in at the dore of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate: they B shall be caryed in Charettes and ryde vpon horses, doores, both they and their seruauntes, and their people. But yf ye wyll not be obedient vnto these cōmaūdementes, I swere by mine owne selfe (sayth the Lorde) this house shall be waste. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Juda: Thou arte the heade, as Galaad is in Lybanus: What wylte thou saye of it, yf I make the not so waste (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wyl prepare a destroyer with his weapons for the, to hewe downe thy chyefest Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytye, shall speake one to another: wherefore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytye? Then shal it be answered: * because they haue broken the couenaūt of the Lorde they r God, and haue worshypped & serued straūge goddes. Mourne not ouer the deed, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his native countrey no more. For thus sayth the Lorde, as touchynge Selum the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, whiche raygned after his father, and is carryed oute of this place: He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shal dye in the place, whereunto he is led captyue, & shal se this lande no more. Wo worthe him, that buyldeth his house with vnryghtousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by vyolence: which neuer recompēseth his neyghbours laboure ne payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in him selfe: I wyll buylde me a wyde house and gorgyous parlers: He causeth wyndowes to be hewen therin, and the selynges & gestes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth the with Zenober. Thinckest thou to raigne nowe that prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke, and prospere well, as longe as he delt with equite and ryghtousnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed & poore to theyr ryght then prospered he well, from whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne hert, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge and vyolence. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde agaynste Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to wo) alas brother, alas sister: neither shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prince. But as an Asse shall he be buryed, corrupt and be caste without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vp the hyl of Lybanus (O thou doughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, cry from all partes: for al thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou waste yet in prosperyte. But thou saydest: I wyll not heare. And this maner haste thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmen shall be dryuen with the wynde, and thy louers ges shall be caryed awaye into captyuyte: Then shalte thou be broughte to shame and confusyon, because of all thy wyckednesse: thou that dwellest vpon Lybanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. O how greate shall thy mournynge be, when thy sorowes come vpon the, as a woman trauelyng with chylde?

As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) Though Conanias the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda were the signet of my ryghte hande, yet wyll I plucke him of: And I wyl gyue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou feareste: in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge lande, where ye were not borne and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Conanias shal be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, whiche pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his sede shal be sent awaye, and cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earthe, earthe, earthe: heare the worde of the Lorde: Wryte this man amōg the outlawes, for no prosperyte shall this man haue all his lyfe long. Neither shall any of his sede be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

The speaketh agaynst euyll curates that make hauocke of the flocke of the Lorde. Of the conuersyon of the remnaūt of the Jewes to the fayth. The commynge of the true shepherde Christ is prophesyed. Agaynst false prophetes. when a prophet preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

CAPI. XXIII.

Wo be vnto the shepherdes, that destroye and scatre my flocke, sayth the Lorde. A Ezec. xxxiiii. c Wherfore, this is the commaundemēt of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto ỹ shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore nowe wyll I vysyt the wickednesse of youre ymaginacyons, sayth the Lorde: And wyl gather to gyther the remnaunt of my flocke frome all landes that I had dryuen them vnto, and wyll bryng them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them: They shall no more feare and drede, for there shall none of them be lost, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that I wyll rayse vp the ryghtous braunche of Dauid, whiche shal beare rule, and discus matters with wysdome, and shall set vp equyte and ryghtousnesse a gayne in earth. In his tyme shall Juda be saued and Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure rygh̄teous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the seede of the house of Israel, out of the North land, and from all countreyes where I had scattered them and they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

Jerem.xiiii.a

My herte breaketh in my bodye, because of the false Prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lād is ful of aduouterers, where thorowe it is destroyed and mourneth, and the pleasaunt pastures of the desert are dryed vp. Yea the waye that men take, is wycked, and their gouernaunce is nothynge lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For the Prophetes & the preestes them selues are polluted hypocrites, and their wickednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lorde. Wherfore, their way shal be slypperye in the darknes, wherin they may stacker and fal. For I wyl bring a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of their visitacion, sayth the Lorde I haue sene foly amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, & disceyued my people of Israell.

Jeremy. ix. b

I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduouterye, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moste shamefull men by the hande, flatrynge the, so that they can not returne frome their wickednes. All these with their cytezyns are vnto me, as Sodome, and as the inhabytoures of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes concernynge the prophetes: Beholde, I wyll fede them with wormwod, and make them drynke the water of gall. For frome the prophetes of Jerusalem is the sykenes of ypocrysye come into all the lande.

Jeremi.xxviii.b. xxiii.b.

And therfore the Lorde of Hostes giueth you this warnynge: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceyue you: for they speake the meanyng of their owne herte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prosper ryght well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tushe, there shall no misfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath herde and vnderstande, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his worde, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shal go forth, and shal fal downe vpon the heed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, tyll he performe and fulfyl the thought of his hert. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they hadde contynued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their cuyll wayes and wycked ymaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thynge, whiche is nygh at hande, and not that is farre of? sayth the Lorde. Maye any man hyde him selfe so, that I shal not se hym? sayth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyl heauen and earthe? sayth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynoughe, what the Prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tell lyes, & to preache the crafty subtylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forgette my name, as their fore fathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hathe a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shewe it faythfully.

F

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? sayth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayth the Lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the Prophetes, that steale my worde priuyly frome euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste the Prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The Lorde hathe sayd. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste those Prophetes, that darre Prophecye lyes, and disceyue my people with their vanyties, & myracles, whome I neuer sent, ne commaunded theym. They shall do this people greate harme, sayth the Lorde.

If this people, eyther any Prophete or preste aske the, and saye: what is the burthē of the Lorde? Thou shalte saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore wyll I caste you fro me (sayth the Lorde) because ye youre selues are a burthen. And the Prophete, prest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) hym wyll I vyset, and his house also.

G

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to an other: What answere hath the Lorde gyuē? or, what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake no more of it: for euerye mans owne word is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shall euerye man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde gyuen the? Or what sayth the Lord? And not ones to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For so moche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthē of ỹ Lorde) where as I not withstandinge sent vnto you and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore I wyll repute you as a

bnethen, and wil cast you out of my presence: yea and the city also, that I gaue you & youre fathers: and wil bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and in to suche a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

¶ The vysyon of the two pannyers of frygges. The fyrst vysyon signifyeth, that parte of the people shoulde be brought agayne frome captyuytye. The seconde, that Sedechias and the rest of the people shoulde be destroyed.

CAP. I. XXIIII.

The Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde there stode two maundes of frygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led awaye captyue Jechonias the sonne of Joakim kynge of Juda, the myghtye men also of Juda, with the worke maisters, and connyng men of Jerusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good frygges, euen lyke as thole that be fyrst rype. In the other maunde were verye naughtye frygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so eupll. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: What seest thou Jeremye? I sayde: frygges, wherof some be verye good, and some so eupl, that no man may eate them.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good frygges, so shall I knowe the men ledde awaye, whome I haue sente out of this place in to the lande of the Caldees, for their profyte: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon the for the beste, for I wyll bryngе them agayne into this lande: I wil buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plant them, and not roote them oute. And I wyll gyue them an herte, to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. They shall be my people, and I wil be their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their hole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye frygges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so eupll: Euen so wyll I (sayth the Lorde) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (ye and all his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remayne oute in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypt) to be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reproфe, a cōmon by worde a laughynge stocke and shame, in all the places where I shall scattre them. I wyll sende the swerde, hongre, and pestylence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

¶ Jeremye prophecyeth, that they shall be in captyuytye thre score and ten yeares, bicause they contemned and despyded the worde of God. He sheweth that after thre score and ten yeares, the Babylonyans shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nacyons is prophecyed. He mouyeth the preastes of the nacyons to waylynge.

CAP. XXV.

A Sermon that was gyuen vnto Jeremye, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourthe yere of Joakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Whiche sermon Jeremye the Prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem on this maner.

From the thyrtenth yere of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daye (that is euen thre and twenty yere) the worde of the Lorde hath ben committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rysen vp earlye, I haue gyuen you warnynge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the Lorde hathe sente his seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayd: tourne agayne euery man frome his eupll waye, and from youre wycked ymagynacions, and so shall ye dwelle for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you and youre forefathers: and go not vnto straunge goddes, serue them not, worshyp them not, and angre me not with the workes of youre handes: then wyll not I punysshe you. Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue styred me with the workes of youre handes, to youre owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Bycause ye haue not harkened vnto my worde: lo, I wyll sende oute and call for all the people that dwell in the North, sayth the Lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyll bryngе them vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and wyll vtterly roote them oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage, and a contynuall desserte.

Moreouer, I wyll take frome them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bryde grome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the creshettes: and this hole lande shall become a wildernesse, and they shall serue the sayd people, and the kyng of Babylon thre score yeres and ten. When the thre score and tenne yeres are expyred, I wyll vysyte also the wickednesse of the kyng of Babylon and his people, sayth the Lorde: yea and the lande of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetual wyldernesse, and will fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande, whiche I haue deuysed agaynste it: yea, all that is wrytten in this boke, whiche Jeremye hathe prophecyed of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nacions & great kynges, for I wyll acquyte them accordyng to their dedes and workes of their owne handes.

For thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cup of in-

Psal.lxxv.b. dignacion fro my hand, that thou maist cause all the people to whome I sende the, for to drynke of it: that when they haue dronken therof, they may be mad and out of their wittes, when the swerde commeth, that I wyll sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand, and made all the people, drynke therof, vnto whom the Lorde had sent me.

E But fyrste the cittye of Jerusalem, and all the cityes of Juda, their kynges and princes: to make them desolate, waste, despised and cursed, as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao kyng of Egypte, his seruauntes, his princes, and his people all togither one with an other, and all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon: Azah, Accaron and the rest of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, al the kinges of Tyrus and Sidon: the kinges of the Iles, beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and the shauen Ismaelites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (generallye) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Zamri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges towarde the Northe, farre or nye, euerye one with his neyghboures: Yea, all the kyngdomes that are vpon the vpte earthe. The kynge of Sesach, sayde he, shall drynke with them also.

F And say thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Drynke and be dronken, spewe and fall that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the swerde, whiche I wyll sende amonge you. But yf they wyll not receyue the cuppe of thy hande, and drynke it, then tell them: Thus bathe the Lorde of hostes threten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortly. For lo, I begyn to plage the cittye that my name is gyuen vnto: thynche ye then, that I wyll leaue you vnpunysshed? Ye shall not goo quyte. For why, I call for a swerde vpon all the inhabitauntes of the earth, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Jerem. xlix.b Ezech.xx.b 1.Per.iiii.c.

Joel iii.c Amos.i.a.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let his voyce be herde frome his holy dwellynge place. With a greate noyse shall he crye fromte his courte regall. He shall gyue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shall be herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hathe a iudgement to gyue vpon all people, and wyll holde his courte of iustyce with all fleshe and punysshe the vngodly, sayethe the Lorde.

G For thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: Behoide, a myserable plage shall goo frome one people to an other, and a greate storme water shall aryse frome all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde him selfe slee theym, frome one ende of the earthe to an other. There shall no lamentacion be made for anye of them, none gathered vp, none buryed; but shall lye as dung vpon the grounde.

Jeremi.xxv.b

Mourne, o ye shepherdes, and crye: sprinkle your selues with asshes, o ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels comingly made for pleasure.

The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flie, and the rammes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shall the shepeherdes crye horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume their pasture, and their beste feldes shall lye deed, because of the horrible wrathe of the Lorde. They shall forsake their foldes, lyke as a lyon. For their landes shall be waste, because of the wrathe of the destroyer, and because of his fearefull indignacion.

Pla.

¶ Jeremye moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and Preestes, and brought to iudgement. He beinge accused before the Princes, answereth: that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers and the people deliuer Jeremye, agaynst the wyles of the Preestes and Prophetes: after the exemple of Ezechias, whiche had deliuered Micheas, that had preached the same thynges that Jeremye had preached. Uriah the Prophete is killed of Joakym, contrarye to the wyll of God.

CAPL. XXVI.

IN the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the son of Josias kyng of Juda, came this worde from the Lorde, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all theym whiche (oute of the cityes of Juda) come to do worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Loke thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will harken and turne euery man frome his wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determined to bringe vpon them, because of their wycked inuencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I haue gyuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome I sende vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and styll sendynge: Yf ye wyll not folowe them (I saye) then wyll I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silob, and wyll make this cittye to be abhorred of all the people of the earthe. And the preestes, the Prophetes, and al the people herde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he hadde spoken oute all the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded hym to preache vnto all the people, then the preestes, the Prophetes, and all the people layde holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalte dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd to Silob: and this cytye shall be so waste, that no man shall dwel therin?

And

And when all the people had gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda herde of this rumoure, and they came forthwith oute of the kynges palace in to the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the preestes and the Prophetes vnto the rulers, and to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached against this city, as ye your selues haue herd with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this citye all the wordes that ye haue herd. Therfore amende youre wayes, and your aduisementes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he hadde deuysed agaynst you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, doo with me as ye thynke expediente and good.

But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to deth, ye shall make your selues, this citye and all the inhabitours therof, guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a truth: that the Lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake al these wordes in your eares.

Then sayd the rulers and the people vnto the preestes and Prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: Micheah the Morasthite, whiche was a Prophete vnder Ezechias kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Syon shall be plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house, shall be turned to an hye wodde.

Dyd Ezechias the kynge of Juda and the people of Juda put him to deth for this? No verily, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. For whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage that he had ruised against them. Shold we then do suche a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? There was a Prophete also, that preached sy sye in the name of the Lord called Uriah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this citye and agaynste this land, according to all as Jeremy sayth. Now when Joakim the kynge with all the estates and princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slee him. When Uriah perceyued that, he was afrayde, and fled, and departed in to Eygpt.

Then Joakim the kyng sent seruauntes in to the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan ỹ sonne of Achabor, and certeyn men with him in to Egypte, whiche fetched Uriah oute of Egypte, and brought him vnto kyng Joakim that slewe him with the swerde, and caste his dede body in to the common peoples graue. But Ahikam the son of Saphan helped Jeremye that he came not in to the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ Jeremye, at the commaundement of the Lorde, sendeth bondes to the kynge of Juda, and to the other kynges that were nyghe, whereby they are monyshed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not false Prophetes.

CAPI. XXVII.

A IN the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde vnto Jeremye frome the Lorde, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the the kyng of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, ỹ kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydon, & that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Sedechias the king of Juda, & byd them saye vnto their masters: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus vnto youre masters: I am he that made the erth, the men, and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power and stretched out arme, & haue gyuen it vnto whom it pleased me.

B And nowe wyll I delyuer all these landes in to the power of Nabuchodonosor ỹ kynge of Babylon, my seruaunt. The beestes also of the felde shall I gyue hym to doo hym seruyce. And all people shall serue him, and his sonne, and his chyldes chyldren, vntyll the tyme of the same lande be come also: yea manye people, and greate kynges shall serue him. Eccle.x.a Iudicum.xi.d Jere.xxxii.a Daniel.iiii.c Jeremi xxv.b Jerem. xxii.b xxvii.a & xlii.c.

Moreouer, that people and kyngdome whiche wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people wyll I vysyte with the swearde, with honger, with pestylence, vntyl I haue consumed them in his handes, sayth the Lorde. And therfore folowe not youre Prophetes, sothesayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches, whiche saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon. Jerem. xxiii.c xxix.b.

For they preache you lyes: to brynge you farre frome youre lande, and that I myghte caste you out, and destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of ỹ kynge of Babylon and serue him, those I wil let remayne styll in their owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and they shal occupy it and dwell therin.

C All these thynges tolde I Sedechias kyng of Juda, and sayde: Put youre neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why, wylt thou and thy people perish with the swerde, with honger, with pestylence: lyke as the Lorde hathe deuysed for all people that wyll not serue the kynge of Babylon? Therfore gyue no care vnto those Prophetes (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes, neyther haue I sente them, sayth the Lorde: how be it they are bolde, falsely to prophecye Jer. xxxviii.c Jere. xxiii.c Jere. xxix.b Jerem. xiii.c xiii.d.a xxix.b.

in my name: that I might̃e the sooner dryue you out, and that ye myght perish with your preachers.

D I spake to the preestes also, and to all the people: Thus sayth the Lorde: Heare the wordes of those Prophetes that preaches vnto you, and saye: Beholde the vessels of ꝑ Lordes house, shall shortly be brought hyther agayne frome Babylon: For they prophecye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye may lyue. Wherfore will ye make this citye to be destroyed? But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be commyted vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunt of the ornamentes (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Babylon also.

For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerning the pyllers, the lauer, the seat and the residue of the ornamẽtes that yet remayn in this citye, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, when he caryed awaye Jechoniah the sonne of Joakim kyng of Juda, with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem, frome Jerusalem vnto Babylon captyue.

4.Reg.xxv.a Yea, thus hathe the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Israell spoken, as touchynge the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem: They shall be caryed vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne vntyll I vysyte them, sayth the Lorde. Then wyll I bryng them hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yere: euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda.

¶ The false prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye sheweth ꝑ the Prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the exemple of other Prophetes. He being inspyred of the Lorde, reproueth Hananiah, Prophecyinge his death.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A BVt in the fourthe yere of the raygne of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the fyfth moneth: It happened that Hananiah the sonne of Assur the Prophete of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the preestes and of all the people, and sayd: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I haue broken the yoke of the kyng of Babylon: and after two yere wyll I bryng agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon caried awaye from this place vnto Babylon.

Yea, I wil bryng agayn Jechoniah ꝑ sonne of Joakim the kynge of Juda him selfe, with all the prysoners of Juda (that are caryed vnto Babylon) euen in to this place, sayth the Lorde, for I wyl breake the yoke of the king of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremye gaue answere B vnto the Prophet Hananiah, before the preestes, and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. And ꝑ Prophet Jeremye sayd: Amen. The Lorde do that, and graunt the thynge whiche thou hast Prophecied: that he maye bryng agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the prysoners frome Babylon in to the place. Neuertheles harken thou also what I will saye, that thou and al the people may heare: The Prophetes that were before vs in times paste, whiche prophecied of warre or trouble, or pestylence, eyther of peax vpon manye nations and greate kyngdomes were proued by this, (yf God had sende them in verye dede) whẽ the thing came to passe, which that Prophet tolde before.

And Hananiah the Prophet toke ꝑ cheyne C from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah that all the people might heare: Thus hathe the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, frome the necke of all nations, yea and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye. Deut.xiii. Numer.xxv.

Nowe after that Hananiah the Prophete had taken the cheyne from the Prophete Jeremies necke, and broken it: The word of the Lorde came vnto the Prophete Jeremye sayinge: Go and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayth the Lorde: Thou hast broke the cheyne of wod, but in stede of wod thou shalt D make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I wyll put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, yea and so shal they do. And I wyll gyue him the beestes in the felde. Then sayd the Prophet Jeremye vnto Jeremy. that Prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lorde hathe not sente the, but thou bryngest this people in to false dyleke. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll send the out of the land, and within a yere thou shalte dye, bicause thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the Prophet died the same yere in the seuenth moneth. Hananiah. eth.

¶ The Epystle of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captyuytye in Babylon. He prophecyeth theyr returne from captyuytye after thre score and ten yeares. He prophecyeth the destruction of the kynge and of the pesple that remayned in Jerusalem. He threteneth two Prophetes that leduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelampte is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXIX.

THis is the copye of the lettre, that Jere- A mye the Prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the prysoners: the Senatours preestes, Prophetes, and al the people whom Nabuchodonosor hadde ledde vnto Babylon after after that tyme that kynge Iechoniah, and his quene, his chamberlaynes the pynces of Juda and Ierusalem, the worckemaisters of Ierusalem were departed thyther. Whiche lettre Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Gamariah the sonnne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Sedechias ỹ kyng of Juda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. These were the wordes of Ieremyes lettre:

Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell spoken vnto all the prysoners that were leade fromie Ierusalem vnto Babylon: buylde your houses to dwell therin: plante you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: take you wyues to beare you sonnes and doughters: prouyde wyues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for your doughters, that they maye gette sounnes and doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Labour not to be fewe, but seke after peax, and prosperitie of the citye wherin ye be prysoners, & praye vnto God for it. For in the peax therof shall your peax be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: Let not thyse prophetes and sothesayers that be amonge you, deceyue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayth the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: When ye haue fulfylled thre score and tenne yeres at Babylon, I wyll bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnelle I wyll carye you hyther agayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue deuyled for you, sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to gyue you peax, and not trouble (whiche I gyue you all redye) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. Ye shal seke me, and fynde me. Yea yf so be that ye seke me with your hole herte, I wyll be found of you (sayth the Lorde) and will deliuer you out of prylon, and gather you togyther agayne oute of all places wherin I haue scattered you, sayth the Lorde: and wyll bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried away captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God haue rayled you vp prophetes at Babylon: thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernyng the kyng that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwelle in this citie, youre brethren that are not gone with you in to captiuitie.) Thus, I saye, speaketh the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wil send a swerde, hongre, and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vnsemely figges, that maye not be eaten for bitternesse. And I will persecute them with ỹ swerde, with hongre and deth.

I wyll delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of all the people amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that bicause they haue not ben obedient vnto my commaundementes, saith the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes the Prophetes. I stode vp early, and sent vnto them, but they wolde not heare, sayth the Lorde.

Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whom I sent from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Achab the sonne of Colaiah, and of Sedechias the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde, I wyll deliuer them in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may slee them before youre eyes. And all the prysoners of Juda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saye: Now God wo vnto the, as he dyd vnto Sedechias and Achab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, bycause they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I testify and assure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelampte thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Bicause thou hast sealed lettres vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preest: yea, and sent them to all the preestes: wherin thou writest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeined the to be preest in stede of Joiada the preest, that shouldest be the chiefe in the house of the Lorde aboue all Prophetes, and preachers, and that thou myghtest put them in prylon, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, whiche neuer leaueth of his prophecyinge?

And beside all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plante vs gardens that we maye enioye the frutes therof. Whiche lettre Sophoniah the preest dyd rede, and let Jeremye the Prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that are in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelampte: Bycause that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you without my commission, and broughte you in to a false hope, therfore thus the Lorde dothe certifye you: Beholde, I will visyte Semeiah the Nehelampte, and his seed: so that none of his shal remayne amonges this people, and none of them shall se the good that I wil do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

¶ The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by his chastenynge sheweth that the people is synfull. The destruction of the enemyes of Israel.

CAPI. XXX.

THese are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Write vp diligentlye all the wordes that I haue spoken vnto the, in a boke. For loo, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll bryng agayne the pryseners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayth the Lorde: For I wyll restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde concerning Israel and Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse. For what els dothe this signifie, that I se? Namely that all stronge men smyte euery man his hande vpon his loynes, as a woman in the payne of her trauayle. Who euer sawe a man trauayle with chylde? Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yea, all their faces are maruelous pale.

Jeremi. xiii. d

Joel. ii. c. Amos. v. c. Sophon. ii. d

Alas for this day, which is so dredful that none may be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the whiche he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayth the Lorde, I wyll take his yoke from thy necke, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge goddes vnder him, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde, and to Dauid their kyng, whom I wil rayse vp vnto them. ✳ And as for the, o my seruant Jacob, feare not (sayth the Lorde) and be not afrayde, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the also from farree, and thy seed from the lande of their captiuitie.

Esaye. xliiij. a Luke. i. g Eze. xxxviii. d Jerem. xlvi. g

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shall make him afrayde. For I am with the, to helpe the, sayth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all the people amonges whom I haue scattered the, yet wyll I not destroye the, but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I am sory for thy hurt and woundes. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

Jeremye. x. d Exo. xxxiii. a Nahum. i. a.

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothynge for the. For I haue gyuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multytude of thy mysdedes, for thy synnes haue had the ouer hand. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my self haue pitie of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue doone this vnto the.

Jerem. xiii. d

And therfore all they that deuour the, shal be deuoured, and all thyne ennemyes shall be led in to captiuitie. All they that make the waste shal be waste them selues: and al those that rob the, wil I make also to be robbed. For I wyl gyue the thy helth agayn, and make thy woundes hole, sayth the Lorde: bicause they reuiled the as one caste awaye and despysed, O Syon.

Jere. ii. a. xx. d

For thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll sette vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende his dwellynge place. The cittye shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue theyr ryght foundacion. And oute of them shal go thankesgyuing, and the voice of iope.

Num. xxiiii. a

I wil multiply them, and they shal not minish: I shal endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue them. Their children shal be as a fore tyme, and their congregacion shal continue in my syght. And al those that vexe the wyll I vysyte.

A capitayne also shall come of them, and a prynce shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that gyueth ouer his herte o come vnto me, sayth the Lorde?

Mich. i. a. Joan. viii.

Ye shall be my people also, and I wyll be youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake oute as a stormye water, as a myghtye whyrle wynde: and shall fall vpon the heeds of the vngodly.

Jeremi. xxiii. b. Jerem. xxx. and xxiii.

The terrible displeasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, vntyll he haue done and performed the intent of his herte, which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israell, and they shall be my people.

The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperytye. To be mened from lynne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Chryste is prophecyed. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wykednes. The newe Testament and couenaunt is prophecyed. The Chrysten are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Our synnes shall so be remitted, that they shall not ones be thought on. Esay prophecyeth that he wyll caste of the Jewes. The buylding agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXXI.

THus sayth the Lorde: The people of Israell, whiche escaped in the wyldernesse from the swerde, founde grace to come in to their rest. Euen so shall the Lorde nowe also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: I loue the with an euerlastynge loue, therfore wo I spyede my mercye before the. I wyll repayre the agayne (O thou doughter of Israell) that thou mayste be fast and sure. Thou shalte take thy tabrettes agayne, and goo forth with them that lede the daunce.

Num. xxiiii. a. Esay. ii. Ezech. xx.

Thou shalt plant vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shal plant and synge.

And when it is tyme the watchemen vpon the mounte Ephraim shall crye: Aryse, let vs goo vnto Syon to oure Lorde God, for thus sayth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse, bicause of Jacob, crye vnto the heed of the Gentyles: speake out, sing, and say: The Lorde shall deliuer his people, the remnaunt of Israell, and make them hole. Beholde, I wyll bryng them agayne from out of the North lande, and gather them from the ends of the Esay. xl. a

of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with chylde, and suche as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greate.

They departed frome hence in heuynesse, but with ioye wyll I brynge theym hythee agayne. I wyll lede them by the ryuers of water in a strayght waye, where they shall not stomble: For I wyll be Israels father and Ephraim shall be my fyrstborne.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentiles, preach in the Iles, that lye farre of, and say: he that hath scatered Israel, shal gather him to gyther agayne, and shall kepe hym as a shepherde dothe his flocke. For the Lorde shall redeme Iacob, and tyd him frome the hande of the byolent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyl of Syon, and shal haue plentuousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shal gyue them: Namely, wheat, wyne, oyle younge shepe & calues. And theyr conseyence shal be as a wel watred garden, for they shal no more be hongry.

Then shal the maide reioyce in the daunce, yea both yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne their sorowe in to gladnes, and wyll comfort them and make theym toplull, euen frome their hertes. I wyl poure plentesousnes vpon the hertes of the preestes, and my people shal be satisfied w good thinges, saith ꝑ Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: ✻ The voyce of heynes, weppynge and lamention came into heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for her children, & wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayth the Lorde: leane of from weppynge and cryinge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy laboure shall be rewarded sayethe the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of theyr ennemyes: Yea euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this (sayth the Lorde) that thy children shall come agayne in to theyr owne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captyne, complayne on this maner: O Lorde, thou hast correct me, and thy chastenynge haue I receyued, as an vntamed calfe.

Conuerte thou me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea as soone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thyghe. For verelye I haue committed shamefull thynges: O lette my youthe beare this reproche and confusion.

Upon this complaynt, I thoughte thus by my self: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the chylde, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I fyrst communed with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my very hert driueth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wil I haue mercye vpon him, sayth ꝑ Lorde. Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the, let thyne herte vpon the right way, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne (O thou doughter of Israel) turne agayne to these cyties of thine. Howe longe wilte thou go astraye, O thou shrinkynge doughter? For the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: It wyll come therto, that when I haue brought Juda out of captyuyte, these wordes shall be herde in the lande & in his cityes: The Lorde, which is the fayre bryde grome of ryghtousnesse, make the fruitful, O thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepherdes and husbande men: For I shall fede the yong seule, and refreshe all faynte hertes. When I herd this I came agayne to my self, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (sayth the Lord) the dayes come, that I wyl sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda, with men and w catel. Yea it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone aboute in tymes paste to rote theym oute, to scatre theym, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chasten them: Euen so will I also go dylygently about, to buylde them vp agayne and to plante theym sayethe the Lorde.

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne mysdede, so that who so eateth a soure grape, his teeth shall be set on edge. Ezech.xviii.a

Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I wyl make a newe couenaunt with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hand and led them out of the land of Egipt: which couenaunt they brake, wherfore I punyshed them sore, sayth the Lorde: But this shall be the couenaunte that I wyll make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayethe the Lorde: I wyll plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and wryte it in their hertes, and wyll be their God and they shall be my people. Hebre.x.d. Eliape.ii.b. Iere.xxxii. and.xxx.a.

And frome thence forth shall no man teach his neyghboure or his brother, & say: know the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me, frome the lowest vnto the hyghest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgyue their mysdedes, Act.x.f. and wyll neuer remembre their synnes anye more.

Thus sayth the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and ꝑ moone and sterres to shyne in the nyght: whiche moueth ꝑ see, so that the floudes therof ware fearce: his name is the Lorde of Hostes. Lyke as this ordynaunce shall neuer be take out of my syght, sayth the Lord: So shall the sede of Israell neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus sayethe the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth may not not be sought out: So will I also not cast oute the hole sede of Israell, for that they haue committed, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come sayth the Lorde, that the cyte of the Lorde shall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. Frome thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll top, of Gareb, and shal come about Gaath, and the hole valley of the deed kercases, and of the asshes, & all Cremoth vnto the broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsgate towarde the East, where as the Sanctuary of the Lorde also shall be sette. And when it is nowe buylded and set vp of this fasshyō it shall neuer be broke, nor cast downe any more, ¶ Jeremye is cast in to prison, because he prophecyed that the cyte shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felde that Jeremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is sygnifyed, that the people shoulde come agayne to theyr owne possessyon. The people of God are his seruaunces, and he is theyr Lorde. To feare God is Gods gyfte, so thintent that synnes maye be eschewed.

CAPI. XXXII.

1 THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremye, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, whiche was the .xviii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the king of Babilons hoste layed syege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremy the Prophet lay bounde in the courte of the prison, which was in the kynge of Judaes house: where Sedechias the kynge of Juda caused him to be layed, because he hadde prophecyed of this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde: I wyl deliuer this cytye in to the handes of ỹ kyng of Babylon whiche shall take it. As for Sedechias the kyng of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon: which shal speke with him mouth to mouth and one of thē shall loke an other in the face. And Sedechias shal be caryed vnto Babilō, and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vysyt hym, sayth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fyghte agaynste the Caldees thou shalte not prospere.

2 And Jeremye sayde: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hanameel the son of Selum thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme thyne land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And lo Hananeel myne vncles son came to me in the courte of the prison (according to the worde of the Lorde) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countrey of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast ryghte to loose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued, that this was the commaundemēt of the Lorde, and so I loosed the lande frome Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weyed him there the mony: euen seuen sycles, and ten syluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a wryting and to seale it, and called recorde thereby, and weyed him there the mony vpon the waightes.

So I toke the euydence with the coppe (when it was orderlye sealed and red ouer) & I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch ỹ sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syghte of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presēce of the wytnesses, that be named in the euydēce, and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them sayinge: the Lorde of Hostes ỹ God of Israel cōmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydēce with the coppe, and to lay it in an erthen vessell, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel hath determyned, that houses, feldes and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had delyuered the euydēce vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, I besoughte ỹ Lord, sayinge: O Lorde God: It is thou ỹ hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hygh arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. Thou shewest mercye vpon ỹ thousandes, thou recompensest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of ỹ children that come after them

Exo. xxxiiii. a

Thou arte the great and myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and infinite in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euerye one after his waye and according to the frutes of his inuencions.

Ronians. ii. a. d
Ephes. vi. a

Thou hast done greate tokens and wōders in the lande of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell and vpon thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye:

Exo. xiii. a the prophete

Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypte, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghtye hande, with a stretched oute arme, and with greate terryblenesse: and hast gyuen theym this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto theyr fathers: Namelye that thou wouldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye.

Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they followed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwerkes made nowe against the city to take it: and it shal be won of the Caldees that besiege it, with swerde, & hongre and deth, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall lose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the citye is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: beholde, I shall delyuer this cytye in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cytye, and sette fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and poured drynckofferinges vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

For seinge the children of Israel, and the children of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayethe the Lorde.

Or what hathe this citie bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the daye that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemyes of the children of Israell and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their princes, their preestes, their prophetes, hole Juda, and all the citezins of Jerusalem.

When I stode vp early, and taught them and instructe them, they turned theyr backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correcte. They haue sette their goddes in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hyghe places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom, to bowe their sonnes & dougters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne with suche abhomynacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cytye, which (as ye youre selues confesse) shall be delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Babilon, when it is wonne with the swerde, with honger and with pestylence. Beholde, I will gather them to gyther from all landes, wherin I haue scatered the in my wrath, in my fearfull and greate displeasure: and will bryng the agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwel safelye. And they shal be my people, and I will be theyr God.

And I will gyue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their lyfe, that they and their children after them maye prospere. And I will sette vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them Namelye: that I will neuer ceasse to doo theym good, and that I will put my feare in their hertes, so that they shal not run awaye from me.

Yea I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faythfully to plant them in this lande with my hole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people: so will I also bryng vpon them all the good, that haue I promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, wherof ye saye nowe, that it shall neither be inhabited of people ne of catell, but be delyuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea lande shal be bought for mony, and euydences made therupon and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Benjamin, and rounde aboute Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea & in the cities that are in the desert. For I wyl bryng their prysoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The Prophete is monysshed of the Lorde, to praye for the delyueraunce of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God forgyueth synnes, and doeth graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the byrth of Chryst. The kyngdome of Chryste in the churche shall neuer be ended.

CAPI. XXXIII.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the courte of the prison: Thus sayethe the Lorde, which fulfylleth the thyng that he speaketh, the Lord which perfourmeth the thing that he taketh in hande euen he, whose name is the Lorde: thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I haue herde the: I hue shewed grate an hyghe thynges, whiche were vnknowen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this citie, & the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shall be broken thorowe the ordynaunce and weapons, when the Caldees come to besiege them: and they shall be filled with the deed karcases of men, whome I wyll slaye in my wrathe and displeasure: when I turne my face from this cytye because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, (sayethe the Lorde) I wyll heale theyr wounds and make theym hole, I will open them the treasure of peace and truth.

And I wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne as they were afore, From all mysdedes (wher in they haue offended agaynst me) I wyll clense them: And al their blasphemyes whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I will forgyue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse & honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare all the good, that I wyll shewe vnto them: yea they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and benefytes, that I wyll do for them. Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde: in this place, wher-

of ye saye that it shall be a wylderneſſe, wher in neither people ne catel shall dwell: in like maner in the cytyes of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shal be so voyde, that neither people ne cattell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladneſſe be herde againe, the voyce of the brydgrome and of the bryde the voyce of them that shall synge: Prayse the Lorde of Hoſtes, for he is louynge and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shal offre vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I wyll reſtore the captyuyte of this lande, as it was afore, saythe the Lorde. Thus saythe the Lorde of Hoſtes It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, whiche is voyde from men and catell. and in all the cytyes of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages: in the citye vpō the mountaynes: and in the cytyes that lye vpō the playne, and in the deſerte.

In the lande of Benjamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hād of him, that telleth them, saythe the Lorde.

L Jere. xiii. a. Jere. xxiii. a. Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that I wil perfourme that good thyng, whiche I haue promyſed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyll bringe forthe vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghtouſnes, & he shall do equytie and ryghtouſneſſe in the land. In those dayes shall Juda be helped, & Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shal call her is euen God oure ryghteuous maker. For thus the Lorde promyſeth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: neither shall the preeſtes & Leuytes want one to offre alwaye before me burntofferynges, to kyndle the meatofferynges, and to prepare the sacrefyces.

D Gene. viii. d Jere. xxiii. a. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye after this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: Maye the couenaunt whiche I haue made with daye and nyght be broken, that ther shulde not be daye and night in due season? Then maye my couenaunt also be broke whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Trone. So shall also the preeſtes and Leuites neuer saye, but serue me. For lyke as the sterres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sande of the see measured: so wil I multyplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte, and of the Leuites my myniſters.

Gene. xv. a and xxii. c. Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came to Jeremy, sayinge: Conſyderest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he calle awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come to gyther any more, & to be one people agayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & nyght, and gyuen no statute vnto heuen and earthe: then wyll I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I wyll take no prynce out of his sede, to rule the poſterite of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mercifull vnto them.

The thyrteneth that the cytie, and kynge Sedechias also, shall be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that brought suche of theyr brethren into captyuyte, that were pardoned to go at theyr libertye.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

THese are the wordes which the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Nabuchonoſor the kynge of Babylon, and all his Hoſtes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, fought agaynſte Jerusalem, and al the cities therof. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: Goo, and speake to Sedechias the kynge of Juda, and tell him: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde, I wyll delyuer this citie in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalte not eſcape his handes, but shalte be led awaye priſoner, and delyuered in to his power. Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, & he shall speake with the, mouth to mouth, then shalte thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Sedechias thou kynge of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalte not be slayne with the ſwearde, but shalt dye in peare. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were brente: so shalt thou be brent also, and in the mournyng they shall saye: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determyned, saythe the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremye the Prophethe all these wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoſte beſieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the stronge defenſed cytyes of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shulde be proclaymed a lybertye: so that euerye man shulde let his seruaunt and handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebruesſe, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had conſented euen so they were obedyent, and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go free, and so made the bonde agayne.

L Deut. xv. a Exod. xxi. a For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde him selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: ✻ I made a couenaūte with your fathers, when I brought them oute of Egypte (that they shulde no more be bonde men) sayinge: When seuen yeres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruaunte an Hebrue go free, yf ye haue serued him sire yeres. But youre fathers obeyed me not and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, and dyd tyghte before me, in ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neighbour go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the temple that beareth my name:

But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne and blasphemed my name: In this, that eue ry man hathe requyred his seruaunte and handmayden agayne, whom ye had let goo quyte and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be youre bonde men. And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredome vnto his brother and neighboure: wherfore
I wyll call you vnto a fredome, sayethe the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and wil make you to be plaged in all the kyngomes of the earthe.
Yea those men that haue broke my couenaũte and not kepte the wordes of the appoynt-men, which they made before me: when they hewed the calfe in two, and when there wer thorowe the two halfes therof: The Princes of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men, the Priestes and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorow te two sydes of the calfe. Those men wil I gyue in to the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

And their deed boopes shall be meat for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde
As for Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his Princes, I wyll delyuer them into the power of their ennemyes, and of them that de-syre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste, whiche nowe is de parted frome you: But thorowe my commaundement (sayethe the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cytie, they shall fyghte agaynste it, wynne it, and burne it.
Moreouer I wyll laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabytes, and therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabytes. He thyteneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperyte vnto the Rechabytes, for theyr obedyence vnto their father.

CAPI. XXXV.

THe wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the raygne of Joa-kim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda are these: Goo vnto the house of the Recha-bites, and call them oute, and bryngе theym to the house of the Lorde in to some commo-dyous place, and gyue them wyne to drynke.
Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinaiah, & his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole housholde of the Rechabites: and broughte theym to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chil dren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: whiche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasi-ah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the chiefe of the treasurye. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set portes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto theym: Drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynche no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs sayinge: ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, build no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes, yea ye shall haue no vynyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundemẽt, of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father:
in all that he hathe charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, our sonnes, and our doughters.
Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonges vs neither vyneyardes, ne corne land to sowe: but we dwel in tentes, we obey, and do according vnto all that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe when Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon came vp in to the land, we sayde come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the hoste of the Caldees and the Assirians: & so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye sayinge: thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Go and tell hole Ju da and al ỹ inhabitauntes of Jerusalẽ: Wil yenot be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke no wine, but obey their fathers commaunde-ment. But as for me, I haue stande vp early,
I haue spoken vnto you, and gyuen you earnest warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedy ent vnto me. Yea I haue sent my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you worde, sayinge: O turne you, euery man frome his wicked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyp them: that ye may contynue in the lande, whiche I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, ne fo lowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaun dement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel:
Beholde, I wyl bryngе vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynste them.
For I haue spoken vnto the, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuer-theles they wolde gyue me no answere. Jere my also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: For as moche as ye haue obeyed ỹ commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kept all his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all that he hath bydde you:
Therfore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall

shal not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremye indyteth) the booke of the curses agaynst Juda and Jsrael. He is sent with the boke vnto the people, and redeth it before them al. He is called before the rulers, and redeth it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the booke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is an other wryten at the commaundement of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A IN the .iiij. yere of Joakim ſ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy sayinge: Take a boke Jeremi.xxx.a and wryte therin al the wordes, that J haue spoken to the, to Jsrael, to Juda, and to all the people frome the tyme that J beganne for to speake vnto the (in thy raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, whiche J haue deuyſed for the, they may peraduenture turne Jere.xviii.a euery man from his wicked way, that J maye forgyue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the Jeremi.xlv.a sonne of Neriah, & Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, sayinge:
B J am in pryson, so that J maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou haste wryten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord, & rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: ſ the people, hole Juda, and all they that come out of the cytyes maye heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lord, and turne euerye one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrathe and displeasure, that the Lord hath taken agaynste this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete commaunded him, readynge the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house And this was done in the fyfth yere of Joa-
Jone.iii.a kim the sonne of Josiah king of Juda, in the nyneth moneth when it was commaunded that all the people of Jerusalem shulde faste, before the Lorde, and they also that were come frome the cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

C Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye
Jere.xxvi.d oute of the boke within the house of the Lord out of the treasurye of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scrybe, which is beside the hygher lofte of the doze of the Lordes house: that al the people myght heare. Now when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the Lord out of the boke, he went downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chamber, for there al the princes were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Acabor, Gamariah sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch rede oute of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the D sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine hande the boke, wherout thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they sayd vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myght here. Now whē they had herd al the wordes, they were abashed one vpō an other, and sayd vnto Baruch: We wyll certeyne ſ kynge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, saying: tell vs, how dyddest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouthe, and J alone was with him, and wrote them in ſ boke.

Then sayde the Princes vnto Baruch: E Go thy waye, and hyde the with Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scrybe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myght heare. So the kynge sent Jehudi to fetche him the bokes, which he brought out of Elisama the Scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red it, that the kynge and all the princes, whiche were about him, myght heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the nynth moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And when Jehudi had red .iii. Jer.xxxvi or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and caste it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntyll the boke was al brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente F his clothes: neither the kynge hym selfe, ne his seruauntes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besought the kinge, that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstandynge the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpō Baruch the Scrybe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete but the Lorde kept them oute of syghte. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke, and the Sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The word of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other boke, and wryte in it all the foresayde sermons: that were written in the fyrste boke, whiche Joakim the king of Juda hath brent.

And tell Joakim the kynge of Juda: thus G sayth the Lorde: thou haste brent the booke, and thoughteste within thy selfe: Why haste thou wryten therin, ſ the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make this land waste, so that he shall make bothe the people and cattell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Joakim the kinge of Juda: There shall none of his generacion sytt vpon the throne of Dauid. His deed corse shall be cast oute that the heat of the day, and ꝑ frost of the night may come vpon him. And I wil visit the wickednesse of him, of his seed, and of his seruauntes. More ouer all the euyll that I haue promised them (though they heed me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremye an other booke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe, the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremye: All the sermons that were in the fyrste booke, whiche Joakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto theym manye moo sermons then before.

¶ Sedechias succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremye goynge in the lande of Ben Jamyn, is taken. He is beaten, and put in pryson. He is delyuered by kynge Sedechias.

CAPI. XXXVII.

SEdechias the son of Josiah, whiche was made kyng thorow Nabuchodonsor kinge of Babylon reygned in the land of Juda, in the stede of Cononiah the sonne of Joakim. But neythet he, nor his seruauntes, ne the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophet Jeremye. Neuertheleſſe Sedechias the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah, and Sophoniah the son of Maasiah preest to the Prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked fre among the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypt, which whē the Caldees that besieged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye the Prophet, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, this aunswere shal ye gyue to the kynge of Juda, that sente you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos hoste, whiche is come forth to helpe you, shal returne to Egypt, in to his owne lande: but the Caldees shal come agayne, & fight against this citye, wyn it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus saith the Lord: deceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: truly the Caldees goo now their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For thoughe ye had slayne the hole hoste of the Caldees, that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet wolde they stande vp and set fire vpon this citye.

Nowe when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp frome Jerusalem for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin to departe thence busynesse there amonge the people. And whē he came vnder Ben Jamins port, there was a porter called Jeriah the sonne of Selemiah, the son of Hananiah, whiche fell vpon him, and toke him, sayinge: thy mynde is to turne to the Caldees. C

Then sayd Jeremy: it is not so, I goo not to ꝑ Caldees. Neuertheleſſe Jeriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremy bound before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angry with Jeremy, causing him to be beaten, & to be layd in pryson in the house of Jonathas the scribe, for he was the ruler of the pryson. Thus was Jeremye put in the dongeon and pryson, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in his owne house sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yea that it doth, and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered in to ꝑ king of Babylons power. D

Moreouer Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Sedechias: what haue I offended agaynste the, agaynst thy seruauntes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue caused me to be put in pryson? Where are your Prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd that the king of Babylon shold not come agaynst you and this lande?

And therfore heare nowe, O my lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more in to the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the pryson, and dayly to be gyuen him a cake of breed, and els no dight meate, vntyll all the breed in the citye was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entrye of the pryson.

¶ By the meryon of the rulers, Jeremye is put in to a dongeon. At the requeste of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the Kynge comaundeth Jeremye to be brought forthe of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the Kynge how he myght escape death.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucah the son of Selemiah, and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord: Who so remayneth in this city, shal perisshe, either w the swerde, with hongre or with pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape wynnynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayth the Lorde. This citye (no doubt) must be deliuered in to the power of the king of Babylon, and he also shal wyn it. Then sayd the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you lette this man be put to deth. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this city, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them. A Jeremi. xxi. b xxviii. a.

B This man verily laboureth not for peax of the people, but mischiefe. Sedechias the king answered and sayd: Lo, he is in your handes for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast him in to the dongeon of Melchiah the son of Hamelech, that dwelte in the fore entrye of the pryson. And they let downe Jeremye with cordes in to a dongeō, where there was no water, but myre: So Jeremye stacke faste in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Mozian being a chamberlayne in the kynges court, understode that they had cast Jeremye in to the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to ꝑ kynge, (whiche then sate vnder the porte of Benjamin) these wordes: My lorde the king where as these men medle with Jeremye the Prophete, they doo him wronge: Namelye in that they haue put him in pryson, there to dye of honger, for there is no more breed in the citye.

C Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Mozian, and sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremye the Prophete oute of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Amalech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges, & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a corde in to the dongeon to Jeremy.

D And Abedmelech the Mozian sayd vnto the Prophete Jeremye: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixt the and the cordes: and Jeremye did so. So they drewe vp Jeremye with cordes, and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the pryson. Then Sedechias the kynge sent and caused Jeremye the Prophete be called vnto him out of the thirde entrye that was by the house of the Lord. And Jer. xxxvii. c the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I wil aske the some what, but hyde nothynge fro me. Then Jeremy answered Sedechias: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me suffre deth: yf I gyue the counsel, thou wilt not folow me. So the king swore an othe secretly vnto Jeremy sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wil not slee ꝑ, ne gyue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf case be that thou wylte go forth vnto the Jere. xxxvii. b kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this citye shall not be brent: yea bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylte not go forth to the kyng of Babylons prynces, then shall this citye be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be hable to escape them. And Sedechias sayd vnto Jeremye: I am afrayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees leest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

F But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betraye the: O harken vnto the voyce of the Lord (beseche the) which I speke vnto the, so shalte thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath told me this playnly: Behold, all the womē that are lefte in the kyng of Judas house, shall go oute to the kynge of Babylons princes. For they think, that thou art disceyued: and that the men in whom thou dydest put thy trust, haue mastred the, & let thy fete fast in ꝑ myre, and gone their waye from the. Therfore all thy wyues with their children shall be vnto the Caldees, & thou shalt not escape their dāndes, but shalt be the king of Babylons prisoner, and this city shal be brent.

Then sayd Sedechias vnto Jeremy: loke & that no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes preyue that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayd the king to the? hyde it not from vs, and we will not put the to deth. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayd the king to the? Se thou giue them this answer: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye no more in Jonathans house, that I dye not there? Then came al the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he told them after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they helde their peax, for they perceyued nothynge. So Jeremye abode styll in the fore entrye of the pryson, vntyll the day that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besiegeth Jerusalem. Sedechias fleeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremye is prouyded for. Abedmelech is delyuered from captyuytye, bycause of the confydence that he hathe in God.

CAPL. XXXIX.

NOw when the citye of Jerusalem was taken (for in the nynth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon and all his hoste, and besieged Jerusalem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourthe moneth, in the nyneth daye of the moneth he brake in to the city.) Then all the princes of the kynge of Babylon came in, and sat them down vnder the port: Neregel, Sarezar, Samegarnabo, Sarsachim, Rabsatis, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the Jere. xxxix. a othee princes of the kynge of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kynge of Juda, with his souldyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the citye by nyght thorowe the kynges garden, and thorow the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente towarde the wildernesse.

But the Chaldees hoste folowed faste after them, and toke Sedechias in the felde of Jericho, and brought him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the king of Babylon caused the chyldren of Sedechias, and al the nobles of Juda be slayn before his face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out, and bound him with chaynes and and sent him to Babylon.

Moreouer the Caldees brent vp the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the citye, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was lefte of the common sorte) Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne lefte the rascall people, (and those that hadde nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vyneyardes and corne feldes, at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chief capiteyn a charge concernynge Jeremye, sayinge: take and cherysshe him, and make moche of him: se thou do him no harme, but entreate him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzardan the chiefe Capytayne, Nabusasban the chyefe chamberlayne, Nergallarezer the treasurer, and all the kynge of Babylons lordes sent for Jeremye, and caused him be fet oute of the fore entrye of the pryson, and committed him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: that he sholde cary him home, and so he dwelt amonge the people.

Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entry of the prison, the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto him, saying: Go and tel Abedmelech the Mozian: Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this citye, wyl I bryng vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I wyll delyuer the (sayth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou fearest. For doubtelesse I wil saue the so that thou shalt not perish with the swerde: but thy lyfe shal be saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayth the Lorde.

Jeremye hathe lycence to go whyther he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remaynyth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan prophesyeth deth vnto Godoliah.

CAPI. XL.

This is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremy, when Nabuzardan ỹ chief capitayne had let him go fre from Ramah, whither he had led him bound amonge all the pysoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chiefe Capitayne called for Jeremy, and sayd vnto him: The Lorde thy God spake mightily before of the misery vpon this place: Now the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed: for ye haue synned agaynste the Lorde, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpõ you. Beholde, I loose the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wylt now goo w̃ me vnto Babylon: by then, for I wyll se to the, and prouyde for the: But yf thou wylte not goo with me to Babylon, then remayne here. Beholde, all the lande is at thy wyl, loke where thou thinkest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. Yf thou canst not be content to dwel alone, then remayne with Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: whom the king of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Juda, and dwell with him among the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chiefe Capitayne gaue him his expēses with a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the son of Ahikam to Mazphah, and dwelte there with him amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Now when the Capitaynes of the hoste of Juda (which with their felowes were scatte red abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that the kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the the lande, and that man, wyfe, and child: yea and the pore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon? sholde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Mazphah: Namely Ismael the son of Nathaniah, Johanan, and Jonathath the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the son of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Jesaniah the son of Maachati with their companions. And Godoliah the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan swore vnto them & their felowes on this maner: Be not afrayde to serue the Caldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babylon seruyce, so shal ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Mazphah to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfye suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houles, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keping.

Yea all the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the countreys, when they herde that the kyng of Babylon hadde made Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came in to the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mazphah, and gathered wyne and other fruites, and that very moche.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the capitaynes of the hostes, that wer scatred on euery side in the land, came to Godoliah in Mazphah, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalam king of the Ammonites hathe sent Ismael the son of Nathaniah to slee the? But Godoliah the son of Ahicam bileued the not. Then said Johanan the son of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mazphah these wordes secretly: let me go, I pray the, & I wil slee Ismael the son of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kill the, that al ỹ Jewes which resort vnto the might be scatred, and the remnaunt in Juda perish? Then said Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalte not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismael.

¶ Ismael kylleth Godoliah gylefully, and many other with hym. Johanan foloweth after Ismael.

CAPI. XLI.

4.Reg.xxv.d
BUt in the seuenth moneth it happened that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges blood) came with them that was greatest about the king, and ten men that were sworne vnto hym vnto Godoliah the son of Ahicam to Mazphah, and ate there togither. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah, with those ten men that were sworne to him, start vp and smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan vnder the swerde and slewe him, whom the king of Babylon had made gouernour of the land. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mazphah, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon him.

B
The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certeyn men from Sichem, from Silo and Samaria, to the nombre of foure score, whiche had shauen their berdes, rent their clothes, and were all heup, bringinge meatoffrynges, and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah went forth of Mazphah weping to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayd: Go your waye to Godoliah the son of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest of the citye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them euen at the myddest of the pytte.

C
Among these four score men there were ten that sayd vnto Ismael: Oh slee vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheate, barley, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethre.

3.Reg.xv.c
Now the pyt wherin Ismael did cast the deed bodyes of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had king Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne men. As for the remnaũt of the people, the kinges doughters and all the people that were yet left at Mazphah, vpon whome Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carred them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites.

Gene.xxiii.c
3.Reg.xxv.b.
But when Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whiche had ben capitaynes ouer the kynges hoste with him herde of al that wyckednesse that Ismael the son of Nathaniah had done, they toke their companions & went out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Rabim in Gabaon. Nowe when all the people whom Ismael led captyue saw Johanan the son of Careah and al the other capitaynes of the host, they were glad. So al the people that Ismael had caryed awaye frome Mazphah, were brought agayne.

D
And when they returned they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde frome Johanan with eyght of his sworne companions, and wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the capitaynes of the hoste that were with hym, toke the remnaunt of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had ledde awaye (when he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they had also rescued from him: fightyng men, women and chyldren, and gelded men, whom they brought agayn from Gabaon: and wente from thence and sate them downe at Geruth Camaam, which lyeth beside Bethlehem, that they might go in to Egypte for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayde, bicause that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahikams sonne, whom the kyng of Babylon had made Jere.
gouernour in the lande.

¶ The Capitaynes toke counsell of Jeremye what they oughte to do. Jeremye monysheth the rest of the people not to go in to Egypte.

CAPI. XLII.

SO all the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Careah, Jezonias the sonne of Osaias came with all the people from the least vnto the moost, and sayde vnto Jeremye the Prophet: heare our petition, that thou maist praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for the rest wherof there be verye fewe leste of many, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs awaye to go in, and tell vs what we shoulde doo. Then Jeremye the Prophete sayde vnto to them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre Lorde, as ye haue required me: & loke what aunswere the Lorde geueth you, I shall certifye you therof, and kepe not hyng backe frõ you. And they sayd vnto Jeremy: The Lord of truth and faythfulnesse be our recorde that we wyl do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We wil harken vnto the voyce of our Lord God to whome we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

B
And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the capitaynes of the people that were with him: yea and all the people from the leest to the moost, and said vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, vnto whom ye sent me, to lay forth your prayers before him: Yf ye wyll dwell in this land, I shal buylde you vp, and not bycke you down: I shal plant you, and not rote you out: for I am pacified as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you.

Feare

feare not the kynge of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym, sayth the Lorde: for I wyll be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you frome his hande. I wyll pardon you, I wyll haue mercye vpon you, & brynge you agayne in to your owne lande.

L Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but wyll saye thus, we wyll not dwell here, but goo in to Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of batayle, ne suffre honger, there will we dwell. Wherfore heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, o ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf ye be holly purposed to goo in to Egypte, and to be there as straungers: the swearde that ye feare, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the honger wherof ye be here afrayde shall hange vpon you in to Egypt, and there ye shall dye. For all they that of set purpose vndertake to goo in to Egypte, there to ease them selues of their mysery, shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestylence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyl bring vpon them.

D For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: lyke as my wrathe and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure goo forthe vpō you also, yf ye go in to Egypt: For there ye shalbe reuiled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shal neuer se it more. The Lorde forbydeth you, o ye remnaunt of Juda, that ye shal not go in to Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, elles shall ye begyle your selues. For ye sente me vnto the Lorde youre God, and sayd: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what aunswere the Lorde oure God gyueth the, that brynge vs agayne, and we shall doo therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde youre God, for the which cause he hathe sent me to you. Yf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your luste was to go and dwell.

Johanan carryeth the remnaunt of the people in to Egypt, contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremye prophecyeth the destruction of Egypte.

CAPI. XLIII.

NOwe when Jeremye had ended all the wordes of the Lorde God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom God had sent hym) Azarias the son of Osaias, and Johanan the sonne of Karee, with al the prowde persons, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou lyest, the Lorde oure God hathe not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we sholde not go in to Egypte, to dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he might bringe vs in to the captiuite of the Caldees: that they might slee vs, and cary vs away prysoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Karee, and al the Capytaynes of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the Capytaynes of the hoste, caryed awaye all the remnaunte of Juda, that were come togyther agayne frome the Heythen, (amonge whome they hadde ben scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, women children, the kinges doughters: al those that Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had lefte with Godolias the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed awaye also the Prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. Jerem. xli.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, sayenge: L Take greate stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the bryche wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and wil set his seate vpon the stones that I haue hyd, and he shall spreade his tent ouer them. Jerem. xlvi.

And when he commeth he shall smyte the lande of Egypt with slaughter, with prysonment, and with the swerde. D He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prysoners. Moreouer he shal araye him self with the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

The reproueth the people for their Idolatrye. They that serue tyghte by the threatenynge of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruction of Egypte, and the Jewes therin, is prophetyed.

CAPI. XLIIII.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concernynge all the Jewes, A which dwelte in Egypte: at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the lande of Pathures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: ye haue sene all the mysery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cyties of Juda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therin: and that bycause of the great blasphemyes which they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre: In that they wente backe to doo sacrifyce and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whom neyther they, nor ye, youre fathers haue knowen. How be it I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp earlye, and sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O doo no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ne harken, to tourne from theit wyckednelle, and to doo no more sacrifyce vnto straunge goddes. Jerem. xxv.a and.xxx.c

Wherfore myne indignacion and wrathe was kyndled, and brent vp the cityes of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made walle and desolate, as it is come to palle this daye. Nowe therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: How happeneth it that ye do so greate euyll vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, bycause ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of your owne handes: whe ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye begon to dwell: That ye myght vtterly perysshe, and that ye might be reuyled, and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednelle of youre forefathers, the wyckednelle of the kynges of Juda, and theit wyues, the wyckednelle that ye youre selues and youre wyues haue doone in the lande of Juda, in the citye and in the lande of Jerusalem? B

Yet are ye not sorye this daye, ye feare not neyther walke ye in my lawe & in my commaundementes that I haue gyuen vnto you and your fore fathers. C

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduysed and determined to punysshe you, and to rote oute all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda that purposly went in to Egypt, there to eale them of theit misery: I wyll take them and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perysshe, beynge consumed with the swerde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the swerde and with hongre. Moreouer they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. Amos.ix.b Jeremy.xlii.c and.xliiii.a

For I will visyte them that dwell in Egypt, as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the swerde, with hongre, and with pestilence: so that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte shall be lefte to come agayn in to the land of Juda, although they thinke to come thither agayn, & to dwel there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye. Jerem.xxxix.

Then all the men which knewe that theit wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yea and all the people that dwelte there in Egypte in the citye of Patures answered Jeremye and sayd: as for the workes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde we wyll in no wyse heare them: but wyll so euer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that wyll we doo: We wyll doo sacrifyce, and offre oblacions vnto the quene of heuen, lyke as we and oure fore fathers, our kynges and our heedes haue wont in the cityes of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plentifulnelle of vitteyles, then were we in prosperitie, & no misfortune came vpon vs. D Jerem.

But sence we lefte to offre and to doo sacrifyce vnto the Quene of heuen, we haue had scarcenelle of all thynges, and perysshe with the swerde and hongre. Last of all, whe we women dyd sacrifyce and offered vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes, and poure vnto her drynckeofferynges, to wo her lewyce, without oure husbandes wyllis? E

Then sayd Jeremy vnto al the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke whiche had gyuen hym that answere: Dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre fore fathers, youre kynges and rulers (with all the people) haue offered in the cityes of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem? and hathe he not considered this in his mynde? In so moche that the Lord might no longer suffre the wyckednelle of youre inuencyons, and the abhompnable thynges whiche ye dyd? Is not youre lande desolate and waste, yea and abhorred so that no man dwelleth therin anye more, as it is come to palle this daye? Jerem. Ezech.

Dyd not all this happen vnto you becawle ye made suche sacrifyce, and synned agaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes. F Deut.xi. Jerem. xliii.xl. Baruch.

Yea this is the cause, that all myslortune happened vnto you, as it is come to palle this daye. Moreouer, Jeremye spake vnto all the people, and to all the women: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypte: thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouthe the thynge that ye haue fulfilled in deede.

Yea thus haue ye sayd: We wyl not fayle, but doo the thynge that pleaseth vs: we will doo sacrifyce, and poure oute drynkeofferynges to the quene of heuen. Purposely haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, and hastely haue ye fulfylled youre owne intent. And therfore heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwelle in the lande of Egypte. Jer.xliii.

Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayth the Lorde, that my name shall not be reherled thorowe anye mans mouthe of Juda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye: The Lorde God lyueth, for I wyll watche to plage them, and not for theyr wealthe. And all the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte, shall perysshe with the swerde, and with hongre, vntyll they be vtterly destroyed. G Gen.xxi. Jerem.

Nevertheleile those that fled away for the swetie, swearde, shall come agayne in to the land of Juda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And al the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be found true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I will visit you in this place, sayth the Lorde, and ye may know, howe that I (without doubt) wyl performe my purpose vpon you to punyshe you. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will delyuer Pharao Ophra kynge of Egypte in to the handes of his ennemyes, that seke after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, which sought after his lyfe.

¶ Baruch is reproued of Jeremye.

CAPI. XLV.

THese are the wordes that Jeremy the prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, after he had written these sermons into a boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, in the fourth yere of Joakim the son of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the, O Baruch: In so moche as thou thoughtest thus, when thou wast wrytyng. Wo is me, the Lorde hath gyuen me payne for my trauayle: I haue wery'd my self with syghinge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tel him O Jeremy, that the Lorde saith thus: Beholde, The thyng that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thynge, that I haue planted, yea this hole lande. And seke'st thou yet promotion? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wyll bryng a miserable plage vpon al flesshe saith the Lord. But thy life wil I giue the for a pray whersoeuer thou goest.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruction of Egypt. Delyuerance is promysed to Israel.

CAPI. XLVI.

HEre folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto the Gentyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to the Egyptians cõtemynge the host of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypt, when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the foureth yere of of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye goo forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses and set your selues vpon them: Ye set your salets fast on, ye bryng for the speares, ye scoure youre swordes and put on youre breest plates.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayde? why shrynke ye backe? wherfore are your worthyes slayne? Yea they run so fast awaye, that none of them loketh be hynde hym. Fearefulnesse is fallen vpon euery one of the sayth the Lorde. The lightest of fote shall not flie awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

B Toward the Northe by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble & fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a flonde, roryng & ragyng lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that ryseth vp lyke the flonde, and casteth oute the waters with so greate noyse.

C For they say: We wil go vp, and wil couer the earthe: we wyll destroy the cytyes, with them that dwel therin. Get you to horsback coule forth the charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Mosians, ye Libeans with youre buckelers, ye Lideans with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lord God of hostes, a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his ennemyes. The sworde shal deuoure, it shall be satisfied & bathed in their bloude: For the Lorde God of hoostes shall haue a slayne offryng towarde the Northe, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bryng tryacle vnto the daughter of Egypte:

But in vayne shalte thou go to surgerye for thy wound shal not be stopped. The Heythen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: for one strong man shall stomble vpon an other, howe then shulde they not fall both togyther.

D These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the Prophet Jeremye, concernyng the host of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, which was sent to destroy the land of Egipt: Preache out thorowe the lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaymed at Magdol, Mephis and Thaphnis, and saye: Stande fyrt, make the redye, for the sworde shall consume the counde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty worthies are fallen? why stode they not faste? Euen because the Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer fyrst vpon an other. One cryed vpon an other: Vp, let vs goo agayne to our owne people, and to oure owne naturall countrey, from the sworde of oure enemye.

E Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme wil bryng sodeyne vpon. As truly as I lyue (sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes) it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Lybanus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypte make redy thy gere to flyt. For Memphis shall be voyde and desolat, so that no man shal dwel therin. The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodly fayre calf, but one shal come out of the North to pyck her forwarde. Her waged souldiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall flie awaye togyther, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter & the tyme of their vysytacion shall come vpõ them.

F The crye of their ennemyes shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall entre in with their host, and come with axes, áres, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayethe the Lorde, without any discrecion. For they shal be mo in nombre then the grashoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, whē she shall be delyuered in to the handes of the people of the North.

More ouer thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyl visit that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yea both their goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharao, and all theym that put their truste in him. Yea I wyll delyuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their lyues: Namely, into ỹ power of Na-buchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these thinges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme sayth the Lorde.

B But be not thou afrayd (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the frome farre, and thy sede frome the lande of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in reste: he shall be rych, and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayethe the Lorde, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all na cions, amonges whom I haue scattered the, Neuertheles I will not consume the but chasten the and correct the: yea and that with discrecyon: neither will I spare the as one that were faultles.

¶ The worde of the Lorde, agaynste the Philystynes.

CAPI. XLVII.

A These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete a-gaynste the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cytye of Azah. Thus saith the Lorde: Beholde, there shal waters arise out of the North: and shal grow to a great floude, runnyng ouer, and couerynge the lād, the cytyes, and them that dwell therin.

And the men shal crye, and all they that B dwell in the lande shal mourne at the noyse and stampynge of their stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of their charettes and at the tomblyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feble and wery shal their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the hole lande of the Philistines. He shal make waste both Tyrus, Sidon and all other that are swornē vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye al Palesti
C na, and the other Iles, that be deuyded from the countrey. Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other valleyes shall kepe her peax.

How longe wilte thou slaye, O thou D swearde of the Lorde? Turne agayne in to thy sherthe, rest, and leaue of. But how can it ceasse, when the Lorde him selfe hath gyuen him a charge agaynste Ascalon, and sayntely vp agaynste the cytyes of the see coste?

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THus sayth the Lord of hostes the God A of Israell agaynste Moab: wo be to the citie of Nabo, for it shall be layed waste, brought to confusyon and taken. Yea thy stronge citie of Kariathiarim shall be brought to shame, and afrayd: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesbon. Come (shal they say) let vs rote them out, that they may be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, ye ỹ they may no more be thought vpō:
Thus the swerde shal persecute the: A voice shall crye frome Horonaim: With great wa stynge and destruction, is Moab made dese-late.

And this crye shall be herde in all her cytyes. At the going vp vnto Luith there shall aryse a lamentacion: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deedly crye: Get you away, saue your liues and be lyke vnto the herthe in the wyldernes.
For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be take, Cha-mos with his prestes and princes shall goo awaye into captyuyte.

The destroyer shal come vpō al the cityes, none shall escape. The valleyes shal be de- B stroyed, and the fyldes shall be layde waste lyke as the Lorde hath determyned.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cities shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde frome shedynge of bloude.

Moab hath neuer bene ryche and care-lesse frome her youth vp, she hath lyuen and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into an other (that is) she neuer went awaye in to captyuyte, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sa uoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord that I shal sende her truffers to truffe her vp to prepare and season her vessels: yea her tāberdes rattell and shake to and fro. And Ch amos shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thinke thus: we are myghtye, and stronge men of warre? Moab C shall be destroyed, and her cytyes brent vp:
her chosen younge men shall be slayne, sayth
the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neighboures shal mourne for her,
and all they that knowe her name, shall say:
O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staffe and the goodly rod is thus broke? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy glory
and

and syt in pouertye. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And myserye shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holō, & Jahazah: vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon Nabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Carioth, vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or nere.

The horne of Moab shall be smytten downe, and her arme broken, saith the Lord. Make her dronken, for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clappe their handes at her vompt, and that she also maye be laughed to scorne. O Jsrael, shalte thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalte be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become lyke doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of it, she is very high mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boastyng, her arrogancy, & the pryde of her stomack, sayth the Lorde. For her furiousnes maye neither vpholde her w strēgth ne dede. Therfore shall there mournynge be made for Moab, and euerye man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the. O thou vynyarde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy harueste and grape gatheryng: Myrth and chere shall be taken awaye from the tymbrefelde, and from the hole lande of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in the pressle, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye, yea there shal be none to crye vnto him: whiche afore tyme were herde from Helbon to Eleale & Jahaz, which lyfted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of thre yere olde. The waters also of Nemrim shall be dryed vp.

Moreouer I will make Moab ceasse (sayth the Lorde) frome the offrynges & censynge that she hath made vnto her goddes in hygh places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, like a croude playing an heuy sōg: and for the mens sake of the brycke wall my herte mourneth also, euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all berdes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sakcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mournynge: For I will breke Moab lyke an vnprofytable vessell sayth the Lorde. O how fearfuel is she? O how mourneth she? O howe doth Moab hang downe her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, Deu. xx. viii. c the ennemy shall come flyenge as an Egle, & Jerem. xlix. d. spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and winne the strong holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab shal be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde, Jerem. xlix. d

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayth the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fal in the pyt: and who so getteth out of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare. G Esaye. xxiiii. c

For I will bryng a yeare of vysitacyon vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are hable to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Helebon. For there shall go a fyre out of Helebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, bothe before and behynde. Esay. xxiiii. c

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laste will I bryng Moab out of captyuyte agayne, sayth the Lorde. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar, and Elam.

CAPI. XLIX.

A As concernynge the Ammonytes, thus the Lorde sayth: Hath Jsrael no chil dren, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wher fore doth his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I will bryngе a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rabel shal be desolate, and her cytyes brent vp: and the Jsraelites shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lord. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde. The cytyes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrde the selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne aboute the walles: for their kyng shal be led awaye prysoner: yea his preestes and prynces with him. A Ezechi. xxi. d and. xxv. a Amos. i. a.

Wherfore trustest thou in the waterstremes that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce doughter: and thinkest thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mā shal come to the? B

Beholde, I will bryng a feare vpon the, sayth the Lord God of hostes, from al those that be about the: so that ye shal be scatered euery man frome an other, and no man shall gather gather them togyther agayne that be fled. But after that, I will bryngе the Ammontes also ont of captyuyte agayne.

Esaye. xxi. b. Ezechi. xxv. b xxxii. f. xxxv. a

Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hoostes spoken on this maner: Is there no more wysdom in Theman? Is there nomore good counsell amonge his people? Is their wysdome then turned clene to nought? Get you hence, turne your backes, creepe downe into the depe, O ye cytyzins of Dedan.

For I will bryngе destruction vpon Esau, yea & the day of his vysytacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyghte robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

E But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shal be wasted away, yea his brethren and his neighboures, and he him selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Ieremi. xxv. b Ezechiel. ix. b 1. Petri. iiii. c.

Thou halte leaue thy fatherlesse childre behynde the, and I wyll kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrste: and thynkest thou then to be free?

No no: thou shalte neither be qurte nor free, but thou muste drynke also: For why, I haue sworne by my selfe (sayth the Lorde) þ Bozrah shall become a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughinge flocke and curssynge: and her cities shall be a contynuall desert.

D For I am perfectly informed of the Lord that he hath sent a message all ready vnto ỹ heithen. Gather you togyther, and go forth agaynste them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo, I wyll make the but small amonge the heithen, and lytle regarded amõg men.

Ibdi. i. a Esay. xlvii. b Iere. xlviii. d

The hyghe stomacke and the pryde of thy hert haue disceyued the because thou wilte dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hygh mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though thy nestе were as hygh as the Egles, yet wyll I caste the downe, sayth the Lord. Moreouer Idumea shall be a wildernesse: who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wondre at all her miserable plages. Lyke as

Genc. xix. c

Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vp syde wowne (saith the Lord) so shal no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habytacion there. Behold, lyke as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Etham, so wyll I dryue him, and make him runne agaynste her. But who is the younge man that I wyl ordeyne therto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue with me? What shepherd may stande in my handes?

Job. xli. a

E Therfore heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hathe taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose, that he hath deuysed vpon the cytezins of Theman: The leest of the flock shall reare thē in peces, & loke what fayre thynge they haue, they shal make it waste, and them selues also: At the noyse of their fal the earth shall quake, the crye of their voyce shall be herde vnto the red see. Beholde, the enmye shall come and flee vp hyther, lyke as it were an Egle, and spred his winges vpō Bozrah. Then shall the heertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman traueylinge of chyld. Upon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusyon, for they shall heare euyl tydynges: they shall be tossed to & fro lyke the see that can not stande styll. Damascus shal be sore afrayd, and shal flee, teem blynge shall come vpon her. Sorowe and payne shall ouer take her as a woman traueylynge of chylde.

But howe shulde so worshypfull and glorious a cytye be forsaken? Heare therfore: her younge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be taken awaye in that tyme, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. I wyll kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar and destroye the people towarde the east. Their tentes and their flockes shal they take awaye, yea their hangynges and their vessell. Their camels also shall they carye awaye with them. They shall come aboute them on euery syde with a fearefull crye.

F Elay. xlvi.

Flee, get you sone awaye, creepe in to caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabitauntes of Hazor sayth the Lord: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon hath holden a counsell concernynge you and concluded his deuyce agaynste you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynste yonder ryche and careles people (sayth the Lorde) whiche haue neither gates ne doze barres, and that dwell not togyther. Their Camels shall be stollen and the droues of their cattayle dryuen away.

Moreouer, these that be shauen wyll I scatter towarde al the wyndes, and bryngе them to destruction: yea and that throwe their owne kamp liers, sayth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwellynge for Dragons, & an euerlastynge wylderneſe: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde G spake to the prophet Jeremy concernyng Elam, in the begynnynge of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: Beholde: I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength and vpon Elam I wyll bryng the foure windes from the foure quarters of heauen, & will scattre them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afrayde of their ennemyes, and of them that seke their lyues: and wyll bryngе vpon them the indignacion of my wrathe, sayth the Lorde. And

I wyll persecute theym with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to noughte. I wyll set my stole in Elam, I will destroye both the kynge and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I wyl bryng Elam oute of captyuytye agayne, saith the Lorde.

The prophecieth the destruction of Babylon, and the delyuerance of Israel, whiche was in captyuytye.

CAPI. L.

THe wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the Prophet Jeremy, concernynge Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees: preache among the Gentyles, let your voyce be herde, make a token: crye oute, kepe no silence, but saye: Babylon shall be wonne, Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shal be ouercome.

Yea their goddes shalbe brought to shame and theyr ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the Northe there shall come a people agaynste her, whiche shall make her land to waste, that no body shall dwell therin: neyther man ne beaste, for they shall flee and departe from thence.

In those dayes and at that tyme saith the Lorde, the children of Israel shall come, they and ꝑ children of Juda, weping and makyng haste, and shall seke the Lorde theyr God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther shall they turne theyr faces, and come and hange vpon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke, my B shepherdes haue discrued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and their ennemyes sayde: We haue made no faute agaynste them, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea euen the Lord which is ꝑ beautie of their ryghtousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babylō, and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shal be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I wyll wake vp an hooste of people from the Northren lande, & bryng them vpon Babylon: these shall laye siege to it, and winne it: Their arowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shooteth not wronge. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shall be satysfyed sayth the Lorde: because ye were so chearfull and glad, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfylled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and tryumphed ouer the lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorye. Youre mothers shall be sore confounded and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the leste set by amonge the nations, doyde waste, and dryed vp. No man shal be able to dwel there, for the feare of the Lorde, but he shall be hole desolate.

All they that goo by Babylon, shall stande styll, and be abasshed, and shall wondre at al her plages.

Go forth in your araye agaynste Babylon rounde aboute, all ye that can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arowes, for she hathe synned agaynste the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynste her rounde about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacions shal fal and her walles shall come downe, for it shal be the vēgeaūce of the Lord. Yea vengeaūce shall be taken of her, and as she hathe done, so shal she be dealt withall. They shall rote out the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sicle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the ennemye, euery man shall get him to his owne people, and euery man shal flee to his owne lande. Israell is a scattered flock, the Lyons haue dispersed them. Fyrst the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, last of all this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath brosed all theyr bones.

C Jere. xviii. g. xix. b. xlix. c.

Exod. xxi. b. Leuit. xxiii. d Johel iii. b

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyll vysyt the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdom, as I haue vysyted the kynge of the Assyryās and wyll bryng Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan, and be satysfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayth the Lord) yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be found: Yf men enquyre for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I wil be mercyful vnto them, whome I suffre to remayne ouer.

D iiii. Reg. xvii. g Elay. x. a. iii. Re. xx. b.

iiii. Reg. xix. g Elay. xiii. d.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemyes lande, and vysyt them that dwell therin: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordynge to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of slaughter and greate murther, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the hole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder? Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernesse amonge the Heithen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou arte taken: vnwares art thou trapped and snared: for why, thou haste prouoked the Lorde vnto anger: The Lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the wepons of his wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

These thynges shall come vpon her at ꝑ E laste, they shall breake in to her prouy chambres, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde together vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, that nothynge shall be lefte.

They shall slaye all their myghtye soudyers, and put them to death. Wo be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their vysytacyon is at hande. We thynke I heare all ready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babylon, whiche shewe in Syon the vengeaunce of his temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynste Babylō: Call vp all the archers agaynste Babylon, pytch youre tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her agayne: for she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israel. Therfore shall her younge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be roted out in that day, saith the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto the (O thou proude) saith the Lorde God of Hoostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyl burne vp his cytyes with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

F Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: The chyldren of Israel and Juda suffre violence togyther. All they that haue them in captyuytye, kepe them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is myghtye, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes: he shall mayntayne their cause, he shall make ỹ lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therin, one with an other. The swerde shal come vpon the Caldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wyse men: the swearde vpon their southsayers, as for those (they shal be come fooles.) The swerde vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stande in feare: The swerde vpon their horsmen and charets and vpon all the commen people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke women: the swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen away: The swerde vpon their waters, so that they shall be dried vp: For the lād worshippeth ymages and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thinges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Estryches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, sayth the Lorde: So shal no man dwel there also, neither shal any man haue there his habitacion. Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a great bond of men, and many kynges shall stande vp from the endes of the earthe: They beare bowes and bucklers, cruel are they and vnmercyful.

G Their voyce roreth lyke the ragyng see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynste the: O Babylon. As sone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tell of the his handes shall waxe feble: Sorowe and, heuynes shall com vpon him, as a woman trauelynge with childe. Beholde, lyke as a Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dryue the forth, & make them runne agaynste her. But whome shall I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thynge? For who is lyke me, or who will sleyue with me? or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me? Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath gyuen vpon Babylon, and the deuyce that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shal lay it wast. The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shal moue the earthe, and the crye shall be herde amonge the Gentyles.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: beholde, I wyll rayse vp a perelous winde agaynste Babylon and her cytzens, that beare cupll wyll agaynste me. I wyll sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde: Moreouer, the Lorde hath sayd vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in bryste plates: Ye shall not spare her young men: kyll downe all her hoste. Thus ỹ slayne shal fal downe in ỹ lād of the Caldees, and the wounded in ỹ stretes. As for Israell and Juda, they shall not be forsaken, of their God, of the Lorde of Hoostes, of the holy one of Israel: no, though they haue fylled all their lande full of synne. Flee away frō Babylō, euery mā saue his lyfe. Let no mā hold his tōge to her wyckednes, for ỹ tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come, yea he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hand a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people droncken, therfore are they oute of theyr wyttes. But sodeynly is Babylon fallen and destroyed. Mourne for her, bryng playsteers for her wounde, yf the maye peraduenture be healed agayne. We wolde haue made Babylon hole (saye they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, and go euery mā into his owne countrey. For her iudgement is come in to heauen, and is gone vp to the cloudes. And therfore come on, we wyll shewe Sion the worke of the Lorde oure God.

larum agaynste the. Yea euen the Lorde of hostes, that with his power made the earth with his wisdome prepared the round world, and with his discretion spredde oute the heauens. As sone as he letteth his voyce be herd the waters in the ayre waxe fearce: He drawith vp the cloudes frome the endes of the earthe. He tourneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bryngeth the wyndes oute of their secrete places. By the reason of wysdome, all men are become fooles. Confounded be all the callers of ymages: For the thynge that they make, is but discepte, and hathe no brethe. Vayne is it, and worthy to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vysitacion, it shall perysshe.

Neuertheleſſe the porcion of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, is the rodde of his inheritaunce. Thou breakest my weapons of warre, and yet thorow the I haue scatred the nacions and kyngdomes: Thorow the haue I scatred horse and horseman, yea the charettes, and suche as sate vpon them: Thorowe the I haue scattered man and woman, olde and yonge, bacheler and mayden.

Thorowe the, I haue scattered the shepeherde and his flocke, the husbande man, and his catel, the princes and the rulers. Therfore wil I rewarde the cityes of Babylon, and all her citizyns the Caldees, with al the euil whi che they haue wone vnto Syon: yea that ye your selues shall se it, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hyll) sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyest all landes. I wil stretche out my hand ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: & will make the a brente hyll, so that neither corner stones ne pinacles, ne foundacion stones shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euer more sayth the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the Heathen, prouoke the nacions agaynste her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Minni, and Ascanes agaynste her: nombre oute Taphsar agaynste her: bynge as greate a sorte of horses agaynste her, as yf they were grashoppers. Prepare agaynste theym the people of the Medes, with their kynges, princes, and all their chiefe rulers, yea and the hole lande that is vnder them.

The lande also shall shake and be afrayde when the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, their strengthe hathe fayled them, they shal be lyke women. Their dwellynge places shall be brente vp, their barres shall be broken. One purseuaunt shall mete an other, yea one poste shall come by an other to bryng the king of Babylon tidinges: that his city is taken on euery syde, the foordes ouerpped the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayde.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon hathe bene in her tyme lyke as a threshynge floore, but shortly shall her harueſt come. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptye vessell, he swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his belye with my delycates: he hath caste me oute, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caryed vnto Babylon, sayth the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Behold I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyl drynke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges. D

Babylon shall become an hepe of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and wondring, bicause no mã dwelleth there. They shall rore togyther lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons when they be angry, so shall they bende them selues. In their heate I shal set drinke before them, and they shall be dronken for ioye: Then shal they slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shal cary them down to be slayn like sheepe, like wethers and gotes. E Esaye.xxi.d Jeremye.li.b

O, how was Sesach wonne? O how was the glorye of the hole lande taken? Howe happeneth it that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the Heathen? The see is ryssen ouer Babylõ, and hath couered her with his great waues. Her cities are layde waste, the lande lyeth vnbuylded & voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth thorow. Moreouer I wyll vysyt Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swalowed vp: that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also shal run no more vnto hym: yea and the walles of Babylon shall fall Jeremye.l.b Esay.xlvi.a Dane.xiii.b

O my people, come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the feareſull wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynteherted, and feare not at euery rumour that shall be herde in the lande: for euerye yere bryngeth newe tydynges, yea straunge wyckednesse and lordshyp. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyll vysyte the ymages of Babylon, and the hole lande shall be confounded, yea and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her: Heuen and erth with all that is therin, shall reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayth the Lorde.

Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many of Israel, so shall there fall many and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the Lorde a farre of: and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: oure faces were couered with shame, bicause the straūge aleauntes came in to the Sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayth the Lorde) the tyme commeth that I wyl vysit the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the hole lande F Jeremye.l.a

Jerem.xlix.d. they shall mourne and fall. Though Babylō clymed vp in to heuen, and kept her power on hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers, sayth the Lorde.

A piteous crye shall be herde from Babylon, and a greate myserye frome the lande of the Caldees: when the Lord destroyeth the, and when he driueth oute the hye stomacke, and proude boostyng, wherwith they haue ben as furyous as the wawes of great water flowdes, and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euen vpon Babylon) whiche shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon theym, and sufficiently to recōpence them. Yea (sayth the Lorde) I will make theyr Prynces, their wyse men, theyr chyefe rulers and all theyr worthyes dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

G Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be brente vp. And the thing that the Gentyles and the peple haue wrought with greate trauayle & labour, shall come to nought, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the son of Nerias, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Sedechias the kyng of Juda, in ỹ fourth yere of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mischefe that sholde come vpon Babylon, yea and al these sermons that be written against Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou commest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede all these wordes and saye: O Lorde thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neyther people nor castell shall dwelle there any more, but to lye waste for euer: and whē thou hast red out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the wyddest of Euphrates and say: Euen thus shal Babylon sinke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil bring vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the prophecynges of Jeremye.

The repeteth the takynge of Sedechias. Jerusalem is taken of the Caldees. Sedechias sonnes are kylled before his face, and his eyes put out. The cytye is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem, are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Joakym is brought forth of prison, and fedde lyke a kynge.

CAPL. LII.

A Sedechias was one and twenty yere olde when he was made kyng, and he raigned eleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremyes doughter of Lobnah. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Joakim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his presence. And Sedechias fel frome the kynge of Babylon. But in the nyneth yere of his raygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besieging of the city endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge Sedechias.

And in the fourth moneth, the nyneth daye of the moneth, there was so greate honger in the city, that there were no more vitayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake away, and fled out of the city by nyghte B thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges gardeyn. Now the Caldees hadde compassed the citye rounde about, yet went these men their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kynge in the feldes of Jericho, when his hoste was run from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him.

The king of Babylon also caused Sedechias sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea and C put al the princes of Juda to deth at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him to be bounde with chaynes, to be caryed vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the nyneth yere of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brente the house of the Lorde.

He brent also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgious buyldynges in Jerusalem.

And the hole Hoost of the Caldees that were with the chyefe Capytayne, brake downe the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people, and suche folke D as yet was left in the citye, whiche also were fallen to the king of Babylon, yea and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzardan the chyefe Capytayne caryed them awaye prysoners.

But the poore people of the countreye dyd Nabuzardan the chyefe Capitayne leaue in the lande, to occuppe the vyneyardes and feldes.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pillers that were in the house of the Lorde, yea the seate and the brasen Lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Shouylles, Flesshe hookes, Spynckters, Spoones, and all the brasen vessell that was occuppyed occupyed in the seruice: with the basens, cole pannes, snymmers, potces, candelstykes, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe Capitayne toke also the two pyllers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullocks that stode vnder the seate, whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so muche metal that it might not be weyed. For euery pyller was eightene cubites hye, and the rope that went about it was twelue cubytes and foure fyngers thycke and round: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was .v. cubites hye: and vpon the knoppes were hoopes and pomegranettes round about of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the pyllers facioned with the pomgranettes, whereof there were an hundred four score and sixtene which hanged vpon the hoopes round aboute. The chyefe Cappt ayne also toke Saraiah the hye preest, and Sophoniah that was chiefe next him, and the thre kepers of the treasurye. He toke out of the citye a chamberlayne whiche was a capitayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kinges seruauntes, which were founde in the citye: and Sopher a capitayne that vsed to muster the men of warre: with thre score men of the cõtrey that were taken in the citye. These Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne toke, and caryed them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to deathe at Reblath in the land of Hemath. So thus Juda was leede awaye captyue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whome Nauuchodonosor led awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yere of his raygne, he caryed awaye of the Iewes, thre thousande and xxiij. In the eyghteenth yere Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eight hundred and two and fourtye persons. In the thre and twenty yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzardan the chiefe Cappteyne toke awaye seuen hundred. xlv. Iewes pyllonets. The hole sum of all the pyllonets, is foure thousande and sixe hundred.

In the. xxxvij. yere after that Joakim the kynge of Juda was caryed awaye, in the xxv. daye of the .xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Joacin the kynge of Juda his pardon, & set him out of pryson, and spake louyngly to him, and set his throne aboue the thrones of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his pryson, yea he ate with him all his lyfe long. And he had a continual spyyng giuen him of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thyng alowed him al the dayes of his life, vntyll he dyed.

The ende of the booke of the Prophete Jeremye.

THE LAMENTACYONS. OF IEREMYE.

These wordes are reade in the.lxx. Interpreters, but not in the Hebrewe.

IT happened after Israell was brought in to captiuitie and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the Prophet sate weepynge, and sorowfully bewayled Jerusalem: and sighing and howlyng with an heuy and wofull herte, sayd:

CAPI. I.

ALEPH.

A ii.Reg.xiiii.b. iiii.Reg.xv.a

ALas, howe sytteth the city so desolat, that somtyme was full of people? How is she become like a widow whi che was the lady of all nacions? Howe is she brought vnder tribute ſ ruled all landes?

BETH.

Jeremy xiii.c

She wepeth sore in the nyght, so that the teares run downe her chekes: for among all her louers, there is none that gyueth her any comfort: yea her next frendes abhore her, and are become her ennemyes.

GIMEL.

Juda is taken prysoner, bycause she was defyled: and for seruynge so manye straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heathen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwelleth amōg her ennemyes.

DALETH.

The stretes of Sion mourne, bicause no mā commeth any more to the solemne feestes. All her gates are desolate, her preestes make lamē tacion, her maydens are carefull, and she her selfe is in great heupnesse.

HE.

Her enemyes are fallen vpon her heed, and haue put her to shame: bycause the Lorde hath chastened her for her great wickednesse her chyldren are ledde awaye captyue before theyr ennemye.

VAV.

All the beautie of the doughter Sion is away, her princes are becom like wethers that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen away before their ennemye, so that they haue no more power.

ZAIN.

Now dothe Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yea the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past: seynge her people is brought downe thorow the power of their ennemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her ennemyes stande lokynge at her, and laugh her Saboth dayes to scorne.

HETH.

Jerusalē synned euer more and more, therefore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honour, despise her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea she sighyth and is ashamed of her selfe.

TETH.

Her skyrtes are defiled, she remembred not what wold folow: therfore is her fal so great and there is no man to comfort her. O Lorde consider my trouble, for myne ennemye hathe the vpper hande.

IOD.

The ennemye hathe put his hande to all D the precious thynges that she had: yea euen before her eyes came the Heathen in and out of the Sanctuarye whome thou (neuerthelesse) hast forbydden to come within thy congregation.

CAPH.

All her people seke their breed with heuynesse, and loke what precious thynge euerye man hath, that giueth he for meat to saue his lyfe. Consider, O Lorde, and se, howe vyle I am become.

LAMED.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, yf ther be any sorow like vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me in the daye of his fearefull wrathe.

MEM.

From aboue hathe he sent downe a fyre in E to my bones and chastened me: he hath layde a net for my fete, and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

NVN.

The yoke of my transgression is come at the laste, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hathe deliuered me in to those handes, from which I can not quite my selfe.

SAMECH.

The

The Lord hath destroyed all ꝑ mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feest, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were a wyne presse.

AIN.

Therfore wo I wepe, and myne eyes gush out water: for the comforter that shulde quicken me, is farre fro me. My children are dryuen awaye, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouer hande.

PHE.

Syon casteth out her handes, & there is no man to comfort her. The Lorde hath layd the ennemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woma in the middest of them.

ZADE.

The Lorde is righteous, for I haue prouoked his ϕ countenaunce vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and consydre my heuinesse: My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye into captiuitie.

KOPH.

I called for my louers (but they begiled me) for my preestes and counsellers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meat to saue their lyues.

RES.

Consydre (o Lorde) how I am troubled, my wõbe is disquieted, my herte turneth about in me, and I am ful of heuinesse. The swerd hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto deth.

SIN.

They heare my mourning, but ther is none that wil comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bring forthe the tyme, whē they also shal be like vnto me.

THAV.

From the shal come al their aduersite, thou shalt plucke them awaye, euen as thou hast plucked me because of all my wyckednesse. For my sorow is very greate, and my herte is heuy.

CAPI. II.

ALEPH.

ALas how hath the Lord darkened the dughter of Sion so sore in his wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he he hath casten it downe from heuen: How happeneth it, that he remembred not his own fote stole, when he was angry?

BETH.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glorye of Jacob without any fauour: all the strong places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them down to the ground: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended.

GIMEL.

In the wrathe of his indignacyon he hathe broken all the ϕ horne of Israell: he hathe withdrawen his ryghte hande frome the ennemye: yea, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al round aboute.

ϕ Horne here sygnyfyeth strengthe, power, nobylite and dominiõ.

DALETH.

He hathe bente his bowe lyke an ennemye, he hathe fastened his ryghte hande as an aduersarye: and euerye thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hathe smytten it downe. He hathe powred oute his wrathe lyke a fyre, in to the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

HE.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an ennemye, he hathe caste downe Israell and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hathe he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heuynesse.

VAV.

Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a gardeyn of pleasure) hathe he destroyed: her hye solemne feastes hathe he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solemne feestes and Sabothes in Sion, are clene forgotten. In his heuye displeasure hathe he made the kynge and preestes to be despysed.

ZAIN.

The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarye, and hathe gyuen the walles of their towres in to the handes of the ennemye. Theyr ennemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it hadde bene in a solemne feast daye.

HETH.

The Lorde thoughte to breake downe the walles of the doughter Syon: He spredde oute his lyne, and drewe not in his hande, tyll he hadde destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles togyther.

TETH.

Her portes are fallen downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder: her kynge and Pynces are caryed awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neyther lawe ne Prophetes, nor yet any vysion frome the Lorde.

IOD.

The Senatoures of the doughter Syon syt vppon the grounde in sylence: they haue strowed asshes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them selues with sackcloth. The maydes of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heedes to the grounde.

CAPH.

D Myne eyes begyn to fayle me thorow wepyng, my body is disquieted, my lyuer is poured vpon the erth, for the great hurt of my people, seing the children and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the city.

LAMED.

Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meat and drinke? for whyle they so sayd, they fel downe in the stretes of the city lyke as they had ben wounded, and some died in their mothers bosome.

MEM.

E What shall I saye of the, O thou doughter Jerusalem, to whome shall I lyken the? To whome shall I compare the, O thou doughter Syon, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who may heale the?

NVN.

Thy Prophetes haue loked out vayne and folisshe thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouerladen the, & thorow falsehed scattered the abrode.

SAMECH.

All they that go by the, clap their handes at the: hyssing and waggyng their heedes vpon the doughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the citye that men call so fayre, wherin the hole lande reioyseth.

AIN.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whispering and byting their tethe: saying: let vs deuour, for the time that we loked for is come: we haue found and sene it.

PHE.

The Lord hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarye to trumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne ennemy.

ZADE.

Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou citye of the doughter of Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer, daye and nyght: rest not, and let not the apple of thine eye leaue of.

KOPH.

Aryse vp and make thy prayer in the first watch of the night: poure out thyne hert like water before the Lorde: lift vp thyne handes for the lyues of thy yong children that dye of hongre in the stretes.

RES.

Beholde, O Lorde, and consider, why hast C thou gathered me vp so clene? Shal the women then eate theyr owne frute, euen children of a span longe? Shall the preestes and Prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde?

SIN.

Yong and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the sworde: whom thou in ye day of thy wrathful indignacion hast put to deth: yea, euen thou hast put them to deth, and not spared them.

THAV.

My neyghbours that are round about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feest daye: so that in the day of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was any lefte behynde. Those that I had brought vp and nourished, hathe myne ennemy destroyed.

CAPI. III.

ALEPH.

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod of his A wrath) haue experience of misery.

He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darcknesse, but not in to light.

Agaynst me onely he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

BETH.

My flesshe and my skyn hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broken.

He hathe buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me inwith gall and trauayle.

He

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

GIMEL.

He hath so hedged me in, ꝑ I can not get out, and hath layed heuy fynckes vpon me.

Though I crye and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

DALETH.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogyther.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shoute at.

HE.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen vnto my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me, all the daye longe.

He hath fylled me with bytternesse and gyuen me wormwod to drynke.

VAV.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, and rolled me in the dusse.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

ZAIN.

O remembre yet my mysery and my trouble the wormwod and the gall.

Yea thou shalte remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I cõsydre these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne.

HETH.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louynge kyndnes ceaseth not.

His faythfulnesse is greate, and renueth it selfe as the morynge.

The Lorde is my porcion, sayth my soule, therfore wyll I hope in him.

TETH.

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them, that put their truste in him, and to the soule that seketh after him.

O howe good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tary, for the helth of the Lorde?

O howe good is it for a man, to take the yocke vpon him from his youth vp.

IOD.

He sytteth alone, he holdeth him styll, and dwelleth quietly by hym self.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope.

He offreth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reproues.

CAPH.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

But though he do caste of, yet accordyng to the multytude of his mercyes, he receyueth to grace agayne.

For he doth not plage, and caste out the chyldren of men from his herte.

LAMED.

To treade all the prysoners of the earthe vnder his fete.

To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condemne a man in his cause: The Lorde hath no pleasure in suche thynges.

MEM.

What is he then that sayth: there shulde somthynge be done without the Lordes cõmaundement?

Out of the mouth of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge man? lette him murmure at his owne synne.

NVN.

Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes, and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen.

We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated?

SAMECH.

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrathe, and persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs without any fauoure.

Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer shulde not go thorowe.

Thou haste made vs out caste, and to be despyted amonge the heythen.

AIN.

All our enemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea despyte ad destruction.

Hole ryuers of water gusshe oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

PHE.

Myne

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceasse, for there is no rest.

O Lorde when wylte thou loke downe frome heauen, and consydre?

Myne eye breaketh my hert, because of all the doughters of my cytye.

ZADE.

Myne ennemyes hunted me out sharpely, lyke a byrde, yea and that wythout a cause.

They haue put downe my lyfe in to a pyt, and layed a stone vpon me.

They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone.

KOPH.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, oute of the depe pytte

Thou hasse herde my voyce, and hasse not turned awaye thine eares fro my syghynge and crienge.

Thou hasse enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and hast sayd: feare not.

RES.

Thou (O Lord) hast mayntayned the cause of my soule, and hasse redemed my lyfe.

O Lorde, thou hasse sene my blaphemers take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou hast well consydred howe they go about to do me harme, and that al theyr counsels are agaynste me.

SIN.

Thou hast herde theyr dispytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea and all their ymagynacyons agaynste me.

The lyppes of myne ennemyes, and their deuyces that they take agaynste me, all the daye longe.

Thou seest also theire sytynge downe and their rysynge vp, they make their songes of nothinge but of me.

THAV.

Rewarde theym (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of their handes.

Gyue them the thynge, that their owne herte is afrayed of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacyon, and rote them out frome vnder the heauen.

CAPI. IIII.

ALEPH.

HOwe is the golde become so dymmed? Howe is the goodly coloure of it so sore chaunged? and the stones of the Sanctuarye thus scattered in the corner of euery strete.

BETH.

The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the moost precyous gold: how are they now become like the erthen vessels whiche be made with the potters handes.

GYMEL.

The Lampes gyue their young ones sucke with bare brestes: But the doughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylder nesse: lyke the Estrich es.

DALETH.

The tonges of the suckyng children cleue to the rofe of their mouthes for very thyrst. The younge children aske bred, but there is no man, that gyueth it them.

HE.

They that were wont to fare delycately, perysshe in the stretes: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make nowe moche of donge.

VAV.

The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater then the wyckednesse of Sodome, that sodenly was destroyed, and not taken with handes.

ZAIN.

Her abstayners (or Nazarites) were whyter then the snow or mylke: their coloure was fresshe reed as the Corall, their beautye lyke the Saphir.

HETH.

But nowe their faces are very blacke: In so moch, that thou shouldest not know them in the stretes. Their skynne cleueth to their bones, It is wythered, and become lyke a dry stocke.

TETH.

They that be slayne with the swerde, are happyer then suche as dye of honger, and perysshe awaye fainysshing for the fruites of the feilde.

IOD.

The women (whiche of nature are pytefull) haue sodden their owne children with their handes that they myght be their meate in the miserable destruction of the doughter of my people.

CAPH.

The Lorde hath perfourmed his hote wrath: he hath poured out the furyousnesse of his displeasure. He hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, which hath consumed y foundacions therof.

Zamech.

LAMED.

Neither the kinges of the earthe, ne all ꝑ inhabitauntes of the worlde, wolde haue beleued that ꝑ enemye & aduersary shoulde haue come in at the gates of the citie of Jerusalē.

MEM.

Which neuertheles is come to passe for the synnes of her prophetes, and for the wickednes of her prestes that haue shed innocentes bloude within her.

NVN.

So that these blynd men went stombling in the stretes, and stayned them selues with bloude, whiche els wolde touche no bloudy thyng.

SAMECH.

But they cryed vnto euery man: flee the defyling, awaye, get you hence, touch it not. Yea (sayde they) ye must be dzente, ye must dwel among the Gentyles, & byde no longer here.

AIN.

The countenaunce of the Lorde hath bandished them, and shall neuer loke more vpō them: for they the selues neither regarded the prestes, nor pitied their elders.

PHE

Wherfore yet oure eyes fayle vs, while we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be euer loked vpon a people, that can do vs no good.

ZADE.

They laye so sharpe wait for vs, that we can not go safe vpon the streates: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled oure ende is here.

KOPH.

Oure persecutours are swyfter then the Egles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes, and layed wayte for vs in the wildernes.

RES.

The very dzeth of our mouthe: euen the anoynted Lorde him selfe shall be taken in oure synnes, of whome we saye: Vnder his shadowe we shall be preserued amonge the heithen.

SIN.

And thou O (doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of Huz, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shall come vnto the also, which when thou suppest of thou shalte be dzonken.

THAV.

Thy syn is wel punyshed (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffre the to be caryed awaye any more. But thy wickednesse (O doughter Edom) shall he vysyt, and for thy synnes sake, he shall leade the into captyuytye.

CAPI. V.

¶ The prayer of Jeremye.

CAll to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consydre and se our cōfusyon. Oure inheritaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure houses to the alcantes. We are become carefull and fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to dzynke oure owne water for mony, and our owne wod must we bye with mony. Our neckes are vnder persecucyon, we are werye, and haue no rest. A Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and nowe to the Assyrians, onely that we myghte haue dzed ynough. Oure fathers (whiche now are gone) haue synned, & we must bare their wyckednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes. We muste get our lyuynge with the peryll of oure lyues because of the dzouth of the wyldernes. B

Jerem. xxxi. c
Ezech. xviii. a

Oure skynne is as it had bene dzente in an ouen, for verye sore hunger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hand of the enemyes, they haue not spared the old sage men, they haue take yōg mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hāged vp vpō trees. The elders syt no more vnder the gates, and the young men vse no more playeng of Musyke. The ioye of our hert is gone, our merye quere is turned in to mournynge. The garlande of oure heed is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore. C

Therfore oure herte is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hyll of Sion that is destroyed. In so moche, that the foxes run vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remaynest for euer more, and thy seate worlde without ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lorde, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shal we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banyshed vs now long ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs. D

¶ The ende of the lamentacyons of Jeremye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE EZECHIEL.

¶ The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed, and in what place. His office and office. The vysyon of the four beastes. The vysyon of the wheles. The vysyon of the throne, and of the ymage about the throne.

CAPI. I.

A IChaunced in the thirtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the prysoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of kyng Joacins captyuytye. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the prest, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lorde came vpon him.

And I loked, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the Northe with a greate cloude full of fyre, which w his glystre lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the lykenesse of foure bestes, whiche were fassyoned like a man: sauynge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

B Their legges were streyght, but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon al the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces & their wynges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched an other. When they went, they turned the not about: but echone went streyght forwarde.

C Vpon the ryghte syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Egle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it wente, it went streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite led them thither they went, and turned not about in their goynge.

D The fassyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euen as though burnynge cressettes had bene amõge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenyng. Whe the beastes went forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I saw a worke of wheles vpõ the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

E The fassyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpõ) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one wente forwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not about in their goinge. They were large, greate and horryble to loke vpon. Their bodyes we full of eyes rounde about them al foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite went thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed theym: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes went forth, stode still, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also went, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the brethe of lyfe was in the wheles.

F Aboue ouer the hedes of the beastes there was a fyrmament, whiche was fassyoned as it had bene of the moste pure Chrystal, & that was spred out aboue vpon their heedes: vnder the same fyrmament were their wynges layde abrade, one towarde an other, and two winges couered the body of euery beest. And when they went forthe, I hearde the noyse of their wynges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greate God, & a tussyng togyther as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode styll, they let downe their wynges.

G Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the fyrmament that was aboue their heedes. Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was the fassyon of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon ỹ seate there sat one lyke a man. I beheld him, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had beye all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde,

H And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a thynynge fyre, that gaueth lyght on euery syde, Yea the shyne & glystre that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynebowe, whiche in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the symylitude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and harkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

¶ The prophete is sende to call agayne the people from theyr errour.

CAPI. II.

AND then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (o thou sonne of ma) & I wyl talke with the. And as he was cõmunyng with me, the spirite came in to me and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marked the thyng, ỹ he sayd vnto me. And he sayd: Beholde, thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away fro me: both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

Yea

Yea I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough vysages and styffe stomackes: vnto whom thou shalte saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedyēt or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hathe bene a Prophete amonge them.

Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neither be afrayed of their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynste the, and despyse the.

Yea thou shalte dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a frowarde housholde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto the, whether they be obedyēt or not, for they are obstynate. Therfore thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges, that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked housholde. Open thy mouth and eate that I giue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherin was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wryten within and without, full of carefull mournynges: alas, and wo.

¶ The Prophete beynge fedde with the worde of God with the constaunt boldnesse of the spirite, is sent vnto the people that were in captyuyte. The punyshment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

CAPI. III.

AFter this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yea eate that closed boke and goo thy waye, and speake vnto the cyldren of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eate, and thy bowels shalbe fylled with the boke, that I gyue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, & it was in my mouth swete then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, get the soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to the people that hath a straunge, vnknowen, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to many nations, whiche haue dyuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people they wolde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe the, for they wyll not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue styf foreheades and harde hertes. Beholde therfore, I wyll make thy face preuayle agaynste their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynste their foreheades: so that thy forehead shalbe harder then an Adamāt or flint stone: that thou mayste feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take dylygent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the moste blessed glory of the Lorde out of his place. Ez. viii. a. c. d

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the bestes, that rushed one agaynst an other yea and the ratlyng of the wheles, that were by them, which rushynge and noyse was very greate.

Nowe when the spirite toke me vp: and caryed me awaye, I went with an heuy and a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnynge of the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners / that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beinge deepe sorye.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and gyue them warnynge at my cōmaundement. Ezec. xxxiii. d

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodlye man, that (without doubte) he muste dye, and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, ne speakest vnto him, that he maye turne frome his euyl waye, and so to lyue: Then shal the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, yf thou gyue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynes: then shal he dye in his owne wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Preachers.

Now yf a ryghteous man go from his righteousnesse, and do the thynge that is euell: I wyll laye a stomblynge blocke before him, & he shall dye, because thou hast not gyuen him warnynge: yea dye shall he in his owne syn, so that the vertue, whiche he dyd before, shal not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuertheless, yf thou exhorteteste the righteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receyued thy warnynge, and thou haste dyscharged thy soule. And there came the hād of the Lorde vpon me: and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke with the.

So when I had rysen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lord stode there, lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar. Ezechel. i. d.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me, whiche set me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me: Go thy way and spaere thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes

be

be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wil make thy tunge cleue to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalte be domme, and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstynate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus saythe the Lord God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyl not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate housholde.

¶ The besiege of the cytye of Jerusalem is signifyed. The longe contynuaunce of the captyuytye of Israel. An hunger is prophecyed to come in the captyuytye.

CAPI. IIII.

A THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpō it the citie of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dytches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hoofte of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron pan, and sette it betwyxte the and the citie, in stede of an yron wal. Then set thy face towarde it, besiege it, and laye ordynaunce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel.

But thou shalte slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the house of Israel vpō the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalte slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes.

B Neuertheleſſe, I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of their synnes) e the nombre of the dayes: Thre hundreth and .xc. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these dates, lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde. xl. dayes, & beare the synnes of the house Numē. xiiii. f of Juda.

A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynste that besieged Jerusalē and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayste prophecy agaynste it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the fro me one side to an other, tyl thou hast ended the dayes of thy siege.

C Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye, beanes, grofell sede Millium and lytches: and put these togyther in a vessel, and make the loues of breade therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muste lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayst haue breade to eate, for thre hundreth and .xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twenty syckles euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the syxte parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke daylye, from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes thou eate, yet shalte thou sprinkle them ouer with mans donge, that they maye And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen shal the chyldren of Israel eate their defyled in the myddest of the Gentyles, amōg whome I wyll scattre them.

Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for frō my youth vp vnto this houre. I vsed neuer eate of a deed carkase, or of that whiche was rauē of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane flesshe in my mouth.

Whervnto he answered me, and sayde: Well then, I wyl graunt the to take cowes donge, for the dong of man, and to strawe the breed ouer withall before them.

And he sayd vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will minysshe all the prouision of breed in Jerusalem, so that they shal eate their breed, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye spare measure therof to drynke. And when they haue no more breed ne water, one shall be destroyed with an other, and languysshe awaye for their wyckednesse.

¶ The ryddle of the heares, by whiche is signifyed the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde declareth the ryddle of the heares.

CAPI. V.

O Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely a rasour. Take it, and shaue the heere of thy heed & beard. Then take the scales and the waighe, and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cytye, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then drawe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a fewe of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a fewe of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, and burne it in the fire. Out of the same fire shal there go a flame vpon the hole house of Israel.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde God: this same is Jerusalem, I set her in the myddest of the heathen and nations that are rounde about her: but she hathe despised my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions that lye rounde about her: for they haue cast out myne ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye with youre wyckednesse farre exceade the Heathen that dwell rounde about you: (for ye haue not walked i my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, wyll I sytte in iudgement, in the syght of the Heathen, and wyl handle the of suche

...e a facion as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forthe, and ...dicaule of all thyne abhominacions. For ... fathers shall be slayne to eate theyr ... sonnes, and the sonnes theyr owne fa... Suche a courte wyl I kepe in the, and the hole remnaunt wyll I scattre in to al the ...ndes.

Wherfore as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) seinge thou hast defyled my Sanctuarye with all maner abhominacions, and with all thy shamefull offences. For this cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouerle the, neither will I spare the.

One thyrde part within the, shal dye of the pestilence and of hõgre: An other thirde part shall be slayne downe round about the, with the swerde: The other thirde parte that remayneth will I scattre abrode towarde al the windes, and drawe out the swerde after the. Thus I will perfourme my indignacion, and let my wrath against them and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynste them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred before all the heathen that dwell about the, and in the syghte of all them that go by the: so that when I punisshe the in my wrathe, in myne angre, and with the plage of my hoote displeasure, thou shalte be a verye abhomination, shame, a gasynge and wondring stocke amonge the heathen that lye about the.

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, & it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the perylous dartes of hongre, whiche shall be but death: Yea, therfore shall I shote them, bycause I wyll destroye you. I wyll encreasle hongre, and minysh all the prouision of breed amonge you.

Plages and myserye wyl I sende you/yea and wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodshedyng shal come vpon you, and the swerde will I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

The sheweth that the people shall be plaged for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophecyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and theyr deliuerannce. The destruction of the frowarde is prophecyed.

CAPI. VI.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayste prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, o ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre aulters, and breake downe your temples. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the dede carkaies of the chyldren of Israel wyll I caste before theyr ymages, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute youre aultres and dwellynge places.

The cityes shall be desolate, the hyll chapels layde waste: youre aulters destroyed, and broken: youre goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, your temples layd euen with the grounde, your owne workes clene rooted out. B

Your slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye lerne to knowe howe that I am the Lord. Yoole that amonges you haue escaped the swerde wil I leaue among the Gentiles, for I wil scatre you among the nacions. And they that escape from you shall thynke vpon me amonges the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. Barue. iii. c

As for that hoorishe and vnfaythfull hert of theirs, wherwith they run awaye fro me, I wil breake it: yea and put oute thole eyes of theyrs, that commit fornicacion with their ydolles.

Then shal they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses and abhomynacions which they haue done, and shall lerne to knowe howe that it is not in vayne that I the Lorde spake to bringe suche miserye vpon them. C

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Smite thyne handes together, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Woo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for bycause of them they shal perysh with the swerde, with hongre, & with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde / and the other that be besieged, shall dye of hongre.

Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye lerne to knowe that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to all theyr ydolles. I wyll stretche myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathath forthe, thorowe all their habitacions, to lerne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde. D

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophete is commaunded to shewe the summe of the euylles that are at hande.

CAPI. VII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: the I call, o thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vn- A to the lande of Israell: The ende commeth, yea verily the ende cōmeth vpon al the foure corners of the erth.

But now shal the ende come vpon the: for I wyll sende my wrathe vpon the and wyll punysshe the: accordynge to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhominacyons.

Eze.vii.b.ix.c Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyl I spare the, but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thy abhompynacyons. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, one mysserye and plage shall come after an other: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come alredye, the houre is come agaynste the, that dwellest in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is harde by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortly poure out my sore displeasure vpon the, and fulfill my wrathe vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

Eze.vii.b.ix.c

C Myne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhompynacyons, to lerne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne oute, the rodde flowrysheth, wyckednesse wareth grene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodly waren to a staffe. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

D The tyme commeth, the day draweth nyer Who so bieth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth let him not be sory, for why? trouble shal come in the middest of all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for neither of them bothe shall lyue.

For the vision shal come so greatly ouer al that it shall not be hyndred: No man also with his wyckednesse shall be hable to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shal ye blowe and make you all redye, but no man shall go to the batel, for I am wroth with all the hole multitude.

E The swerde shall be without, pestylence and hongre within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swerde: and he Deut.xxxii.d. that is in the cityе shall perisshe with hongre and pestilence.

And suche as escape and flee from amonge them, shal be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one shal be afrayde because of his owne wickednesse.

All handes shal be let downe, and al knees F shall be weake as the water: they shal gyrde them selues with sacke clothe, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confounded, ✱Esaye.xv.d ✱& theyr heedes bald: their syluer shal lye in Iere.xlviii.b the stretes, and theyr golde shall be despysed: ✱Sopho.i.d ✱Yea their syluer and golde maye not deliuer Ecclc.v.b them, in the day of the fearfull wrath of the Prouer.xi.a. Lorde.

They shall not satisfye theyr hongry soules, neither fyll theyr empty belyes therwith: For it is become theyr owne decaye therowe their wickednesse: because they made therof not onely costlye iewels for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and idols. For this cause wyl I make the to be abhorred.

Moreouer I wyll gyue it in to the handes G of the straūgers to be spoyled, and to the wicked for to be robbed, and they shall defyle it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasury shall be defyled: for the theues shall go in to it and suspende it. I will make clene tyraūnce, for the lande is hole fylled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent blood, & the city is full of abhominacions. Wherfore I wil bryng the moost cruel tyrauntes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I will make ꝑ pompe of the proude to cease, and they shall take in their Sanctuarye. When this trouble commeth, they shal seke peax, but they shall haue none. One mischiefe and sorow shall folowe an other, and one rumour shall come after an other. Then shal they seke visions in vayne at theyr prophetes.

The lawe shall be gone from the preestes, and wysdome frome the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the prynces shall be clothed in heuynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I wyll doo vnto them after their owne wayes, and accordynge to theyr owne iudgemenets wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ An apperaunce of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Ierusalem in the spyrte. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chefely of the preestes.

CAPI. VIII.

IT happened that in the sixte yere, the fifte daye of the sixte moneth I sat in my house A and the Lordes of the counsel of Iuda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me.

And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lykenesse of fire from his loynes downeward, and and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous clere. This similitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heery lockes of B Dani.a my heed, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwixt heuen and earthe: and God broughte me in a vysyon to Ierusalem, in to the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome he that hathe all thynges in his power, was verye wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I hadde sene it afore in the felde. And he said vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I vp C myne eyes towarde the north: and beholde, beyde the porte northward, there was an aulter, made vnto the ymage of prouocacion in the very entryng in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: Thou son of man, seist thou what these do? Seist thou the great abhominacions that the house of Israel commit in this place which ought not to be done in my Sanctuary? But turne the aboute, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominacions. And with ꝓ brought he me to the court gate: and when I loked: D beholde, there was an hole in the wal. Then sayd he vnto me: thou sonne of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorowe the wall: beholde, there was a doore. And he sayd vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominacions they do there. So I went in and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beestes, al idolles and abhominacions of the house of Israell paynted euery one rounde aboute the wall.

There stode also before the ymages thre score and ten lordes of the counsel of ꝓ house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Jazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in his hande, and oute of the incense there wente a smoke, as it hadde ben a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the E traytours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? For they say: tusshe the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne thee yet agayne, and thou shalte se the greate abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the north. And beholde there sate women mournynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: haste thou sene this thou sonne of man? Turne the about, & thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions.

F And so he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the Lordes house: & beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrye and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that tourned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces towarde the East, and these worshypped the sonne.

And he sayd vnto me: hast thou sene this ꝓ G sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Israel that it is but a trysle, to do these abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto vnger? Yea and purposely to caste vp their noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thynge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare them. Yea and though they crye in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

¶ The destruction of Idolatrers, and the conuersacyon of the ryghtous. They that shall be saued are marcked. They that are vnmarcked are slayne. A complaynte of the Prophete for the destruction of the people.

CAPI. IX.

HE cryed also with a loud voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the city, euery man with his weaponed hande to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men oute of the streete of the vpper porte towarde the North, and euerye man a weapon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on him a lynnen rayment, and a writers pynchorne by his syde.

These went in & stode beside the brasen aulter/ for the glory of ꝓ Lorde was gone away B Exod.xxv.c from the Cherub, and was come vpon to the Nume. iv.c thresholde of the house, and he called the mã iii.Reg. viii.b that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers pynchorne by his syde, and the Lorde sayd vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the city of Jerusalem, & set this marke Thau Exod.xii.c vpon the foreheedes of theym that mourne Apoca.vii.a and are sorye for all the abhominacions that be done therin. And to the other he sayd that I might heare: Go ye after him thorow the city, slee, ouerse none, spare none/ kyll and destroye both olde men and yong maydens, children and wyues.

But as for those that haue this marcke Thau vpon them, se that ye touch them not/ and begyn at my Sanctuarye. Then they be- Jer.xxv.b gan at the elders whiche were in the temple, xlix.b. for he had sayd vnto them: when ye haue de- i.Petri.iiii.a filed the temple, and fylled the courte with the slayne, then go your waye forth. So they went out, and slewe downe thorow the city. Now when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped, I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde, wilte thou thus destroye all the residue of Israel in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayd he vnto me: the wyckednes of the house of Israell and Juda is verye great, so that the lande is full of bloode, and the city full of vnrighteousnesse. For they say: Tusshe the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he seeth vs not.

Therfore wyll I vpon them, myne eye D Job.xxii.b shall not ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare Esaye.xxix.c them, but wyll recompence their wycked- Eccle.xxxii.a nesse vpon theyr heedes. And beholde, the Ezech. vii.a man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him and the writers pynchorne by his syde, tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

¶ Of the man that toke hote burnynge coles oute of the middle of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the burnynge of Jerusalem. The chersall of the vysyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

CAPI. X.

AND as I loked beholde in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns A there appered the symilitude of a stole Ezechiel.ix.a of Saphir vpon them: Then sayde he that sate therin to him that had the lynen raymēt vpon him: Crepe in betwen the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine hand full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer the citye. And he crepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the innermer courte. But
ii. Para. vii. a the glorye of the Lorde remoued frome the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yea and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde in to the fore courte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almighty God when he speaketh.

Now when he hadde bydden the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddest of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and stode beside the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fire that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the lynnen rayment in his hande: whiche toke it, and went oute.

B And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appered the lykenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubyns, so that by euerye Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facyon of the precyous stone of Tharsis: yet (vnto the syght) they were facyoned and lyke as yf one whele had ben in an other.

When they wente forthe, they wente all
C foure together, not turnynge aboute in theyr goynge: But where the fyrst wente thyther wente they after also, so that they tourned not aboute in theyr goynge. Theyr hole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr handes and wynges, Ezechiel.i.b yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (that is) a rounde boule. Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, ꝑ the seconde of man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Egle, and they were lifted vp aboue. This is the beest that I saw at ꝑ water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns, went the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns shoke their wynges to lifte them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortlye when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Then the glory of the Lorde was lyfte vp Ezechiel.xi.d xlii.a. from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpō the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flackred with their wynges, and lift them selues vp frome the earthe: so that I saw when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. This is the beest that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder the wynges, as it were mennes handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euerye one in his goynge wente strayght forwarde.

¶ who they were that made the people of Israel to straye. Agaynst these he prophecyeth, shewynge them how they shall be dysparpled abrode. The reuynge of the herte commeth of God, otherwyse can we not walcke in his commaundementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counselles.

CAPI. XI.

MOreouer the spirite of the Lorde lyfte
A me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And behold there were. xxv. men vnder the wore amonge whom I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thou son of man, these men ymagin mischiefe, and a wicked counsell take they in this
B citye, sayinge: tush, there is no destruction at hand, let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron, & we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophecy vnto them, yea prophecy shalt thou vnto them, o sonne of man. And with that fell ꝑ spirite of the Lord vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lorde:

On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginacyons
B of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this citye, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layde on the grounde in this citye, are the flesshe and this citye is the cauldron: But I wyll
Exe. xxi. bynge you oute of it: ye haue drawen oute
Matth. the swerde, euen so wyll I also bynge a swerde ouer you, sayth Lorde God: I wyll dryue you oute of this citye and delyuer you in to your ennemyes hande, and wyll condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the costes of Israell, I wyll be auenged of you: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

This citye shall not be your cauldron, neither shall ye be the flesshe therin: but in the costes of Israel wyll I punysshe you, that ye Leuit. xxvi. maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose Deut. xii. commaundementes, ye haue not walked ne kepte his lawes: but haue doone after the customes of the Heathen that lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the son of C Bananiah dyed, then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the hole house of Juda, whiche dwell at Jerusalem, saye: they be gone farre from the Lord, but the lande is gyuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl sende you farre of among the Gentyles, and scatre you amonge the nacions, and I wil halow you but a litle in the landes where ye shall come.

Tell them also thus sayth the Lorde God: I wil gather you agayne out of the nacions, and bringe you from the countreyes where ye be scatred, and wil giue you the land of Israel agayne: and thither shall ye come. And as for al impedimentes, and all your abhominacions, I wil take them awaye.

d And I will giue you one herte, and I will plante a newe spirite within youre bowels. That stony hert wyll I take out of your body, and giue you a fleshly hert: that ye may walke in my commaundementes, & kepe mine ordinaunces and do them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose herts are disposed to folowe their abhominacions, and wicked lyuynges: those mens dedes wil I bringe vpon their owne heedes, sayth the Lorde God.

After this dyd the Cherubins lifte vp their wynges, and the wheles went with them, & the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glory of the Lorde went vp frō the myddest of the cite, and stode vpon the mounte of the city towarde the east. But the winde toke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirite of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldea amonge the prysoners. Then the vision y I had sene, vanished awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners al the wordes of the Lord which he had shewed me.

¶ The parable of the vesselles of the captyuyte. The exposycyon of the parable, by whiche the takynge of Kynge Sedechias is signifyed. In other parable wherby the dystresse of hunger and thyrst is signifyed.

CAPI. LII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde houlde which haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are a stubborn houshold. Therfore (o thou son of mā) make thy gere redy to flyt, and go forth by fayre day light, that they maye se: Yea euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: yf peraduenture they wil consydre that they be an vnobedient houshold.

Thy gere that thou hast made redy to flyt withall, shalt thou beare oute by fayre daye light, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their syght, as a man doth whē he flytteth. Digge thorowe the wall, that they maye se, and beare thorow it the same thing that thou takest vp in their syght. As for thy selfe, thou shalte go forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the erth, for I haue made the a shewe token vnto the house of Israel. Now as y Lord cōmaunded me, so I dyd: the gere that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and whē it was darke I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight. B

And in the morning came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, yf Israel that frowarde houshold aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tel them, thus sayth the Lorde God: This punishmēt toucheth the chiefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel among the. Tell them, I am your shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you. Fyft shal ye also, and go in to captiuitie. The chiefest that is among you, shal lade his shoulders in the darke, & get him awaye. He shal breake downe the wall to cary stuffe therthorow. He shall couer his face that he se not the ground with his eyes. C

My lyne wyll I spreade oute vpon hym, and catche him in my nette and carye him to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees, which he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his Hostes, that be aboute hym, I wyll scattre them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe oute a swearde after them. So when I haue scattered them amonge the Heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde. D Ezech. xvii. & xxxii.

But I wil leaue a litle nombre of the from the swerde, hunger, & pestilence, to tel all their abhominacions amonge the Heathen, where they come, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fearefull tremblynge shalte thou eate thy breed, with carefulnesse and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate youre breed with sorowe, and drynke youre water with heynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnesse therof shall be layd waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwel therin. And the cityes that now be well occupyed, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde. E

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge: Tusshe seinge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the vysions are of none effecte. Tell theym therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl make that byworde to cease, so y it shal no more be cōmonly vsed in Israel. F

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thing whiche hath ben prophecied, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vision be in vayne, neyther any prophecye fayle among the childzen of Israel: for it is I the Lozde that speke it: and what so euer I the Lozde speake shall be perfozmed, and not be slacke in commynge.

G Yea euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) wil I deuise somthyng, and bryng it to passe sayth the Lozde God. And the wozde of the Lozde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man: the house of Israel saye in this maner: Tush as for the vision that he hath sene, it wil be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophecieth. Therfore saye vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lozde God. All my wozdes shal no moze be slacke: loke what I speke, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lozde.

¶ The wozde of the Lozde agaynst false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counselles of their owne hertes.

CAPI. XIII.

A The wozde of the Lozde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Speake prophecye agaynste those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecye oute of theyr owne hertes: Heare the wozde of the Lozde: Thus False prophetes. sayth the Lozde God: Wo be vnto those foysshe prophetes that folow their owne spirite, and speake where they se not thynge. O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the drye felde: for they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abide the peryll in the daye of the Lozde. Vayne thynges they se: and tell lyes to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lozde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lozde hathe not sent them. Vayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lozde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer spake it.

B Therfore thus sayth the Lozde God: Bicause your wozdes be vayne, and ye seke oute

C lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayth the Lozde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shal they come in the lande of Israell: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lozde God. And that for this

Jerem. viii. b cause: they haue discryed my people, and tolde them of peax, where no peax was. One letteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it with

Math. vii. c. loose claye. Therfore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered mozter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great showze of rayne, great stones shal fal vpō it, and a soze stozme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe.

Shal it not then be said vnto you: where is nowe the mozter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus sayth the Lozde God: I wyll breake oute in my wrothfull displeasure with a stozmye wynde, so that in myne anger, there shall come a myghtye showze of rayne and haylestones in my wrathe, to destroye withall.

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed with vntempered mozter, I will breake it downe, L make it eauen with the groundr: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall: yea and ye your selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to lerne you for to know I am the Lozde.

Thus wyll I perfourme my wrathe vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered mozter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecye vnto the cytye of Jerusalem, and loke oute visyons of peax for them, where as no peax is, sayth the Lozde God.

Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynste the doughters of thy people, whiche prophecye oute of theyr owne hertes: and speake thou prophecye agaynste theym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lozde God: Wo be vnto you ꝑ sowe pyllowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heedes bothe of ponge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie, ye prompte them D lyke, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barlye, and for a pece of brede: when ye kil the soules of them, that dye not, and prompte lyke to them that lyue not: thus ye dissemble with my people that byleueth your lyes.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lozd God: Beholde, I wil also vpō the pillowes, wherwith ye catch the soules in fleing: them wil I take from your armes, and let ꝑ soules go, that ye catche in fleing.

Youre bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and delyuer my people oute of youre handes: so that they shall come no moze in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lozde.

Seinge that with youre lyes ye discomfozte the herte of the ryghtous whom I haue not discomfozted. Agayne: For so moche as ye courage the hand of the wycked, so that he maye not tourne from his wycked waye and lyue: therfore shall ye sppe oute no moze vanitie, nor prophecye youre owne gesynges: for I wyll delyuer my people oute of youre hande, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lozde.

¶ The Lozde denyeth his wozde to the people for theyr synnes sake. The dysppysers of the wozde deed the Lozde somtyme deceyue by false prophetes. A comfozt of them that fledde vnto Babylon.

CAPI. XIIII.

There

THere reloyned vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sate downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idolles in their hertes, and go purposly vpon the stombynge blocke of their owne wyckednesse: how dare they the aske counsell at me? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of ỹ house of Israel that beareth his Idolles in his heerte, purposinge to stomble in his owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde my selfe gyue answere, accordynge to the multytude of his Idolles: that the house of Israell maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be cleane gone fro me, for their Idolles sakes.

Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your faces frome al your abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that sojourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me, and carryeth Idolles in his herte purposyng to go still stombling in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a Prophet, to aske counsell at me thereby him: vnto that man wyll I the Lord gyue answere, by mine owne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynste that man, and wyll make him to be an example for other, yea and a comen by word: and wil rote him out of my people, ỹ he maye know that I am the Lorde. And yf that Prophete be disceyued, when he telleth him a worde: then I the Lord my self haue disceyued that Prophete, and wyll stretche forth myne hand vpon him, to rote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for their wickednesse. Accordynge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me thorow errours, & be no more defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, sayethe the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man when the land sinneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche oute myne hand vpon it, and destroye all the prouysyon of their bred, and sende derth vpon them to destroy man and beste in the lande. And thoughe Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre mē were amōg thē, yet shal they in their rightousnesse delyuer but their owne soules sayeth the Lorde God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no mā may go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shal saue neither sonnes ne doughters, but be onely delyuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

Or yf I bringe a swearde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the land: so that I slaye owne man & beaste in it, and yf these thre men were therin; As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestylence into the land, and poure out my sore indignacō vpō it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both mā and beast, and yf Noe, Danyel, and Job, were therin: as truly as I lyue (sayethe the Lorde God) they shall delyuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but saue their owne soules in their rightousnesse. Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde God: Though I send my foure frous blous plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde honger, perelous beastes and pestylence, to destroye man and beaste oute of it: yet shall there be a remnaūt saued therin, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and doughters. Behold they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be cōforted, as touchinge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. G Iere. xxvii, b

They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynste Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayethe the Lorde God.

¶ As the vnprofytable wodde of the vyne tree is cast in to the fyre, so (sayeth he) that Jerusalem shall be brent.

CAP. I. XV.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, A sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne amonge al other trees? and of the vyne stock among al other tymbre of the groue? Do men take of it, to make any worke withall? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thynge vpō? Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brente to asshes. Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seing then, that it was mete for no worke B beinge hole: moche lesse may there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brēt it. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynste them: they shall go out frome the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I set my face against them, and make the hād waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophete intendynge to speake of the abhominacyons of Jerusalem: doth fyrste shewe the benefytes of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndenes, for her fornication with Idolles. He iustifyeth the wyckednesse of other people in comparison of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacyons in to whiche the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed. o the repentaunt.

CAP. I.

CAP. XVI.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā shewe the cytye of Jerusalem their abhompnations, and saye: thus sayethe the Lord God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Hethite. In the daye of thy byrth when thou waste borne, the strynge of thy nauell was not curte of: thou waste not bathed in water to make the clene: thou wast neither rubbed with salte, ne swadled in cloutes: No mān regarded the so moche, as to do any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the suche fauoure, but thou wast vtterly caste out vpon the felde, yea dispised wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thyne owne bloude, and sayd vnto the: thou shalte be purged from thyne owne bloude, from thyne owne bloude (I say) shalt thou be clensed. So I plāted the, as the blossome of thy felde: thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beautye, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, and loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come yea euen the tyme to bowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy dishonestie: yea I made an othe vnto the, and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude frome the. I annoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of rayments, I made the shoes of Taxus leather: I gyrded the aboute with white sylke, I clothed the with kerchues, I decked the with costly apparell. I put ringes vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy foreheade, eare ringes vpon thine eares, and set a beautiful crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus waste thou decte with sylver and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne white sylke, of nedle worke and of diuerse colowres.

Thou diddest eate nothyng but hymnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast & beautyfull, yea euen a very Quene wast thou. In so moch, that thy beauty was spoke of amonge the heithen, for thou wast excellent in my beauty, which I put vpō the saith the Lorde God.

But thou haste put confydence in thyne owne beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou haste commynted horedome, with all that wente by the, and hast fulfylled their desyres: yea thou haste taken thy garmentes of diuerse colours, and decked thyne aulters therewith, whervpon thou myghtest fulfyll thine horedome, of suche a fashyon, as neuer was done ne shall be. The goodly ornamēts & Jewels whiche I gaue the of myne owne golde and sylver, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and commynted horedome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuers colowres hast thou taken, and decked them therwith myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them.

My meate which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, and honye (to feede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And this came also to passe, sayth the Lorde God: Thou haste taken thine owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou haddest begotte vnto me: and these haste thou offered vp vnto the, to be their meat. Is this but a smal horedome of thyne (thynkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and gyuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominations and horedome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayth the Lorde) thou haste buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place: yea at the head of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aulter. Thou haste made thy beauty to be abhorred, thou haste layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multyplyed thine horedome. Thou hast commynted fornycacion with the Egyptyans thy neighbours, whiche haue mocke flesshe and thus hast thou vred thyne horedome, to anger me. D

Beholde, I wyll stretch out myne hande ouer the, and wyl myndysshe thy store of lode and delyuer the ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thyne ennemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. Thou haste played the hore also with the Assyrias, wherfore mygyte not satisfie the; Yea thou haste played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thus hast thou styll commynted thy fornycacion frome the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lyste nat satisfied. How sholde I circumcyse thine hert (saith the Lord God) seinge thou doest all these thynges, thou pereyous hore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodell houses in all places?

Thou hast not ben as an other hore, that maketh bosse of her wynnynge, but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Gyftes are gyuen to all other hores, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the oute of all places, and to commyt fornycacion with the. It is come to passe with the in thy horedomes contrary to the vse of other women: yea there hath no such fornycacion ben committed after the, seinge that thou profferest gyftes vnto other, and rewarde is gyuen the: this is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thy money, and discouered thy shame, thorowe thy horedome with al thy louers, and with all the idols of thy abhominations in the bloude of thy thy chyldren, whome thou hast gyuen them: Beholde therfore I wyll gather togyther all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou fauourest, and euery one that thou hatest: & will discouer thy shame before thē, that they all maye se thy fylthynesse.

Moreouer, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompēce the thine owne bloude in wrathe and gelousy. I wyl gyue the ouer into their power, that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell houses: they shall stryp the oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beautyfull Jewells shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked and bare: yea they shall bryng the common people vpon ỹ, which shal stone the, and slaye the wyne with their swerdes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punysh the in the syght of many women. Thus wil I make thy boredome to ceasse, so that thou shalte gyue out no more rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrathe to be styll, take my gelousye from the, be content, & no more to be displeased? seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrathe in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, sayth the Lorde God: howbe it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordyng to thy wyckednesse and al thy abhompnacyons. Beholde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, suche a doughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne doughter, that hath caste of her husbande and her childē. Yea thou arte the syster of thy sisters, whiche forsoke their husbandes and theyr children. Your mother is a Cethite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpō thy left hande.

But thy yōgest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes nr done after their abhompnacions: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they. As truely as I lyue, sayth ỹ Lord God: Sodoma thy sister with her doughters, hath not done so euyl, as ỹ & thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnes of meate, aboundance and Idelnes: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besides that, they reached not their hand to the poore & nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhompnable thynges before me: therfore them I toke away, whē I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou hast exceaded them in wyckednes: In so moche that in comparyson of all the abhompnacions whiche thou hast done, thou hast made thy systers good women.

As for their captyuytye, namely the captyuytye of Sodoma and her doughters: the captyuytye of Samaria and her doughters: I wyll bryngе them agayne, so wyll I also bryngе agayne thy captyuytye amonge thē: that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyō vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters, with thy selfe and thy doughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde estate.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednes came to the lyght: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusyon: ỹ thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynes and abhompnacyō, saith the Lorde. G

For thus sayth the Lorde God: I shulde (by ryght) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheless, I wyll remembre the couenaunte that I made with the in thy youth, in so moche that it shall be an euerlastynge couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: thē shalt thou receyue of me thy elder & yonger systers whom I wyll make thy doughters, & that besyde thy couenaunt. And so I wyll renue my couenaunt with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord: that thou maist thinke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgyuen the, all that thou haste done, sayth the Lorde God. CAPI. XVII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, & saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto the house of Israel. and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: There came a greate Egle with greate wynges, yea with myghtye long wynges, & full of fethers of dyuerse colours, vpon the mounte of Lybans, & toke awaye from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it in to the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cytye of marchauntes. He toke also a braunche of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a willye tree therby.

Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vine stocke, but lowe by the grounde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches.

But there was an other Egle, a greate one which had greate wynges and many fethers, and beholde, the rotes of this vyne hadde an hunger after him, and spred oute his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes. Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good grouñd B

beſyde greate waters: ſo that (by reaſon) it ſhulde haue brought out braunches & frute, & C haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therfore, thus ſayth the Lorde God: Shal this vyne proſpere? ſhall not his rotes be pluckte out, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches wither and fade away? yea without either ſtronge arme or many people, ſhall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Behold, it was plãted: ſhall it proſpere therfore. Shall it not be dryed vp and wythered, yea euẽ in the ſpringe out of his bloſſomes, as ſoone as the eaſt wynde bloweth?

D Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me ſayinge: Speake to that frowarde houſholde: knowe ye not, what theſe thynges do ſygnifye? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Ieruſalem, and toke the kyng and his princes, & led them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges ſede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an oth of him: The Princes of the lande toke he with him alſo, that the lande myght be holden in ſubiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell frome him, and ſent his Embaſſadours in to Egypt that he myght haue horſes and moche people. Shoulde that proſpere? Shulde he be kepte ſafe, that doth ſuche thinges? Or ſhulde he eſcape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue ſayth the Lorde God: E he ſhal dye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, that made him kinge: whoſe othe he hath deſpyſed, and whoſe couenaunte he hath broken. Neither ſhall Pharao with his greate hoost and multytude of people, mayn teyne him in the warre: when they caſte vp dytches, and ſet vp bulwerkes to deſtroye moche people. For ſeinge he hathe deſpyſed the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done all theſe thinges, he ſhall not eſcape.

Couenaunt breakers.

F Therfore thus ſayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyll brynge myne othe that he hath deſpyſed, and my couenãt that he hathe broken, vpon his owne heade. I wyll caſte my net about him, and catche him in my pacne. To Babylon will I carye hym, there will I punyſſhe hym, becauſe of the great offẽce that he made me.

Ezechie. xii. d xxxii. d.

As for thoſe that fle frome him out of the hoost, they ſhall be ſlayne with the ſwearde. The reſydue ſhal be ſcatered towarde al the wyndes: and ye ſhall knowe, that I the Lorde haue ſpoken it.

Thus ſayth the Lorde God: I will alſo G take a braunche frome an hyghe Cedre tree, and wyl ſet it, & take the vppermoſt twigge, that yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Sion wyll I wyl plant it: that it may bryng forth twygges, and gyue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: ſo that all maner of foules maye byde in it: and make theyr neſtes vnder the ſhadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde ſhall knowe that I the Lorde hath broughte downe the hyghe tree, and let the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to floryſhe: Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it, haue alſo brought it to paſſe.

Ezechie. xvii. a

The theweth that euery man ſhall beare his owne ſynnes. To hym that amendeth is ſalue vpon promyſed. Deathe is prophecyed to the ryghteous whiche turneth backe from the ryght waye.

CAPI. XVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: what meane ye by this cõmon prouerbe, that ye vſe in the land of Iſrael, ſayinge: The fathers haue eaten ſoure grapes, and the childrẽs teth are ſet on edge? As truely as I lyue ſayth the Lorde God, ye ſhall vſe this by worde no more in Iſrael.

Ezechie. xvi. a

Behold, all ſoules are myne. Lyke as the S father is myne, ſo is the ſonne myne alſo. The ſoule that ſynneth, ſhall dye. If a man A be godly, and do the thyng that is equal and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Iſrael: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he medleth with no menſtrous woman: he greueth no body: he gyueth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by vyolence: he parteth his meate with the hũgrye, he clothed the naked: he lendeth nothynge vpon vſury, he taketh nothinge oure, he withdraweth his hand from doing wrõg: he handleth faythfully betwyxt man and man: he walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth them faithfully: This is a rygh tous man, he ſhal ſurely lyue ſaith the Lorde God.

If he now get a ſonne, that is a murtherer, a ſheder of bloude: yf he do one of theſe thinges (thoughe he do not al) he eateth vpon the hilles, he defyleth his neyghbours wife, he greueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth & ſpoyleth, he gyueth not the better his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges, he lendeth vpon vſurye, & taketh more oure. Shal this man lyue? He ſhall not lyue. Seinge he hath done all theſe abhominacions, he ſhall dye his blonde ſhall be vpon him.

Nowe if this man get a ſonne alſo, that C ſeeth all his fathers ſynnes, whiche he hathe done: and feareth, neyther doth ſuche lyke Namely, he eateth not vpon the mũtaynes he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Iſrael: he defyleth not his neighbours wyfe, he wrõgeth no man, he kepeth no mans pledge he neither ſpoyleth, ne robbeth any man, he dealeth his meate with the hungrye, he clotheth the naked, he oppreſſeth not the poore, he receyueth no vſurye, ne any thinge oure, he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes, This man ſhall not dye in his fathers ſynne, but ſhall lyue without fayle. As for his father: becauſe he oppreſſed and ſpoyled his brother, and dyd wickedly amonge among his people: lo, he is deed in his owne synne. And yet say ye: Wherfore then shulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore: because the sonne hathe done equitye & right, hath kept all my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neither shal the father beare the sonnes offence. The rightousnesse of the ryghtous shall be vpon him, and the wyckednes of the wicked shall be vpon him selfe also. But if the vngodly wyll turne awaye frome all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thynge that is equall & right: doubtles he shal lyue, and not dye. As for al his sinnes that he did before, they shal not be thought vpō: but in his rightousnes ꝑ he hathe done, he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lorde God: but rather that he conuert, and lyue?

f Agayne: if the ryghtous turne awaye frome his rightousnes, and do iniquytie, accordinge to all the abhomynacions, that the wycked mā doth shal he lyue? All the ryghtousnes ꝑ he hath done, shal not be thought vpon, but in the faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hathe done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tush, the waye of the Lord is not indifferēt. Here therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye eighte? Or are not your wayes rather wicked? Whē a righteous man turneth awaye from his rightousnesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therin: yea for the vnrighteousnesse that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne: when the wycked man turneth awaye frome his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thynge whiche is equall and eyght: he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so moch as he remembreth him selfe, and turneth him frome al the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shal lyue and not dye.

G And yet sayth the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vneight, O ye house of Israell: Are not your wayes rather vnequall? As for me I will iudge euerye man, accordynge to his wayes, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lord God.

Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste awaye from you al your vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you newe hertes and a new spirite. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel? seinge I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, sayth ꝑ Lord God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The captyuytye of Jochaz and Joacin is signifyed by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperytye of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and the mysery therof that is present.

CAPI. XIX.

But mourne thou for the princes of Israell, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyonesse amonge the lyons, & norysched her yonge amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heithen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte. A

Now when the damme sawe that, al her hope and comforte was away, she toke an other of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him: whiche went amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lyon: lerned to spoyle & to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cytyes waste. In so moche that the hole lande and euery thynge therin, were vtterlye desolate, throwe the very voyce of his roryng. B

Then came the heithen togyther on euery syde out of all countreyes agaynste hym, layed their nettes for him, and toke hym in their pitte. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which put him in pryson, that his voyce shulde no more be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israell. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloude, planted by the waters syde: her frutes and braunches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strōg that men myght haue made staues therof for offycers: she grewe so highe in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the heyght and multytude of her braunches, she was toted out in displeasure and cast do wne to the grounde. C

The east wynde dryed vp her frut, her strōg stalkes were broken of, wythered and brente in the fyre. But now she is plāted in the wil derneste, in a drye and thursty grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she haty no mo strong stalkes, to be staues for offycers. This is a pitcous and miserable thynge. Olee.xiii.d

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them when they praye, for the offence of vnkyndenesse whiche he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captyuytye. By the wode that shoulde be brent is signifyed the burnynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XX.

In the.xbij.yeare the tenth daye of the.v. moneth, it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of mā: speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Are ye come to aske any thinge at me? As truely as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) I will giue you A Ezech.xliii.a.

no answere. Wilt thou not reproue them (ꝯ sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue theym?
Ezod.xx.b Shewe theym the abhompnacions of their fore fathers, and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyfte vp myne hande vpon the seede of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea whē I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hand ouer them, to bring them out the lande of Egypte, in to a lande that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with milke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lād
Deut.vii.a amonge all other: Then sayd I vnto them: Cast awaye euerye man the abhompnacions that he hath before him, and defyle not youre selues with the Idols of Egypte, for I am ꝯ Lorde youre God.

B But they rebelled agaynste me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abhompnacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idolles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrathe vpon theym: yea euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heithē, amonges whome they dwelt, and amonges whome I shewed my selfe vnto them that I wolde bringe them out of the land of Egipt. Nowe when I had caryed them out of ꝯ lāde of Egypt, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes: which who so kepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them al so my holy dayes, to be a token betwyxte me and them, and therby to knowe, that I am ꝯ Lorde, whiche haloweth them.

Ezod.xx.xxi. x.xii. Deute.xii.b Galath.iii.b Leuit.xviii.a Ezod.xvi.c xxxi.c.xxxii.c. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walk in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so kepeth should lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

Numē.xiiii.b Ezodi.xvi.c C Then I made me to powre out my indignacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heythen, from the whiche I hadde caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wildernesse, that I wolde not bring thē into the lande, whiche I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of al landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for theirs herte was gone after their Idolles.

Neuertheleſſe myne eye spared thē, so that I wolde not vtterly slay them, and consume
Ezē.xviiid. them in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe Ezod.xvi.e xxxi.c.xxx.ii c. not their ordynaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their Idols, for I am the Lorde youre God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halow my Sabbothes for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Notwithstandynge, their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them (whiche he that doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Thē I made me agayne to poure oute my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpō them in the wildernes. Neuertheleſſe I with D drewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonges the heythen, before whome I had brought them forthe. I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wolde scatre them amōg the heithen, and strowe theym amonge the nations: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast alyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers Idols.

Ezod.xx. Wherfore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, & lawes thorow the which they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes (when I appoynted for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they myght know, how that I am the Lorde.

E Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: Beside all this, youre forefathers haue yet blaspheмed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me: For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to gyue them, when they sawe euery hyghe hill and all the thick trees: they made there their offringes, & prouoked me with their oblations, in addynge swete sauoures there, and poured out their drinck offeringes. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do withal, that ye go thither? And therfore is it called the hygh place vnto this daye.

Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vnclene as youre forefathers, and committe horedome also with their abhominacions. In all your Idols, wherevnto ye bringe your oblacions, & to whose honoure ye burne youre children: ye defyle your selues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye then come, & aske any question at me? O ye housholde of Israel? As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it shall not come to passe, where as ye say: we will be as the heithen, and do as other people in the land, wod and stone will we worshyp.

As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, F I my selfe will rule you with a myghtye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with indignacion poured out ouer you: & will bring you out of the nacions and landes, wherin ye are scattered: & gather you togyther with a myghtye hande, with a stretched oute arme and with indignacion poured out vpon you: & will bringe you into the wildernesse of the people. & there I will reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers

in the wyldernesse, so wyll I punysshe you al-sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll bringe you under my iurisdiction, and under the bonde of the conenaunt. The fayshers also and the transgressours wyll I cute from amonge you, and bryng them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Israell, they shall not come in it:
that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Go nowe then (sayth the Lorde God) ye house of Israell, caste awaye and destroye every man his ydols: then shall ye heare me, and no more blaspheme my holy name with your offrynges and ydolles. But vpon my holye hyll, euen vpon the hye hyll of Israell shall all the house of Israell and all that is in the lande, worshyp me: and in the same place wyll I fauour them, and there wyll I requyre your heaueoffrynges, and the kyndynges of youre oblacyons, with all youre holy thynges.

I wyll accepte youre swete sauoure, when I bringe you frome the nacyons, and gather you togyther oute of the landes, wherin ye be scattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the Heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue broughte you in to the lande of Israell: yea, in to the same lande that I swore to gyue vnto youre fore-fathers.
There shall ye calle to remembraunce youre owne wayes, and all youre ymagynacy-ons, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and ye shall be displeased with youre owne selnes, for all your wyckednesse which ye haue done.

And ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I entreate you after my name, not after youre wycked wayes, ne accordynge to your corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face towarde the Southe, and speake to the Southe wynde, and saye to the wodde towarde the Southe: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God: Be-holde, I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quenche his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the North shall be brente therin: and all flesshe shall se that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man may quenche it. Then sayd I: O Lorde, they wyll saye of me: Tushe, they are but fables that he telleth.

(The threateneth the swerde, that is to saye, destruction to the cytye of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of kynge Sedechias. He is commaunded to prophecy the destruction of the children of Ammon.
After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lorde threateneth death vnto Nabuchodonozor hym self.

CAPI. XXI.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, 8 sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuarye, and prophecye agaynste the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israell:
Thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde I wyll vpon the, and wyll drawe my swerde out of the shethe, and rote out of the both the righteous and the wicked. Seing then that I wyll rote out of the both the righteous and wicked therfore shall my swerde go out of his shethe against all flesh from the north to the south:
that all flesh may knowe how that I the Lorde haue drawen my swerde out of the sheth, and it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) B that thy lownes cracke withall / yea mourne bytterly for them: And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell them: for the tydynges that commeth, at the whiche all hertes shall melte, all handes shall be letten downe, all stomaches shall faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth, and shall be fulfylled, sayth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came C vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde God: speake, the swerde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bright. O, the destroyinge staffe of my sonne, shall bringe downe all wodde. He hath put his swerde to the dyghtynge, that good holde may be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened and dyghte, that it maye be gyuen in to the hande of the mansleer.

Crye (O thou son of man) and howle, for D this swerde shall smyte my people, and al the rulers in Israel, whiche with my people shal be slayne downe to the grounde therfore smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore shoulde not the plage and staffe of iudgement come? Prophecy thou son of man and smyte thyne handes togyther: make the swerde two edged, yea make it thre edged, for mansleers swerde, that swerde of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smyte them, euen in their priuye chambres: to make them abas-shed and faynte at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and sharpe is it/ how well dyghte, and mete for the slaughter. Get the to some place alone either vpon the right hande or vpon the left, whyther so euer thy face tourneth. I wyll smyte my handes togyther also, and satisfye my wrothfull indignacion. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Bothe these stretes shall goo oute of one lande. He shall set him vp a place, at the heade of the strete shall he chose him out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swerde may come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytye of Jerusalem.

E For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the tournynge of the waye, at the heed of the two stretes to aske counsell at the sothesayers, castynge the lottes with his arowes to aske counsell at the ydolles, and to loke in the lyuer.

Leuit.xix.f xx.a Deut.xviii b

But the sothesayinge shall poynte to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre to smyte it, with a great noyse to crye out alarum, to set battelrammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp ditches, and to make bulwarkes.

Neuerthelesse, as for the sothesayenge, they shall holde it but for vanitie, euen as though a lesynge were told them: yea, and they theym selues remembre theyr wyckednesse, so that by ryghte they muste be taken and wonne. Therfore sayethe the Lorde God:

F For so mochte as ye youre selues shewe youre offence / and haue opened your wyckednesse, so that in all your workes men may se youre synnes: yea in so mochte (I saye) that ye your selues haue made mencion therof, ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked guyde of Jsrael whose day is come / euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayethe the Lorde God: take awaye the myttre, and put of the crowne, and so is it away: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Vnpylthe, vnpylthe / yea vnpy. the them wyll I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgement belongeth, and to whome I haue gyuen it.

G And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde God to the cyldren of Ammon, and to their blasphemye speake thou: Eye the swerde, the swerde is drawen forthe alredye to the slaughter, and scoured that it glystereth (bycause thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecyed lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodlye, whiche be slayne: whose daye came, when theyr wyckednesse was full.

Jere.xlix.c. Ezechie.xxi.a Amos.i.f.

Thoughe it were put vp agayne in to the sheathe / yet wyll I punyshe the in the land where thou wast nourysshed and borne, and powre my indignacyon vpon the, and wyll blow vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delyuer the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to destroye. Thou shalte fede the fyre, and thy bloode shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayste be put oute of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for mannslaughter, and denynge due honour to theyr fathers and mothers, and other wyckednesses. Of the wycked doctryne of the falsse prophetes and prestes, and of theyr vnlacyable couetousnesse. The tyrannye of rulers. The vnkyndenesse of the people.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprouе this bloudthyrsty citie? Shewe them their abhominacions and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. O thou citye that shedest blood in the myddest of the, that thy tyme may come also / and makest the ydolles to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gyltye in the bloode that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the ydolles, whiche thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, B and made ꝑ tyme of thy yeres to come. Therfore wil I make the to be confounded among the heathen, and to be despysed in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre frome the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte full of myschiefe. Beholde, the rulers of Jsrael haue Deu. xxv. brought euery man his power, to shed blood in the. In the haue they despysed father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despysed my Sanctuarye, and vnhalowed my Sabothe. Vn- Deut. Leui. therers are there in the, that shede blood, and eate vp the hylles, and in the they vse vnhappynesse.

In the haue they discouered theyr fathers C shame, in the haue they vexed women in their sycknesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neighbours wife, and abhominably defiled his doughter in law. In the hath euery man forced his owne sister, euē his fathers doughter: yea gyftes haue ben receyued in ꝑ to shede bloode. Thou hast taken vsurye and encreace, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, sayth the Lorde God. Jere.

Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon D thy couetousnesse that thou haste vsed, and vpon thē bloude whiche hathe ben shedde in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bringe it to passe. I wyll scattre thy selfe among the heathen, and strow the about in the landes, and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to cease out of the: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the sight of the heathen, that thou mayste knowe that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me E sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Jsrael is turned to drosse. All they that shall be brasse, tynne, yron, and leade are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so mochte as ye all are tourned in to drosse: beholde, I wyll bringe you togyther vnto Jerusalē lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne, and leade are put togither in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them: Euen so wyll I gather you, put you in togyther, and melte you in my wrath and indignacyon. I wyl bringe you togyther, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke

lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye know how that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vncliene lande, whiche is not rayned vpon in the day of thy cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in the, are ioyned together to deuoure soules, like as a rorynge Lyon that lyeth by his pray.

They receyue rychesse and good, and make many wydowes in the. Thy priestes breake my law, and defyle my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene ꝑ holy & vnholy, neither discerne betwene the clene and vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my Sabothes, and I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauysshynge wolues to shede blood, and to destroy soules for their own couetous lucre. As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clay/they se vanities, and prophecyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vseth wycked extorcion and robberye. They vexe the poore and nedy, and oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght.

And I soughte in the lande for a man that wolde make vp the hedge, and set stan self in the gap before me, in the landes behalfe, that I holde not vtterly destroye it, but I coulde fynde none. Therfore wil I poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes wil I recompence vpon their heades, sayethe the Lorde God.

Of the fornicacyon, meanynge the Idolatry of Samaria and Jerusalem: vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibah. In comparison of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacyon of Jerusalem is the sylthyer. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophesyed. The aduoutrye of both the hores is found out: Their destruction.

CAPI. XXIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, there were two women ꝑ had one mother: These (when they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were their breastes broken, and the pappes of their maydenhed destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oholah, and her youngest syster Oholibah. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters, their names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to goo a hoorynge, when I had taken her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: men the prynces and Lordes that were decte in costly araye: fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorowe her hoordome, she cleaued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: Yea, she was mad vpon them, and defiled her self with all their idolles. Neyther ceased she from the fornicacion that she vsed with the Egyptias: for in her youthe they laye with her, they broken the brestes of her maydenheed, & poured their hoordome vpon her. Wherfore I delyuered her in to the handes of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the swerde. And cupi name gat she of all people, and they punished her. Ezechi.xvi.e

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, and destroyed her self with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceded her syster in hoordome, she loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namely the princes and great lorde, that were clothed with al maner of gorgyous apparell, all lusty horsemen, and fayre yong persones. Then I sawe that they bothe were defyled alyke.

But she increased styll in hoordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the walle, the ymages of the Caldees set forthe with freshe coloures, with fayre gyrdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, louynge all lyke Prynces (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in their owne lande, where they be borne) immediatlye as soone as she sawe them, she brente in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them in to the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonians came to her they laye with her, and defiled her with their hoordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her luste was abated from them, her hoordome and shame was discouered and sene, then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Esayę.xlvii.a Naum.iii.d Ezechi.xvi.e

Neuertheles, she vsed her hoordome euer the lōger the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt / she brent in lust vpō them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, & their seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthinesse of thy youth, when thy louers broken thy pappes, & marred thy brestes in Egypte.

Therfore (O Oholibah) thus sayethe the Lorde God. I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) against the and gather them together rounde about the: namely the Babylonias, and all the Caldees: Peced, Schoa and Coa, with al the Assirias, all yonge and fayre louers, princes and lordes, knightes, and gentylmen, whiche be all good horse men: these shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people, which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde, with brestplates, sheldes and helmettes. I will punysshe the before them, yea they them selues shall punysshe the, according to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the.

They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the swerde. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shall be brent in the fyre. They shall stripe the oute of thy clothes, and carye thy costly iewelles awaye with them.

Thus will I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and hoordome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shalte tourne thyne eyes no more after theym, and call thy mynd no more vpō Egypt. For thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyll deliuer the in to the handes of them whom thou hatest: yea, euen in to the handes of them, with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust, whiche shal dele cruelly with the. All thy labour shal they take with them, and leue the naked and bare/ and thus the shame of thy fylthy hoordome shal come to light. All these thinges shal happen vnto the, because of thy hoordome, which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentyles with whose ydols thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou haste walked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyll I geue the her cup in thy hande.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drynke of thy systers cuppe, howe depe and large so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and hadde as greatlye in derysyon, as is possible. Thou shalte be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cup of thy syster Samaria, is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalte thou drynke and suppe it oute, euen to the dregges: yea thou shalte eate vp the broken peces of it, and to teare thyne owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it sayethe the Lorde God.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me aside, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynesse and hoordome.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, wylte thou not reproue Oholah, and Oholibah? Shewe them their abhominacions: namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stained their handes with bloode: yea euen with their ydols haue they committed aduoutrye, and offered them their owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me.

4.Reg.xvi.a

Ezech.xvi.c.

Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuarye, in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they hadde slayne their chyldren for their ydolles, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house.

Beside all this, thou haste sente thy messengers for men oute of farre countreyes: and when they came, thou haste bathed, trymmed and set forthe thy selfe of the beste facion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wherupō thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Ezod.xxxii.

Then was there great chere with her, and the men that were sent from farre countreys ouer the deserte, vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon theyr handes, and set glorious crownes vpon theyr heedes: then thought I no doubte, these wyll vse theyr harlotry also with yonder olde booze. And they went in to her, as one vnto a cōmon harlot. Euen so wēt they also to Oholah and Oholibah those filthy women.

Ye all that loue vertue and righteousnes iudge them, and punysshe them: as aduoutrers and murtherers ought to be iudged and punysshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke and the bloude is in theyr handes. Wherfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: Bryng a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make theym be scattered and spoyled: these shall stone theym, and gore them with their swerdes. They shall slee theyr sonnes and doughters, and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Leuit.xx. Ezech.xvi.

Thus wyll I destroye all suche fylthynesse oute of the lande, that all women may learne, not to doo after youre vnclennesse. And so they shall laye your fylthynesse vpon youre owne selues, and ye shall be punysshed for the synnes that ye haue committed with youre ydolles / and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prouerb of the kettle heare thou the boones togyther, kyndle thou the fyre, sethe the fleshe, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be suckre oute. Moreouer set the potte emptye vpon the coles, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylthe and rustynesse maye be consumed.

P But it wyll not goo of, there is so moche of it: the rustynesse muste be brent oute. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I wold haue clensed the, but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pourged frome thyne vnclennesse, tyll I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so decreed: Yea, it is come therto alredye that I wyll doo it. I wyll not go backe I wyll not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordynge to thy wayes and ymaginacyons, thou shalte be punyshed saythe the Lorde God.

E And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaye of the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou neyther mourne nor wepe, ne water thy chekes therfore: ✠ mayst mourne by thy selfe alone: but vse no deedly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breed.

So I spake vnto the people dilymes in the morynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people said vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs what that signifieth whiche thou doest?

F I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll suspende my Sanctuarye: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorowe the sweerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye doo also: Ye shall not hyde youre faces, ye shall eate no mourners breed: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your fete.

G Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shall be sorowfull, and one repente with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shew token. For loke as he hath done so (when this commeth) ye shall doo also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take frome theym their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodyes: namely their sonnes and doughters. Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the / for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to him whiche is escaped, that thou mayste speake, and be no more domme: yea, and thou shalte be their shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, whiche reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Item gaynst Moab and Seir. Gaynst Idumea. Gaynst the Philistynes.

CAPI. XXV.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, set thy face A Ezechi.xxi.d. Jere.xlix.a. agaynste the Ammonites: Prophecye vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou spakest ouer my Sanctuarye. A ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel / I trowe it be nowe desolate, yea and ouer the house of Juda, I trowe they be nowe ledde awaye prysoners. Beholde, I wyll delyuer the to the people of the East, that they maye haue the in possession: these shall sette their castles and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and drynke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall for camelles, and of Ammon a shepe folde: and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: In so moche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete / yea reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer the to be spoyled of the heathen, and rote the oute from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes / yea I will make the be layd waste, that thou mayst know that I am the Lorde. B

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentiles be. Therfore beholde, I will make the cities of Moab weaponlesse, and shall take awaye their strengthe: their cityes and chiefe costes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the countrey: As namely Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the East, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and wil gyue it them in possession / so that the Ammonites shal no more be hadde in remembraunce amonge the heathen. Euen thus wyll I punyshe Moab also, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde. Esay.xv.xvi. Esay.xlvii.a Sophon.ii.d.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: Bicause that Edom hath auenged and eased him selfe vpon the house of Juda / therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I wil reache out mine hand vpon Edom, and take awaye man and beast out of it. Esay.xxxiiii.a Jerem.xlix.b Ezech.xxxv.f xxv.a. Psal.xxxvii.b. Gene.xxv.d.

From Theman vnto Dedan will I make it desolate / they shal be slayne with ✠ sweerde. Thirdly my people of Israell wyll I auenge me agayn vpon Edom: they shal handle him accordyng to my wrath and indignacion, so ✠ they shall knowe my vengeaunce, saythe the Lorde God. t. Macha.v.a

Thus sayth the Lord God: For so moche as the Philistines haue wone this: namely D

Glaye.xviii.c Jere.xl.viii.a Sophon.ii.a taken vengeaunce with despytefull stomackes, and of an olde cupll wyll set them selues to destroye. Therfore thus saythe the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the see coste to perysshe. A greate vengeaunce wyll I take vpon them, and punysshe them cruelye: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue auenged me of them.

¶ The prophecyeth that Tyrus shall be ouerthrowen, bicause it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem. The wonderynge and astonyshment of the marchantes, for the desolacyon of Tyrus.

CAPI. XXVI.

A IT happened that in the. xi. yere, the fyrste daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mã, Glaye.xxiii.a Jere.xl.viii.b Ezechi.xxvii. bicause that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my helpe full.

Yea, therfore sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl bryng a great multytude of people agaynste the, lyke as when the see aryseth with his wauues: Thei shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyll scrape the grounde frome her, and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vp the nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayethe the Lorde God. The Gentiles shal spoyle her/her woughters vpon the felde, shall perysshe with the swerde, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

B For thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl bryng hyther Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) from the North vpon Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land, shal be slee with the swerde: but agaynste the he shall make bulwerkes, and graue vp dyches aboute the, and lyfte vp his shylde agaynste the. His slynges and battell tammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The duste of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so maure / thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horse men, charettes, and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men doo in to an open citye. With the hoffes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe al thy stretes.

C He shall slee thy people with the swerde, & breake downe the pyllers of thy strengthe. They shall waste awaye thy rychesse, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses Jeremi.xliii.d of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and foundacions shall they caste in the water. Thus wyll I bryng the melodye of thy songes, & the voyces of thy mynstrelsye to an ende, so that they shall no more be herde. I will make a bare stone of the / yea a dryinge place for nettes, and shalte neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayethe the Lorde God: thus hathe the Lorde God spoken concernynge Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the cry of the slayne that shall be murthered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from their seates regall: they shall laye awaye theyr robes, and put of their costly clothing: Yea with tremblynge shall they be clothed, they shall syt vpon the grounde: they shall be afrayde at thy sodeyn fall, and be abasshed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble citye that hast ben so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that haste ben the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabitaũtes, of whom all men stode in feare: how art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitauntes of the yles / yea and the yles them selues shall stand in feare at thyne ende. D Tyrus

For thus sayethe the Lorde God: when I make the a desolate citye (as other cities be, that no man dwell in) and when I bring the depe vpon the, that greate waters maye couer the: Then wyll I caste the downe vnto them that descende in to the pytte: vnto a people that hath ben longe deed, and set the in a lande that is benethe, lyke the olde wylderneße, with them which go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyll make the to be no more in honoure in the lande of the lyuynge. I wyll make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Thoughe thou be sought for, yet shalte thou not be founde for euermore, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The Prophete is moued to bewayle the desolacyon of Tyrus. He setteth out the prayse of Tyrus for the haunteyng of marchauntes therto.

CAPI. XXVII

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, A sayinge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynt vpon Tyre, and Ezechi. xxvii. saye vpon Tyre, whiche is a porte of the see, that occupieth with moche people and many yles: Thus speaketh the Lorde God. O Tyre, thou hast sayde: What, I am a noble citye: Thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the meruaylous goodlye, all thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount of Sanir. From Libanus haue they take Cedre trees to make the maste: and the okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy bordes haue they made of yuery, and B of costly wod out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maste: and thy hangynges of yelowe lyke purple, oute of the yles of Elisah.

They

They of Sidon and Arnad were thy maryners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy ship-maisters. The eldest & wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shyppes.
All shyppes of the see with their shyppmen occupyed their marchaundyes in the. The Per ses, Lidians, and Libiās, were in thine host, & helped ꝑ to fight: these hāged vp their shelde and helmettes with the, these sette forth thy beautye. They of Arnad were with thyne host round aboute thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged vp their shildes round about thy walles, and made the meruelous goodly. Tharsis occu-pyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, and leade, and made thy mar ket greate. Iauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men & ornamentes of metall for thy occupynge.
They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horse men and mules.

They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: & manye other Iles that occupyed with the, brought the wethers, Elephant bones and Paycockes for a present. The Sitians occu-pyed with the, because of thy diuers workes, and increased thy marchaundyse, with Hyacynctes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with white lynen cloth, with sylcke & with Chrystall.

Iuda and the land of Israel occupyed with the, and brought vnto thy marketes, wheat balme, hony, oyle, and treacle, Damascus also vsed marchaundyse with the, in the best wyne and white woll: because thy occupynge was so great, and thy wares so manye.
Dan, Iauan, & Meusal haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made, with Casia &
Calamus, according vnto thyne occuppenge.
Dedan occupyed with the, in fayre tapestrye worke and quylshyns. Arabia and al the prin ces of Cedar haue occupyed with ꝑ, in shepe, wethers and geotes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupyed also with ꝑ, in al costly spyces in all precious stones and golde, whiche they brought vnto thy marketes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assi ria and Chelmad, were all doers with the, & occupyed with the: in costly rayment, of ye-lowe sylke and nedle worke (very precious, & therfore packte and bounde together with ropes) Yea and in Cedre wod, at the time of of thy marketes. The shyppes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occuppenge.

Thus thus thou arte full, and in worshyp ful in the myddest of the see. Thy maryners were euer bryngynge vnto the oute of many waters. But the east wynde shall ouerdeare the into the myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaūdyse, thy ryches, thy maryners thy shyppmasters, thy helpers, thy occuppers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: yea and all thy cōmens shall peryshe in the myddest of the see in the daye of thy fall.

The suburbes shall shake at the loude cry of thy shyppmen. All whyrry men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape oute of their bootes, and set them selues vpon the lande.
They shall syghe vp their voyce because of ꝑ, and make a lamentable cry. They shall caste dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shal shaue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorow, and bytter lamentacion, yea their children also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cyte hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is?
When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the sees, thou gauest al people ynough.
The kynges of the erth hast thou made rich, thorow the multytude of thy wares and oc-cuppenge.

But thou arte nowe cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is pe rished with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abashed at the, and all their kynges are afrayed, yea their faces haue chaunged colour. The marchauntes of the naciōs wondre at the. In that thou art so cleane brought to nought, and cōmest no more vp.

¶ The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyrus for his pryde. Daniel. The Prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth to gather togyther the chyldren of Israel.

CAP. XXVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prince of Tyre. Thus sayth the Lorde God: because thou haste a proude herte and haste sayde: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see like a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet thā-dest in thine owne conceyt, ꝑ thou art God:
Behold, thou thinkest thy selfe wyser then Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd frome
the

With thy wysdome and thy vnderstan-dynge, thou hast gotten the great welthines and gathered treasure of syluer and golde:
With thy greate wysdome and occuppenge haste thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate ryches, thy herte is proude.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast lyfte vp thine herte, as though thou were God behold, I wyl bring ennemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of ꝑ heithen: these shall drawe out their swear-des vpon thy beautye and wysdome, and shal defyle thy glory.

They shall cast the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalte dye in the myddest of the see as they that be slayne.

Let se, yf thou wilte say then (before them that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a man & not God, in the handes of them that slaye the.

Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcy-sed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it: sayth the Lorde God.

Moreouer

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell him: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome and excellent beautye. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou are dect with all maner of precyous stones: with Rubye, Topas, Christal, Jacynct, Onix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy beautye and the holes that be in the were set forthe in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a kaye Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

D I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there hast thou bene, & walked amonge the kaye glysterynge stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou haste ben ryght excellet, tyll wickednesse, was founde in the. Because Ezaye.ii.d. of thy greate marchaundyse, thy herte is full of wyckednes, and thou hast offended. Therfore wyll I cast the from the mount of God (O thou coueryng Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysterynge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy kaye beautye, and therow thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wisdome, I will caste the downe to the ground, & that in the sighte of kinges.

E Thou haste defyled thy Sanctuary, with the greate wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occupyenge. I will bringe a fyre from the middest of the, to consume the: and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all the that loke vpon the. All they that haue bene acquynted with the amonges the Heithen, shall be abashed at the: seinge thou arte so cleane brought to nought, and commest no more vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynste Sidon.

F Prophecye vpon it, and speake. Thus saith Iohel.iiii.a the Lorde God: Beholde O Sidon, I wyll zachary.ix.a. vpon the, and get me honoure in the: that it maye be knowen, howe that I am the Lorde when I punyshe her, and get me honoure in her. For I wyll sende pestylence and bloude sheddyng into her streates, so that those whi the be slayne with the swearde, shal lye rounde about in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall no more be a prickinge thorne, and an hurtynge brer vnto the house of Israel, ne vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: when I ga- G ther the housholde of Israel togyther againe from the nations among whome they be scattered: then shal I be sanctified in them, in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in ꝑ land, that I gaue to my seruaute Jacob. They shall dwell safely therin, buylde houses and plante vynyardes: yea safelye shall they dwell therin, when I haue punyshed al those that despyse them rounde about: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God.

The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He prophecieth the desolation of Egypt, and the sparplyng abrode of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will restore Egypt agayne after forty yeares. Egypte is the rewarde of kynge Nabuchodonozor for the labour whiche he toke agaynst Tyrus.

CAPI. XXIX.

In the tenth yere vpon the twelueth daye of the tenth monety, the word of the Lord A Ezay.xx.a came vnto me sayinge: O thou sonne of Jerem. man, set nowe thy face agaynste Pharao the Ezechiel. kynge of Egypte, prophecye agaynste him, & xxx.a agaynste the hole lande of Egypte: Speake and tell him, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, O Pharao thou kinge of Egypte, I wyll vpon the, thou greate dragon, that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is mine. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysshe in thy waters vpon thy skales: after that I wyll drawe the oute of thy waters: Yea and all the fysshe of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales. I will caste the oute vpon the dry land with the fysshe of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered ne taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the fowles of the ayre: that all they whiche dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am the Lord: because thou hast bene a staf of reede to the house of Israel. Whe they toke B holde of the with their hande thou brakest Ezay.xxxvi.a pyckest them on euery syde: and yf they lea- Ezech. ned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtest the xxix.a reynes of their backes. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I will bringe a swearde vpon the, and rote out of the bothe man and beaste. Yea the lande of Egypt shal be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde: Because he sayde: y water is myne, I my selfe haue made it: Beholde therfore, I wyll vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syenes, vnto the borders of the Moryans lande so that in.xl. yeres there shal no fote of man walke there, neither fote of cattell goe there, neither shall it be inhabyted. I will make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonges other waste countreyes, and her cyties to lye voyde.xl. yeres, amõg other voyde cityes: And I wil scatre the Egyptians amõg the heithen and nations.

Againe, thus sayth the Lorde God: Whe C the.xl. yeres are expired, I wyll gather the Jerem. Egyptians to gyther agayne, out of the nations, amonges whome they were scattered, & wyll bringe the prysoners of Egypt agayne into the lande of Pathures their owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kingome: yea they shal be the smalleste amonge other kyngdomes lest they exalte them selues aboue the Heithen: for I wil so mynisshe them that they shal no more rule the Heithen.

They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither prouoke them anye more more to wickednes, to cause the turne backe and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

D In the.xxvij.yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath made his hoste, with greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that euery heed maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hathe Tyre gyuen neither him ne his hoost any reward, for the greate trauayle that he hath taken there.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde I wyll gyue the lande of Egypt vnto Nabuchonosor the king of Babylon, that he may take away all her substaunce, rob her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pay his hoost their wages withal. I wil gyue him the lād of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre.

At the same tyme wyll I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forthe, and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of Egypte and of his cytyes is bewayled.

CAPI. XXX.

E The worde of the Lord came moreouer vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye and speake: thus sayethe the Lorde God: Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the Heithen, the houre is at yande, the swearde commeth vpon Egypte.

Whē pwolfded mē shal downe in Egypte, whē her people are taken away, & when her foundacions are destroyed, the Mozians lād shall be afrayed, yea the mozians lande, Lidia and Lidia, all their common people, and Chub, all that be confederate vnto theym, shall fall with them thorowe the swearde.

F Thus sayth the Lorde: the mayntayners of the lande of Egypte shall fal, the pride of her power shall come downe: euen vnto the towre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreyes they shall be made desolate, and amonge other waste cytyes they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shall their messengers goo forth fro me in shyppes, to make the careles Mozians afrayed, and sorow shall come vpō them in the daye of Egypte for doubtlesse it G shall come.

Thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte thorow the hande of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylō. H and his people with him, yea and the cruel tyrauntes of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the lande.

They shall drawe out their sweardes vpō Egypte and fyll the lande full of slayne mē I wyll drye vp their floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therin, wyll I destroye thorow the ennemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll D destroye the Idolles, and dryue the ymages zach.xiii.2 of Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse wyll I sende in to ꝑ Egiptians land. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria wyll I punysshe, and poure my wrothfull indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greate heynesse, Alexan- E dria shall be rooted out, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Helyopolis and Bubasta shall be slayne with the swerd, and caryed awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the septer of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her and her doughters shal be led awaye into captyuyte. Thus wyl I punysshe Egypt, that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the.xi.yeare, vpō ꝑ seuenth K daye of the fyrste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo it shall not be bound vp to be healed, neither shal any playster be layde vpon it. for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and breke his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyll smyte the swearde out of his hand.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scatre theym among the Heithen, and strow them in ꝑ landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babylō, & giue him my swerd in his hād: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before him piteously lyke a wounded man.

Yea I wyll stablyshe the kynge of Baby- G lons arme: and the armes of Pharao shall fal Pharao. downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde, whiche gyue the kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: & that when I scatre the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ A comparyson of the prosperetye of Pharao, with the prosperytye of the Assyryans. He prophecyeth a lyke destruction vnto them bothe.

CAPI. XXXI.

Moreouer

A Moreouer, it happened in the. xi. yeare the fyrste daye of the thirde moneth that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the kinge of Egypte, and to al his people: Whō art thou lyke in thy greate nesse: Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the moūt of Lybanus with fayre braūches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out verye hyghe. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, & the depe set him vp an hyghe. Rounde about the rotes of him ranne there floudes of water he sente oute his lytle ryuers vnto all ỹ B trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyghe then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe ỹ multytude of waters that he lent from him he optayned many longe braunches. All fowles of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gendred all there beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Fayre and beautyfull was he in his greatnesse and in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode beside greate waters no Cedre tre myghte hyde him. In the pleasaunt garde of God, there was no fyre tre lyke his braūches, the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be compared vnto him in his beauty ys fayre and goodlye had I made him with the multytude of his braunches: In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuye at him. D Therfore thus sayth the God: for so moche as he hathe lyfte vp him selfe so hyghe and stretched his top into the cloudes, and seinge his herte is proude in his hyghnesse: I wyll delyuer him in to the handes of the myghtyest amonges the heythen, whiche shall rote him out. Accordinge to his wyckednesse will I cast him awaye, the ennemyes shal destroy him, and the myghtye men of the Heythen shall so scattre him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in al valleyes, his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shal go from his shadow and forsake him. When he is fallen, all the E foules of the ayre shall syt vpon him, and all wylde beastes of the felde shall go about amonges his braunches: so that frome hēce forthe, no tree in the water shall attayne to his hyghnes, nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neither shall any tree of the water stande so hyghe, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other men.

F Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I wyll cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyl couer the depe vpon him, I will staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shal be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorow full for his sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten.

Eſaye.xiiii.c Ezech.xxxi.c I wyl make the heythen shake at the sound of his fall, when I caste him downe to hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All the trees of Eden, withal the chosen and best trees of Lybanus, yea and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne with him also in the lower habytacyons: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heithen. To whom shalte thou be lyckened, that art so glorious and great, amonge the trees of Eden? yet art thou cast downe vnder ỹ erth (amonges the trees of Eden) wher thou must lye amonges vncircumcysed, with them that be slaine with the swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lord God.

¶ The Prophete is cōmaunded to bewayle Pharao. He prophecyeth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt thrughe the kynge of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXII.

IN the. xij. yeare, the fyrste daye of the. xij. moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kynge of Egypte, and saye vnto him: Thou art counted as a lion of the heithen, and as a whalefysshe in the see. Ezech. xxxii.

Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stampest in their floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll spred my net ouer the, namely, a greate multytude of people: these shall drawe the in to my yarne, for I will caste the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the: I wyll geue all the beastes of the felde ynoughe of the. Ezech. xxxii.

Thy flesshe wyll I caste vpon the hilles, & fyll the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll B water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou arte put out, I wyll couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the Moone shal not giue her lyght. Ezech. xxxii. Ioel. ii.

All the lyghtes of heuen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bringe darckenesse vpon thy lād sayth the Lorde God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, when I bringe thy destruction amonges the Heithen & countreyes whom thou knowest not. Yea I wyll make many people with their hynges so afrayde thorowe the, that their heere shall stand vp, when I shake my swearde at their faces. So deeply shall they be astonyed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: the kyng L of Babylons swearde shall come vpon the, with the swerdes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people.

All they that be myghtye amonge the Gētyles, shal waste the proude pompe of Egypte and dryng downe al her people. All the carrel also

also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shal come no more vpon the waters: so that neither mans fote ne beastes clawe, shal steare them any more. Then wyll I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth ꝑ Lord God: when I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countreye with all that is therin, shall be layde waste: and when I smyte all them whiche dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the Lord. This is the mourninge, that ꝑ doughters of the heithen shal make: Yea a sorow and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and all her people, sayth ꝑ Lorde God.

In the.xij. yere, the.xv. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and cast the downe, yea and the myghtye people of the heithen also euen with the that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (howe fayre so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonges those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye.

The swerde is gyuen alredye, he shall be drawen forth and al his people. The myghty worthies & his helpers, that be gone downe and lye with the vncircumcised & with them that be slayne with the swerde: shall speake to him out of the myddest of hell.

Assur is there also with his company, and their graues round about, which were slayne and fel al with ꝑ swerde, whose graues lye beside him in the lowe pyt. His commons are buryed rounde about his graue: all togither wounded and slayne with the swerde, which men afore tyme brought feare into the land of the lyuynge.

There is Elam also with all his people, & their graues rounde about: which all being wounded and slayne with the swerde, are gone downe vncircumcysed vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles somtyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: for the whiche they bare their shame, with ꝑ other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is gyuen them and all their ꝑ people, amonges them that be slayne. Their graues are round about all them which be vncircumcysed, and with them that be slaine thorowe the swerde: for seinge that in times past they made the lād of the lyuyng afrayde, they muste nowe beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pyt, & lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & their people, and their graues round about. These all are amonges the vncircumcysed, and the that be slayne with the swerde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye amonges the worthyes, and vncircumcysed Gyauntes? whiche with their weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare in to the lande of the lyuyng? Yea amonges ꝑ vncircumcysed shalt thou be stroyed, and slepe with them, that perysshed thorow the swearde.

There is the lande of Edom with her kinges & princes also, which with their strength are layed by them that wer slayne with the swearde, yea amonge the vncircumcised, and them whiche are gone downe into the pit. Moreouer, there be all the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne. G Jerem.xlix.b Ezechi.xxv.b xxv.a.

With their feare & strength they are come to confusyon, and lye there vncircumcysed, amōges those that be slayne with the swerde and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pyt.

Nowe when Pharao seith this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swerde: both Pharao and all his hooste, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue gyuen my feare in the land of the lyuyng. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonges the vncircumcysed, and amonges them that be slayne with the swearde sayth the Lorde God.

The setteth out the office of a preacher. He strengtheneth them that despayre, and boldeneth them with the promyse of mercy. Is the former ryghtousnesse helpeth not the ryghtous, yf he gyue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked that amendeth. The worde of the Lorde agaynst the rest of the people. Agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the Prophet.

CAPI. XXXIII.

AGayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of mā Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the land take a man of their countrey, and sette him to be their watchman: the same man (whan he seyth the swerde come vpon the lande) shall blowe the trompette, and warne the people. A Preachers be watchmē. iiii.Reg.ix.d.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet and wyll not be warned, and the swerde come and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heed: for he herde ꝑ sound of the trompette, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he wyll receyue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne, yf the watchman se the swearde come and shewe it not with the trompet, so ꝑ the people is not warned: if the swerd come then, and take any man from amonges the: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hand.

And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: Ezechie.iii.c.

tael: that where as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouth, thou mayste warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalte surely dye: and ꝓ gyuest hym not warnynge, that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then shall the wycked dye in his own synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles yf thou warne ꝓ wicked of his way, to turne from it, wher as he yet will not be turned from it, he shal dye because of his synne, but thou haste delyuered thy soule.

C Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the houle of Israel. Yea say thus: Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but moche rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the houle of Israel. Why, wherfore wyl ye dye?

Ezech.xviii.e

Ezec.xviii.d

Thou sone of man, tell the children of thy people: The righteousnesse of the rygh-tous shall not saue him, whan so euer he turneth awaye vnfaythfully: Agayne, the wickednes of ꝓ wicked shal not hurte him, whan soeuer he conuerteth frome his vngodlynes.

And the rychteousnesse of the rygh-tous shall not saue his lyfe, whansoeuer he sinneth.

If I saye vnto the rychtous, that he shall surelye lyue, and so he trust to his owne righteousnesse, and do synne: then shal his righteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in the wyckednesse that he hathe done he shall dye.

D Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wicked: thou shalte surely dye: and so he turne frome his synnes, and do the thinge that is lawfull & ryght: In so moch that the same wicked man gyueth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robberye, walketh in ꝓ commaundementes of lyfe, & doth no wrong: Then shal he surly lyue, and not dye. Yea the synnes ꝓ ye hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon.

Ezaye.lv.b
Iere.xviii.a

For in so moche as he doth now the thing that is lawfull and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people say: Tush, the way of the Lord is not ryght, where as their owne waye is rather vnryght.

When the righteous turneth from his righteousnesse, and doth the thyng that is wicked, he shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that is lawfull and ryght, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of the Lorde is not equall. O ye houle of Israel, I wyll iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

Ezech.xviii.f
Roma.ii.a

E In the twelueth yere the .v. day of ꝓ .x. moneth of our captyuite, it happened, that one whyche was fled out of Jerusalē, came vnto me, and sayde: the cytye is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euening afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntyll the morowe that he came to me: yea he opened my mouth, so that I was no more domme.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne of man, they that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession nowe are we many, & the lande is geuen vs to possesse also.

And therfore tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idols, and haue shed bloud: shal ye then haue rye land in possession.

Ye leane vpon youre swordes, ye worke abhominacyōs, euery one defyleth his neighbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Say thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truely as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wildernes, shal be slayne with the swerde: what so euer is vpon the felde, wyll I gyue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and dennes, shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyl make the lande so desolate and waste, and the pomp of her strēgth shal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste that no man shall trauayle therby.

Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of al their abhomynacions, that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of man, the children of thy people that talke of the, by the walles & in the doores of their houses, sayinge one to an other: Come lette vs heare, what worde is gone forthe frome the Lorde: They come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: ye my people sit downe before the, and heare thy wordes but they wil not therafter: for i their mouthes they shewe them selues, as though they were feruent, but their herte goeth after their owne couetous lucre.

And as a ballet ꝓ hath a swete tune, & is pleasaunt to synge, so shalte thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they will not do therafter. When this commeth to passe (for lo, it commeth in dede) then shall they knowe, that there hathe bene a Prophete amonge them.

¶ Agaynst Bysshoppes and Curates that destroye the flocke of Christe, and seke their owne. The Lorde sayethe that he wyll vysette his dyspersed flocke, and gather them togyther. He repenteth the malyce of certayne of the flocke. He promyseth the true shepherde Christe, and with hym peace.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

A Nd the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste the shepeherdes of Israel, prophecye and speke vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Woe be vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that fede the selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

A Shepherdes

Ezechiel. Jeremie. xxiii.

Ye

Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourysshed. The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sycke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde togyther, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not sought, but churlysshly, and cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scattered here and there without a shepeherde: yea all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they goo astraye.

My shepe goo wanderynge vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hye hyll. Yea they be scattred abrode in all feldes, and there is no man that careth for them, or seketh after the. Therfore, O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord God. As truly as I lyue, for as moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the felde haynge no shepeherde: and seinge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe. Therfore heare the worde of the Lord, o ye shepherdes: Thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I my selfe wil vpon the shepherdes, and require my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from fedyng of my shepe: yea the shepherdes shal fede them selues no more: For I will delyuer my shepe oute of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuour them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God: Behold, I wyl loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepeherde amonges the flocke, seketh after þ shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther oute of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke daye. I wil bring them out from all people, and gather them togyther oute of all landes. I wyll bynge them in to their owne lande, and fede theym vpon the mountaynes of Israell by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyll fede the in eyght good pastures, & vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall there foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fatte pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, and bynge them to their rest, sayth the Lord God. Such as be lost, wil I seke / suche as go astraye, wil I bring agayne / suche as be wounded, wil I bynde vp / suche as be weake, wyll I make strong / suche as be fat and wel lykinge, those wil I preserue, and fede them with the thyng that is laufull. And as for you, O my shepe, sayth the Lorde God: I wil put a differrence amonge the shepe, amonges the wethers and the gotes. Was it not inough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynk clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also w your fete?

Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thynge, that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drynke it, that ye with your fete haue defyled. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God vnto theym: Beholde, I wyll iuuer the fatte shepe from the leane / for so moche as ye haue thot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and run vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scattered them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall be no more spoyled: yea I wyll discerne one shepe from an other. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one onely shepeherde: euen my seruaunt Dauid, he shal fede them, & he shal be their shepherde. I the Lorde wyll be their God, and my seruaunte Dauid shall be their prynce: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it. Job.1.b. Esaye.5.b.& 11.b Deut.18.g

Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunte of peace with them, and dryue all cuyll beastes oute of the lande, so they that maye dwelle safelye in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperitie wyll I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hylle. A prosperous showre and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bringe forthe their frutes, and the grounde her increase. They shall be safe in their landes, and shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue broken their yoke, and delyuered them oute of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande/but safely shal they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellente plante for theym, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the landes, neyther beare the reproche of the heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande that I the Lorde their God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israell) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, sayth the Lorde God. G Johñ.x.b Psal.xc.a.b.c

¶ The destruction that shal come on the hyll Seir, that is on þ Idumeꝛs, bicause they troubled the people of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde þ mount Seir, prophecy vpon it, & saye vnto it: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, O thou mounte Seir, I wyl vpon the, I wil reache out myne hande ouer the / yea waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cityes wil I breake downe, and thou shalte lye voyde / that thou mayste know how that I am the Lord. For so moche as thou beareste an olde enimitye agaynst the the chyldren of Israell / and with a cruell hande haste made them afrayde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne. Therfore as truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, I wyll prepare the vnto blonde / yea blonde shal folowe vpon the. A B seinge thou layest wayte for blonde, therfore shall blond persecute the. Thus will I make the mount Seir desolate and waste, and bring to passe that there shal no man go thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes will I fil with his slayne men: thy hylles, dales, and valeys shall lye full of them that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetuall wylderneße, so that no man shal dwell in thy cytyes: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

L And bycause thou hast sayd: what, bothe these nations, and bothe these landes muste be myne, and I wyll haue them in possession, where as the Lorde was there. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: As truly as I liue I wyll handle the accordynge to thy wrathe and gelousye, lyke as thou hast dealte cruelly with them: that I maye be knowen among them, howe I haue punysshed the. Yea, and that thou mast be sure that I the Lorde haue herde all thy despytfull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynste the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and

D gyuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made youre boaste agaynste me, yea, and multiplyed youre proude wordes agaynste me, whiche I haue herde all togyther. Wherunto thus sayth the Lorde God:

Ezechi.xxxv.c. When the hole worlde is in wealthe, then wyll I make the waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, bycause the heritage of the house of Israell was destroyed: euen so wyll I wo vnto the also, that thou and hole Edom shal be destroyed, and know that I am the Lorde.

The promyseth delyueraunce from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benefytes done vnto the Jewes are to be ascrybed to the mercye of God, not vnto their deserupnges. God renueth our hertes that we maye walcke in his commaundementes.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A Thou sonne of man, prophecie vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speke. Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God:

Ezech.vi.c Bycause your enuemye hath sayd vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: Prophecye therfore and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God: Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possessyon vnto the residue of the Gentiles, whiche haue brought you in to mennes mouthes, and vnto an cupll name amonges the people. Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wylderneßes, and desolate cytyes, whiche are spoyled, and hadde in derysyon on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayth the Lorde God:

B In the fyre of my gelousye haue I taken a deuyce, agaynste the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynst all Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession, whiche also reioyced from their hert, with a despytefull stomacke to waste it and to spoyle it.

Prophecye therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleys and dales, thus sayth the Lord God. Beholde, this haue I denised in my gelousye and terrible wrathe: For so moche as ye haue suffred reproke of the heathen: therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I haue swore that the Gentyles whiche lye about you, shall beare youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israell) ye shall shoute oute youre braunches, and bringe forthe youre frute to my people of Israell/ for it is harde by that wyll come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

I wyl sende you moche people, which shal C be all of the house of Israel: the cityes shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne. I wyll prouyde you with moche people & catel, which shal encrease and bringe frute. I will restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kyndenesse then euer ye hadde before/ whereby ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. Yea, people wil I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) whiche shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt no more be without them. Agayn, thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as they saye vn to you: thou art an eater vp of men, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no men, neyther destroye thy people any more, sayth the Lord God. And I wil not suffre the for to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentyles from henceforth. Thou shalte not beare the reproke of the nations, nor cast oute thyne owne people any more, sayth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vn to me, saying: O thou son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their own ground they defyled theym selues with their owne wayes and ymagynacions/ so þ in my syght their waye was lyke the vnclennesse of a menstruous womā. Wherfore I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, bycause of the blonde that they had shed in the lande, and bicause of their ydols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also among the Hethen, so that they were strowed about in the landes. Accordynge to their wayes, and after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punysshe them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the hea- E then, and come in amonges them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayd of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne land? Then spared I my holy name which the house of Israel had dishonoured amonges the Gentyles, to whome they came. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wo not this for your sakes (O house of Israell) but for my my holye names sake, whiche ye dishonoured amonge the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll halowe my greate name agayne, whiche amonge the Gentiles is euyl spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonored it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayth the Lorde God.

As for you, I wyll take you from amonges the Heathen, and gather you together oute of all countreyes, and bynge you agayne in to youre owne lande. Then wyll I poure clere water vpon you, and ye shall be clene: yea from all your vnclennesse, and from all your Idols shall I clense you. A newe herte also wyll I gyue you, and a newe spirite will I put in to you: As for that stonye herte, I wyll take it oute of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleshly herte. I wyll gyue my spirite amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commaundements, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And ye shall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your fore fathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyll be youre God. I wil helpe you out of all youre vnclennelle. I wyll call for the corne, and wyl encrease it, and wyl let you haue no hongre. I wil multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the encrease of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reproffe of honger amonge the Heathen. Then shall ye remembre youre owne wicked waies, and your imaginacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues, by reason of your synnes and abhominacions.

But I wyll not doo this for youre sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: what tyme as I shall clense you from all youre offences, then wyll I make the cityes to be occupyed agayne, and wyl repayre the places þ be decayed. The desolate land shall be buylded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the syght of all them that wente by.

Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a gardeyn of pleasure, and the bodye, desolate and broken downe cities are nowe stronge and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde whiche repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl yet ones be founde agayne of the house of Israell, and doo this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke, and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hygh solemne feastes: so that also the wylde wasted cityes be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

¶ He prophecyth the bryngynge agayne of the people be ynge in captyuyte. He sheweth the vnyon of the ten trybes with the two. Christ is the kynge of the Christen people alone, and the onely euerlastynge shepherde therof.

CAPI. XXXVII.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me oute in the spirite of the Lorde, & let me downe in a playne feld, that laye ful of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde were verye manye, and marueylous dre also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them: Ye dry bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde I wyl put breth in to you, that ye may liue: I wil gyue you sinowes, and make flesh grow vpon you and couer you ouer with skin, and so gyue you breth that ye maye lyue and knowe that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecied as he badde commaunded me. And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyse and a greate motion, so that the bones came euery one to an other. Now when I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and flesh grewe vpon them, and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them: Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecye, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayth the Lorde God: a come (O thou ayre) from the four wyndes, and blow vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had cõmaunded me, then came the breth in to them, and they receyued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a marueylous great sorte.

Moreouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the hole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you oute of your sepulcres, and bryngе you in to the lande of Israell agayne. So shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, whē I open youre graues, and bryngе you oute of them. My spirite also wyll I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyll sette you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche haue sayd, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke and wrytе vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israell his companions. Then take an other sticke, and wrytе vpon it: Vnto Joseph þ stok of Ephraim, and to al the housholde of Israel his companions. And thē take bothe these sett ogyther in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Now yf the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wylte thou not shew vs what thou meanest by these? the gyue them this answere: thus sayth ỹ Lorde God: beholde I will take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the lande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, and make the one stocke, and they shall be one in my hand. And the two stycks whervpon thou writest shalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them:

Dicer. i. b

Thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israel from among the heathē, vnto whom they be gone and wil gather them togyther on euery syde, and bryng them agayn in to their owne land. yea I wyll make one people of the in ỹ land, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples frome henceforthe, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defile them selues no more with their abhominacions, ydols, and all their wicked doinges. I wil helpe them out of al their dwellyng places wherin they haue synned, & wyll so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

F

Dauid my seruaunt shall be their kynge, and they all shall haue one shepeherde onely. They shall walke in my lawes and my commaundementes shal they bothe kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yea euē in the same lande shall they, their children, and their children children dwell for euer more: and my seruaunte Dauid shall be their euerlastynge prynce.

G

Ezē. xxxiiii. d
Iosh. i. b.

Moreouer, I wyll make a bonde of peax with them, which shal be vnto them an euerlasting couenaunt. I wil settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye will I set among them for euermore. My dwellyng shal be with them: yea I wil be their God, and they shal be my people. Thus the heathē also shall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel: when my sanctuary shal be amonges them for euer more.

The prophecyeth that Gog and Magog shal come with an appoynted host in to the lande of promyse. Their iudgment. He rehersleth that the commynge of Gog was before prophecyed of the Prophetes. The destruction of hym.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog, whiche is the chiefe prynce at Meseth and Tubal: prophecye agaynste hym, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O Gog thou chiefe prynce Meseth and Tubal: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll tourne the about, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I wyll brynge the forth and all thyne hoste, bothe horse and horse men, whiche be all weaponed of the best sorte, a great people, that handle all togyther speres, shyldes, and swerdes: the Perses, Moraus, and with them the Lybians, whiche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma oute of the Northe quarters, and all his hostes, yea and moche people with the.

Ezech. xxxix. c
Apoca. xx. c

Therfore prepare the, set thy selfe in a raye with all thy people that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalte be vysited, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come in to the lande, that hathe bene destroyed with the swerde, and now is replenyshed agayn with dyuers people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whiche haue longe lyen waste. Yea, they be broughte oute of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalte come vp lyke a stormye wether, to couer the lande, and as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thyne hoostes, and a greate multytude of people with the.

B

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall many thinges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalte ymagen mischiefe and say: I wil vp to yonder playne land seing they syt at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neyther barres nor woxes) to spoyle them, to robbe them, to laye handes vpon their so wel inhabited wylderneße: agaynst that people, that is gathered togyther frome amonge the heathen, whiche haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Saba and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all their worthies saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people togyther, because thou wylte spoyle? to take syluer and golde, to cary awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalte prophecye, and saye thus vnto Gog: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In that daye thou shalte knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalte come frō thy place out of the North partes: thou & moche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes. I wyl bryng the vp in to my land, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honoure vpon the, O Gog, before their eyes.

E

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou arte he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the Prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecyed in those dayes and yeres, that I shoulde bryng the vpon theym. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the lande of Israel (sayth the Lorde God) shall my indignacion goo forthe in to my wrathe. For in my gelousye and hoote displeasure I haue haue deuyded, that there shall be a great trouble in the lande of Israell at that tyme. The verye fyshes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hylles also shall be tourned vp syde downe, the stayres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synche to the grounde. I wyll call for a swerde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayth the Lorde God: so that euery mans swerde shal be vpon an other. With pestilence and bloode wyll I punysshe hym: stompe rayne and hayle stones, fyre & brymstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon him, and al his heape: yea and vpon all that great people that is with him. Thus wyl I be magnified, honoured, and knowen amonges the heathen: that they maye be sure how that I am the Lorde.

The theweth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. He prophecyeth that Gog and his company shal be deuoured of byrdes and beastes. wherfore the house of Israel is wasted. Theyr bryngynge agayne from captyuyte is promysed.

CAPI. XXXIX.

1 Therfore, O thou sonne of man, prophecye agaynste Gog, and speake. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, o Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: I wyll vpon the, and tourne the aboute, and carye the forthe, and lede the from the North partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe I will smyte it out of thy lefte hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thyne heape and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I gyue the vnto the foules and wyld beestes of the feld, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

6 Into Magog, and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the yles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonges my people of Israel: & I will not let my holy name to be euyll spoken of any more: but the very heathen also, shal knowe ỹ I am the Lorde, the holye one of Israell. Beholde it commeth and shall be fulfylled in dede, sayth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in the cityes of Israel, shall goo forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes, hylles and clubbes: seuen yeres shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall elles bryng no stycke from the felde, neither haue nede to hewe downe any oute of the wodde: For they shal haue wepons ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed theym, and spoyle those that spoyled them, saith the Lorde God.

At the same tyme wyll I gyue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israell: euen the valey, wherthorow men go from the East to the see ward. Those that trauaile therby shal abhorre it: There shall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it shal be called the valey of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they maye clense the lande. Yea all the people of the land shall bury them. O it shal be a glorious daye, when I get me that honoure, sayth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be deed buryers, euer goynge thorowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in, whiche remayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be clensed. From ende to ende shall they seke, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mannes bone, they shal set vp a token by it, til the deed burpers haue buryed it also, in the valey of ỹ people of Gog. And the name of the city shal be called ỹ Hamonah: Thus shall they make the land clene.

ỹ That is, multytude.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayth the Lorde God: Speake vnto al the foules, and euery byrde, yea and to all the wylde beastes, of the felde, Heape you together and come, gather you roũd about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate flesshe, and drynke bloode. Ye shall eate the flesshe of the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the princes of the land: of the wethers, of the lãbes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your bely full, and dryncke bloode tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horses an stronge horse men: with captaynes and all men of warre sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll bringe my glorye also amonges the Gentyles, that all the Heathen maye se my iudgement that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel maye knowe how that I am the Lorde their God, from that day forth. And the Heathen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led in to captiuitie: it was for their wickednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hydde my face frome theym, and delyuered them in to the handes of theyr ennemyes, that they myghte all be slayne with the swearde. Accordynge to theyr vnclennesse, and vnfaythfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hydde my face from them. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now wyll I bryng agayne the captyues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the hole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holye names sake. All theyr confusion and offence, that they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye, and so safely shall they dwel in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought the agayne from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr ennemyes handes, and am prayſed in them before many Heathen: then ſhall they knowe that I am the Lorde their God, which ſuffred them to be ledde in to captiuitie amonge the Heathen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne land, and not lett one of them yonder.

After that will I hide my face no more from them, but will poure out my ſpirite vpon the Ezec. xxxbi.d houſe of Iſrael, ſayth the Lorde God.

¶ The reſtoryng of the cytye and of the temple that was to come is ſhewed vnto the Prophete.

CAPI. XL.

A IN the .xxb. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the .xiiij. yere after that ꝑ citty was ſmytten downe: the ſame day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth, euen in to the lande of Iſrael brought he me in the viſions of God: & ſet me downe vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, whereupon there was a buyldyng (as it had ben of a city) towarde the north.

Thyther he caryed me: and beholde, there was a man, whoſe ſimilitude was like braſſe whiche had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterod alſo. He ſtode in the wore and ſayde vnto me: marke well with thyne eyes, harken to with thine eares, and faſten it in thine hert what ſo euer I ſhal ſhewe the, for to the entent that they myght be ſhewed the, therefore arte thou brought hyther, and what ſo euer thou ſeeſt, thou ſhalt certifie the houſe of Iſrael therof.

B Beholde, there was a wall on the outſyde rounde aboute the houſe: the meterod that he had in his hand was ſixe cubites long and a ſpanne. So he meaſured the bredth of the buyldyng, which was a meterod, & the heigth alſo a meterod. Then came he vnto the Eaſt dore, and wente vp the ſteyres, and meaſured the poſtes of the dore, whereof euery one was a meterod thicke. Euery chambre was a meterod longe and brode, betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The poſt of the dore within the porche, was one meterod. He meaſured alſo the porche of the innermer wore, whiche contayned a meterod. Then meaſured he the entrye of the dore that contayned eight cubites, and his pillers two cubites: and this entrye ſtode inwarde.

C The chambres of the dore Eaſtward, were thre on euery ſyde, alyke brode and long. The pyllers alſo that ſtode of both the ſides, were of one meaſure. After this, he meaſured the wideneſſe of the dore, which was ten cubites, and the heygth of the dore thyrtene cubytes. The edge before the chambres was one cubit brode vpon both the ſides, and the chambres ſixe cubites wide of either ſide. He meaſured ꝑ dore from the rygge of one chambre to another, whoſe wyderneſſe was .xxb. cubites, and one dore ſtode agaynſt an other. He made pillers alſo thre ſcore cubites hye, rounde about the courte dore. Before the inwarde part vnto the fore entrye of the innermer dore, were fyftye cubites. The chambres and their pillers within, rounde aboute vnto the wore, hadde ſyde wyndowes: So hadde the fore entryes alſo, whoſe wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpō the pillers there ſtode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chambres and paued worke, D made in the fore court rounde aboute thyrtye chambres vpon one paued worke. Nowe the paued worke was alonge beſyde the dores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he meaſured the bredth from the lower dore vnto the innermer court of the out ſide which had an hundred cubites vpon the Eaſt and the Northe parte. And the dore in the vttermoſt courte towarde the Northe, meaſured he after the length and bredth, his thre chambres alſo on either ſyde, with his pillers and fore entryes, whiche had euen the meaſure of the fyrſt dore. His heygth was fifty cubites, the bredth .xxb. cubites: his wyndowes and porches with his date trees, had euen lyke meaſure as the dore towarde the Eaſt, there were ſeuen ſteppes to go vp vpon and their porche before them. Now the wore of the innermer courte ſtode ſtreyght ouer againſt the wore that was towarde the North Eaſt. From one wre to an other he meaſured an hundred cubites.

After that, he brought me to the Southe ſyde, where there ſtode a dore towarde the South: whoſe pillers and porches he meaſured, thele had the firſt meaſure, and with their porches, they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the firſt windowes. The heygth was. l. cubites, the bredth .xxb. with ſteppes to go vp vpon: his porche ſtode before him, with his pyllers and date trees on either ſyde. And the wore of the innermer court ſtode towarde the South, and he meaſured from one wore to an other an hundred cubites.

So he brought me in to the innermer court thorow the wore of the South ſyde, which he meaſured, and it had the meaſure afore ſayd. In lyke maner his chambres, pyllers, & fore entryes, had euen the fore ſayd meaſure alſo. And he had with his porches rounde aboute wyndowes of fyftye cubites heygth, and fiue and twentye cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were .xxb. cubites longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: vpon his pyllers there were date trees, and eyght ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

He brought me alſo in to the inmoſte E courte vpon the Eaſt ſyde, and meaſured the wore, accordynge to the meaſure afore ſayd. His chambres, pyllers, and porches had euen the ſame meaſure as the firſt had: and with his porches he had wyndowes round about. The heygthe was fiftye cubites, the bredthe .xxb. cubites: His porches reached vnto the vttermoſt courte: his pyllers alſo hadde date trees on eyther ſyde, and eyght ſteppes to goo vp vpon.

And

And he brought me to the north dore, and measured it, whiche also had the fore sayde measure. His chambres, pyllers and porches had windowes rounde about: whose heigth was. l. cubites, & the bredth. xxv. His pillers stode towarde the vttermost courte, and vpō them both were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intraunce was at the dore pyllers and there the burntofferynges were washed.

In the dore porche, there stode on either side two tables for the slaughtynge: to slaye the burntofferynges, synneofferynges and trespaceofferynges therupon. And on the outside as men go forth to the north dore, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on either side of the dore, that is eyght tables, wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges, of a cubyte and a halfe longe & brode, and one cubyte hyghe: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornamentes, whiche were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges, when they were slaughted. And within ther were hokes foure fyngers brode fastened rounde aboute, to hang flesh vpon and vpon the tables was layde the offrynge flesshe. On the outside of the innermer dore were the syngers chambres in the inwarde courte beside the Northe doore ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, beside the east dore northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on the South side belongeth to the preestes that kepe the habytacion: and this towarde the North, is the Preestes that wayte vpon the aulter: whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, ꝑ do seruyce before the Lorde in steade of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore courte, whiche had in length an. C. cubytes, and as moche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the aulter stode before the house: And he brought me to the fore entry of the house and measured the walles by the entry dore: which were fyue cubytes long on either side. The thicknesse also of the dore on either side was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes, the bredth. xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pyllers, on either syde one.

¶ The dispocyon and deuyce of buyldyng agayn the temple, and of the other thynges therto belongynge.

CAPI. XLI.

After this he brought me to the temple and measured the postes: which were of both the sydes. vi. cubites thicke, accordynge to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was. x. cubytes & the walles of the dore on ether syde fyue cubites. He measured the length therof, whiche conteyned forty cubytes, and the bredth. xx. The went he in, & measured the dore postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the dore it selfe was syxe cubites, and the bredth of the dore was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bredth therof, which were euery one xx. cubites before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of ꝑ house, whiche was syx cubytes. The chambres that stode rounde about the house, were euery one four cubytes wyde, and one stode harde vpon another, wherof there were thyrtie and thre. And there stode postes beneth vp the walles rounde about ꝑ house, to beare the vp: but in the wal of the house, they were not fastened. The syde chambres were the hygher ꝑ wyder, and had steppes thorowe them rounde about the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest men myght go to the hyghest and myd chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hyghe rounde aboute. The foundacion of the side chambres was a meterod (that is. vi. cubytes) brode. The thicknesse of the syde wall without, conteyned. v. cubytes, and so hyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betweene the chambres, was the wydenes xx. cubytes rounde about the house. The chambre dores stode ouer agaynste the outwall, ꝑ one dore was towarde the northe, the other toward the South: and the thicknesse of the outwall was fyue cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was seperated towarde the west, was thyrtie scoze and ten cubites wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was. v. cubites thicke rounde about, and the length foure scoze cubites and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an. C. cubytes longe, and seperated buyldynge with the wal were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the lengthe of the buyldynge before and behinde with the chambres vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an. C cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynste the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes.

The windowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboue the dore, vnto the inmost house, and without also: yea the hole wall on euery syde bothe within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes.

There were Cherubyns and date trees made also, so ꝑ one date tre stode euer betwixt two Cherubyns: One Cherub hadde two faces, the face of a man loking aside towarde the date tree, and a lyons face on the other syde.

Thus was it made rounde about in al the house: Yea the Cherubins and date trees were made from the grouñd vp aboue the dore and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The by postes of the temple were foure squared, & the fashyon of the Sanctury was euen as it appeared vnto me afore in ꝑ vision. The table was of wod. iij. cubytes highe and. ij. cubytes longe: his corners, the length

and

and the walles were of wod.

And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had either of them two dores & euery dore had two lytle wicketes whiche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins & date trees, like as vpon the wales: & a greate thicke balke of wod was before on the oute syde of the porche. Upon both ꝑ sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hauyng beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the preastes, and the holy thynges.

CAPI. XLII.

Then caryed he me oute in to the fore courte towarde the north and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer agaynste the backe buylding northward, whiche had the length of an. C. cubytes whose dore turned towarde the north. The widenesse contayned. l. cubites: ouer againste the xx. cubites of the inner most court, and against the paued worke that was in the fore court. Besyde all these thre, there stode pyllers, one ouer agaynst an other: And before this chambre, there was a walkynge place of. x cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyghest chambres were alwaynge lower then the lowest and myddemost of the buylding: for they bare chambre vpon chãbre & stode thre togyther one vpon an other not hauynge pyllers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those beneth & in the myddest, to reken frome the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chambres towarde the vttermost court vpon the forepart of the chambres, was l. cubytes lõg for the length of the vttermost chãbres in the fore courte was. l. cubytes also: but the legth therof before the temple was an. C. cubites. These chambres had vnder thẽ an intraunce of the east syde, whereby a man myght go in to them oute of the fore courte, thorow e the thicke wall of the fore courte toward ꝑ east, eyght ouer againste the seperated buylding. Before ꝑ same buylding vpõ this syde there were chambres also whiche had away vnto them, lyke as ꝑ chambres on the north syde. of the same length & wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashyon and dores were also of the same maner. Yea euen lyke as the other chambre dores were, so were those also of the southside. And before the way toward the syngers steppes on ꝑ east syde, there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the northe and the south which stand before the backe buylding those be holye habytacions, wherin the preastes that do scrupe before the Lorde, muste eate the moste holy offrynges: and there must they laye the most holy offrynges: meatofferynges, synne offrynges & trespace offrynges for it is an holy place. Whe the preastes come therin, they shall not go oute in to the fore court: but (seinge they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracion, and put on other garmẽtes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the inner most house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east side with ꝑ meterod, whiche rounde aboute conteyned fyue C. metterodes. And the north syde measured he, whiche conteyned rounde about euen so moche. The other two sides also toward the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned eyther of them. v. C. metterodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there went a wall rounde about. v. C. metterodes longe, and as brode also which separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ He seyth the glory of God goynge in to the temple, from whence it had before departed. He menyoneth the Idolatrye of the children of Israel, for whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

CAPI. XLIII.

So he brought me to the dore, that lieth towarde the east. Beholde, then came ꝑ glory of ꝑ God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to loke vpon was lyke the syght, that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cytye shulde haue bene destroyed: and lyke the vysyon that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lorde came in to the house thorow the east dore. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me in to the inner most court: and beholde, the house was ful of the glory of the Lorde.

I herde one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this towne is my seate, and the place of my fotestepes: where as I wyll dwell amonge the children of Israel for euer more: so that the house of Israel shal no more defyle my holy name: neither they, ne their kinges, thorow their horedome thorowe their highe places, and thorow the dead bodyes of their kinges: which haue builded their thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholdes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare walle betwyxt me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominacions, that they haue committed. Wherfore I haue destroyed the in my wrath: But now they shall put away their horedome and the dead bodyes of their kynges out of my syght, that I maye dwell among them for euermore. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the housholde of Israel

Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the cõpynge in, the goynge out, all the maner and descripcion therof, yea all the vses and ordynaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl al the fashions and customes therof.

This is the descrypcyon of the house: Adoure vpon the mount rounde aboute all the corners, it shall be the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descrypcion and fashyon of the house: This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: whiche is a spanne longer then an other cubyte) his botome in the myddest was a cubite longe and wyde, & the ledge that went rounde about it, was a span brode. This is the heigth of the aulter: From the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites, and the bredth but one cubyte.

The aulter was foure cubytes hyghe, and from the aulter vpwarde stode foure hornes, and it was .xij. cubytes longe and .xij. cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the coueryng of the aultare was .xiiij. cubytes lõg and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that went rounde about, had halfe a cubite: and the botome therof rounde about one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God: These are the ordynaunces & lawes of the aulter, in the daye when it is made to offre burntoffrynges, and to sprincle blonde therupon. To the preistes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch and treade before me to do me seruice, sayth the Lorde God: Vnto these gyue thou a yonge bullocke, for a synne offrynge: and take the bloud of him and sprynckle his foure hornes withal and the foure corners of the aultre coueryng, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute: here with shalte thou clense it, and reconsile it. Thou shalte take ꝑ bullocke also of ꝑ slnoffrynge, & burne him in a seuerall place without the Sanctuarye.

The nexte daye, take a gotebuck without blemysh for a synneoffrynge, to reconsyle the aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled w the bullock. Nowe when thou haste made it cleane then offre a younge bullocke without blemysshe, and a ramme out of the flock without blemysh also: Offre them before ꝑ Lord and let the preist cast salt therupon, and gyue them so vnto the Lorde for a burntoffreyng. Seuen dayes shalt thou bringe, euery day a gotebucke. A yonge bullocke and a rãme of the flocke (both without blemysshe) shal they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aulter, and offre vpon it. Whe these dayes are expired, then vpon the. viij. daye and so forth, the priestes shall offre their burntoffrynges and healthy offrynges vpon the aulter: so wyll I be mercyfull vnto you sayth the Lorde God.

The sheweth what doze of the temple is shutte: He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcysed in herte and in the flesshe. who are to be admytted to the seruyce of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes he wolde haue admytted in to the holy place, and also theyr offyce.

CAPI. XLIIII.

AFter this, he brought me agayne to ꝑ outwarde doze of the Sanctuarye on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This doze shal be styll shut, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea he shall go thorowe it, els shal it be shutte styll. The prynce dym selfe shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & there shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the doze, vpon the North side of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, ꝑ glory of the Lord fylled the house, and I fel downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vn to me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne herte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all that I wyll saye vnto the, concerning all the ordynaunces of the Lorde, and all his lawes: pondre well with thyne hert the cõmynge in of the house and the goynge forthe of the Sanctuarye: and tell that obstynate housholde of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynoughe withall youre abhominacions, seinge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncircumcysed hertes and flesshe, where thorowe my Sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bred, fat, and blonde.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Of all the straungers that dwell amonges the chyldren of Israel, no straunger (whose herte & flesh is not circumcysed) shall come within my Sanctuarye: No, not the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue dyscrpued the people of Israel with all erroures, goyng after their idols: but they shal beare their owne wickednesse. Shulde they be set & ordeyned to mynyster vnder ꝑ dores of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntoffrynges and sacrifyces for the people: to stand before them, & to serue them: seing the seruyse that they do them, is before their Idols, & cause ꝑ house of Israel to stomble thorowe the wickednesse? For the which cause I haue plucke out myne hande ouer them (sayth the Lorde) so that nowe they muste beare their owne iniquytie, and not to come nygbe me, to serue me with their prestbode, in my Sanctuarye, & moste holyest of all: that they maye beare

their

their owne shame and abhominacions, whi che they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce þ is done therin? But the prestes the Leuytes the sonnes of Sadoch, that kept the holy ordynaunces of my sanctuarye, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, saith the Lorde God.

Prestes. Ezech.xliii.d xlviii.b.

E They shall go in to my Sanctuarye, and treade before my table, to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaces. Now whē they go in at the dores of the innermer court they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no woollen come vpon them: whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of the innermer court, and within. They shall haue fayre lynnen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynnen breches vpon their loynes, whiche in their labour they shall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people in to the outwarde court, they shal put of the clothes wherin they haue mynystred, and laye them in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparel, lest they vnhalow þ people with their clothes.

They shall not shaue their heades, ne norysshe the bussche of their heere, but rounde their heades only. All the prestes that go in to the inmost courte, shall drinke no wyne. They shal mary no widow, neither one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wydow, that hath had a prest before.

F They shall shewe my people the differēce betwene the holy, and vnholy, betwixte the clene and vnclene. If any discorde aryse, they shall discern it, and gyue sentence after my iudgementes. Also my solemne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shal they kepe, and halowe my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dead personne, to defyle them selues (except it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster, that hathe had yet no husbande) in suche they maye be defyled.

Leuit.xix.f xxi.a. Leuit.x.c.xxi.b Deut.i.a.iii.a

G And when he is clensed, there shall be reckened vnto him. vij. dayes: and yf he go into the Sanctuarye agayne to do seruyce, he shal bringe a synneoffrynge sayth the Lorde God. They shall haue an heritage, yea I my selfe wyll be their heritage: els shall ye gyue thē no possession in Israel, for I am their possession. The meatoffrynge, synneoffrynge, and trespaceoffrynge shall they eate, and euery dedycate thinge in Israel, shall be theirs. The fyrstlynges of all the fyrste frutes, and all fre will offrynges shall be the prestes.

Deut.xviii.a Num.c.xviii.c Iosue.xiii.b.

Ye shall gyue vnto the preste also the firstlynges of your dowe, that God maye prosspere the residue. But no dead carcon shall preaste eate, ne suche as is deuoured of wilde beestes, fowles or catell.

Exod.xxii.b Leuit.xxii.a.

¶ Out of al the landes of promyse are there seperate foure possyons, of whiche the fyrste is gyuen to the prestes and to the temple, the seconde to the Leuites the thyrde to the cytye, the fourth to the Dyuyne. Exhortation to the heades of Israel. Of iuste weyghtes and measures. Of fyrste frutes &c.

CAPI. XLV.

WHen ye deuyde the land by the lot, ye shall put a lyde one parte for the Lord, to be holye from other landes: namely. xxv. M. meteroddes longe, and. x. M. brode. This shall be holy, as wyde as it rounde about. Of this parte there shall belong vnto the Sanctuarye. v. C. meteroddes in all the foure corners, e. l. cubytes wyde round about to þ suburbes. And from this measure, namely of. xxv. M. meterodes long, and. x. M. brode thou halte measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holyest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, e go in before the Lord to serue hym, that they way haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary: it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shal be gyuen. xx habitacions, of the. xxv. M. length: and. x. M. breeth, ye shall gyue also vnto the cytye a possessyō of. v. M. meteroddes brode, and. xxv. thousonde longe beside the parte of the Sanctuary: that shal be for the hole house of Israel. Vpon bothe sydes of the Sanctuaryes parte, and by the cytye, there shall be gyuen vnto the prince, whatsoeuer lyeth ouer agaynste the cyte, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: whiche shall be as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shall be his owne lande in Israel, þ my princes be no more chargeable, vnto my people. And suche as remayneth yet ouer in þ lande, shall be gyuen to the house of Israel accordynge to their trybes. Thus sayth the Lorde God? O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed e destroyed ynough: now leaue of, & do nowe accordynge to the thinge, that is equal and lawfull: and thruste out my people no more, sayth the Lorde God. Ye shall haue a true weight, a true Ephah, & a true Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shall be alike. One Bath shall conteyne the tēth parte of an Homer, and so shall one Ephah do: their measure shall be after the Homer. One Syele maketh. xx. Geras. So. xx Syeles, and xxv. and. xv. Syeles make a pounde. This is the heaueoffrynge, that ye shall gyue to be heaued: namelye, the xvi. part of an Ephah, out of an Homer of wheate: & the. xvi. parte of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barly. The oyle shall be measured with the Bath: euen the tenth parte of one Bath oute of a Cor.

Ten Bathes make one Homer: for one Homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meteoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to reconcyle them, sayth the Lorde God.

All the people of the lande shall gyue this heaueoffrynge with a free wyll. Agayne it shall be the princes parte to offre burntoffrynges, meate offrynges, and drynckoffrynges vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes, at the newe Moones, Sabbothes and in all the hyghe feastes of the house of Israel. The synoffrynge, meateoffrynge, brentoffrynge and healthoffrynge shall he gyue, to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: The fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth thou shalte take a yonge bullocke without blemyth, and clense the Sanctuary. So the preste shall take of the blond of the synneoffrynge, and sprynckle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the dorepostes of the innermer courte. And thus thou shalte do also the.vij. daye of the moneth (for such as haue synned of ignorannce, or beynge deceyued) to reconcyle the house withall. Vpon the. xiiij daye of the fyrste moneth ye shall kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shall the feaste contynue, wherin there shall no sowre ne leuended bread be eaten.

6 Upon the same daye shall the prince gyue for him selfe and all the people of the lande a bullocke for a synnoffryng. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery day a bullocke and a ramme, that are without blemyth, for a burntoffrynge vnto the Lorde: & an he gote dayly for a synneoffryng. For the meatoffrynges, he shal gyue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ramme, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. Vpon the.xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holye one after an other, euen as the other seuen dayes: with the synneoffrynge, burntoffrynge, meateoffrynge, & with the oyle.

¶ The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Thynghe whiche dores they must go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

CAPI. XLVI.

1 Thus sayethe the Lorde God: the dore of ỹ innermer courte toward the East, shall be shut the.vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth and in day of the new mone it shall be open. Then shall the prynce come vnder the dore porch, and stande fayll without by the dore cheke. So the preestes shall offre his burnt and healthoffrynges. And he shall worshyp at ỹ doreposte, and go his way forth agayne: but the dore shal no more be shut tyll the euenynge.

2 On the same maner shal the people of the lande also do their worshyp before the Lord without this dore vpon the Sabbothes and newe Moones. This is nowe the the burnt offrynge, that the prynce shall brynge vnto ỹ Lord vpon the Sabboth: syxe lambes without blemyth, and a ram without blemyth, and an Ephah for a meatoffrynge, with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye gyue as many meatoffrynges to them, as he wyll, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yong bullocke without blemyth, syxe lambes and a ram al so without blemyth. With the bullock he shall gyue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meatoffryng: but to the lambes, what he may come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shall go vnder the dore of the porche, and there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before ỹ Lorde in the hygh solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshyp, shall go oute agayne at the South dore. And they that come in at the South dore, shal go forth agayne at ỹ North dore. There shall none go out at the dore where he came in, but shall go forth ryght ouer on the other syde and the prince shal go in and out among them. C

Upon the solemne and hyghe feaste dayes this shall be the meatoffrynge: An Epha to a bullocke and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as many as he wil, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Nowe when the prynce bryngeth a burntoffrynge or an healthoffrynge with a free wyll vnto the Lorde, the east dore shall be opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt and healthoffrynges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and whe he goeth forth, ỹ dore shal be shut after hym agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere olde without blemyth for a burntoffrynge: this shall he do euery morynge. And for a meatoffrynge he shal gyue the sixte part of an Epha, and the thyrde part of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery morynge. Yea this shall be a daylye meatoffrynge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlastynge ordinaunce: and thus shal the lambe, the meateoffrynge and oyle be gyue euerye morynge, for a daylye burnteoffrynge. D E

Moreouer, thus sayethe the Lorde God. If the prince gyue a gyfte vnto anye of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes herytage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he wyl gyue one of his seruauntes some of his heritage, it shall be his to the fre yeare, and then to returne agayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. The prince also shall take none of the peoples enherytaunce, ne put them from their possessiō but to his owne sonnes shal he gyue his possessiō, that my people be not scattered abrode, but that euery man maye haue his owne. F Leuitl. xxv.b Num.xxxvi.c iii.Reg.xxi.a ii.Reg.viii.

And he brought me thorow the intraunce at the syde of the dore to the habytacion of the Sanctuarye, that belongeth to the preestes and stode toward the north, and beholde there was a place vpon the West syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the preestes shall dyght the trespace and synoffrynges, and bake the meatoffrynges: that they nede not beare them in to the outward court and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vttermost courte, roūde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the fore courte, there was yet a litle court. G

Yea in all the foure corners of the courte there was a lytle courte of .xl. cubytes lōge & .xxx. cubites brod: these foure litle courtes were were of one lyke measure, annd there weute a rygge wall rounde about them al foure, vnder the whiche there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kitchin, where the mynyster of ꝑ house shal dyght the slayne offringes of ꝑ people.

¶ The vysyon of the waters that come out of the temple. The coostes of the lande of promyse, and the deuysyon therof by trybes.

CAPI. XLVII.

A AFter this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: and beholde there gusshud out waters from vnder the postes of ꝑ house eastward (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, whiche lyeth to the aulter south ward. Then caried he me out to the northe dore, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttermost dore that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forthe the water vpon the ryghte syde. Nowe when the man that had the metered in his hande went vnto the east dore, he measured a. M. cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorow the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowit: The water was so depe, ꝑ it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayd vnto me: hast ꝑ sene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer bancke agayne.

B Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer bäcke. Then sayd he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, & runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out, and maketh the waters hole. Yea all that lyue and moue whereunto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. And where this water commeth, there shall be moch fysh. For all that commeth to this water, shall be lusty and hole. By this ryuer shal the fyshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, & there sprede out their nettes: for there shal be great heapes of fish lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clay-pyttes, they shal not be hole, for why, it shal be occupyed for salte.

C By this ryuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perysh: but euer be rype at their monethes, for their water runneth out of their Sanctuary.

His frute is good to eat, and his leafe profitable for medycine. Thus saith the Lorde God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shal deuide the land vnto the .xii. tribes of Israel with the lyne.

Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto an other: of the whiche lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it shulde fall to your inheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayn see, as men goo to Zadada: namely Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Hichō, and that lyeth vpō the coostes of Hauetam. Gene.

Thus the borders from the see forth, shall be Hazar Euan, the border of Damascus the North, and the borders of Hemath: that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure frome Hauetan and Damascus from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordan and so forth, from the see cost, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte. D

The southsyde is, from Thamar forthe to the waters of Stryfe vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the southe parte. Nume. Ezech.

The west parte: namely the greate see tō the borders therof tyll a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye part amonge you, according to the trybes of Israel, & deuyde it to be an heritage for you, & for the straūgers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shal take them amonge ꝑ children of Israel, lyke as thoughe they were of youre owne houshold & cōtrey, and they shal haue heritage with you amonge the children of Israel. Strang. Leuit. xix. Deuter. xxiii. genes. xv.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye gyue him his heritage, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The lottes of the seuen trybes. The partes of the possessyon of the prestes and of the temple, of the Leuytes, of the cytye, of the prynce, are rehearced. The lottes of the other trybes. The gates of the cytye.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THese are the names of the trybes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the waye of Hetlon, tyl thou comest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the Northe beside Hemath: Dan shall haue his portion frome the easte quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan frome the east syde vnto the west, shall Asser haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Asser from the east part vnto the west shal Nephthali haue his portion. G Lomen

Vpon the borders of Nephthali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Ephraim frome the east part vnto ꝑ west, shall Ruben haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ruben frome the the eall quarter vnto the weſt ſhal Juda haue his portion. Upon the bozders of Juda from the eall parte to the weſt, ye ſhal ſet aſyde one portion of xxv. M. meteroddes longe & bzode, (lyke as an other portion from the eall ſyde vnto the weſte) therin the Sanctuarye ſhall ſtande.

As foz the portion that ye ſhal ſeparate out for the Lorde, it ſhal be. xxv. M. longe, and ten thouſand bzode. Which ſeparated holy portiõ ſhal belong vnto theſe: namely to the prieſtes towarde the nozth xxv. M. and toward ỹ weſt ten thouſand bzode, toward the eaſt ten thouſand bzode alſo, and toward the ſouth xxv. M long, wherin the Sanctuary of the Lord ſhal ſtand. Yea this ſame place ſhal be the prieſtes that are of the children of Sadach, and haue kepte my holy ozdinance, which went not aſtraye in the errour of the children of Iſrael, like as the Leuites are gone aſtray: and this ſeparated pece that they haue of the lãd, ſhal be the moſt holy, harde vpon the bozders of the Leuites.

And next vnto the prieſtes, ſhal the Leuites haue. xxv. thouſande long, and ten. M. bzode. This ſhal be on euery ſyde. xxv. M. long, and ten. M. bzode. Of this portion they ſhal ſel no thing, ne make any permutacion therof, leeſt the chief of the lande fall vnto other, foz it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other fiue. M. after the bredth that lyeth by the. xxv. thouſand, ſhall be commen: it ſhal belong to the city and to the ſuburbes foz habitacions, and the citye ſhall ſtande in the middeſt therof. Let this be ỹ meaſure: toward the nozth part fiue hundzed and four. M. towarde the ſouth part, fiue. C. and four. M. towarde the eaſt part. v. C. and four. M. toward the weſt part. v. C. and four thouſand.

The ſuburbes hard vpon the city, ſhal haue toward the nozth. l. and two. C. towarde the ſouth. l. and two. C. toward the eaſt. l. and. C. Lkewarde the weſt alſo. l. and two hundzed. As foz the reſidue of the length ỹ lyeth harde vpon the ſeparated holy grounde: namely. x. M. toward the eaſt, and ten. M. towarde the weſt, vnto the holye portion: it and the encreaſe therof, ſhall ſerue foz their meate that laboure in the the citye. They ỹ labour foz the welth of the city, ſhal mayntein this alſo, out of what tribe ſo euer they be in Iſrael.

All that is ſeparated of the. xxv. thouſande long and. xxv. thouſand bzode on the four partes, that ſhall ye put a ſyde foz the ſeparated portion of the ſanctuary, and foz the poſſeſſiõ of the city. The reſidue vpon bothe the ſydes of the ſanctuary and poſſeſſion of the city ſhal belonge to the prince, before the place of the xxv. thouſande vnto the eaſt ende, and before the place of the. xxv. M. weſtwarde, vnto the bozders of the citye: this ſhall be the pzinces portion. This ſhall be the holy place, and the houſe of the ſanctuary ſhall ſtand in the middeſt. Moreouer, from the Leuites and ỹ cities poſſeſſion that lye in the middeſt of the princes part: loke what remayneth betwixt the bozder of Juda and the bozder of Ben Jamin, it ſhal be the pzinces.

Now of the other tribes.

From the eaſt part vnto the weſt ſhal Ben Jamin haue his portion. Upon the bozders of Ben Jamin from the eaſt ſide vnto the weſte, ſhal Symeon haue his portion. Upon ỹ bozders of Symeon from the eaſt part vnto the weſt ſhall Iſakar haue his portion. Upon the bozder of Iſakar from the eaſt ſide vnto the weſt, ſhal Sabulon haue his portion. Upon the bozders of Sabulon from the eaſt part vnto the weſt ſhal Gad haue his portion. Upon the bozders of Gad ſouthward, the coſtes ſhal reache from Thamar foz the vnto the waters of ſtrife to Cades, and to the ſtoode, euen vnto the mayne ſe.

This is the land with his portions which ye ſhall diſtrybute vnto the tribes of Iſrael ſayth the Lord God. Thus wide ſhal the city reache: Upon the nozth part fiue. C. and foure thouſande meaſures. The pozres of the citye ſhall haue the names of the trybes of Iſrael. Foze pozres of the nozth ſyde: one Ruben, an other Juda, the thirde Leui. Numer. xxxiii. Joſu. xiii. xxi

Upon the eaſt ſide fiue. C. and foure thouſand meaſures, with three pozres: The one Joſeph an other Ben Jmin, the thirde Dan. Upõ the ſouth ſide fiue hundzed and four thouſand meaſures, with the three pozres: the one Hymeon, an other Iſakar, the thirde Sabulon. And vpon the weſt ſide fiue. C. and foure. M. meaſures, with three pozres alſo, the one Gad an other Aſer, ỹ thirde Nephthali. Thus ſhal it haue. xviij. thouſand meaſures round about. And from that time forth the name of the city ſhalbe: The Lorde is there.

¶ The ende of the pzophecye of Ezechiel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE DANIEL.

¶ The Prophet: sheweth the captyuytye of Joakym kynge of Juda. Of the sonnes that were in captyuytye, the kynge commaundeth to chose whiche of them shoulde be taught the lernyng and language of the Caldees. They are alowed the kynges kechynge. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The science and instruction of theie chyldren.

CAPI. I.

A IN the thynde yere of the raygne of Joakim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lorde delyuered Joakim the kynge of Juda in to his handē: with certayne ornamentes of the house of God: which he caryed awaye vnto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughte them in to his goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphanaz the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sholde brynge him certayne of the childrē of Israel that were come of the kinges seed, and of Prynces, yonge spryngoldes without any blemysshe, but faire and welfauoured instruct in all wysdome, conning and vnderstandynge, which were hable to stande in the kinges palace, to rede, and to lerne for to speake Caldeish.

B Vnto these the kynge appoynted a certeyn porcion of his owne meate, and of the wyne, whiche he dranke him selfe, so to nourysshe them thre yere, that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda/namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Vnto these the chiefe Chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel Balthasar: Ananias Sydrach: Misael Misach: and Asarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynte with him selfe, that he wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat, ne the wyne whiche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he sholde be defyled him selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayde of my lorde ỹ kyng, whiche hathe appoynted you your meate and dryncke, lest he spye youre faces to be worse lyknynge then the other spryngoldes of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my heed vnto the kynge.

Then Daniel answered Melasser, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynche / then loke vpon oure faces, and theyr that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou lest, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them ten dayes. And after the ten dayes their faces were better lyknynge, and fatter then all the yonge spryngoldes which ate of ỹ kynges meate.

Thus Melasser toke away their meat and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngoldes cunnyng and lernyng in all scripture and wysdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstanding of all visions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these yonge spryngoldes vnto him: the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kynge communed w them. But amonges them all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.

Therfore stode they before the kynge, whiche in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better then all the sothesayers and charmers, that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode styll vnto the fyrste yere of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them, both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The Lorde openeth the mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is broughte vnto the kynge, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretation therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Chryste. The stone Chryste. Daniel is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

CAPI. II.

IN the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreme where thorowe his spirite was vexed, and his slepe brake frome hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call togyther all the sothesayers, charmers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therwith, that I haue clene forgotten what I dreamed. Vpon this the Caldees aunswered the kynge in the Syryans speche: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shal shewe the what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees their answere, and sayde: It is gone fro me: Yf ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame, with the interpretacion therof, ye shall dye, and youre houses shall be prysed. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it.

They

They aunswered agayne and sayde: The kynge muste shewe his seruauntes the dreme and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge aunswered, sayinge: I perceyue of a trueth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme: for so moche as ye se that the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye will not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne and dissemble with vayne wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme.

Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I knowe yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upon this the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: Yea, there is neyther kynge, Prynce nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thynges at a sothesayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwelynge is not among the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kyng was wrothe with greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went forthe, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They soughte also to sle Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquyred Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forthe alredye to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon.

He answered and sayd vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges deputte: Why hath the king proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the mater. Upon this went Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge that he myght haue leasure to shewe the kyng the interpretacion/and then came he home agayne, and shewed the thyng vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they shoulde beseche the God of heuen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and and his felowes, with other suche as were wyse in Babylon, peryshed not.

Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by night. And Daniel praysed ꝑ God of heuen. Daniel also cryed loude and sayd: O that the name of God might be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome & strength are his owne / he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges / he setteth vp kynges: he gyueth wysedome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darknesse, for the lyght dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysedome and strength, and hast shewed me the thynge that we desired of the, for thou hast opened the kinges mater vnto me.

Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge hadde ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon: he went vnto him and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bringe me in to the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonges the prysoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then answered the kynge, and sayd vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel aunswered the kynge to his face, and sayd: As for this secret, for the whiche the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, ne the deuyll coniurer, that can certifye the kynge of it: Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. Matth.xi.c

Thy dreme, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heed, vpō thy bed, is this: O kyng ꝑ dyddest cast in thy mynde what shoulde come hereafter. So he ꝑ is the opener of misteries, telleth ꝑ what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysdom that I haue more then any other lyuyng: but only that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacion, and that he might know ꝑ thoughtes of his owne hert. Thou kyng sawest, and beholdest, there stode before the a great ymage, whose figure was marueylous great, and his bryght gemme. The ymage heed was of fine golde, his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye & loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron and parte of earthe. E

This thou sawest, till the tyme (ꝑ without any handes) there was hewen of a stone, wch smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were bothe of yron and erth, and brake the to pouther: then was the yron, the erth, the copper the siluer and gold broken all togither in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the sommer floores, that they can no more be found. But the stone ꝑ smote the ymage became a greate mountayne, which fulfilleth ꝑ hole erth: this is the dreme. And now will we shew before ꝑ king, what it meaneth. Matth xxi.c Luce.xx.b

O kynge, thou arte a kyng of kynges: For the God of heauen hathe gyuen the a kyngedome, tycheffe, strengthe, and maieftye: and hathe delyuered the all thynges that are amonges the children of men: the beastes of the feld, and the foules vnder the heuen, and gyuen the dompnion ouer them all. Thou arte that golden heed. After the, there shall aryse an other kyngdome, whiche shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dampnacion in all landes. The fourthe kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yea euen as yron breaketh euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye. Daniel.b.d

Where as thou sawest the feete and toes parte of earth and parte of yron, that is a deuyded kyngdome, whiche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron myxte with claye.

The toes of the fete that were part of yrō and part of claye, signifieth that it shall be a kyngdome partly stronge, and partly weyke. And where as ꝑ sawest yron mixt with claye, they shall myngle them selues with the seed of symple people, and yet not continue one wt an other, lyke as yron will not be sowldered with a potshers.

Elay.ix.b

6 In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heuen set vp an euerlastynge kyngedome, whiche shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to an other people: yea the same shall breake and destroy all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

Hebr.xii.c

And where as ꝑ sawest that without anye handes there was cut out of the mout a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the erth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the great God shewed the kynge what wil come after this. This is a true dreme, and the interpretacion therof is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they sholde offre meat offerynges and swete odoures vnto him. The kynge aunswered Daniel, and sayd: yea of a truthe youre God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes, seinge thou canste discouer this misterie. So the king made Daniel a great man, and gaue him many & great gyftes.

He made him ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and lorde of all the nobles that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel entreated the king for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago so that he made them rulers ouer all the offices in the lande of Babylon. But Daniel him selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Jmage, whiche he commaūdeth to be worshypped. Sydrach, Mysach, and Abednago are accused, bycause they dysobeyed the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyp the Jmage. They refuse to do it, and are put in to a burnynge ouen. By byleue in God, they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the syght of the myracle.

CAPI. III.

A NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was three score cubites hygh, and sixe cubites thik. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sente oute to gather togyther the dukes, lordes, and nobles, ꝑ iudges and officers, the debities & shyrues, with al the rulers of the land: that they myghte come to the dedicacion of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kynge hadde set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles / the iudges and officers, deputyes and shyrues with all the rulers of the lande gathered them togither, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor sette vp, the bedell cryed out with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tunges, to you be it sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes whiche shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all maner of musyke: ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hathe set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of the Trompettes that were blowē, with the Harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all kynde of melody: then all the people, kynredes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

B Now were there certayne men of the Caldees that went euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayd vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy life for euer. Thou being kynge, hast gyuen a commaundement, that all men, when they heare noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: shall fall downe and bow them selues toward the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe, and worshypped not, that he sholde be cast in to an hote burning ouen.

Now are there certeyn Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the land of Babylon: namely, Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they wil not serue thy goddes, ne bow them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast set vp.

Dan.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago sholde be brought vn to him. So these mē were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto the and sayd: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, wyll not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? well be redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with ꝑ harpes, Shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe and worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But yf ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye in to an hote burnynge ouen. Lette se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is hable to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can ryght well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyll not,

CAP. IIII.

NAbuchodonoſor kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges that dwell vpon the hole earthe: peax be multiplyed amonges you: I thought it good to ſhew the tokens and maruelous worckes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O howe greate are his tokens, and how mighty are his wonders? His kyngdom is an euerlaſting kyngdome, and his power laſteth for euer and euer. Pſal.lv.b Daniel.vii.d Luce.i.c.

I Nabuchodonoſor beynge at reſt in myne houſe, and flouryſhynge in my palace, ſawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayde / and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the viſions of my heed troubled me. Then sent I out a commiſſion, that all they which were of wyſdome at Babylon ſholde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame.

So there came the ſothſayers, charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuyls / to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened they could not ſhew me: tyl at the laſt there came one Daniel (otherwyſe called Balthaſar, accordynge to the name of my God) whi che hath the ſpirite of the holy goddes in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, ſayinge: B

O Balthaſar, thou Prynce of ſothſayers: For ſo mothe as I knowe that thou haſt the ſpirite of the holy Goddes, and no ſecrete is hid frome the: tell me therfore what the vyſyon of my dreame (that I haue ſene) maye ſignifye. I ſawe a viſion in my heed vpon my bed: and beholde there ſtode a tre vpon the grou̇nd whiche was very hyghe, greate, and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto the heuen, and the bredthe extended to all the endes of the earthe: his leaues were fayre, he hadde very mothe frute, ſo that euery man had ynoughe to eate therin.

The beaſtes of the felde hadde ſhadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I ſawe in my heed a viſion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watcher came downe frome heuen, and cryed myghtyly, ſayinge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, ſhake of his leaues, and ſcatre his frute abrode: that all the beaſtes maye gette them awaye from vnder him, and the foules frome his braunches. Neuertheleſſe, leaue the grounde of his roote ſtyll in the earthe, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and ſtele. With the dewe of heuen ſhall he be wet, and he ſhal haue his part in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beaſtes.

That mannes herte of his ſhall be taken from him, and a beaſtes herte ſhall be geuen him, till ſeuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

This errande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and ſoughte oute in the counſell of him that is mooſte holye: to leerne men for to vnderſtande that the higheſt hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and C ye ſhalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not ſerue thy goddes, nor doo reuerence to the ymage, which thou haſt ſet vp. Then was Nabuchodonoſor ful of indignacion, ſo that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged & commaunded that the ouen ſholde be made ſeuen tymes hoter then it was wont to be, and ſpake vnto the ſtrongeſt worthyes that were in his hoſte, for to binde Sidrach, Miſach and Abednago, and to caſt them in to the hote burnyng ouen.

So theſe men were bounde in their cotes, hoſen, ſhoes, with their other garmentes, and caſt in to the hote burning ouen: for the kinges commaundement was ſo ſtrayte, and the ouen was exceedyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago, the flame of the fyre deſtroyed theym. And theſe three men: Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago, fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, being faſt bounde.

Then Nabuchodonoſor the kyng maruey-led, and ſtode vp in all haſte: he ſpake vnto his counſell and ſayde: dyd ye not caſt three men bounde in to the fyre? They anſwered, and ſayde vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. He anſwered and ſayde: Lo for all that, yet do I ſe foure men goynge loole in the myddeſt of the fyre, and nothynge corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke an aungell to loke vpon.

Vpon this wente Nabuchodonoſor vnto ꝑ mouth of the hote burninge ouen: he ſpake alſo, and ſaid: O Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago, ye ſeruauntes of the hye God, go forth and come hyther. And ſo Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counſell came togyther to ſe theſe men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes. In ſo mothe ꝑ the very heere of their hed was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: Yea there was no ſmell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then ſpake Nabuchodonoſor and ſayde: Bleſſed be the God of Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago: whiche hathe ſente his aungell, and defended his ſeruauntes, that put their truſte in him / that haue altered the kynges commaundement, and ieopardy their bodyes therevpon, rather then they wolde ſerue or worſhyp any other God, except their owne God onely.

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tunges, whiche ſpeake anye blaſphemye agaynſte the God of Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago, ſhall dye, and their houſes ſhall be prꝛyed: Bycauſe there is no God that maye ſaue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

¶ Nabuchodonoſor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonoſor is put oute of his realme, and eateth with beaſtes. He confeſſeth the power of God, and is reſtored in to his kyngdome.

gyueth them to whom it lyketh him, & bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene: therfore, O Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so mocke as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of ỹ holy goddes is in the.

D Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) held his peax by the space of an hour, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayd: O Balthasar, let neither the dreame ne the interpretacion therof fear the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, & the the interpretacion to thyne aduersaryes. As for the tree that thou sawest, whiche was so greate and mightye, whose heyghte reached vnto the heuen, & his bredth in to all ỹ worlde whose leaues were fayre, and the fruite moch vnder the whiche the beestes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou (O kyng) art the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto the heuen, & dothe thy power to the endes of the erth. But where as the king sawe a watcher, euen an holy aungell, that came downe frome heuen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earthe: and bynd him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. He shall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte shall be with the beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him. This (O kynge) is the interpretacion/yea it is the very truthe of him that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.

E Thou shalte be cast oute fro men, and thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde: with grasse shalte thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of heuen: Yea, seuen yeres shall come and goo vpon the, tyll thou knowe that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayd that the roote of the tre sholde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth ỹ thy kyngdome shall remayne hole vnto the, after thou haste learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kynge, be content with my counsel, that thou mayste loose thy synnes with ryghtousnesse, and thyne offences with mercy to poore people/for suche thynges shal prolong thy peax. All these thynges touche the kyng Nabucho donosor.

F So after twelue mouethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayd: This is ỹ great citye of Babylon, which I my selfe (with my power and strengthe) haue made a kynges courte for the honour of my maiestie. While these wordes was yet in the kynges mouthe, there fell a voyce from heuen saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, til seuen yeres be come and gone ouer the, euen vntyll thou knowest that the hyest hath power vpo the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye gyue them vnto whome it pleaseth him. The verye same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor / so that he was caste out of mennes companye, and ate grasse lyke an oxe. His bodye was wet with ỹ dewe of heuen, tyll his heeres were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles like byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me againe. Then gaue I thankes vnto ỹ highest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euer more, whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdom from one generacion to another: in comparyson of whom, all they that dwelle vpon the earthe, are to be reputed as nothynge.

At the same tyme was myne vnderstanding gyuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kingdome, to my dignitie, & to myne owne shape agayne. My great estates and paynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor loue, magnifie and prayse the kynge of heuen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that goo proudly, he is able to bynge them downe.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon abusynge the vessels of the temple, saith an hande writyng in the wall. The soothsayers called of the kynge, can not expounde the writynge. Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar beynge slayne, Darius succedeth in his rowme.

CAPI. V.

KYng Balthazar made a great banket to a thousande Lordes: with all these thousand he made great chere, and whe he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golden & syluer vessels, whiche his father Nabuchodonosor had take out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his lordes wt his queue and concubines might drynke therin.

So they brought the golden vessell ỹ was taken oute of the temple of the lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and praysed theyr ydolles of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wod and stone.

In

In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytynge, right oure agaynste the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: and the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. Then chaunged the king his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioynces of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one against the other. Wherfore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shuld bringe him the charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuyls. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and said: Who so rede this writinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neither reade the writing, ne shew the king what it signified. Then was the kinge sore afrayed: in so moche, that his coloure chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the king and his lordes, the quene went vp her selfe into the banket house, and spake vnto the kinge, saynge: O king, God saue thy lyfe for euer: Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdom, that hathe the spirite of the holye goddes within him, as it was seue in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wisdome lyke the goddes. Yea the kinge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man cheife of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and deuill coniurers: because that such an abundaut wytte, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to ope secretes, and to declare hard doubtes) was found in him: yea euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Danyel be sent for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Danyel brought before the kinge. So the kinge spake vnto Danyel, and sayde: Arte thou that Danyel, one of the prysoners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jurye? I haue hearde speake of the, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysdome founde in the. Now haue there ben brought me, wyse and cunnynge charmers to reade this wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what this mater signifyed. The herde I saye, that thou coulest expound darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtes. Wel than, yf thou canst rede this wrytynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalte be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

Daniel answered, & sayd before the king: As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, & gyue thy ryches gyftes to an other: yet not the lesse, I wyll reade the writtinge vnto the kinge and shewe him the interpretation therof. O kyng, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dygnyte of a kinge, with worshyp and honoure: so that all people, kyndredes & tunges stode in awe and feare of him, by reason of the hygh estate that he had let him. For why, he slew whom he wolde: he smote, whome it pleased hym. Agayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: & whom he lyst, he put downe. But because his herte was so proude, and his stomacke set so faste vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his maiestye was taken from him. He was shot out from amonges men, his hert was lyke a beastes herte, & his dwellyng was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an oxe, and his body was wet with the dewe of the heauen: tyll he knewe that the hyghest had power vpon the kingdomes of me, and setteth ouer them whom he lyst. Daniel.iiii.d.

And thou yts same (O Balthazar) for al this, hast not submytted thine hert, thoughe thou knewest al these thinges: but hast magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lord of heuen, so that the vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene & concubines, might drincke wyne therin. And haste prayed the Idols of syluer and gold, copper and yron, of wod and stone. As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued him. F Jer.xvii.c

Therfore is the palme of this hande sent hither from him, to token vp this wrytynge. G And this is the scripture, that is writen vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacion of the thing is this: Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdom, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou art weyed in the balance & arte found to light: Phares, thy kingdom is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to clothe Danyel with purple, to hange a cheyne of gold about his necke, and and to make a proclaymacyon concernynge him, that he shuld be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. The very same nyght was Balthazar the king of the Caldees slayne, and Darius oute of Medea toke the kyngedome, beynge lxij yere of age. Esay.xlvii.b xxi.a. Daniel.ix.a.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the lordes. The imagynacyon of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour. He is put in to a denne of lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is delyuered by fayth in God. Daniels accusers are put in to the lyons to be tozne in sonder. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

CAPI. VI.

It pleased Darius to sette ouer his kingdom an. C. and. xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all his kyngdom about. Aboue these he set three Prynces (of whome Danyel was one) that the lordes myght gyue accomptes vnto vnto them, and the kynge to be vnbilceased.

But Daniel exceded all these princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in him: so that the kynge was minded to set him ouer the hole realme. Wherfore the princes and Lordes sought̃e, to pycke oute in Daniel some quarel against the kingdom yet could they fynde none occasion ne fawte vpon him. For why? he was so faythfull, þ there was no blame ne dishonestye founde in him.

B Then sayde these men: we wyll get no quarell agaynste this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of his God. Upon this, wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kinge, and sayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God sawe thy lyfe for euer. Al the great estates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatoures, and Judges, are determed to put out a cõmaundement of the kynge, & to make sure statute namely, that who so desireth any petition, either of any God or mã (within this. xxx. dayes) except it be only of the, O kinge: the same person maye be cast into the lyons denne. Wherfore, O king confirme this statutes, and make a wrytyng that the thinge whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned be not aultered ne broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and cõ-
C firmed it. Nowe when Danyel vnderstode that the wrytinge was made, he went in to his house: and the windowes of his hall, to warde Jerusalem stode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a day there he made his petition, and prayed his God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Danyel makinge his petition, and prayenge vnto his God: So they came to the kynge, & spake before him concernynge his commaũdement, sayinge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, þ within thirty dayes who so requyreth his petition of anye God or man but only of thy self, O kyng: he shal be cast into the den of the lyons? The kinge answered, and sayde: yea it is true. It must be as a law of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the D kinge: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda O king, regarderh neither the, ne thy statute that thou hast made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a day. When the kynge heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and wold haue excused Daniel, to delyuer him & put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe to the intent that he myght saue him.

These men perceyuynge the kinges mynde
Dani. xiiii. e sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) þ the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute which the kinge maketh, maye not be altered. Then the kynge had them bring Daniel, and they cast him into the lyons den.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was
E brought a stone, and layde vpon the hole of the den, this the kinge seled with his owne ryng, & with the signet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kinge wente into his palace, and kept him sober all nyght, so that there was no table spred before him, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the morning at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nygh vnto the denne, he cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea the kinge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Danyel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God is not thy God (whom thou alway seruest) hable to delyuer the from þ Lyons? Danyel sayde vnto the kinge: O kinge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath sent his aun- Daniel Act. xiii. Judic. 1. Reg. xviii. gell, whych hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne vngiltynesse is founde out before him. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceding glad, and F commaunded to take Daniel out of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his truste in his God. And as for those men whiche had accused Danyel, the kinge commaunded to bringe them, and to caste theym in the lyons denne, them their chyldren and their wyues. So the Lyons had the mastry of them, and brake all their bones a sondre, or euer they came at the grounde. Esther. Daniel

After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all
Daniel G people kynredes, and tunges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multyplyed with you: My cõmaundement is, in all my dompynon and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuynge God, which abideth Daniel vi. euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastynge. He is he that delyuereth, & saueth: he doth wõders & maruelous workes, in heauen and in earthe: he hathe preserued Danyel from the power of the lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Elaye. Hiere. Daniel Darius and Cirus of Persia.

The vision of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vyson is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power and increase of Antichrist. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. VII.

IN the fyrste yeare of Balthazar kynge of A Babylon, sawe Danyel a dreame, and a vyson was in his heade vpon his bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Danyel spake, and sayd, I sawe in my vysyon by nyght, and beholde the foure windes of the heauen stroue vpon

the see, and foure greate beestes came vp frō the see one vnlyke an other.

The fyrst was as a lyō, and yet had he Egles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were pluckt from him, and he taken awaye frome earth: that he stode vpon his fete as a man and that there was gyuen hym a mans hert.

B Behold, the seconde beast was lyke a beer, & stode vpon ỹ one syde. Amonges his teeth in his mouth he had thre greate long teth, & it was sayde vnto him: Arise, eate vp, moche flesshe.

Then I loked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leoparde: this had wīges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power gyuen him.

After this I sawe in a vysion by nyght, & behold the fourth beast was grym & horrible, and meruelous stronge. It had greate yron teth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it hadde ten hornes, wherof I toke good hed.

C And beholde, there came vp among them. an other lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrste hornes pluckte awaye. Behold this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyl the old aged sat hym down. His clothing was as whyte as snowe, and the heares of his hed lyke the pure woll. His trone was lyke the fyry flame, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forthe a fyrye streme, and went out from him. A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. & x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede thervnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne spake I behelde, tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, and gyuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

D As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche went vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him: Then gaue he hym power & diguytie regall, that al people, kyndes and tunges shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastynge power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kingdome endureth vncorrupt. My herte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, & the visions of my head made me afrayde: till I gate me vnto one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth, concernynge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstāde the interpretacion of these thynges.

E These foure great beastes, are foure kynges whiche shal aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hyghest, and possesse it styl more and more for alonge season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truthe, concernynge the fourth beaste, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, & so horryble: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to Apoca.xiii.s know the truth, as touchinge the ten hornes xvii.c that he hadde vpon his heade, and this other F whiche came vp after warde, before whose face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thinges, and loked with a grymmer vysage then his felowes. I beheld, and ỹ same horne made battayle agaynst the sayntes, yea and gat the victorye of them vntyl the tyme that the old aged came, that the iudgemente was gyuen to the chiefest sayntes: and tyll the tyme that the sayntes had the kyngdome in possessyon. He gaue me this answere: That fourth beast shall be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shall be more then all other kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, that shall G aryse out of the kingdom, after whome there Zacha.i.c
shall stande vp an other, which shal be greater then the fyrste. He shall subdue thre kinges, and shall speake wordes agaynste the vyghest of all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the most hyghest, and thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be gyuen vnder his power, vntyll a tyme, two tymes, and halfe a tyme. Daniel.ii.c
Apoc.xii.d

But the iudgement shall be kepte, so that his power shal be taken from him, for ye shal be destroyed, and perysshe at the laste. As for the kyngdome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heuen: it shall be gyuen to the holye people of the most hyghest, whose kyng Luke.i.c dome is euerlastynge / yea all powers shall Daniel.xiiii.c
serue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaūce chaunged but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte. Luke.ii.c

¶ A vysyon of a stryfe betwene a ramme and an he gote. The vnderstandyng of the vysyon, is of the batell betwene the kynge of Persia, and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the shameles kynge Antichryste.

CAPI. VIII.

IN the thyrde yere of the rayne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a vysyon vnto A me Daniel, after that I had sene the firste I sawe in a vysyon (and when I saw it, I was at Susis in the chiefe city, whiche lieth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision me thought Daniel.ii.a
I was by the ryuer Ulai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hygh, but one was hygher then an other, & the highest came vp laste.

I sawe that this ramme pushed with his hornes, agaynste the weste, agaynst the north

and

agaynst the southe: so that no beastes might stande before hym, ne defende them from his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, and waxed greatly. I to toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he gote from the west ouer the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goote had a maruellous goodly horn betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme þ had the .ij. hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. I sawe hym drawe nigh vnto the ramme, beinge verye fearce vpon hym: yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Neither had the ram so moch strength as to stand before hym: but he cast him downe, trod him vnder his fete: and no man was able to deliuer the ram out of his power.

C The goote waxed exceadynge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his great horn was broken also. Then grewe there other foure suche lyke in the stede, towarde the .iij. Da. vii. a. xi. a winndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the 4. Machab. i. a leest of these hornes, there came vp yet an other horne, whiche waxed meruelous great: towarde the southe, toward the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoste of heauen, wherof it did cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost, from whom the dayly offerynge was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vn to it, agaynst the dayly offerynge (because of wyckednesse) that it myght caste downe the verye to the ground, and so to prospere in al thinges, that it went about.

D Upon this I herd one of the Saintes speakinge, whiche sayntes sayde vnto one that asked this question: How long shall this vysyon of the dayly sacrifice and of þ wastyng abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenyng & the morninge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this vysyon, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I herd a mans voyce in the ryuer of Vlai, whiche cryed, and sayd: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayde at his commynge, and fel downe vpō my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the laste tyme shall this vysyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed fayne, so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, saying: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfylled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses: but the goote is the kyng of Grecia lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodynesse is a growynge) there shall aryse a kinge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shall be wise in darke speakinges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure, and all that he goeth about shall prosper: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And throwe his craftynesse, falsheed shall prospere in his hande, his herte shall be proude, and manye one shall be put to death in his welthynes, he shall stande vp agaynste the Prince of Princes, but he shal be destroyed without hande. And this vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the morninge. Therfore wryte thou vp this syghte, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very sayntē, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kynges busynesse, and maruepled at the vysyon, neuertheles no man knewe of it.

¶ Daniel desyreth to haue that performed of God whiche he had promysed concernynge the returne of the people from theyr bānyshment in Babylon. I true confessyon. Gabriel is sente. Gabriel the Aungell expounderh vnto hym the vysyon of the thre score and ten wekes. The annoyntynge of Christe. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem vnder Nehemias. The death of Christe. The destynge out of the wycked Jewes.

CAPI. IX.

IN the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was of the sede of the Medes, and was made kinge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euē in the fyrst yere of his raygne, I Daniel desyred to know the perely nombre out of the bokes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet: that Jerusalem shulde lye wast thre score and ten yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lord for to praye & make myne intercession, with fastyng, sackcloth and asshes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowlebged, sayinge: G Daniel

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedyent & gone backe: yea we haue departed from all thy precepts and iudgementes. Baruch.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophets, that spake in thy name to our kynges and princes, to our fore fathers and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde, rygh- B tousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs per- Esdre.
sayneth

tayneth not bynge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Yea vnto al Jsrael, whether they be farre or nyghe thorow out all landes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences y they had done agaynste the.

Yea O Lorde, vnto vs to our kynges and princes, to oure forefathers: cum to vs all, that haue offended, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, pertayneth mercy and forgyuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, whiche he layed before vs by his seruauntes the Prophetes: yea al Jsrael haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and oth, that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is poured vpō vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynste vs, and agaynst our iudges that iudged vs: to bynge vpon vs suche a great plage, as neuer was vnder heauen lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before y Lorde our God, that we myght turne agayne from oure wyckednesse, & to be lerned in thy veryte. Therfore hath the Lorde made haste, to bynge this plage vpon vs: for the Lord our God is ryghtous, in all his workes whiche he doth: for why, we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.

And now, O Lorde oure God, thou that with a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy self a name, wherof remayneth this daye: we haue synned, O Lorde, and done wyckedly agaynste all thy ryghtousnes: yet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) fro thy cytye Jerusalem thy holy hyl. And why? for our synnes sake and for the wickednesse of our fore fathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Nowe therfore, O oure God, here the prayer of thy seruaunte, and his intercession. O let not thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and herken (at the leest for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: behold how we be desolated, yea and the cytye also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before the in our owne ryghtousnesse, no: but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde, heare: O forgyue Lorde: O Lorde consydre, tarye not ouer longe: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cytye and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the Lorde my God, for the holy hyls sake of my God: yea whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, behold, the man Gabriel (whom I had sene afore in the vision) came flyinge to me, and touched me aboute the offerynge tyme in the euenynge. He instourmed me and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, I am nowe come to make the vnderstande it: For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, & therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? for thou art a man greatly beloued. Da.ix.c.viii.a Daniel.x.c.d

Wherfore, pondre the matter well, that thou mayste lerne, to vnderstande the vision, thre score and ten wekes are determed ouer thy people, and ouer the holye cyty: that the wickednesse maye be consumed, that the sin maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to bynge in euerlasting ryghtousnesse, to fulfyll the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holye one. Understande this then, and marcke it well that frome the tyme it shall be concluded, to go & repayre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christe (or the anoynted) prince: there shall be seuē wekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne. lxij. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these. lxij. wekes, shal Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroye the cytye and the Sanctuarye: and his ende shal come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall contynue tyll the ende of the battayle.

He shall make a stronge bonde with manye, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meateofferynge. And in the temple there shall be an abhompnable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal contynue vnto the ende. Math. xxiiij. xxiii. Marke.xiii.b

¶ There appereth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynen, whiche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

CAPI. X.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wise called Balthazar) a mater, yea a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the mater wel & perceyued what the vysion was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no luste to eat brede: as for flesh & wyne there came none within my mouthe. No, I dyd not ones anoynte my selfe, tyl the hole thre wekes were out. A

Upon the. xxiij. daye of the firste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tigris: I lifte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabye: his body was lyke the Chrisolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, his eyes as the flame of fire, his armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multytude. Daniel. vii.b. Apoca.i.c

I Daniel

B I Danyel alone sawe this vision, the men
Daniel.iii.c that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate Ia.ix.a fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate vision, so long tyl there remayned no more strength within me: yea I loste my colloure cleane, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone.
Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes, and as soone as I herde it fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fel downe flat to the the ground vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees and vpon ꝑ palmes of my handes, sayinge vnto me: O Dani.ix.b Danyel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande right vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

L And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblynge. Then sayde he vnto me, feare not Daniel: for why sence the fyrst daye that thou set thyne herte to vnderstand & dyddest chastē thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I hadde come vnto the, whē thou begannest to speake had

Daniel.xii.a one of the chiefest, princes, came to helpe me, vpon whom I left by the king of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shall happen vn to thy people in ꝑ latter dayes: For it wyll be longe yet or the vysyon be fulfylled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast down my hed to the ground and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, & sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my Lorde, my toyntes are lowsed in the vision, and there is no more strength within me: howe may my Lordes

there is no strength in me, so that I can not agayne, one more lyke a man, and comfor Daniel.ix.b ted me sayinge: O thou man so wel beloued, feare not: be content, take a good herte vnto

the, and be stronge.

D So when he had spoken vnto me, I recou ered, and sayd: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyll I go agayne to fyght with ꝑ prynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forthe, lo, the prince of Grecke lād shal come. Neuertheles, I wyll shewe the ꝑ thyng, that is faste noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all yon der matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael youre prince.

¶ I prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Iewes that flye vnto the kynge of Egypt, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

CAP. I.

AND in the fyrst yere of Darius of Me dea, I stode vp him, to comforte him, & to strengthē him, and nowe wyll I shew the the truthe. Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourthe shall be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in ꝑ chiefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynste the realme of Grecheland. Then shal there aryse yet a migh tye king that shall rule with greate dominā on, and do what him list. And as soone as his kingdome cōmeth vp, it shall be destroyed, & deuided towarde the foure windes of the he uē. They that come after him, shal not haue suche power and dompynyon as he: but his kingdome shall be scattered, yea euen amon ges other then those. And the kynge of the southe shall be myghtyer, then his other prin ces. Agaynste hym there shall one make hym selfe stronge, and shall rule his dompynyon w greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shal be ioy ned togyther, and the kinges doughter of ꝑ south shall come to the kynge of the North, for to make frendshyp, but we shall not ob tayne the power of that arme, neither shall she be hable to endure thorowe his myght:
but she, and suche as brought her (yea and he that begat her, & cōforted her for his time) shall be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stād vp in his stede whiche with power of armes shal go thorow the kinges land of the north, and handle him accordynge to his strength.

As for their Idols and princes, with their costly Jewelles of golde and syluer, he shall cary them awaye captyues into Egypte, & he shal preuayle agaynste the kinge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to ꝑ kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne in to his owne lande. Wher fore his sonnes shall be displeased, and shall gather togyther a myghtye greate hoofte of people: and one of them shall come, and go thorowe like a water floude then shall he re turne, and go forth with defynge & rollinge vnto his owne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shal be angry and shall come forth to fyghte agaynste the kynge of the northe, yea shall bringe a great multytude of people togyther, and a greate heape shal be gyuen into his hand, these shall he cary awaye with greate pryde, for so moch as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shall not preuayle. For the kinge of the northe shall gather (of the newe a greater heap of people the afore, and come forth (after a certayne time and yeares) with a myghtye hoost and exceadyng greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynst the kinge of the south, so that the wicked chyldren of thy people also shall ex alte them selues (to fulfyll the vision) & then fall.

So the kynge of the north shall come & laye syege, and co take the stronge fenced ci tyes:

ctes: and the power of them of the southe shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so strong as to resyst him. Shortly, when he commeth, he shal handle him as he lyst, and no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst him. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countrey, which thorow him shall be destroyed. He shal set his face with al his power to opteyn his kyngdome, and to be like it. Yea that shall be do, and gyue him vnto the doughters amonges women, to destroye him. But he shall fayle, neither shal he optayne his purpose.

After this shall he set his face vnto the yles, and take many of them. A prince shal stop him, to do him a shame, beside the confusyon that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne land, stomble and fall, and be no more founde: so he that came vpon him, and dyd him vyolence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after few dayes he shal be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, ne in battayle. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle person, not holden worthye of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in craftelye, and obteyne the kyngedome with fayre wordes: he shall fyghte agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and againſt the prynce of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath take truce with him, he shal handle disceytfully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome him with a small flocke, and so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse then eyther his fathers or graundfathers did. For he shal destroye the thinge that they robbed and spoyled, yea and all their substaunce, ymageninge thoughtes againſte the strong holde, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shal be styrred vp with a great armye agaynst the kinges of the south, where thenawe the kynge of the south shall be moued then vnto batell with a great and mighty hoste also. Neuertheleſſe he shall not be able to stande, for they shal conspyre againſt him. Yea, they that eate of his meat shal burst him, so that his hoste shal fall, and manye be slayne downe.

These two kynges shal be minded to do mischief, and talke of disceyte at one table / but they shal not prospere: for why? the ende shal not come yet, vnto the time appoynted. Then shal he go home againe in to his own land with great good, and set his herte againſt the holy couenaunt, he shall be busy againſt it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne, and go towarde the south. So shall it happen otherwise then at the first: yet ones agayn. And why? the shyppes of Cithim shall come vpon him, that he may be smytten and turne agayne, that he may take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to meddle againſte it. Yea he shall tourne hym, and drawe suche vnto him as leaue the holye couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe the Sanctuarye of strengthe, to put downe the daylye offerynge, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion, and suche as breake the couenaunte shall he flattre with fayre wordes. But the people that wyll knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouer hande and prospere. Those also that haue vnderstandyng amonge the people, shal enstructe the multitude: and for a longe season they shall be persecuted with swerde, with fyre, with captyuitie, and with the takyng awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be sette vp with a lytle helpe, but many shall cleue vnto them faynedly.

Yea some of those which haue vnderstãding shal be persecuted also, that they may be tried, purified and clensed, tyll the time be oute, for there is yet an other time appointed. The kynge shal doo what him lyst, he shall exalte and magnifye him self aboue al, that is God. Yea he shall speake maruelous thynges againſt the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is deuised alredye. He shal not regarde the God of his fathers, but his luste shall be vpon women: Yea he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worshyp the myghty ydols: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shal he honour with gold and syluer, with precyous stones, and pleasaunt iewels. Apoca.xv.a

This shall he doo, seekynge helpe and succour at the myghtye ydols and straunge goddes. Suche as wyl receyue him, and take him for God, he shall gyue them greate worshyp and power: yea and make them lordes of the multitude, and gyue them the lande with rewardes. G

In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue with him, and the kynge of the Northe in lyke maner shall come agaynste him with charrettes, horsemen, and with a great many of shyppes. He shal come in to the landes, destroye and go thorow: he shal entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt land. Many cytyes and countreys shal decaye, except Edom, Moab, and the best of the children of Ammon whiche shall escape from his hande. He shall stretche forth his handes vpon the countreys, and the lande of Egypt shall not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, & ouer all the precious iewels of Egypte, Lybia, and Ethiopia. Apoca.xiii.e

Neuertheleſſe the tidynges out of the East and the North shall trouble him, for the wht the cause he shal goo forth to destroye & cutte a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shal be pytched betwixt the two sees, vpõ the hyll of the noble Sanctuarye, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe him. ¶ The prophecyeth the resurrection of the deed.
The darcknesse of the prophecye of Daniel.

CAPI. XII.

Apoca.xix.c

The tyme will come also that the great prince Michael, whiche standeth on thy people spoe shal arise vp, for there shal come a time of trouble, such as neuer was sen there began to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deliuered, yea all those that be founde written in the boke.

Mat.xxiiii.b

Job.v.c

1.Corint.xv.c

Many of them that slepe in the dust of ẏ erth shal awake, some to the euerlasting lyfe, some to perpetuall shame and reproze. The wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster as the shynyng of heuen/and those that haue instruct the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the sterres, wozlde without ende.

Math.xiii.c

B And thou, O Daniel, shut vp these wozdes, and seale the boke til the last time. Many shal go about here and there, and then shal knowlege increase. So I Daniel lokes, and behold, there stode other two: one vpon this shoze of the water, the other vpō ponder syde. And one of them said vnto him, which was clothed in lynen, and stode aboue vpō the waters of the floode: Howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous wozkes?

Apoca.x.a

C Then herd I the man with the linē clothes which stode aboue vpon the waters of ẏ flood when he held vp his right and left hand vnto heuen, & sware by him which liueth for euer: that it shall tary for a time, two times & half a time: when the power of the holy people is clene scatred abzode, then shall all these thinges be fulfylled.

Apo.xi.c.xii.c

D I herd it wel, but I vnderstode it not. Then said I: O my Lozd, what shal happen after that? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wozdes shal be closed vp, and sealed, til the last time: and many shal be purified, clensed, and tried. But the vngodly shal liue wickedly, and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstandinge. As for suche as haue vnderstanding, they shal regarde it. And from that tyme forth that the daylye offringe shall be put wwne, and the abhominable desolacion set vp, there shall be a thousande, two hundreth, and .xc. dayes. O well is him that wayteth, and commeth to the. Mthze hundzed, and .xxxv. dayes. Goo thou thy waye now tyl it be ended, take thy reste, and byde in thy lot, tyll the dayes haue an ende.

Math.xiii.b

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Daniel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE OSEAS.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by takynge an harlotte to his wyfe, signifyeth the Idolatrye of the people. The destruction of the offsprynge of Jehu, and of the Israelytes is prophecyed.

CAPI. I.

THis is the wozd of the Lozde, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery i the dates of Oseas, Joathā, Achas, and Ezechias kynge of Juda: and in the time of Jeroboam the son of Joas kynge of Israell.

A

Fyrst when the Lozd spake vnto Oseas, he said vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the land hath committed great hoordom against the Lozde. So he went, and toke Gomer the doughter of Deblaim: which conceyued and brought forth a sonne. And the Lozde said vnto him: cal his name Jesrael, for I wil shortlye auenge the bloode of Jesrael vpon the house of Jehu, and wyll bynge the kyngedome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wil I breake the bowe of Israel in the valey of Jesrael.

B

Shy conceyued yet agayne, and bare a dougter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Lozubamah (that is, not optayninge mercye) for I wyll haue no pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembraunce. Neuertheles, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wyll saue theym, euen thozowe the Lozde their God. But I wil not helpe them thozowe anye bowe, sweorde, batell, horses or horsemen.

C

Now when she had weaned Lozubamah, she conceyued againe, and bare a sonne. Then said he: call his name. Lo amy. For wyp ye are not my people, therfore wyll not I be youres. And thoughe the nombze of the chyldren of Israell be as the sande of the see, whi the can neither be measured ne tolde: yet in the place, where it is sayde vnto them, ye be not my people: euē there shal it be thus reported of them: they be the childze of the lyuinge God. Then shal the children of Juda, and the chyldren of Israell be gathered togyther agayne and chose them selues one heed, & then departe out of the land: for great shal be the daye of Israel.

D

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

CAPI. II.

Tell

TEll your brethren, that they are my people: and youre systeren, that they haue obteyned mercy. As for your mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande, vnelle she put away her hoordome out of my sight, and her aduoutrye from her brestes. Yf no, I shal stryp her naked, and set her euen as she came in to the worlde: yea, I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernelle, and slee her for thyrste. I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornication.

Their mother hathe broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusion. For she sayde, I wyll goo after my louers, that gyue me my water and my breed, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my drynke. But I wyll hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her footesteppes: and thoughe she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. Then shall she say well, I wyll goo tourne agayne to my fyrste husbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then nowe. But this wolde she knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, siluer and golde, whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore nowe wyll I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set agayne my wolle and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. And now wyll I discouer her foolyshenelle, euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall delyuer her oute of my handes. Moreouer, I wyll take away all her myrth, her holy dayes, her newe moones, her Sabothes, and all her solemne feastes. I wyll destroye her vynepardes and fig trees, thoughe she saythe: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue gyuen me. I will make it a wodde, and the wylde beestes shall eate it vp: I wyll punyshe her also for the dayes of Baal, wherin she censed him, decked him with her eare rynges and cheynes: when she folowed her louers, and forgat me, sayth the Lorde.

Wherefore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, bryng her in to a wyldernelle, and speake frendlye vnto her: there wyll I gyue her her vynepardes agayne: yea, and the valleye of Achor also to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she synge there, as in the tyme of her youthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt.

Then (sayth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I wyll take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth/ yea she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then wyll I make a couenaunte with them, with the wild beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thyng that creepeth vpon the earthe.

As for bowe, swerde and battayle, I will destroye suche oute of the lande, and wyll make them to slepe safely. Thus wyll I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euer more:

yea, euen to my selfe wyll I marye the, in ryghtousnelle, in equitie, in louynge kyndenelle and mercye. In fayth also wyll I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalte knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyll I shewe my selfe frendly and gracyous vnto the heuens, sayth the Lorde: and the heuens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle. And they shall helpe Jesrael. I wyll sowe them vpon earthe, for a seed to myne owne selfe, and wyll haue mercye vpon her that was wythoute mercye. And to them which were not my people, I wyll saye: thou arte my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God. Roman. ix. c. 1. Petri. ii. b

¶ Of the loue of God towarde the people.

CAPI. III.

THen sayde the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye, and wowe an aduoutrous woman whome thy neyghbour loueth, as the Lorde doth the children of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, and loue the wyne cannes. So I gat her for .xv. syluerlynges, and for an Homer and an half of barleye, and sayde vnto her: thou shalte byde with me a long season, but le that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou meddle with none other man, and then wil I kepe my selfe for the. A Ezechi. xlviii. d

Thus the children of Israel shal syt a great whyle without kyng and prynce, without offering and aulter, without preest and reuelacyon. But afterwarde shal the children of Israel conuert, and seke the Lord their God, and Dauid their kynge: and in the latter dayes they shall worshyp the Lorde, and his louing kyndnelle. B Ezec. xxxiii. d

¶ A complaynte agaynst the people and the preestes of Israel.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare the worde of the Lorde, O ye children of Israell: for the Lorde muste punyshe them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulnelle, there is no mercye, there is no knowlege of God in the lande: but swearynge, lyenge, manslaughter, theefte, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgyltynelle followeth an other. Therefore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all thy that dwel ther in, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the see shall dye. Yet is there none that wyll chasten nor reproue an other. The preestes whiche shoulde refourme other men, are become lyke the people. A

Therefore stombleth thou in the daye tyme and the Prophet with the in the night. I wil bryng thy mother to silence/ and why? my people perysshe, because they haue no knowlege B Daniel. iii. c Esay. v. d. Malach. ib Exod. xix. d

lege. Seinge then that thou hast refused vnderstandynge, therfore wyl I refuse the also: so that thou shalt no more be my preest. And for so moche as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy children. The more they increased in the multytude, the more they synned agaynste me, therfore wyll I chaunge their honoure in to shame. They eate vp the synnes of my people, and courage them in their wyckednelle. Thus the preest is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyll punyshe them for their wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to their owne ymagynacions. They shall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue vsed hoordome, therfore shall they not prosspere: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded him.

L Hoordome, wyne, and dronkennelle take the herte awaye. My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For an hoorysshe mynde hath disceyued them, so that they commyt fornicacion agaynste their God. They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne their incense vpon the hylles, yea amonges the okes, groues and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre doughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broken their wedlocke, I wyll not punyshe youre doughters for beynge dekyled, and youre bydes that became hoores: seinge the fathers them selues haue medled with harlottes, and offered vnthryftes: but the people that wil not vnderstande must be punyshed.

D Though thou Israel arte disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldest not haue runne to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, ne haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore shall make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydolles / well let him goo. Their dronkennelle haue put the backe, and brought them to hoorsome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bringe (saye they) to their owne shame. A wynde shall take holde of their fethers, and they shall be confounded in their offeringes.

¶ Agaynst the preestes and rulers of Israel. The helpe of man can do nothynge agaynst God.

CAPI. V.

A O Ye preestes: heare this, take hede, O thou houshold of Israel: gyue eare, O thou kyngly house: for this punishmēt wil come vpon you that are becom a snare vn to Mizphah, and a spred net vnto the mount of Thabor. They kyll sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I punish them al. I know Ephraim wel inough and Israell is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, & Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an horish hert, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

But the pryde of Israell wyll be rewarde him in his face: yea both he Israel and Ephraim shall fall for their wickednelle, and Juda with them also. They shall come with their shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused him and brought vp bastarde children: a moneth therfore shall deuour them, with their possessions. Blowe with the shawmes at Gabaa, & with the trompet in Ramah, crye oute at Bethauen vpon the backeside of Benjamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore vpō I faythfully warne the tribes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Juda become like them that remoue the landemarkes, therfore wil I poure out my wrathe vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrines of men. Therfore wyll I be to Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his sycknelle, and Juda his disease: Ephraim went vnto Assur, & sent vnto king Jareb, yet could not he helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wyll spoyle them and goo my waye. I wyll take them with me and no man shall rescue them. I wyll go, and retourne to my place, tyll they waxe sayne, and seke me.

¶ Affliction causeth a man to returne to God. The wyckednelle of the preestes.

CAPI. VI.

IN their aduersitie they shall seke me, and saye: come lette vs tourne agayne to the Lorde: for he hath smitten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shal he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in his syght. Then shal we haue vnderstandynge, and endeuour our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall goo forthe as the spryngе of the daye, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and mornynge rayne vpon the erth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda how shall I entreate the? seinge youre loue is like a mornyng cloude, and like a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to light.

For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnelle, & not in offeryng: yea in the knowlege of God more then in burntsacrifice. But euen like as Adam did, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Galaad is a city of wicked wers, of malicious people & bloudshedders. The multytude of the preestes is lyke an hepe of theues, murtherers, and bloudthirsty:

for

for they haue wrought abhominacion. Horrible thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an haruest for him selfe, when I returne the captiuitie of my people.

¶ Of the vyces and wantonnesse of the people.

CAPI. VII.

When I vndertake to make Israel hole, then the vngraciousnesse of Ephraim, and the wyckednesse of Samaria commeth to lyghte: then goo they aboute with lyes. At home they be theues, and without they fall to robbynge. They consydre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wyckednesse. They goo aboute with theyr owne inuencions, but I se them well ynoughe. They make the kynge and the Prynces to haue pleasure in their wyckednesse and lyes. All these burne in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hathe lefte kneadynge, tyll the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges and Prynces, for they begynne to be wodde dronken thorowe wyne: they vse familiaritie with suche as discreyue them. They with the ymagination of theyr herte are lyke an ouen, theyr slepe is all the nyghte lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mornyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all togyther as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges, all theyr kynges are fallen, yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge the Heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man tourneth: Straungers haue deuoured his strengthe, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of greye heeres, yet wyll he not knowe it: and the pryde of Israell is caste downe before theyr face, yet wyll they not tourne to the Lorde theyr God, nor seke him for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a woue that is begyled and hath no herte. Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goo they to the Assirians: But whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall sprede my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: and accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyll I punysh them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me.

They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hertes, but lye howling vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come togyther, it is but for meate and drynke, and me wyll they not obeye. I haue taught them and defended their arme, yet do they ymagyn mischiefe agaynste me, they tourne them selues, but not a righte, and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shall be slayne with the swerde, for the malyce of their tunges, suche blasphemyes haue they lerned in the lande of Egypte.

¶ The destruction of Juda and Israel, because of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. VIII.

Set the horne to thy mouthe, and blowe: A get the swyftly (as an Egle) vnto the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my couenaunt, and transgressed my law. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we Deute. xxvi. D is good, therfore shall the ennemy folow vpō him. They haue ordeyned kinges, but not tho they made them ymages, to bring them selues to destruction.

Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken a- B waye, for my wrothfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe wyll it be, or they can be cleensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the calfe of Samaria be tourned. They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they repe a storme.

Theyr sede shall beare no corne, there shall no mele be made of theyr encrease: thoughe they repe, yet shal straungers deuour it vp. Israel shall perish, the Gentyles shall entreate him as a foule vessell. Sence they went vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wylde asse in the desert.

Ephraim gyueth rewardes to get louers, C therfore are they scattered amonge the Heathen, there wyl I gather them vp. They shal soone be wery of the burthen of kynges and princes. Ephraim hathe manye aulters to doo wyckednesse, therfore shall the aulters tourne to his synne. Thoughe I shewe them my lawe neuer so mothe, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacri-fyce, offeryng the flesshe, and eatynge it:
the Lorde wyll haue no pleasure therin: but D wyll remembre their wyckednesse, and pu-nysshe theyr synnes. Israell tourneth agayne in to Egypte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they buylde churches, and Juda maketh many stronge cityes: therfore will I sende a fyre in to theyr cityes, and it shal consume their places.

¶ Of the hungre and captyuytye of Israel.

CAPI. IX.

Do not thou reioyce, O Israel, make A no boastynge more then the Heathen, for thou hast committed aduoutrye a- Isa. lxv. d gaynste thy God: thy straunge rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the corne floores.
Therfore shall they no more enioye the corne floores and wine presses, and their swete wine shall fayle them. They wyll not dwell in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim tourneth agayne in to Egypte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure oute no wyne for a drynkofferynge vnto the Lorde, neyther gyue they hym their slayne offrynges: but they be vnto me as mourners meates, wherin all they that eate them are defiled. For the breed that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come in to the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solemne dayes, and in the feaste of the Lorde? Loo, they shall get them away for the destruction, Egypte shall receyue theym, and Noph shall bury them.

B The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and burres shal be in theyr tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hande. As for the Prophete, ye holde him for a foole: and him that is ryche in the spiryte for a madde man: so greate is youre wyckednelle and malyce. Ephraim hathe made hym selfe a watche man of my God, a Prophete that is become a snare to woo hurte in euerye strete, and abhominacion in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore time at Gabaa. Therfore their wickednelle shall be remembred, and their synnes punysshed.

C I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyldernelle, and sawe theyr fathers as the fyrste fygges in the top of the fygge tree, but they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye fro me to that shametull ydoll, and are become as abhompnable as their louers. Ephraim fleeth lyke a byrde, so shall theyr glorye also. In so mocke that they shall neyther begette, conceyue ne beare chyldren. And though they bringe vp any, yet wyll I make them childelesse among men. Yea wo shal come to them, when I departe frō the. Ephraim (as me thinke) is planted in welthinelle, lyke as Tyrus, but now muste the bringe her owne chyldren forth to the manslear.

Gene. xlviii.a

D O Lorde thou shalt gyue them/what shalt thou gyue them? Gyue them an vnfrutefull wombe, and dryes brestes. All their wickednes is done at Galgal, there wo I abhorre them. For the vngratiousnelle of their owne inuencions, I will dryue them oute of my house. I wil loue them no more, for all their pryuces are vnfaythfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their rote is dryed vp, so that they shal bryng no more frute: yea, and though they bringe forth any, yet wil I slee euen the best beloued frute of their body. My God shall cast them awaye, for they haue not ben obedient vnto hym, therfore shall they goo astraye amonge the Heathen.

CAPI. X.

A Israell was a goodly vyne, but he bathe brought forth vnprofitable frute: yea the more frute he had, ye mo aulters he made:

Elaye. v.a

the more good I dyd to their lande, the more frent shyp shewed they vnto their ymages. Their herte is deuyded, therfore wyll they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge: for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shal then the kyng do to vs? They common togither, and swere vayne othes: they be cōfederate togither, therfore groweth their punysshment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshypped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them: yea, and the preestes also that in theyr welthynelle reioyced with theym: and why? It shall passe awaye from them. It shall be brought to the Assyrians for a present vnto kynge Jareb. Ephraim shall receyue full punysshment: Israel shell be confounded for his owne ymaginacions / Samaria with his kynge shall vanysh awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Auen, where Israel dyd synne, shal be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall grow vpon their aulters. Then shall they say to the mountaynes, couer vs/and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

Osee. v.a
Amos. v.a

O Israel, thou hast synned as Gaba dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: sholde not the battayle then come vpon the wycked children as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wil chasten them, euen after myne owne delyre, the people shall be gathered togyther ouer them, when I punyshe them for their greate wyckednelle.

Iudic.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe that is vsed to go to plow, therfore I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre necke. I dyd oue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Jacob played the husbandman: that they myght sowe vnto ryghteousnelle, and repe the frutes of well doing: that they myght plowe vp theyr freshe lande, and seke the Lorde, tyll he came, and lerned them ryghteousnelle.

Osee.

But nowe they haue plowed them wyckednelle, therfore shall they repe synne, and eate the frute of lyes. Seinge thou puttest thy confidence in thyne owne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy worthyes: there shall growe a sedicion amonges thy people. All thy stronge cityes shall be layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his symplers, thorowe hym that was auenged of Arbell in the daye of battayle, where the mother perysshed with her chyldren. Euen so shall it goo with you (O Bethel) bycause of your malicious wickednelle. Lyke as the morninge goeth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

¶ Agaynste the vnkyndenelle of Israel.

CAPI. XI.

When Israel was yong, I loued him/and called him my sonne out of the lande of Egypt. But the more they were called, the a Exod. iiii.a more they went backe, offeryng vnto Idols and ceruynge Images: I lerned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue holped them. I led them with cordes of frendshyp, and with bandes of loue. I was euē he, that layed the yocke vpon their neckes. I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not go agayne into Egypte. And nowe is Assur their kinge: For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the swearde begynne in their cities, the sture that they haue layed vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that because of their owne imaginations. My people hath no lust to turne vnto me, their prophetes lay the yocke vpon the, but they ease them not of their burthen.

What great thinges haue I gyuen the, O Ephraim? how faythfully haue I defended the, O Israel? haue I dealt with the as with Adama: or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim? No: my hert is otherwyse mynded.

Yea my mercy is to feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrothful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I come not within the eyne.

The Lorde rorreth lyke a lyon, that they may folowe him: yea as a lyon rorreth he, that they may be afrayde lyke the chyldren of the see: that they maye be scattered awaye from Egypt, as men scarre byrdes: and frayed awaye (as doues vse to be) frome the Assirians lande: and that because I wolde haue them tary at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goth about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissemblyeth. Only Juda holdeth him with God, and with the true holy thynges.

¶ Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

CAPI. XII.

Ephraim kepeth the ayre, and followeth after the east wynde: he is euer increasing lyes and destruction. They confederate with the Assirians, their oyle is carryed in to Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde with Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob: After their owne wayes accordyng to theyr owne inuencions, shal he recō pēse the. He toke his brother by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: & in his strength he wrestled with God. He stroue with the angel, and gat the victorye: so that he prayed and desyred hym. He found him at Bethel, and there he talked with vs.

Yea the Lorde God of hoostes, euen the Lorde him selfe remembreth hym: Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a false weight in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occupy extorcion. Ephraim thynketh thus ¶ Tush, I am rych, I haue good ynough: In all my workes shall not one faut be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lord thy God, euen as whē I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the highe feaste dayes.

I haue spoken thorow the Prophetes, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my self by the mynystracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are fallen to vanitie. At Galgall they haue slayne oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their lande forowes, so many aulters haue they made. Jacob fled into the lande of Syria, and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe.

By a Prophete the Lorde brought theym out of Egypte, and by a Prophet he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhominacyōs, therfore shall his bloud be poured vpon him self and the Lorde his God shall rewarde hym his blasphemyes.

¶ Of the abhominacyons of Israel.

CAPI. XIII.

The abhominacion of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therfore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: of theyr syluer they make the molte Images, lyke the Idolles of the Heithen, and yet all is nothynge but the worke of the craftesman. Notwithstandyng they preache of the same: who so wyll kysse the calues, offereth to men. Therfore they shal be as the morynge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as the dust that the winde taketh away from the floure, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde thy God, whiche brought the out of the land of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely: and that thou shuldest haue no Sauioure but onely me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernesse that drye lande. But when they were wel fed and had ynough, they waxed proude and forgat me. Therfore wyl I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a Leopardein the waye to the Assirians. I wyll come vpon them as a she beer, that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyll breake that stubburne hert of theirs. There wyll I deuoure them as a lyon: yea the wylde beastes shall teare them.

O Israel, thou wost but destroye thy selfe. In me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges nowe, that shulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yea and thy iudges, of whom thou saidest, gyue me a kynge and Princes? well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyll I take him from the agayne. The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne layed vpon. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he consydreth not, that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in ỳ tyme of his byrth, had not I defended him from the graue, and deliuered him from death.

O death, I wyll be thy death: O hell, I wyl be thy stynge. Yet can I se no comforte, for Hebr.ii.b Ecclus.xlv.d for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the brethren, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lord) shall come downe from the wildernesse, and drye vp his conduites, and drynke vp his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shal be made waste, and why? they are disobedyente vnto their God. They shall perysshe with the swerde; iiii.Re.xvii.a their children shall be slayne and their women great with childe shall be rypte vp.

¶ The destruction of Samaria.

CAPI. XIIII I.

A Jere.xviii.a ezech.xviii.e xxxiii.c iii.Re.xii.e O Israel, turne the nowe, vnto the Lorde thy God, for thou hast taken a greate fal throw thy wickednes. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to ỹ Lorde and saye vnto him: O forgiue vs al our sinnes receyue vs graciously, and then wyl we offre the bullockes of our lyppes vnto the. Assur shall be no more oure helper, neither wyll we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the workes of oure handes, we wyll no more call vpon them: For it is thou that arte our God, thou shewest euer mercye vnto the fatherlesse.

B (Yf they wolde do this) I shulde heale their sores: yea with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from them. Yea I wolde be vnto Israell as the dewe, and he shulde growe as the lylye, and his rote shulde breake oute as Libanus. His braunches shulde spreade out abrode and be as fayre as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadowe, shulde come agayne, and growe vp as the corne, and flourysshe as the vyne: he shulde haue as good a name, as the wine of Libanus.

C O Ephraim what haue I to do with Idoles any more? I will graciously heare him, & lede him forth. I wyll be vnto the as a grene fyrre tree, vpō me shalt thou finde thy frute.

D Who so is wise, shal vnderstand this: and he that is ryght instructe, wyll regard it. For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous such as be Godly wyll walke in them: As for the wycked, they wyll stomble ther in.

¶ A prophecye agaynst the Jewes. He exhorteth the prestes to prayer and fastynge, for the myserye that was commynge at hande.

CAPI. I.

THis is the word of the Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare, O ye elders: ponder this wel all ye that dwell in the land: if euer there happened suche a thinge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre children of it, and let them shewe it vnto their children, and so they to certyfye their posteritye therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath the grashopper eaten vp: what the grashopper lefte, that hath the locust eaten vp: and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed. Make vp ye dronkardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wynesuppers, because of youre swete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from youre mouthe. B Yea a myghtye and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my land: these haue teeth like the teeth of lyons, and chaftbones lyke the lyonesses. They shal make my vineyard wast Deut.xx they shall pyll of the barckes of my fygtrees, strype them bare, take them away, & make the braunches whyte.

Make thy mone as a virgyn dothe that gyrdeth her self with sack, because of her bridegrome. For the meate and drinckoffrynge shal be taken awaye from the house of the Lorde: and the prestes the Lordes ministers shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a myserable case: for the corne shall be destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusion, and the oyle vtterlye desolate. The housbande men and the wyne gardeners shal loke pyteously & make lamentacio for the whete, wyne and barly, because the harvest vpon the felde is so cleane destroyed. C The grape gatherers shall make greate mone, when the vyneyarde and fygtrees be so vtterlye wasted.

Yea all the pomgarnetes, palmetrees, apple trees, and the other trees of the felde shal wyther awaye. Thus the the merye cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O ye prestes: mourne ye mynysters of the aulter go youre waye in, and slepe in sack clothe, O ye officers of my God: for the meate and drinck D 3.esdr.ii offrynge shall be taken awaye from ỹ house of youre God. Proclayme a fastynge, cal the congregation, gather the elders and al the inhabyters of the lande to gither into ỹ house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto ỹ Lord alas, alas, for this daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Shal not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myrth also and ioye from the house of oure God? The seed shal perysh in the ground, the garners shal lye wast, the floores shalbe broken down, for the corn shal be destroyed. O what a lyghinge make the catel? the bullockes are very euell lykinge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are fampished awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodlye pastures of the wyldernesse, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde. Yea the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the waterr ruers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

The prophecyeth the cruelnesse and crueltye of theyr enemyes. An exhortation to moue them to conuert.

CAPI. II.

BLowe out the trompet in Sion, & crye vpon my holy hyll, that all suche as dwell in the the lande, maye tremble at it: for the day of the Lord commeth, and is hard at hand: a darcke day, a gloompng day a cloudy day, yea & a stormy day, lyke as the morynge spredeth out vpon the hylles: Namely, a great and myghty people: suche as haue not bene sene sens the begynnynge, neither shal be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre and behynde him a burnynge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very waste wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shall escape him. They are to loke vpon lyke barded horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They skyppe vp vpon the hilles, as it were the sound of charrettes, as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the battel.

The folke shall be afrayed of him, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot. These shall runne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Euery man in his goinge shall kepe his araye, and not go out of his path. There shal not one dryue an other, but eche shall kepe his owne way. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurt They shal come into the citie, and runne vpō the walles: They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and styp in at the windowes lyke a theefe The earth shall quake before him, yea the heauens shall be moued: The sonne and Moone shall be darckened and the starres shall withdraw their shyne. The Lord shall shewe his voyce before his host, for his hoste is greate, stronge and myghtye to fulfyll his commaundement. This is that greate and marueylous fearfull daye of the Lorde: And who is hable to abyde it.

Nowe therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with fastynge weppynge and mournynge, rent youre hertes, and not your clothes. Turn you vnto the Lorde your God, for he is gracyous and mercyfull longe sufferinge and of great compassion: and redy to pardon wickednes. The (no doubte) he also shal turne, and forgyue: & after his chastenynge, he shall let youre increase remayne, for meat and drinckofferynges vnto the Lorde youre God: Blowe out with the trompet in Sion, proclayme a fasting, cal the congregacyon, and gather the people togither: warne the cōgregation, and gather the elders, bring the children and sucklynges to gyther. Let the the brydgrome go forthe of his chambre, & the bryde out of her closet. Let the preestes serue the Lorde betwene the porche and the aulter wepinge and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusion, leest the Heithen be lordes therof. Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the heithen where is nowe their God?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea the Lorde shall answere, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyll sende you corne, wine, & oyle, so that ye shal haue plentye of them: and I wyll no more gyue you ouer to be a reproche amonges the heithen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dryue him farre from you: and shut him out in to a dry and waste land his face toward the east see: and his hindre partes toward the vttermost see. The stynck of hym shall go vp, and hys fylthy corruptiō shal fal vpon him selfe, because he hath dealt so proudely.

Feare not (O land) but be glad and reioice for the Lorde wyl do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed neither (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene and the trees shal beare their frute: the fygtrees and vine yardes shal gyue their increase.

Be glad then (O ye children of Sion) and reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousnesse: and he shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, early and late in the fyrste moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wine and oyle. And as for the yeres that the grashopper, locuste, blastynge and caterpyller (my greate hoaste, whiche I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore the to you agayne: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satysfyed: & praise the name of the Lord your God, that so marueylously hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal wel knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am youre God yea & that there is none other, & my people shall no more be brought to confusion.

After this, wil I poure out my spirite vpō all flesshe: and youre sonnes and doughters shall prophecye: youre old men shal dreame dreames, and youre yonge men shall se visions, yea those dayes wyll I power oute my spirite vpon seruauntes and maydes. I wyl shew wonders in heauen above, and tokens in the earthe beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shall be turned

Math.xxiiii.c Luke.xxi.e Roma.x.b

turned into darckenesse, and the moone in to blonde: before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come that who so euer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Sion and at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacion, lyke as the Lord hath promysed: yea and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

¶ Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of his people.

CAPI. III.

A For take hede: in those dayes & at ꝑ same tyme when I turne agayne the captyuitie of Juda and Jerusalē: I shal gather all people togither, and bringe them in the valleye of Josaphat: and there will I reason with them: because of my people and heritage of Israel: whome they haue scatered about in the nacions, and parted my land: yea they haue cast lottes for my people the yong mē haue they set in ꝑ brodel house, and solde the Damsels for wyne that they myght haue to drincke. Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do wt me? Wyl ye defy me? wel, if ye wil nedes defye me, I shal recōpence you, euen vpon your heade, and that rygh te shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my siluer and golde, my kaye and goodly Jewels, and brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto that Grekes, that ye myght bringe them farre from the borders of their owne countreyes.

B Ezech.xxvi.a xxviii.xxviii Amos.i.b

Jeremi.xxx.a Ibdi.i.c

Beholde therfore, I will raise them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, & will rewarde you euen vpon youre heade. Youre sonnes & your doughters wyl I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shall sprue them forth to sel, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it. Cry out these thinges amonge ꝑ Gētyles, proclayme warre wake vp the gialntes, let them drawe nygh, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of the. Make you swerdes of your plowshares, and speares of youre sythes and sythes. Let the weake man saye: I am stronge. Make you, and come, al ye Gētyles rounde about: gather you togyther, there shal the Lord lay al the gyaūtes to the grounde. Let the people aryse, and get them to the valley of Josaphat: for there wyll I syt, and iudge all Gētyles rounde about. Laye to your sythes, for the haruest is ripe, come get you downe, the wynepresse is ful, yea the wynepresses runne ouer, for their wickednesse is waxen greate.

In the valley appoynted, there shal be many, many people, for the day of the Lorde is nygh in the valley appoynted. The sunne & moone shall be darckened, and the starres shal withdrawe their lyght. The Lorde shal rore out of Sion, and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heuens and the earth shal quake withal. But the Lord shalbe a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lord your God dwell vpon my holy mount of Sion. Then shal Jerusalem be holy, and there shal no straungers go thorow her any more. Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, & the hilles shal flowe with mylcke. All the ryuers of Juda shal haue water ynoughe, and out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a spryngе to water the broke of Sittim: but Egypte shal be layed waste, and Edom shal be desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with the chyldren of Juda, and shed innocēt blonde in their lande. Agayne, Juda shal be inhabyted for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generacīō: for I wyll not leaue their blonde vnauenged. And the Lorde shal dwel in Sion.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Joel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AMOS.

The tyme of the propheteye of Amos. The word of the Lorde agaynst Israh, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the sonnes of Ammon.

CAPI. I.

THese are the sermõs that were shewed vnto Amos (whi che was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Osiah kinge of Juda, & in the time of Jeroboam the sonne of Joah kinge of Israel, two yere before the earth quake. And he sayd: The Lord shall roze out of Sion, & shewe his voyce frõ Jerusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shall be in a miserable case, and ỹ top of Charmel dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lord for thre and foure wickednesses of Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue threshed Galaad with yron flailes: But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, ỹ same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the feld of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaũt house so ỹ the people shal be dryuen out of kayre Syria, sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesse of Gaza, I wyll not spare her: because they make the prysoners yet moze captyue, and haue dryuen them in to the lãde of Edom. Therfoze will I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wyll rote out them that dwel at Asdod and him that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shal perysshe sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the cytye of Tire, I wyl not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuite of the Edomytes, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfoze wyll I sende a fyre in to the walles of Tire that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Edom I will not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very lõg and so kept indignacion alway by him. Therfoze will I sende a fyre into Theman whiche shall deuoure the palaces of Bosca.

Thus sayth the Lord: For thre and foure wickednesses of the children of Ammon I wil not spare them: because they rypte vp ỹ women great with chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces with a greate crye, in the daye of battayle, in tempest and in the day of storm: so that their kinge shall go into captiuitie he and his prynces togither, sayth the Lorde.

Agaynst Moab, Juda, and Israel.

CAPI. II.

THus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wil not spare him: because he brente the bones of the king of Edom to asshes. Therfoze wyll I sende a fyre into Moab, whiche shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perisshe with a noyse and the sõde of a shawme. I wil rote oute the iudge from amonge them and slaye all his princes with him sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Juda, I wyll not spare him: because he hath caste aside the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why, they wolde nedes be disceyued with ỹ lyes, that their forefathers folowed. Therfoze wyl I send a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wil not spare him: because he hath solde the ryghtous for money, and the poore for shoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and ỹ father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holye name, they lye beside euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes they drinke ỹ wine of the oppressed.

Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them that was as hygh as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: not withstandynge I destroyed his frute frome aboue and his rote frome vnder.

Agayne: I brought you oute of the lande of Egypt, and led you .xl. yeares thorowe the wildernesse, that ye myght haue the Amorites lande in possession. I rayled vp Prophetes amonge your children, and abstayners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue the abstayners wine to drynke, yea ye commannded the prophetes, saying, Prophecy not. Beholde, I wil crasshe you in sondre lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is ful of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neither the stronge be able to do any thinge, no, the giaunt shall not saue his owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, & the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a giaunt, shall in that daye be faine to runne his waye naked, sayth the Lorde.

CAPI. III.

Heare

A HEare what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye children of Israel) namely, vnto all the tribes, whom I brought out of Egipt and said: you only haue I accepted from all the generations of the earthe: therfore will I visite you in all youre wickednesses. Haue twayne walke togither except they be agreed amõg them selues? Doth a lyon roze in the wod, except he haue a pray? B Or cryeth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten some thinge? Doth he a byrde fal in a snare vpon the earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare vp frõ the grounde, afore he catch somwhat? Crye they oute Alarum with the trompette in the citie, and the people not afrayde? Commeth there any plage in a city but it be þ Lordes bouge? Nowe doth the Lorde God no mather of thinge, but he reuleth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon roreth, who will not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lorde God him selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophecye?

C Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togyther vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se great murther and violent oppressyon amonges them: for why, they regard not the thyng that is right saith the Lorde, they gather to gether euell gotten goodes, and laye robbery in their houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: This D lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde about, thy strength shal be pluckte from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth þ Lord, lyke as an herdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the chyldren of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, vaynge their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shall be pluckte awaye. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Iacob (sayth the Lorde God of hoostes) that when I begyn to vysett the wyckednesse of Israel, I wyll vysett the aulters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of þ aulter shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

Amo. iii. xvi. xvii.

As for the winter house and sõmer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of Iury, yea and many other houses shal perysshe, and be destroyed, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Agaynst the gouernors of Samaria.

CAPI. IIII.

A OHeare this worde ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to youre lordes: bring hither let vs drinke. Therfore þ Lord hath swoorne by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be lyfte vp vpon speares, & your posterite caryed away in fyshers panyers. Ye shal get you out at þ gappes one after an other, and in Armon shal ye be cast away, sayth the Lorde.

Psal. xxii. b

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngraciousnesse, and haue increased youre synnes at Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the morynge and your tythes vnto the thirde daye. B Ye made a thanckofferynge of leuen, ye promysed freewyllofferinges, and proclaymed them. Such luste had ye, O ye children of Israel, saith the Lorde God. Therfore haue I gyuen you yble teeth in al your cytyes, and scarcenesse of bred in all your places yet wyll ye not turne vnto me sayth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto the harueste, I withholde the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one citie, and not vpon an other one pece of grouñ was moystured with raine and the grounde that I rayned not vpõ was dry. Wherfore two, yea thre cytyes came vn C to one to drincke water: but they were not satisfyed, yet wil ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde.

Amo. iiii. Deute. xxviii. Leuit. xxvi. Deute. xxviii.

I haue smytten you with drouth & blasting and loke how many orchardes, vineyardes, fygtrees and olyue trees ye had: the caterpyller hathe eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth þ Lord. Pestilence D haue I sent among you, as I dyd in Egypte your yong men haue I slayne with the sworde and caused your horses be taken captyue: I made the stinckinge sauoure of your tentes to come vp in to your nostrels: Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a brande pluckt out of the fyre. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Therfore thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, ye euen thus wyll I handle the. Make the redy then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is about to do, he maketh the morynge and the darknes, he treadeth vpon the hygh places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

Amo. iiii. Genes. xix. Deute. xxix. Esay. i. Hiere. v.

¶ A complaynt of the captyuytye of Israel.

CAPI. V.

HEare this worde, O ye house of Israel and why? I must make this mone for A you: The virgyn Israell shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shall be caste downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelte a thousande in one cytye, there shall be left scarce an hundreth therin: and wher there dwelte an hundreth there shall scarce ten be lefte for the house of Israel.

Amo. v. Esay. xxxi. Hiere. xxxi. Iere. xxxi. Amo. v. Iere. xxxi. Esay. xxxi. Hiere. xxxi.

Neuertheles, thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue but seke not after Bethel. Come B not at Galgal, & go not to Berseba: for Galgal shall be caryed awaye captyue, and Bethel shall com to nought. Seke the Lorde, þ ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be brent with fire and consumed, & lest there be none to quenche Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwod, and caste downe bowne ryghteousnesse vnto the grounde. The Lorde maketh the seuen sterres and the Orions, he tourneth the nyghte in to daye, and of the daye he maketh darckenesse. He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name.

He rayseth destruction vpon the myghtye people, and bryngeth downe the strong holde: but they owe him euyll wyll that reproueth them openly: and who so telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre him. For so moche then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his best substaunce: therefore where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunte vyneardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of youre wyckednesses, and youre stoute synnes, I knowe them ryghte well. Ennemyes are ye of the ryghteous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgemente. Therefore the wyse muste nowe be fayne to holde his tonge, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thynge that is good, and not euyll, so shall ye lyue: yea the Lord God of hoostes shall be with you, accordynge to youre owne desyre: hate the euyll, and loue the good: set vp ryght agayne in the porte: and (no doubte) the Lorde God of hoostes shall be mercyfull vnto the remnaunt of Ioseph. Yet no (sayth the Lorde God, the God of hoostes) there shall be mournynge in all stretes: yea they shall saye in euerye strete, alas alas.

They shall cal the husbande man to lamentacion, and suche as can mourne to mournynge. In all vyneardes there shall be mournynge, for I wyll come amonges you, sayth the Lorde.

Woo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde: Wherefore wolde ye haue it: As for that daye of the Lorde, it shall be darcke and not clere: Yea ryghte as when a man runneth from a lyon, and a beare meeteth with him: or when he commeth in to the house, and leaneth his hande vpon the wall, and a serpent biteth him. Shall not the day of the Lorde be darke, and not clere? shall it not be cloudy, & no lyght in it?

I hate and abhorre youre holye dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together I wyll not accepte it. And thoughe ye offre me brent offerynges and meate offerynges, yet haue I no pleasure therin. As for youre fat thankofferynges, I wyll not loke vpon them.

Awaye with that noyse of thy songes, I wyll not heare thy playes of musycke: but let that equitie flowe as the waters, and ryghtousnesse as a myghtye steeme. O ye house of Israell, gaue ye me offerynges and sacrifyces those fortye yeres longe in the wyldernesse? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre Moloch, and ymages of youre ydolles, yea and the sterre of your god Kempha, figures whyche ye made to worshyp them. Therefore wyll I cause you be caryed awaye beyonde Damascus, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hoostes.

Against the prynces of Israel lyuynge in pleasures.

CAPI. VI.

Woo be to the proude welthy in Syon to suche as thynke themselues so sure vpon the mount of Samaria? whiche holde them selues for the beste of the worlde, & rule the house of Israel, euē as they lyst. Go vnto Caine, and se: and from thence get you to Hemath the great citye, & so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of theyr land wyder then youres? Ye are taken oute for the euyll daye, euen ye that syt in the stoole of wyckednesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes of Iuorye, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon youre couches: ye that eate the beste lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: ye that synge to the Lute, and in playinge the instrumentes compare youre selues vnto Dauid: ye that dryncke wyne oute of gobblettes, and annoynte youre selues with the beste oyle, but no man is sorye for Josephs hurte. Therefore nowe shall ye be the fyrste of them, that shall be leade awaye captyue and the lusty chere of the wyckedd shall come to an ende.

The Lorde God hath sworne euen by him selfe (sayth the Lorde God of hoostes) I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I wyll gyue ouer the citye, with all that is therin: so that thoughe there remayne ten men in one house, they shal dye. So their next kynsfolkes, and the deed buryers shall take them, and carye awaye theyr bones, and saye vnto hym that is in the innermer house: is there yet any mo by the? And he shal answere they are all gone; holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they wolde not remembre the name of the Lorde.

Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houses þ they shal cleaue asunder. Who can run with horses, or plowe with oxen vpon the harde rockes of stone? For why, ye haue tourned true iudgemente in to bytternesse, and the frute of ryghtousnesse in to wormewodde. Yea, euen ye that reioyse in vayne thynges, ye that saye: haue not we obteyned hornes in oure owne strengthe? Well take hede, O ye house of Israell, sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: I wyll bryng a people vpon you, whiche shall trouble you, from the waye that goeth towarde Hemath in to the broke in the medowe.

Of the captyuytye of Israel and Juda.

CAPI. VII.

A The Lorde God shewed me suche a vysion: beholde there stode one that made grashoppers, euen when the corne was shotinge forth, after the kynge had clypt his shepe.

Nowe when they vndertoke to eate vp al the greene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyfull I beseeche the: who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be.

Agayn the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyshe withall, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea it consumed a parte alredye. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therin, and the Lorde God sayd: well, it shall not be.

B Moreouer he shewed me this vysyon: Beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered walle, and a maions trowell in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maions trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll laye the trowell amonge my people of Israell, and wyll no more ouerlie theym: but the hygde hyll chapelles of Isaac muste be layde waste, and the churches of Israell made desolate, and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stande vp agaynst it with the swerde.

C Vpon this sente Amasiah the Preest to Bethel, vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israell to rebell agaynste the, the lande can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue oute of theyr owne lande. iii. Reg. xxvii. a

And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canste se so well) and flee in to the land of Juda: get the there thy liuing and prophecye there, and prophecye no more at Bethel, for it is the kynges chapell, & the kynges courte. Amos. xxx. b

D Amos answered and sayde to Amasiah: As for me, I am neyther Prophete ne Prophetes sonne, but a keper of catteil. Now as I was breakynge downe mulberyes, and goynge after the catteil, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: Goo thy waye and prophecye vnto my people of Israell. And therfore heare thou now the worde of the Lord: Thou sayest: prophecye not agaynste Israell, and speake nothynge agaynste the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde: Thy wyfe shall be defyled in the cytye, thy sonnes and doughters shall be slayne with the swerde, and thy lande shall be measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vncleane lande, and Israell shall be dryuen out of his owne countrey. Zacharii. xiii. a ¶ Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde weareth that he wyll fulfyll the thynges whiche he hath determyned agaynst Israel.

CAPI. VIII.

The Lorde God shewed me this vysion and beholde, there was a maunde with sommer frute. And he sayd Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde with sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wyll no more ouerse them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be tourned in to sorowe, sayth the Lorde God. Many ded bodyes shall lye in euerye place, and be caste forth secretly. A

Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye in the lande, sayinge: When wyll the newe moneth be gone, that we may sell vytayle, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne: to make the bushell lesse, and the sycle greater? We shall set vp falsse waynghtes, that we may get the poore vnder vs with their money, and the nedye also for shoes: yea let vs sell the chaffe for corne. B Amos. viii. c

The Lorde hath swoorne agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theirs wyl I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble, & all they that dwell therin mourne for this? Shal not their destruction come vpon them lyke a water streme, and flowe ouer them, as the floode of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at none, and the lande to be darke in the cleare daye. Your hye feestes wyl I turne to sorow, and youre songes to mournynge: I wyll bynge sacke clothe vpon all youre backes, and baldnesse vpon euery heed: yea suche a mournyng wyll I sende them, as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende. C Jerem. Ezech. Joel. D

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earthe, not the hunger of breed, nor the thyrste of water: but an hongre to heare the worde of the Lorde: so that they shall goo frome the one see to the other, yea from the Northe vnto the East, runnynge aboute to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgins and the younge men perysshe for thyrste, yea euen they that swore in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truelye as thy God lyueth at Berlaba. Theyse shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

CAPI. IX.

I Sawe the Lorde standynge vpon the auter, and he sayde: smyte the worke chyrke, that the postes maye shake withall. For theyr couetousnesse shall fall vpon all theyr heades, and theyr posteritie shall be slayne with the swerde. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, ne be deliuered. A

Though

Thoughe they were buryed in the hell, my hande shal fetche them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I caste them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them oute, and bringe theym frome thence: Thoughe they crepe downe fro my syghte in to the depe of the see, I shall commaunde the serpent euen there to byte them: Yf they go awaye before their ennemies in to captiuitie, then shall I commaunde the swerde there to slee them.

Thus wyll I set myne eyes vpon theym, for ther harme, and not for ther welth. For when the Lorde God of hoostes touchety a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwelle therin, muste nedes mourne: And why? ther destruction shall aryse as euerye streame, and runne ouer them as the floode in Egypte.

He that hath his dwellynge in heuen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earthe: He that calleth the waters of the see, and powreth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lorde. O ye chyldren of Israell are ye not vnto me, euen as the Moryans, sayethe the Lorde? haue not I broughte Israell oute of the lande of Egypte, the Philistynes frome Capthor, and the Syrians frome Cyr? Beholde, the eyes of the Lorde are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it clene out of the earthe: Neuertheleße I wyl not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob sayth the Lorde.

For lo, this I promyse: though I sykte the house of Israell amonges all nacyons (lyke as they vse to sykte in a syue) yet shal not the smallest grauell stone fall vpon the earthe: But all the wicked doers of my people, that saye: Tushe, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perysshe with the swerde.

At that tyme wyll I buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp his gappes: and loke what is brokē, I shall repayre it: Yea I shal buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they maye possesse the remnaunte of Edom / yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name with them, sayethe the Lorde, whiche dothe these thinges. Act.xv.b Mich.vii.h

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayethe the Lorde) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, and the treader of grapes hym that soweth seed. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall be fruteful, and I wyll torne the captiuitie of my people of Israell: they shall repayre the waste cityes, and haue them in possession: they shal plant vyneyardes, and drynke the wine therof: they shall make gardens, and eatyng the frutes of theym. And I wyll plante theym vpon ther owne grounde, so that I wil neuer roote them out agayne frō ther land whiche I haue gyuen them, sayethe the Lorde thy God. D Joel.iii.c

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABDI.

¶ Agaynst Edom, and the trust that they had in rychesse.

CAPI. I.

A Ezec.xxviii.b xxxv.a Amos.i.c

THis is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdi: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken vpō Edom: We haue herd of the Lorde that there is an imbassage sent amonges the heathen: Vp, lette vs aryse and fyght agaynste them. Beholde, I wyll make the small amonge the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despysed. The pryde of thyne Jerem.xlix.c herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stone, and hast made the an hye seate: Thou sayst in thyne hert: who shall caste me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Egle, Amos.ix.a Abacuc.ii.b and madest thy neste aboue amonge the sterres: yet wolde I plucke the downe frome thence. B Yf the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy reste, shoulde they not steale, tyll they hadde ynoughe? Yf the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leaue the some grapes? But howe shall they repe Esau, and seke oute his treasures?

Yea, the men that were sworne vnto the shall dryue the oute of the bordres of thyne owne lande. They that be nowe at one with the, shall discreue the and ouercome the: Euen they that eate thy breed shall betraye the or euer thou perceyue it. Shall not I of the C same tyme destroy all the wyse men at Edom, Esa.xxix.c i.Corinth.i.c and thole that haue vnderstandyng from the mount of Esau? Thy gyauntes, O Theman, shall be afrayde, for thorowe the slaughter they shal be all ouerthrowen vpon the moūt of Esau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malyce that thou shewedst to thy brother Jacob: yea for euermore shalt thou perysshe, and that bycause of the tyme when thou diddest set thy selfe agaynste him, euen when the Exod.xvii.c Numeri.xx.c enmemyes caryed awaye his hoste, and when the alyauntes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Jerusalem, & thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

D Thou shalte no more se the daye of thy brother, thou shalte no more beholde the tyme of his captiuitie, thou shalt no more reioyse ouer the childzen of Juda, in the day of their destruction, thou shalte triumphe no more in ỹ tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of their decay, thou shalt not se their misery in the day of their fall.

Thou shalte sende oute no man agaynste E their hoste, in the daye of theyr aduersitie: neyther shalte thou stande waytynge anye more at the corners of the stretes, to murther suche as are fledde, or to take them pryseners, that remayne in the daye of theyr trouble.

For the daye of the Lorde is harde by vpon Jeremy Joel.ii all the heathen. Lyke as thou haste done, so shalte thou be dealte withall: yea, thou shalte be rewarded euen vpon thyne heed. For lykewyse as ye haue dronken vpon myne holye hyll, so shall all Heathen drynke contynually: yea, dronke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer ben.

But vpon the mounte Syon, there shall a F Zacha.xiii remnaunt escape: theyse shall be holy, and the house of Jacob shall possesse euen those that had them selues afore in possession. Moreouer, the house of Jacob shall be a fyre, the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau shall be the strawe, whiche they shall kyndle and consume, so that nothyng shal be left Jeremy of the house of Esau, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayd it.

They of the South shall haue the mount G of Esau in possession, and loke what lyeth vpon the grounde, that shall the Philistines haue: the playne fyeldes shal Ephraim & Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shall Ben Jamin haue. And this hoste shal be the childrē of Israels pryseners. Now what so lyeth from Canaan vnto Zareptah, and in Hephatad, that shall be vnder the subiection of Jerusalem: and the cityes of the south shall enheryte it. Thus they that escape vpon the hyll of Sion, shall go vp to punysh the mounte of Esau, and the kyngdome shall be the Lordes.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IONAS.

¶ Of the flyghte of Jonas when he was sent to preache. A tempest aryseth, and casteth him in the see for his dysobedience.

CAPI. I.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: Aryse, and get the to Ninive that great cite, & preache vnto them, how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made him redye to flé vnto Tharsis from the presence of ꝑ Lord, and gat him downe to Joppa, where he found a shyp redye for to goo vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, & went aborde, that he might goo with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde in to the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see, so that the shyppe was in iopardye of goynge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast in to the see to lighten it of theym. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he layde him downe and slombred.

So the master of the shyp came to him and sayd vnto him, why slomberest thou? Vp, cal vpon thy God: ꝑ God (happily) wil thinke vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayd one to an other: come, let vs cast lottes, that we may knowe for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they caste lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Then sayd they vnto him: tel vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest thou? what countrey man art thou, and of what nacion? He aunswered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heuen, whiche made bothe the see and dry lande. Then were the men exceedingly afrayde, and sayde vnto hym: why dyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, bycause he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto him: What sholde we do vnto the that the see maye cease from troublynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he aunswered them: Take me and cast me in to the see, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is com vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowynge to bringe the shyp to lande, but it wolde not be, bycause the see wrought so, and was so troublous agaynste them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, let vs not perysshe for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge, for thou, O Lorde, haste done euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast him in to the see, and the see lett ragynge. And the men feared the Lorde exceedingly, doing sacrifices and making vowes vnto the Lorde.

¶ Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

CAPI. II.

BVt the Lorde prepared a great fysshe to swalowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in ꝑ belye of the fish, thre dayes and thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto ꝑ Lorde his God out of the fisshes belye, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the belye of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe depe in the myddest of the see, and the floude compassed me about: yea all thy wawes and coules of water wente ouer me, I thoughte that I had ben cast awaye oute of thy syghte: but I wyll yet agayne loke towarde thy holye temple.

The waters compassed me, euē to the very soule: the depe laye about me, and the wedes were wrapt about myne heed. I went downe to the bottome of the hylles, and was barred in with erth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lord, and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice w the voyce of thankesgyuynge, and wyll paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluation cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysshe, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

¶ Jonas is sende agayne to Ninive. The repentaunce of the kynge of Ninive.

CAPI. III.

THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp & get the to Ninive that great city, and preache vnto them the preching which I bad the. So Jonas arose, an went to Ninive at ꝑ Lordes cōmaundement. Ninive was a great cite vnto God, namely of thre dayes tourney.

And Jonas went to, & entred in to the city: euē a dayes tourney, and cried, sayinge: There are yet .xl. dayes, and then shal Ninive be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninive beleued God, and proclaymed fasting, and arayed the selues in sackcloth, as wel the great as ꝑ small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the king of Ninive, which arose out of his seate, & did his apparell of, and put on sackcloth, and sat him downe in asshes.

And it was cried and commaunded in Ninive, by the auctorite of the king and his lordes sayinge: se that neuther man nor beest, ore or shepe taste ought at all, and that they neither fede, ne drynke water, but put on sackcloth both man and beest, & cry mightyly vnto God: yea se that euery man turne from his euil waye, & from the wickednesse that he hath in hand.

D Who can tell? God may turne, and repent Ezech.xxxviii.d and cease frō his fearce wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their workes, how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euil which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and did it not.

¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A Therfore Jonas was sore discontent and angry. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, & sayd: O Lord was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my countrey? therfore I hasted rather to flē vnto Tharsis, for I know wel ynough that thou art a mercyful God, ful of compassion, longe suffering, and of great kyndnesse, and repentest when þ sholdest take punishment. And now, O Lorde, iii.Reg.xix.a take my lyfe fro me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat him out of the city, and sate downe on the east side therof: and there made him a boothe, and sat vnder it in the shadowe tyll he might se, what shulde chaunce vnto the city.

And the Lord God prepared a wylde vyne B which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe aboue his heed to delyuer him oute of his payne. And Jonas was exceedingly glad of the wylde vyne. But vpon the next morow against þ spring of the day, the Lorde ordeyned a worme, whiche smote the wylde vyne, so that it withered awaye. And when þ sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent East C wynd: and the sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas that he fainted agayn, and wished vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrye for the wylde vyne? And he sayd: yea, very angry am I, euen vnto death. And the Lorde sayd: thou D hast compassion vpon a wylde vyne, wherin thou bestowedst no labour, ne madest it grow: which sprang vp in one nighte, and perished in an other, and shold not I then haue compassion vpon Ninyue that great city, wherin there are aboue an hundred and twenty thousande persons, that knowe not their ryghte a hande from their lefte, beysides mocke cattell?

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Jonas.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MICHEAS.

¶ Of the destruction of Samaria, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

THis is the word of ỹ Lorde ỹ came vnto Micheas the Morasthite, in the dayes of Iothan, Achas and Ezechias kinge of Iuda: which was shewed him vpō Samaria and Ierusalem. Heare al ye people marke this well, O earthe, and that therin is: Yea the Lorde God him self be witnesse amonge you, euen the Lorde from his holye temple. For why? beholde, the Lord shal go out of his place, and come downe, and trede vpon the hyghe thinges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him, and ỹ valleyes shal cleaue a sondre: lyke as wax cōsumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downwarde. And al this shal be for the wickednesse of Iacob, & the synnes of the house of Israel.

B But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the high places of Iuda? Is not Ierusalem? Therfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in ỹ felde to lay about the vineyard: & her stones shal I cast in to the valley, and discouer her foundations. Al her Images shalbe broken down and all her winninges shall be brent in the fyre: yea all her Idols will I destroye: for why, they are gathered out of the hyre of an hore, and into an hores hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wyll mourne and make lamentacion, bare and naked will I go I must mourne like the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for their wound is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Iuda and hath touched the port of my people at Ierusalem alredye. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceyue it.

C Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost no more for very sorowe: & why? her neighboure shal take from her what she hath. The rebellyous citie hopeth, ỹ it shall not be so euel: but for al that, the plage shal come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Ierusalem. The great noyse of the charettes shal feare them: that dwel at Lachis, which is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in came vp the wickednes of Israel. Yea she sent her coursers into the lande of Geth.

D The houses of Ayes wyll disceyue the kinges of Israel. And as for the (O thou that dwellest at Horzalla) I shall bringe a possessioner vpon the, and the plage of Israell shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, & shaue the, because of thy tender children: Make ỹ cleane balde as an Egle for they shall be caryed awaye captyue from the.

¶ The threatenynges agaynst the synful people.

CAPI. II.

A OWo vnto them, that ymagyn to doo harme, and deuyse vngraciousnes vpō their beddes, to perfourme it in ỹ clere daye: for their power is agaynst God. Whē they couet land, they take it by violēce, they rob men of their houses. iii. Re. xxi

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, & euery man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Behold agaynste this housholde haue I deuysed a plage, wherounte ye shal not plucke your neckes: Ye shal no more go so proudly, for it will be a perlous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shall be made ouer you on this manet: We be vtterly desolate, the portyon of my people is translated. When wyll he part vnto vs the land, that he hath taken frō vs?

B Neuertheles there shall be no man to deuide the thy portion in the congregacion of the Lord. Tush, holde your tunge (say they) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion, sayth the house of Iacob? Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the that lyue righte but my people both the contrarye, therfore must I take parte agaynste them: for they take awaye both coote and cloke frome the symple. Num. xxxiiii.

C Ye haue turned youre selues to fighte, the women of my people haue ye shot out from their good houses, and taken away my excellent giftes frō their childre. Vp, get you hēce for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because of their Idolatrye they are corrupt, and shall myserably perysshe. If I were a fleshly felowe and a preacher of lyes, & told the that they myght syt bybbyng & bollinge and be dronken: O that were a Prophet for this people. But I wyll gather the in dede, D Iacob, and driue the remnaūt of Israel al togither I shal cary them one with an other as a flocke in the folde, and as the cattell in their stalles, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp the port and go in, and out at it. Their kinge shall go before them, and the Lorde shal be vpon the heade of them.

¶ Agaynst the tyrannye of prynces, and false prophetes.

CAPI. III.

A HEare, O ye heades of the house of Iacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel: Shulde not ye knowe, what were lawfull and right? But ye hate the good, & loue the euel: ye plucke of mens shynnes, & the Deu. xvii. d Ierem. v. a Psal. lxxxii. a the flesshe from their bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, flaye of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye chop them in peces as it were into a cauldrō, and as flesh into a pot. Nowe the tyme shall come, that when they call vn to the Lord, he shall not heare them, but hide his face frome them, because that thorowe their owne ymaginations they haue dealt so wyckedly.

B And as concernynge the Prophetes that disceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayethe agaynste them: When they haue anye thyng to byte vpon, then they preache that all shal be well: but yf a man put not some thing in to their mouthes, they preache of warre agaynste him.

C Therfore your vision shall be turned to nyght, and youre prophecying to darcknesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those Prophetes, and the daye shal be darcke vnto thē. Then shall the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea they shal be fayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. As for me, I am full of strengthe, and of the spirite of the Lord, full of iudgement and boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israel their synne.

D Heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thinge that is lawfull, and wrest alyde the thinge that is streight: Ye þ buylde vp Sion with bloude, and Jerusalē with doinge wronge. Deut.xvi.b Ezechi.xxii.b O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye prestes, ye teache for lucre: O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money. Jeremy. vi.b Yet will they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lorde amōg vs? Tushe, there can no mysfortune happen vs. Therfore shall Sion (for your sakes) be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shal become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the tēple shall be turned to an hye wod.

¶ Of the callynge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

CAPI. IIII.

A BVt in the latter dayes it wyll come to passe that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be set vp hyer then any mountayns or hilles: Yea the people shal preasse vnto it, Esaye.ii.a Leuit.xxvi.g and the multitude of the Gentyles shal haste them thither, sayinge: Come, let vs goo vp to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob, that ye may teache vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come oute of Syon, Psal.lx.a and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multytude of the Heathen, and reboume the people of farre cōtreys: so that of their swerdes they Esaye.xi.b shall make plowehares, and sythes of their speres.

B One people shall not lyfte vp a swerde agaynst an other / yea, they shall no more lerne to fyght: but euerye man shall syt vnder his vyneyarde and vnder his fygtre, and no man to feare him awaye: for the mouthe of the Lorde of hoostes hath spoken it. Therfore where as all the people haue walked euerye man in the name of his owne God we wyll walcke in the name of oure God for euer and euer. At the same tyme sayethe the Lord, will I gather vp the lame and the out castes and suche as I haue chastened: and wyll geue yssue vnto the lame, & make of the outcastes a greate people and the Lorde him selfe shal Gene. be their kinge vpon the mount Sion, frome L this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the (O thou towre of Eder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Sion) vnto the shal it come: euen the lordship and kingdom of the doughter Jerusalem. Why then arte thou nowe so heupe? is there no kinge in the? are thy counceilers awaye that thou arte so payned, as a woman in her trauayle? And nowe (O thou doughter Sion) be sory, let it greue þ as a wife labourynge with chylde: for now must thou get the oute of the cytye, and dwel vpon the playn feld: Yea vnto Babylon shalte thou go, there shalt thou be delyuered, & there the Micheas Lord shal lowse the frome the hand of thine ennemyes. D

Nowe also are there many people gathered togither agaynste the, sayinge: what Sion is cursed we shall se oure luste vpon her. Esay.xlvi But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lorde, they vnderstand not his counsel, that shall gather them togyther as the sheues in the barne.

Therfore get the vp, O thou doughter Sion, and threshe out the corne: For I wyl make thy horne yron, and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayste gepnde many people: their goodes shalt thou appropryate vnto þ Lord and their substaunce vnto the ruler of þ hole worlde.

¶ Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

CAPI. X.

AFter þ shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, A O thou robbers doughter: they shall laye siege agaynste vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And thou Bethleem Ephrata, arte lytle amonge the thousandes of Juda, Out of the Matth.ii.a Joha.vii. shall come vnto me, whiche shall be the gouernoure in Israel: whose out goynge hath bene from the begynnyge, and from euerlastynge.

In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, vntyl the tyme that she (which shal beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethre be conuerted vnto þ children of Israel. He shall stande fast, and geue fode in Eze.xxxiiii the strength of the Lorde, and in the hyghe Joel.ii.a of the name of the Lorde his God & when Roma.xi they be conuerted, he shall be magnifyed vn to þ farthest partes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assi- B rian maye come into oure lande, and treade in oure houses. We shall bringe vp seuen shepherdes and eyght princes vpon theym: these thete shall subdue the lande of Assur with ꝑ swerde, and the lande of Nimrod with their naked weapons. Thus shall he delyuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth his fote within oure borders.

L And the remnaũt of Jacob shalbe amõges the multytude of people, as the dew of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarryeth for no man, and wayteth of no body. Yea the residue of Jacob shall be amõges the Gentyles and the multytude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes, of the wodde, and as the lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: whiche when he goeth thorowe treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thine hande shall be lyfte vp vpon thine enemyes, and all thyne aduersaryes shal perish.

D The tyme shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I will take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cytyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. All witchcraftes will I rote oute of thine hande, there shall no more soothsayenges be within the. Thyne Idols and thyne Images will I destroye out of ꝑ, so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne owne handes. Thy grones will I plucke vp by the rotes, and breake downe the citits. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the heythen that will not heare.

¶ An exhortation to heare the iudgemẽt against Israel beyng vnkynde. what maner of sacrifyces doth please God.

CAPI. VI.

HErken now what the Lorde sayth: Vp reproue the mountaynes, and let the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare ꝑ punyshment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes and ye myghtye foundacions of the earthe: for the Lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurt the? gyue me answere. Because I brought the frõ the lande of Egypt, and delyuered the out of the house of bondage? Because I made Moses, Aron and Miriam to lede the? Remẽbre (O my people) what Balach ꝑ king of Moab had Imagined agaynste the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, frome Sethim vnto Galgall, that ye maye knowe the louinge kindnesses of the Lorde.

What acceptable thinge shall I offre vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my kne to the high God? Shall I come before him with brente offrynges, and with calues of a yere olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in manye thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I gyue my fyrstborne for mine offences, and the frute of my body for the sin of my soule? I will shewe the, o man, what is good, and what the Lord requireth of the:

Namely, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in louinge kindnesse, to be lowlye, and to walcke with thy God: that thou mayst be called a citye of the Lord, and that thy name may be ryghtousnesse. Heare (O ye tribes) who wold els gyue you suche warnynge? Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is mynyshed? Or shulde I iustyfye the false balaunces and the bagge of disceytfull weyghtes, among those that be full of ryches vnryghtously gotten: where the citisyns deale with falshed, speake lyes, & haue disceytful tunges in their mouthes?

D Therfore I will take in hande to punysh the & to make the desolate, because of thy sinnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea thou shalte bringe thy self downe. Thou shalt fle, but not escape: and those that thou woldest saue, will I delyuer to the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse oute olyues, but oyle shalte thou not haue to anoynte thy self withall: thou shalt treade out swete muste, but shalte drincke no wine. Ye kepe the ordynaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Achab: ye folowe their pleasures, therfore will I make the waste, and cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred; O my people: and thus shalte thou beare thine owne shame.

CAPI. VII.

WO is me: I am be come as one, that goeth a gleaynynge in the haruest. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with al my hert) haue of the best frut. There is not a godly man vpon earthe, there is not one ryghtous amonge men. They laboure all to shed bloude, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well when they do euyl. As the prince wil so sayth the iudge: that he maye doo him a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his herte desyreth: and the hearers alowe him. The best of them is but as a thistle and the most righteous of them is but as a bryer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalte be vysyted: then shal they be wasted away. Let no man byleue his frend, ne put his confidẽce in a prynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouthe, frõ her that lyeth in thy bosome, for the sonne shall put his father to dishonour, the doughter shall ryse agaynste her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynste her mother in lawe: & a mans foes shall be euen they of his owne housholde.

The tyme will come that thy gappes shall be made vp, and ỹ law shall go abrode: and at that tyme shall they come vnto the, from Assur vnto the stronge cytyes, and from the stronge cities vnto the ryuer: from the one see, to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Notwithstandynge the lande must be wa sted, because of them, that dwelll therin, and for the frutes of their owne Imaginacions. They shall lycke the dust e lyke a serpēt, & as the wormes of the earthe, that tremble in their holes. They shall be a frayde of the Lorde oure God, and they shal feare the.

Where is there such a God as thou? that pardonest wyckednesse, and forgyuest the of fences of the remnaunte of thyne heritage He kepeth not his wrath for euer. And why? his delite is to haue compassiō: he shal turn agayne, and be mercyfull to vs: he shall put downe oure wickednesses, and caste all oure synnes into ỹ botome of the see. Thou shalte kepe thy truste with Jacob, and thy mer cy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers longe agoo.

A

THis is the heuye burthen of Ninive, whiche Nahum of Elchos dyd write as he sawe it. The Lord is a gelouse God and a taker of venge aunce: yea a taker of vengeaunce is the Lorde, and wrothful. The Lorde taketh ven geaunce of his ennemy, and reserueth displea sure for his aduersaryes. The Lorde suffereth longe, he is of greate power, and so innocent that he leaueth no man fautlesse before him. The Lord goth forth in tempest and stormy wether, the cloudes are the dust of his fete.

Full gracious is the Lorde, and a stronge holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in him: when the floude renneth ouer, and destroyeth the place. and when the darckenesse foloweth tyll vpō his ennemyes. What do ye ymagyn then against the Lorde on this maner? (Tush, when he hathe ones made an ende, there shal come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that sticke togither, and as the drye strawe, so shal the dronckardes be consumed togither, euen when they be full. There come out of ỹ such as Imagyn myschief, & gyue vngracious cō cell against the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Let the be as wel prepared, yea and as many as they can, yet shal they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I wyll vexe the, but not vtterly destroye the. And nowe wyll I breake his rod, from thy back, and burste thy bondes in sōder. But the Lord hath gyuen a cōmaūdemēt concernyng the, that there shal come no more seede of thy name. The scatterer shall come vp agaynste the, & laye siege to the castel. Loke thou wel to the stretes, make thy loynes strong, arme thy selfe with all thy myght: for the Lorde shall restore agayne the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them down, and marred the wine braunches The shyldes of his gyauntes glysteretly, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His charettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde, his archers are well decked and trimmed. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, & welter in the high wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke trestelles of fyre, and go swyftly, as the lyghtenyng. When he doth but warn his gyauntes, they fall in their araye, and hastely they clyme vp the walles: yea the engyns of warre are prepared alredye. The water portes shall be opened, and the kinges palace shall fal. The quene her selfe shal be led awaye captyue, and her gentylwomen shall mourne as the doues, and grone within their hertes. Ninive is lyke a pole full of water, but then shall they be fayne to flé. Stande, stande, (shall they crye) and there shall not one turne back. Awaye with the syluer, away with the golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multytude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled emtied and cleane stryped out: that their hertes may be melted away, their knees tremble all their loynes be weake, & their faces blacke as a pot,

Where is now the dwellyng of the lyons and the pasture of the lyons whelpes? where the lyon and the lyonesse wet with the whelpes, and no man fraped them away? But the lyon spoyled ynough for his ponge ones, and denoured for his lyonesse: he fylled his dennes with his praye, and his dwellinge place with that he had rauyshed. Beholde, I wyll vpon the, sayth the Lorde of hostes, and wil set fyre vpon thy charettes, & they shal smoke with all, and the swearde shall deuoure the ponge lyons. There a man maye heare scourgynge, rattlynge, the noyse of weles, the cryinge of the horses, and the rollyng of the charettes. There the horsmen get vp with naked swerdes, and glysteryng speares: There lyeth a multytude slayne, and a greate heape of deade bodyes: There is no ende of deade corpses, yea men fall vpon their bodyes; And that for the greate and manyfolde horedom, of the fayre and beutyfull harlot: whiche is a maistresse of witchcraft, yea and selleth the people thorow her horedome, and the nacyons thorow her witchcrafte.

Beholde, I wyll vpon the (sayth the Lord of hostes) and wyl pull thy clothes ouer thy heade: that I maye shewe thy nakednesse amonge the heithen, and thy shame amonge the kingdomes. Who wyl haue pitie vpon the: where shal I seke one to comfort the? Art thou better the the greate cittie of Alexandria? that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it: whiche was strongely fenced and walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength, and that exceadynge greate aboue measure. Aphrica and Lidia were her helpers: yet was she dryuen awaye and brought into captyuytye: her yong childzen were smytte downe at the heed of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the moste auncyent men in her, and all her myghtye men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt thou also be dronke, and hyde thy selfe, and seke some helpe agaynste thyne enemy. All thy stronge cytyes shal be lyke fygtrees with ripe fygges: which when a man shaketh, they shal fal in to the mouth of the eater. C

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABACVC.

¶ Complaynt agaynst Israel.

CAPI. I.

A Psal.xxii.a Job.xix.a

THis is the heuye burthen, which the prophete Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how longe shal I crye, and thou wilte not heare? how longe shall I complayne vnto the sufferynge wrong & thou wilte not helpe? Why letteth thou me se wrecchednesse and laboure? Tyranny and vyolence are before me: power ouergoeth right: for the law is torne in peces, and there can no right iudgment go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the rychteous: this is the cause, þ wrong iudgement proceedeth. Beholde amonge the heithen, and loke well: wondre at it, and be a basshed: for I wyl do a thinge in youre time whiche thoughe it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue.

B Deut.xxviii.c

For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter and swyft people: which shall go as wyde as þ lande is, to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not their owne. A grym and doysteous people is it, these shall rye in iudgement & punysh. Their horses are lyghter then the catres of the mountayne, & more sorer then the wolues in the euening. Their horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle dasshely to deuoure as the Egle.

Habon.iii.a

They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which blowyth and gathereth their captyues, like as the sand. They shall mocke the kynges, and laugh the princes to scorne.

They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fresh courage vnto them, to go forthe and to doo more cruell, and so ascryde that power vnto their God.

Mat.xi.vi.d 1.Pa.xxviii.d

But thou O Lorde my God, my holy one thou arte from the begynnyng, therfore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned the for a punyshment, and set them to reproue the myghtye.

D

Thine eyes are cleane, thou mayste not se euyll: thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wicked. Wherfore then dost thou loke vpō the vngodlye, and holdest thy tunge when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe? Thou makest me as the fysh in the see, and lyke as the creepinge beestes, þ haue no guyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catche it in their nette, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thorowe it their portion is become so fat, and they? meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out they? net agayne, & neuer cease

¶ Of the vysion of the prophete. Agaynste polyng, couetousnesse, and Idolatry.

CAPI. II.

I Stode vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bulwarcke, to loke & se what he wolde say vnto me and what answere I sholde gyue him that reproueth me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnly, vpō thy tables, that whole cōmeth by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe and not fayle. And though he tary, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not byleue his soule shall not prosper: the iuste shall lyue by his fayth. Lyke as the wyne bibbeth the dronckarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsaciable as death. All heythen gathereth he to him, and heapeth vnto him all people.

Habak.ii.a

But shal not al these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a by worde, & saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes? How longe wyll he lade him selfe with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stande vp, that shall byte, and awake, þ shall teare the in peces? yea thou shalte be their praye. Seinge thou hast spoyled many heithen, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the citie and vnto all them that dwell therin.

B Habak.ii.b

Wo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house: that he may set his nest an highe, to escape frome the power of misfortune. Thou hast destroyed the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast slayne to moche people, and hast wylfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buyldynge shal answere. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth þ towne with bloude, & maynteyneth the citye with vnrighteousnesse. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bringe this to passe, that the laboures of the people shall be brent with a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherupon the people haue werked them selues, shall be lost? For the earthe shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the see.

C Luke.xi.a Habak.ii.c Gene.xix.a Esay.xi.a

Wo vnto him that giueth his neyghbour drynke, to gette hym worthyll displeasure for his dronkennesse: that he maye se his priuyteees. Therfore with shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honoure.

D Gene.ix.c

Dryncke thou also, tyl thou slombre with all: for the ruppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the about, and shamfull spewinge in the syde of thy worshippe. For the wronge wrong that thou hast done in Lybanus, shall ouerwhelme the, & the wild beestes shal make the afrayde, because of mens bloude, & for the wrong done in the land, in the city, and vnto all suche as dwel therin.

What helpe then wil the ymage do, whom the worke man hath fashioned: or the dayne calle ymage, wherin because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he domme idolles? Woo vnto him that sayth to a pece of wod: aryse/ and to a domme stone: stande vp. For what instruction may suche one giue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breth in it. But the Lorde in his holy temple is he, whom all the worlde shoulde feare.

The prayer of the Prophete Habacuc for the ignorant.

CAPI. III.

O Lord, when I herd speke of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hand, shalt thou perfourme in his tyme, o Lord/ and when the time commeth, þ shalt declare it. In thy wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth frome Theman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the sunne, and beames of lyght goo oute of his handes, there is his power hyd. Destruction goeth before him, and burnyng coelles go from his fete. He standeth and measureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume away, the mountaynes of þ worlde fal towne powlder, and the hylles are layne to bow the knees, for his goinges are euerlastynge and sure.

I sawe that the pauylyons of the Moryans, and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for weyneffe. Was thou not angrye, O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in that floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? Yes, when thou sattest vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe vnto the tribes. Selah.

Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the water streame went away: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hande. The sunne and moone remayned styll in their habitacion. Thyne arowes Iosue.x.c went out glysterynge, and thy speres as the shyne of the lightening. Thou trodest downe the lande in thyne anger, and dyddest threshe the heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forthe to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe the head, the house of the vngodlye, and discoueredst his foundacions: euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah.

Thou cursest his sceptres, the Cappitayne of his men of warre, whiche come as a storme wynde to scattre me abrode, and are glad when they may eate vp the poore secretlye. Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corrup, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myghte reste in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which are aldye prepared.

For the frygge tree shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no fruite. The laboure of the olyue shall be but loste, and the lande shall bryng no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no cattell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be glade in the Lorde, and wyll reioyce in God my sauyour. The Lorde God is my strength, Psal.xviii.b

For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter and swyft people: which shall go as wyde as ỹ land is, to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not theire owne. A grym and boysterous people is it, whose shall ipe in iudgement & punyth. Their horses are lyghter then the cattes of the mountayne, & more fierer then the wolues in the euening. Their horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they flie vastely to deuoure as the Egle.

Dophon.iiii.a

C They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth theire captiues, like as the sand. They shall mocke the kinges, and laugh the princes to scorne.

They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freshe courage vnto them, to go forthe and to doo more euell, and so ascribe that power vnto their God.

Esay.xlvi.d ii. Pa.xxviii.d

But thou O Lorde my God, my holy one thou arte from the begynnyng, therfore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned the for a punyshment, and set theym to reproue the myghtye.

D Thine eyes are cleane, thou mayste not se euyll: thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wicked. Wherfore then dost thou loke vpō the vngodlye, and holdest thy tunge when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe? Thou makest me as the fish in the see, and lyke as the creepinge beestes, ỹ haue no gouyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catche it in their nette, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thorowe it their portion is become so fat, and their meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

¶ Of the vysion of the prophete. Agaynste polyng, couetousnesse, and Idolatry.

CAPI. II.

I Stode vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bul worcke, to loke & se what he wolde say vnto me and what answere I sholde gyue him that reproueth me, But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnly, vpō thy tables, that whoso cōmeth by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe and not fayle. And though he tary, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not beleue his soule shall not prospere: the iuste shall lyue by his fayth. Lyke as the wyne bitrayeth the dronckarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsatysfyable as death. All heythen gathereth he to him, and heapeth vnto him all people.

Deut. Rom.

But shal not al these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a by worde, & saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes? How longe wyll he lade him selfe with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stande vp, that shall byte, and awake, ỹ shall teare the in peces? yea thou shalte be their praye. Seinge thou hast spoyled manye heithen, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the citie and vnto all them that dwell therin.

Habb.ii.

Wo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house: that he maye set his nestle an highe, to escape frome the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuyled the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast slayne to moche people, and hast wyckedlye offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buyldynge shal answere. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth ỹ towne with bloude, & mayntayneth the citye with vnrighteousnesse. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bringe this to passe, that the laboures of the people shall be brent with a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherupon the people haue weryed them selues, shall be lost? For the earthe shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the see.

Luke. Gen.xix. Gala.vi. Esay.xi.

Wo vnto him that giueth his neyghbour dryncke, to gette hym worthyll displeasure for his dronkennesse: that he maye se his priuyties. Therfore with shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honoure.

D Dryncke thou also, yi thou stombre with all: for the ruppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the about, and shamfull spewinge in thy worshippe. For the wronge wrong that thou hast done in Lybanus, shall overwhelme the, & the wild beestes shal make the afrayde, because of mens bloude, & for the wrong done in the land, in the city, and vnto all suche as dwel therin.

What helpe then wil the ymage do, whom the worke man hath fashioned: Or the dayne caste ymage, wherin because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he domme idolles? Woo vnto him that sayth to a pece of wod: aryse/ and to a domme stone: stande vp. For what instruction may suche one giue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breth in it. But the Lorde in his holy temple is he, whom all the worlde shoulde feare.

¶ Prayer of the Prophete Habacuc for the ignorant.

CAPI. III.

O Lord, when I herd speke of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hand, shalt thou performe in his tyme, o Lord/ and when the time commeth, þ shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth frome Theman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the sunne, and beames of lyghte goo oute of his handes, there is his power hyd. Destruction goeth before him, and burnyng coelles go from his feete. He standeth and measureth the earth, he loketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of þ worlde fal downe powlder, and the hylles are layne to bow the knees, for his goinges are euerlastynge and sure.

I sawe that the pauylyons of the Moryans, and the tentes of the lande of Madian were vexed for weryenesse. Was thou not angrye, O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in that floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? Yes, when thou satest vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe vnto the tribes. Selah.

Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the water streame went awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hande. The sunne and moone remayned styll in their habitation. Thyne arowes went out glysterynge, and thy speres as the shyne of the lightening. Thou troddest downe the lande in thyne anger, and dyddest threshe the heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forthe to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe the head, the house of the vngodlye, and discoueredst his foundacions: euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah. Iosue.x.c

Thou cursest his scepters, the Cappitayne of his men of warre, which come as a storme wynde to scattre me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretlye. Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corrup, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myghte rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which are aldye prepared. C

For the frygge tree shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no frute. The laboure of the olyue shall be but loste, and the lande shall bryng no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be glade in the Lorde, and wyll reioyce in God my sauyour. The Lorde God is my strength, he shall make my feete, as the feete of Hartes: and he which gyueth the victorye, shall bryng me to my byrdy places, singing vpon my psalmes. (?) Psal.xviii.b

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE SOPHONY.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Juda and Jerusalem, bycause of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

A THis is the worde of the Lorde, whiche came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedoliah, the sonne of Amariah the sonne of Ezechiah in the time of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda.

I wyll gather vp all thynges in the lande (sayth the Lorde) I wyll gather vp man and beest. I will gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fysshe in the see (to the greate decaye of the wycked) and wyll vtterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayethe the Lorde. I wyll stretche oute myne hande vpon Juda, and vpon all suche as dwell at Jerusalem. iiii. Reg. xxi. xxiii.

B Thus wyll I roote oute the remnaunte of Baal from this place, and the names of the Remurym and Preestes: yea, and suche as vpon their house toppes worshyp and bowe them selues vnto the hoste of heuen, whiche swere by the Lorde, and by theyr Malchom also: whiche starte a backe frome the Lorde, and neyther seke after the Lorde, ne regarde hym. Deute. xvii. b Jeremy. v. b

Be styll at the presence of the Lorde God for the daye of the Lorde is at hande: yea the Lorde hath prepared a slayne offerynge, and called his gestes therto, and thus wyl it happen in the daye of the Lordes slayneoffering: I wyll vysit the prynces, the kynges chyldre, and all suche as weare straunge clothyng. In the the same day also wyll I vysyte all those that treade ouer the threshold so proudlye, whiche fyll their Lordes house with robbery and falsehed. iiii. Re. xxv. b Jerm. xxxix. b

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) there shall be herde a great crye from the fyshporte, and an howlynge from the other porte, and a great murther from the hilles. Howle ye that dwel in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden w syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme will I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vysyte them that C continue in theyr dregges, and saye in theyr hertes: Tushe, the Lorde wyll doo neyther good, nor euyll. Theyr goodes shall be spoyled, and theyr houses layde waste: they shall buylde houses, and not dwell in them: they shall plante vyneyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the great daye of the Lorde is at hande, it is harde by, and commeth on a pace. Horrible is the tydinges of the Lordes daye, then shall the gyaunt crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrathe, a daye of trouble and heuynesse, a daye of bytter destruction and myserye, a darke and glomynge daye, a cloudye and stormye daye, a daye of the noyse of trompettes and shawmes, against the strong cities and highe towres. Jeremy. v. c Deut. xxix. c Jerem. xxiii. c

I will bringe the people into suche vexacion, that they shal go about like blynd men D because they haue synned against the Lorde. Their blonde shall be shed as the dust, and their bodyes as the myre. Neither their syluer ne their golde shall be able to delyuer them in the wrothfull daye of the Lorde, but the hole lande shal be consumed thorow the fyre of his gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddaunce of all theym that dwell in the lande. Ezec. Sop.

¶ He moueth to returne to God, propheryng vnto the one destruction, and to the other delyueraunce.

CAPI. II.

COme togyther and gather you, O frowarde people: or the thinge go forth A that is concluded, and or the tyme be passed awaye as the duste: or the fearefull wrath of the Lorde come vpon you, yea or the daye of the Lordes sooze displeasure, come vpon you. Seke the Lorde all ye meke herted vpon earthe, ye that worke after his iudgemente: seke ryghtousnesse, seke lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wrothfull daye of the Lorde. For Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shal be layd waste. They shall cast out Asdod at the noone day, and Accaron shall be pluckte vp by the rotes. iiii. Re. Jonas.

Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see cost B ye murtherous people: the worde of ꝑ Lord shall come vpon you, O Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I wyl destroy the, so that there shall no man dwell in the any more: as for the see coost, it shal be herdmens cotages and shepe kotes: yea it shall be a porcion for suche as remayne of the house of Juda, to fede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shal they rest toward night: for the Lord their God shall vysyt them, and turne away their captyuytye. I haue herde the dispyte of Moab, and the blasphemyes of the children of Ammon howe they haue shamefully intreted my people, and magnifyed them selues within the borders of their lande. Therfore as truely as I lyue (sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shal be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dye thorne hedges, salte pyttes and a perpetuall wylderneese. Esay. xv. Jere. xl. Ezech.

The residue of my folke shall spoyle the C the remnaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. This shall happen vnto theym for their pryde, because they haue dealte so shamefully with the Lord of hostes people, and magnyfyed them selues aboue them. The Lorde shall be grym vpon them, and destroye all the goodes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heithen shal worshyp hym euery man in his place.

Ye Morians also shall perisshe with my D swerde:

ouerth: yea he shal stretche out his hand ouer the North, and destroye Assur. As for Nineue, he wil make it desolate, drye and waste. The flockes and all the beestes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes and storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, fowles shall syng in the wyndowes, and rauens shal sit vpon the balkes, for the boordes of Cedre shal be tyuen downe. This is the proude and carelesse city, that said in her herte: I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so waste that the beastes lye therin? Who so goeth by mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his fynger.

¶ Sayntt the gouerners of Ierusalem. Of the callynge of all the Gentyles. & comforte to the reysydue of Israel.

CAPI. III.

WO to the abhominable, sylthy and cruel city: which wil not heare, ne be reformed. Her trust is not in ℔ Lorde, neither wyll she holde her to her God. Her rulers within her, are as rorynge lyons: her iudges are as wolues in the euenyng, whiche leaue nothing behind them till the morowe. Her Prophetes are lyghte persons and vnfaythfull men: her preestes vnhalowe the Sanctuarye, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lorde that dothe no vnryghte, was amonges them, euery mornyng shewyng them his lawe clerely, and ceased not. But the vngodly wil not lerne to be ashamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye theyr towres: yea and make their stretes so voyde, ℔ no man shall go therin. Their citys shall be broken downe, so that no body shal be left, ne dwell there any more.

℣ I sayd vnto them: feare me, and be contēt to be reformed, that their dwellinge be not destroyed, and that there happen vnto theym none of these thynges, wherwith I shal visit them. But neuertheles, they stande vp early to folowe the fylthynesse of their owne ymagmacions. Therfore ye shall wayte vpon me sayth the Lorde, tyl the time that I stand vpe to. I am determined to gather the people, and to bring the kyngdomes togither, that I may poure out myne angre, yea all my wrathfull displeasure vpon them. For all the world shal be consumed with the fire of my gelouly. And then wil I clense the lyppes of ℔ people, that they may euery one call vpon the name of the Lorde, and serue him with one shoulder. Such as I haue subdued, and my chyldren also who I haue scatred abrode, shall bring me presētes beyond the waters of Ethiopia.

In that time shalt thou be no more confoūded bicause of all thy ymaginacios, wherby thou hast offended me: for I wil take awaye the proude boulters of thyne honour frō the, so that thou shalt no more trymphe bycause of my holy hyl. In the also wil I leaue a small poore symple people, which shal trust in the name of the Lorde. The remanaunt of Israel shal do no wickednesse, nor speke lies: neither shall any disceptfull tonge be founde in their mouthes. For they shall be fedde, and take their reste, and no man shall make them afrayde. Syue thankes, O doughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce and be glad from thy hole hert, O doughter Ierusalem/ for the Lorde hath taken awaye thy punyshement, and turned backe thyne ennemyes. The kyng of Israell, euen the Lorde him selfe is with the, so that thou needest no more to feare anye myssfortune.

In that tyme it shal be sayd to Ierusalem: feare not, and to Sion: let not thyne eyes be slacke, for the Lorde thy God is with the, he is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, and a maruelous loue towarde the: yea he reioyseth ouer the with gladnesse. Suche as hathe ben in heynesse, wyl I gather togyther, & take out of thy congregacio: yea and the shame and reproue that hath ben layde vpon the, shall be farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I destroye all those that vexe the: I wyll helpe the lame, and gather vp the cast awaye: yea I wyl get them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. At the same tyme will I bring you in, and at ℔ same time wil I gather you. I wyll get you a name and a good reporte amonge all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captyuitie before youre eyes, sayth the Lorde.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AGGEVS.

¶ The tyme of the prophetye of Aggeus. In exhortacion to buylde the temple agayne.

CAPI. I.

A IN the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, in the fyrth moneth, the fyrst daye of the moneth, came the word of the Lorde (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the son of Salathiel the prynce of Juda, and to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, sayinge: Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayth: This people dothe saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lorde by the Prophete Aggeus, and sayd: Ye your selues can fynd tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall this house lye waste?

B Consydre now your owne wayes in youre hertes, sayth the Lord of hostes/ye sow moch but ye bryng lytle in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke your selues, but ye are not warme/ and he that earneth any wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

C Thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetche wodde, and buylde vp the house, that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honour, sayth the Lorde. Ye loked for moch, and lo, it is come to lytle: and thoughe ye bringe it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayethe the Lorde of Hooستes? Euen bycause that my house lyeth so waste, and ye ren euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the heuen is forbydden to gyue you any dewe, and the earthe is forbydden to gyue you encrease. I haue called for a drouthe, bothe vpon the lande, and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde bryngeth forthe, vpon men and vpon catell/ yea and vpon all handye labour.

D Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, and the wordes of the Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde their God had sent him) the people did feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes angell sayd in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you sayth the Lorde. So the Lord waked vp the spirite of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spirite of Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, & the spirite of the remnaunt of all the people, that they came and labboured in the house of the Lorde of hostes their God.

¶ She weweth that the goodlynesse of the seconde temple shall exceede the fyrste, bycause of the comyng of Chryste.

CAPI. II.

VPon the .xxiiij. daye of the syxte moneth in the secounde yere of kyng Darius, the one and twenty day of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the Lord by the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, & to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, and to the residue of the people, & say: Who is left amonges you, that sawe this house in her first beauty? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euen as though it were nothing? Neuertheleese be of good chere O Zorobabel (sayth the Lord) be of good chere, O Jesus thou son of Josedech hye preest: take good hertes vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, sayth the Lorde of hostes, and doo accordynge to the worde (for I am with you sayth the Lord of hostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came oute of the lande of Egypte, and my spirite shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

B For thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes: yet ones more wyll I make beauen and earthe, the see, and the drye lande: yea, I will move all Heathen, and the comforte of all Heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house with honoure, sayth the Lorde of Hooستes. The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne, sayth the Lorde of Hooستes. Thus the glorye of the last house shall be greater then the fyrst, sayth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyll I gyue peax, sayth the Lorde of Hostes.

C The .xxiiij. daye of the nyneth moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Hooستes: Aske the preestes concernynge the lawe, and saye: yf one beare holye flesshe in his cote lap, and with his lap doo touche the breed, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meat: shall he be holye also? The preestes aunswered and sayd: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beyng defyled w a deed carcase, touche anye of these, shall it also be vnclene? The preestes gaue answere and sayd/ yea, it shall be vnclene. Then Aggeus answered, and said: euen so is this people and this nacion before me, sayth the Lorde, and so are all the workes of their handes/ yea, and all that they offre is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forthe, and how it hathe gone with you afore, or euer there was layde one stone vpon an other in the temple of the Lord, that whē ye came to a corne heape of twenty bushels, there were scarce ten/ and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure oute fifty pottes of wyne, there were scarce twentye. For I smote you with beat, blastyng and hayle stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you that wolde turne vnto me sayth the Lorde.

Consydre

Consyder then from this daye forth and afore, namely from the foure and twenty daye of the nynety moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it wel, is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes, the figge trees, the pome garnettes, and olyue trees ben yet vnfruitful? but from this daye forth, I shall make them to prospere.

Moreouer the four and twenty day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and say: I wyll shake both heuen and erth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngdomes, yea and destroye the mighty kyngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that sytte vpon them, so that bothe horse and man shal fall downe, euerye man throwe his neyghbours sworde. And as for the, O Zorobabel, (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaũt: I wil take the (sayth the Lord) at the same time and make the as a seale, for I haue chosen the, saith the Lorde of hostes.

CAPI. I.

A

IN the eyght moneth of the secõde yere of kinge Darius, came the worde of the Lord vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophete saying: the Lord hath bene sore displeased at your fore fathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. Turne you vnto me (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Be not ye like your fore fathers vnto whom the Prophetes cryed afore time, saying: thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes. Tourne you from your euil wayes, and from your wicked ymagynacions. But they wolde not heare, ne regarde me, sayth the Lorde.

What is now become of your fore fathers and the Prophetes? are they yet styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes, which I commaunded by my seruauntes the Prophetes) touche your fore fathers? Upon this they gaue answere, and said: like as the Lord of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, accordyng to our owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt with vs.

Upon the .xxiiii. day of the .xi. moneth, whiche is the moneth Sebath, in the second yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophet, saying: I sawe by night, and lo, there sate one vpon a red horse, and stode stil among the Myrte trees that were beneth vpon the groũd: and behynd him were there red, speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I: O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man þ stode amonges the Myrte trees answered and said These are they whom the Lorde hath sent to goo thorowe the worlde. And they answered the aungel of the Lord that stode among the Myrte trees, and said: We haue gone thorow the worlde, and beholde all the worlde dwelt at ease, and are careles.

Then the Lordes aungell gaue answere, and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how long wylt thou be vnmercyful to Jerusalem, and to the cities of Juda, with whom thou hast ben displeased nowe these thre score & ten yeres? So the Lorde gaue a louynge and comfortable answere vnto the aungell that talked with me. And the aungell that talked with me, sayd vnto me. Zacharj.viii.b sayth the Lorde: I will tourne me agayne in mercye towarde Ierusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, sayethe the Lorde of hostes: yea, and the plommet shall be layde abrode in Ierusalem, sayethe the Lorde of Hostes.

D Crye also, and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: My cityes shall be in good prosperitie agayne, the Lorde shall yet comfort Sion, and chose Ierusalem. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, foure hornes. And I sayd vnto the aungel that talketh with me: what be theſe? he aunſwered me: Theſe are the hornes whiche haue scatte red Juda, Israel, and Ierusalem abrode. And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayd I, what wyll theſe doo? He aunſwered and sayd: those are the hornes, which haue so strowed Juda abro de, that no man durſt lyfte vp his heed: but theſe are come to fray them away, and to cast out the hornes of the Gentyles, which lift vp their horne ouer the lande of Juda, to scatte it abrode.

¶ The renewynge of Ierusalem and Juda.

CAPI. II.

A Lyft vp myne eyes agayne and loked/ and Ezec.xliiii.b beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his Apoca.xxi.c hande. Then sayde I: whither goeſt thou? And he sayd vnto me, to measure Ierusalem, that I may se how long and how brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked with me went his way forth. Then went there out another aungel to mete him and sayd vnto him: Run, speke to this yong man, and saye: Ierusalem shal be inhabited without any wal, for the very multitude of people and cattell, that shal be therin. Yea I my ſelfe (sayeth the Lord) will be vnto her a wall of fyre round about and wyll be honoured in her.

B O get you forth, O fle from the land of the North, sayth the Lord, ye whom I haue scattered in to the four wyndes vnder heuen, sayth the Lord. Saue thy ſelfe, O Sion: thou that dwelleſt with the doughter of Babylon, for thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes: with a glorious power hath he sent me out to ꝑ Heathē ☞ which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shal touche the apple of his own eye. Beholde I wil lifte vp myne hand ouer them, so ꝑ they shall be spoyled of those whiche afore serued them, and ye shall knowe that the Lorde of hostes hath sent me.

E Be glad and reioyce, O doughter of Syon for lo, I am come to dwell in the myddeſt of the, sayth the Lorde. At the same tyme there shall manye Heathen cleaue to the Lorde, and shall be my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddeſt of the, and thou shalte knowe that the Lorde of hostes hathe sent me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Juda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. Lette all fleſhe be ſtyll before the Lorde, for he is ryſen out of his holy place.

¶ Of the lawe and hyghe eſtate of Chriſte, vnder the fygure of Jesus the preeſt. A prophecy of Chriſt.

CAPI. III.

A Nd he shewed me Jesus the hygh preſt A standynge before the aungell of the Lorde, and Satan stode at his ryghte hande to reſiſt him. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: The Lorde reproue the (thou Satan) yea the Lorde that hath chosen Ierusalem reproue the. Is not this a brande taken out of the fyre?

Now Jesus was clothed in vncleane rayment, & stode before the angel: which aunſwered and sayd vnto those that stode before him take awaye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayd: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyll decke the with chaunge of rayment. He sayd moreouer, let a fayre myter vpon his head. So they set a fayre myter vpon his head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the aungell of the Lorde stode there.

Then the aungel of the Lord teſtifyed vn C to Jesus, and spake: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Yf thou wylte walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll gyue the place among theſe that stande here. Heare O Jesus thou hye preeſt, thou and thy frendes that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people.

Beholde, I wil bring forth the braunche of my ſeruaūt: for lo, the stone that I haue layd D before Jesus / vpon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Beholde, I wyll hewe him oute (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and take away the synne of that lande in one daye. Then shall euery man call for his neyghboure vnder the vyne, and vnder the fygge tre, sayethe the Lorde of hostes.

¶ The vyſyon of the golden candelſtycke, and the expoſition therof.

CAPI. IIII.

A Nd the aungell that talked with me, G came agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is rayſed out of his slepe, and sayd vnto me: What seeſt thou. And I sayd: I haue loked, and beholde a candelſtycke all of golde, and a bolle vpon it it, and his seuen lampes therin, and vpon euery lampe.vij. ſtalkes. And two olyue trees therby, one vpō the ryght syde of the boll, and the other vpon the lefte syde.

So I aunſwered and spake to the aun- B gell that talked with me, sayinge: O my lorde, what are theſe? The aungell that talked with me, aunſwered and sayde vnto me: knoweſt thou not what theſe be? And I sayd:

No my

my lorde. He aunswered and sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde vnto Zorobabel, sayinge: Neyther thorowe an hoste of men, nor thorowe strengthe, but thorowe my spirite, sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes. What arte thou, thou greate mountayne, before Zorobabel? thou must be made euen. And he shall brynge vp the fyrste stone, so that men shall crye vnto him: good lucke good lucke.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: The handes of Zorobabell haue layde the foundacion of this house, his handes shal also finish it, that ye may knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hathe sente me vnto you.

For he that hath ben despysed a lytle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weyght in Zorobabels hand. The seuen eyes are the Lordes whiche goo thorowe the hole worlde. Then aunswered I, and sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the ryghte and lefte syde of the candelstycke? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him: what be these two olyue braunches (which thorow the two golden pypes) emptye them selues into the golde? He answered and sayd: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd, no my Lorde. Then sayd he: These are the two olyue braunches that stande before the ruler of the hole erth.

¶ The vysyon of the flyeing boke, signifyinge the curse of theues and suche as abuse the name of God By the vysyon of the measure, is signifyed the bringe of Iuda to Babylon.

CAPI. V.

SO I tourned, me lyftynge vp myne eyes and loked, and beholde a flying boke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyenge boke of twenty cubytes longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: this is the curse that goeth forth ouer the hole earthe: for all theues shall be iudged after this boke, and all sweerers shall be iudged accordynge to the same, I wil bring it forthe (sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes) so that it shall come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him that falsely sweereth by my name: and shall remayne in his house and consume it, with the tymbre and stones therof.

Then the aungel that talked with me, went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyfte vp thyne eyes and se, what this is that goeth forth. And I sayd, what is it? He answered: this is a measure goynge oute. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwel vpon the hole erth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyft vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde this is vngodlynesse. So he caste her in to the middest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of lead vpon in to an hole.

Then lyft I vp myne eyes, and loked, and beholde there came out two women, and the wynde was in their wynges (for they hadde wynges lyke the winges of a storke) and they lyfte vp the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen. D

Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whyther wyll these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: in to the lande of Synear, to buylde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place. Gene.x.b

¶ By the foure charettes, he declareth the prosperyte of the foure kyngdomes.

CAPI. VI.

MOreouer I turned me, lyfting vp myne eyes and loked: and beholde there came foure charettes out from betwixt two hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse: In the fyrste charet were redde horse, in the seconde charet were blacke horse, in the thyrde charet were whyte horse, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge. Then spake I, and sayd vnto the aungell that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these: The aungell aunswered and sayd vnto me: These are the foure wyndes of the heauen, whiche be come forthe to stande before the ruler of all the erth. A Zachary.i.d Apoca.vi.a Jeremy.xliii.d

That with the blacke horse wente in to the lande bi the Northe, and the whyte followed them, and the speckled horses wente forth towarde the South. These horses were verye stronge, and went oute, and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the hole erth. And he sayd: get you hence, and go thorowe the worlde. So they wente thorowe oute the worlde. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayinge: beholde: these that go toward the Northy, shall kyll my wrath in the Northy countrey. B

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Iosiah the son of Sophony. The take gold and siluer, and make crownes therof, and set them vpon the heed of Iesus ꝑ son of Iesedech the hye priest and speke vnto him: thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: Behold the man whose name is the braunche, and he that shal spring vp after him, shal buylde vp the temple of the Lorde: yea euē he shal buylde the temple of the Lorde. He shal beare ꝑ praise he shall syt vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the dominacion. C Zachary.iii.b Psal.cxx.viii.a Apo.iiii.b.v.b

A preest shal be be also vpon his trone, and a peaceable counsell shall be betwixte them both. And the crownes shall be in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes D Psal.cxx.a Hebr.v.vi.vii viii.ix.x.

hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wyl harken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

¶ The estymation of fastynge without mercye. The delyghtynge of charitye, and the obstinacye of the people.

CAPI. VII.

A IT happened also in the fourthe yere of kyng Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zachary, in the fourth daye of the nyneth moneth, whiche is called Caslew, what time as Sarasar and Rogomolech and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shoulde saye vnto the Preestes whiche were iiii. Re. xxv. b in the house of the Lord of hostes, and to the Prophetes, shoulde I wepe in the fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres?

B Then came the worde of the Lorde of Jeremy. xlii. a hostes vnto me sayinge: Speake vnto al the people of the lande, and to the preestes, and saye, when ye fasted and mourned in the fiue and seuen moneth (nowe this thre score and ten yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and dryncke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes whiche the Lorde spake by his Prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was inhabited and welthye, she and the cityes rounde about her: when there dwelte men, bothe towarde the South, and in the playne countrees.

C And the worde of the Lorde came vnto
Zachari. viii. c Zacharye, sayinge: Thus saythe the Lorde
Exod. xxii. c of hostes: Execute true iudgement, shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, euerye man to his brother. Do the wydow, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyn euyll agaynst his brother in his herte.

Neuertheles, they wolde not take hede, but tourned theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, ii. Petri. i. d they made theyr hertes as an Adamante stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes, whiche the Lorde of hostes sent in his holye spirite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

D Wherfore the Lorde of hostes was verye wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe that lyke as he spake, and they wolde not Jeremy. xlv. b heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (saythe the Lorde of hostes) but scattered them among all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauayled no man in it neither to nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layde waste.

¶ Of the returne of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. Of good workes. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPI. VIII.

SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me 1
sayinge: Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: I was in a gelousye ouer Syon, yea I haue ben verye gelouse ouer her in a greate displeasure, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I wyll tourne me agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so Zach. ii. that Jerusalem shal be called a faythful and true citye, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes, yea an holy hyll.

Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea and suche as goo with staues in theyr handes for very age. The stretes of the citye also shall be full of younge boyes and damosels playinge vpon the stretes.

Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: yf the 6 residue of this people thynche it to be vnpossible in these dayes, shoulde it therfore be vnpossible in my syghte, saythe the Lorde Zach. of hostes? Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyl delyuer my people from Jeremy. the lande of the Easte and Weste, and wyll xxxi. dryngе them agayne, that they maye dwelle at Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God in truthe and righteousnesse.

Thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: lette youre handes be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouthe of the Prophetes whiche be in these dayes, that the foundacyon is layde vpon the Lorde of hostes Aggei. i. house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? before these dayes, neyther man ne catell coulde wynne any thynge, neither myght anye man come in and oute in rest, for trouble: but I let euerye man goo agaynst his neyghbour.

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate the residue of this people no more as afore tyme, saythe the Lorde of hostes, but they shall be a sede of peax. The vyneyarde shall gyue her frute, the grounde shall gyue her increase, and the heauens shall gyue theyr dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunte of this people to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the Heathē (O ye house of Juda and ye house of Israel) Euen so wyll I delyuer you, that ye shall be a blessyng: feare not, but let youre handes be stronge.

For thus saythe the Lorde of hostes: lyke 14 as I decysed to punyshe you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determyned now in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalē, therfore feare ye not. Nowe the thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the Ephe. iiii. truth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement Zacha. viii. trulye, and peaceablye within youre portes, none of you ymagyn euyl in his herte agaynst his neyghbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are the thynges that I hate, saythe the Lorde.

And

And the worde of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayth the Lord of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the faste of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous dyghe feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the truth and peax.

Thus sayth the the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cytyes: and they that dwell in one citie shall go to an other, sayinge: Up, let vs go, & praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes, I wyll go with you: yea moch people and myghty Heithen shall come and seke the Lord of hostes at Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: In that tyme shall ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gētyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: we will go with you, for we haue herd, that God is amonge you.

¶ The conuersyon of the Gentyles. The cōmynge of Christe tytynge on an Asse.

CAPI. IX.

The worde of the Lorde shall be receyued at Adrach, and Damastus shall be his offeringe: for the eyes of all men & of the tribes of Israel shall loke vp vnto the Lorde. The borders of Hemath shal be hard therby, Tyrus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse.

Tyrus shall make her selfe stronge, heape vp syluer as the sande, and golde as the claye of the stretes. Beholde the Lorde shall take her in, & haue her in possession: he shal smyte downe her power in to the see, and she shall be consumed with fyre. This shall Ascalon se and be afrayde. Gaza shal be very sory, so shal Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For the kinge of Gaza shall perisshe, & at Ascalon shall no man dwell.

Straungers shall dwel at Asdod, and as for the pryde of ꝯ Philistines, I shall rote it out. Their bloude wyl I take away frō their mouth and their abhomynacions from amōgs their teeth. Thus they shall be lefte for our God, yea they shal be as a prince i Juda, & Accaron like as Jebusy. And so wyll I compasse my house round about with my men of warre goynge to and fro: that no oppressour come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene nowe with myne eyes.

Reioyce thou greatlye, O doughter Sion be glade, O doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the ryghtous and Sauyoure: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the foale of an asse. I wyll rote out the charettes from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem, the batel bowes shall be destroyed. He shall gyue ꝯ doctrine of peax vnto the heythen, and his dominyon shall be frome the one see to the other, and frome the floudes to the endes of ꝯ worlde.

Thou also thorowe the bloude of thy couenaunt shalt let thy prysoners out of the pitte wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the stronge holde, ye that be in prison, and longe sore to be delyuered: And this daye I dyrnge the worde, that I wyll reward the double a gayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes (O Sion) wyl I rayse vp agaynste ꝯ Grekes, and make the as a gyauntes swerde: the Lorde God shal be sene aboue them, and his dartes shall goo forthe as the lyghtenynge. The Lorde God shal blowe the trompette, and shall come forthe as a storme oute of the southe.

The Lorde of hoostes shal defend them, they shal consume and deuoure, and subdue them with slynge stones. They shall drincke and rage, as it were thorow wine. They shal be fylled lyke the basens, and as the hornes of all the aulter. D Zachar. ii & Eccle. xlvii.

The Lorde their God shall delyuer them in the daye, as the flocke of his people: for ꝯ stones of his Sanctuarye shall be set vp in his lande. O howe prosperous and goodly a thinge shall that be? The corne shall make the yonge men chearefull, & the newe wine the maydens.

¶ The people is moued to requyre the doctryne of truthe of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to vyset and comfort the house of Israel.

CAPI. X.

Praye the Lorde then by tymes to gyue you the latter rayne, so shall the Lorde make cloudes, and gyue you rayne ynough for all the encreasleok the felde: for vayne is the answere of Idols. A Jacobi. 5

The sothsayers se lyes, and tell but vayne dreames: the comforte that they gyue, is no thinge worth. Therfore go they astraye like a flocke of shepe, & are troubled, because they haue no shepherde.

My worthful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyll vysyt the gotes. For the Lorde of hostes wyll graciously visite his flocke, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battayle. Oute of Juda shall come the helmet, the nale, the batelbowe, and all the princes togyther. They shall be as the gyauntes, which in the battayle trede downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the horsmen shall be confounded. B Ezech. xxiii. & Esay. xxii. d Gene. xix. d

I will comfort the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wyll turne the also, for I pytye them: and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their God, and wyl heare them. C

Ephraim shall be as a gyaunte, and their herte shall be cherefull as thorowe wyne: yea their children shall se it, and be glad, & their their hert shall reioyce in the Lorde. I wyll blow for them and gather them together, for D I wyll redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wil sowe them amõg the people, that they maye thinke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shal lyue with their children, and turne agayne. I wyll bring the agayne also from the lande of Egypte, and gather them out of Assiria. I wyl carye them into the lande of Galaad and to Lybanus & they shall want not rynge. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the waues: so that al the depe floudes shal be dryed vp. The Esay.x.a proude boastinge of Assur shall be cast downe Ezech.xxix. and the scepture of Egypt shal be take away.

I wyll comforte them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The destruction of the temple. The care of the vnthankfull is committed to Christe, by the father.
D greuous vengeaunce agaynst Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. XI.

A OPen thy dores, O Libanus, that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees.
Howle ye Fyrre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are wasted awaye.
Howle (O ye oke trees of Baasan (for ỹ migh the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Men may heare the lyons whelpes

Thus sayth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, whych shall be slayne of those that possesse the, yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sell them saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore will I no more spare those that dwell in the lande (sayth the Lorde) but lo, I will delyuer the people, euery man in to his neighbours hãd and in to the hande of his kinge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their han-des will not I delyuer them.

B I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verelye) and toke vnto me two staues:
the one I called louinge mekenesse, the other I called wo, and so I kepte the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I Math.xxii.c might not away w̃ the, neither had they any delyte in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you no more, the thinge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perysshe, let it perisshe, and let the remnaunte eate, euery one the flesshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my louing meke staffe and brake it, that I myght disanull the cone-naunt, which I made with al people. And so it was broken in that daye.

C Then the poore symple shepe that hadde a respecte vnto me, knewe therbye, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto the yf ye thinke it good, bringe hither my pryce:
Mat.xxvii.a yf no, then leaue. So they waged downe. xxx syluer pens, the value that I was pryced at.
And the Lorde sayd vnto me: cast it ỹ the pot ter (a goodly pryce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the .xxx. siluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord.
D Then brake I my other staffe also (namelye wo) that I myght lowse the brotherhede be twyxte Juda and Israel. And the Lorde said vnto me: Take to the also the staffe of a fo-lysh shepherde: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shep herde in the lande, whiche shall not seke after the thynges that be lost, ne care for suche as go astray: he shal not heale ỹ wounded, ne shal not norysh the thing that is hole: but he shall eate the flesh of suche as be fat, & teare their clawes in peces.

O Idolles shepherde, that leaueth the Idoles flocke. The swerde shall come vpon his arme herde.
and vpon his ryghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dryed vp, & his ryght eye shall be sore blynded.

rusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all suche as lyft it vp, shal be torne and rent, and al ỹ people of the earth shal be gathered togither agaynste it.

In that daye, sayth the Lord, I wil make B al horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wyttes. I wyll open mine eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smite all the horses of the people with blyndnesse.
And the princes of Juda shal say in their her-tes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem shall gyue me consolacion in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme wyll I make the princes of Juda like an hote burning ouē with wod, and lyke a crosset of fyre amonge the strawe,
so ỹ they shal consume al the people rounde Behold

The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Ju C da lyke as afore tyme: so that the glorye of the house of Dauid and the glorye of the cy-tesins of Jerusalem, shall be but lytle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In ỹ daye shall the Lorde defende the citezins of Jerusalem: so that the weakest thē amõges them shal be as Dauid: and the house of Da uid shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the angel of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wyll I go about to de-stroye al suche people as come agaynste Jeru salem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the citezins of Jerusalem, wyll I poure

poure out the spirite of grace and prayer, so that they shall loke vpon me, whome they have pearsed: and they shall be wepe him, as men mourne for theyr onely begoten sonne: yea and be sory for hym, as men are sory for theyr fyrst chylde.

Then shall there be a greate mournynge at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Adrennon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shal bewaple euery kinred by them selues: The kynred of the house of Dauid them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues, The kinred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues: The kinred of the house of Leui them selues alone and their wyues by them selues: The kynred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues: In like maner, al ỹ other generacios, euery chone by them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues.

¶ Of the well of grace and truthe Christe. Of the cleane ryddaunce of Idolatrye, and of the false prophetes.

CAPI. XIII.

IN that tyme shall the house of Dauid & the citezins of Jerusalē haue an open well to wash of sinne and vnclennes. And then (sayth the Lorde of hostes) I will destroye the names of Idolles oute of the lande: so that they shall no more be put in remembraunce.

As for the false Prophetes also and the vncleane spirite, I shall take them out of the lande: So that yf any of them prophecye any more, his owne father and mother that begat him, shall saye vnto him: Thou shalte dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of ỹ Lord, yea his owne father and mother ỹ begat him, shall wounde him, when he prophecyeth.

And thē shall those prophetes be cōfounded euerye one of his vision when he prophecyeth neither shall they were sackclothes any more, to disceyue men withal. But he shal be sayne to saye: I am no prophete: I am an husbande man, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp.

And yf it be sayde vnto him: Howe came these woundes then in thine hādes? He shal answere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

Awake, O thou sword, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the Prince of my people, sayth the Lorde of hostes: Smyte the Shepherde, & the sheepe shall be scatered abrode, and so will I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shall be roted out, but the thyrde parte shall remayne therin.

And the same thyrde parte will I bringe thorow the fyre, and will clense them as the syluer is clensed: yea & trye them like as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name and I will heare them: I will say: it is my people. And they shall say: Lorde my God.

¶ The wastynge of the churche vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

CAPI. XIIII.

BEhold e, the daye of the Lorde cōmeth, A that thou shalte be spoyled and robbed for I gather to gither all the heithen, to fyght agaynste Jerusalem: so that the cytye shall be won, the houses spoyled, and the wo men defyled. The halfe of the cirye shall go awaye into captyuytye, and the residue of ỹ people shall not be caryed out of the cytye. After that shall the Lorde go forthe to fyghte agaynste those heithen, as men vse to fyghte in the day of battayle. Then shal his fete stād vpon the mounte Oliuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuete shall cleane in two, eastwarde, & westwarde, so that there shall be a greate valley: and the halfe mounte shall remoue towarde the nozth, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal flee vnto the valley of my hilles for the valley of the hilles shall reche vnto B Asal. Yea fle shal ye, like as ye fled for ỹ earth Amos.1.a quake in the dayes of Oziah kinge of Juda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes with him. In that daye shall it not be lyght, but colde and froste. This shall be that speciall day, which is knowne vnto the Lorde: neither daye ne nyght, but about the euenyng tyme it shal be lyght. In that tyme shall these waters of lyfe runne oute frome Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them toward the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost see, and shall contynue both sōmer and winter. And the Lorde him selfe shall be kinge ouer al the earthe.

At that tyme shall there be one Lorde C and his name shall be but one. Men shall go about the hole earth, as vpon a felde: frome Gibea to Remmon & from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: frome Ben Jamins port, vnto the place of the fyrste porte, and vnto the corner porte: and frome the tower of Hananeel, vnto the kinges wine presses. There shall men dwel, and there shall be no more cursing, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherwith the Lorde will smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Jerusalem: Namely, their flesh shal consume awaye, thoughe they stande vpon their fete: their eyes shal be corrupte in their holes, and their tunge shall consume in their mouth.

In that daye shal the Lorde make a great sedicion amonges them, so that one mā shal take an other by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. Juda shall fyght also agaynste Jerusalem, and the goodes of all heithen shall be gathered togyther rounde about: golde and and siluer and a very greate multytude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes that shall be in the hoste, lyke as ponder plage was. Euery one that remaynyth then of al ꝑ people, whiche came agaynste Jerusalem, shall go vp earely, to worshyp the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacion vpon earth goeth not vp to Jerusalem, for to worshyppe the kinge (euen the Lorde of hoostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kynred of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall rayne vpon thē neither.

D This shall be the plage wherwith ꝑ Lord wyll smyte all heithen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea this shal be the synne plage of Egipt and the synne plage of all people, that go not vp to kepe ꝑ feaste of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge geer of the hostes be holy vnto the Lorde, and the kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke ꝑ basens before the aulter: yea all the kettels in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holy vnto the Lord of hostes: and all they that slaye offrynges, shall come take of theym, and dighte theym therin. And at that tyme there shal be no mo Cananites in ꝑ house of the Lord.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of zachary.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MALACHI.

¶ Cō complaynt agaynst Israel and her prestes.

CAPI. I.

THe heuy burthen, which ꝑ Lord sheweth agaynst Israel by Malechy. I haue loued you (saith the Lord:) yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayth the Lorde? yet haue I loued Jacob and hated Esau: yea I haue made his hilles waste, and his heritage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom sayd: wel, we are destroyed, we wyl go buylde vp agayne the places that be wasted: yet (saith the Lord of hostes) what they buylde that brake I down: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whom the Lorde hath euer bene angrye withall.

Your eyes haue sene it, and ye youre selues must confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the land of Israel to greate honoure. Should not a sonne honoure his father, & a seruaunt his master? If I be nowe a father, where is myne honoure? If I be the Lord, where am I feared? sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Now to you prestes, that despise my name. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we despysed thy name? In this, ꝑ ye offre vncleane bred vpō myne aulter. And yf ye wyl say: wherin haue we offred any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this that ye saye: the aulter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye offre the blynde, is not that euyll? And yf ye offre the lame and sycke, is not that euyll? Yea offre it vnto thy prynce, shall he be content with the, or accepte thy persone, sayth the Lorde of hostes?

And nowe make youre prayer before God that he maye haue mercye vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde your persones, thinke ye, sayth the Lorde of hostes? Yea what is he amonge you, that wyll do so moche as to shut the doores, or to kindle the fyre vpon myne aulter for nought? I haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lorde of hostes and as for the meate offeringe, I wyll not receyue it at youre handes. For from the rysinge vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of ꝑ same, my name is greate amonge the Gentyles: yea in euerye place shall there sacrifyce be done, and a cleane meate offrynge offred vp vnto my name: for my name is great among the Heithen, sayth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye, the aulter of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set therupon, not worthye to be eaten.

Now say ye: It is but labour and trauayle and and thus haue ye thought scorne at it (saith the Lorde of hoostes) offringe robbery, yea the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatoffering, shulde I accept it of your hand sayethe the Lorde? Cursed be the dissembler, whiche hath in his flocke one that is male, & when he maketh a bowe, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a greate kynge (sayth the Lorde of hoostes & my name is feare full amonge the heithen.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst the prestes beyng leaders of the people.

CAPI. II.

A Nd nowe (O ye prestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it ne regarde it, to gyue the glory vnto my name, sayethe the Lord of hoostes, I wyll sende a curse vpon you, & wyll curse youre blessinges: yea curse them wyll I yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I shall corrupt your sede, and cast donge in youre faces: euē the donge of youre solempne feastes and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall know that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, myght stande sayethe the Lorde of hoostes.

B I made a couenaunte of lyfe and peace vnto him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, and there was no wickednesse founde in his lyppes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one waye from their synnes. For the prestes lyppes shulde be sure knowledge, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lorde of hoostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes. Therfore wyll I also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kept my wayes, but ben partiall in the lawe.

C Haue we not all one father? Hathe not one God made vs? why doth euerye one of vs then despyse his owne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Nowe hath Juda offended? yea þ abhompnacion is done in Israel and in Jerusalem, for Juda hath defyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, & hath kept the doughter of a straūge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth this (yea doth the master and the scolar) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, with him that offereth vp meatoffrynge vnto the Lorde of hoostes.

Now haue ye brought it to this poynte a-gaine þ the alter of the Lord is couered with teares weppynge and mournynge: so that I wyll no more regarde the meatoffryng, nether wyll I receyue or accepte any thinge at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euē because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwyxt the & the wife of thy youth D thou hast despised her: Yet is she thyne owne companyon and maryed wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirite. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promysed of God. Therfore loke well to your spirite, and let no man despyse the wyfe of his youthe. If thou hatest her put her awaye sayethe the Lorde God of Israel and giue her a clothing for the scorne sayth the Lorde of hoostes. Loke well then to your spirite, and despyse her not. Ye greue the Lorde with youre wordes, and yet ye saye: wherwithall haue we greued him? In this that ye saye: All that do euell are good in þ syght of God, and suche please him. Or elles where is the God that punysheth?

¶ Of the messenger of the Lorde, Johñ Baptyste. Of the daye of the Lordes, and of Elias.

CAPI. III.

B Eholde, I wyll sende my messenger, whi A che shall prepare the waye before me: Math.xi.b and the Lorde whome ye wolde haue, Marke.i.a shall soone come to his temple, yea euen the Luke.vii.c messenger of the couenaunte whome ye lōge Gen.xlii.a for. Esay.lxiii.a

Beholde, he commeth, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his commynge? Who shal be hable to endure whē he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmythes fyre, & like washers sope. He shal sit him downe to trye and to clense the syluer, he shall pourge the chyldren of Leui, and purify them lyke as gold and syluer: that they may bringe meatofferinges vnto the Lorde in rightousnesse. Then shall the offeringe of Juda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto þ Lord B lyke as from the beginnyng and in the yeres afore tyme.

I will come and punysh you, and I my self wyl be a swyft witnesse agaynst the witches agaynste the aduouterers, agaynste false swerers: yea and agaynst those, that wrongously kepe backe the hyrelynges dewty which der the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayth þ Lord of hoostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O children of Jacob) wil not leaue Deut.xxxi.f of: ye are gone away fro myne ordynaunces iiii.Reg.xvii.c & sens the tyme of your forefathers haue ye not kepte them. C

Turne you now vnto me, and I wil turne zacha.i.a me vnto you, sayethe the Lorde of hoostes, ye saye: Wherin shall we turne? Shulde a mā vse falsched and discepte with God as ye vse falsched and discept with me?

Yet ye say wherin vse we discepte with þ? In tythes and heaueoffrynges. Therfore are Leui.xxvii.d ye cursed with penury, because ye dissemble Agge.i.a with me, all the sorte of you.

Bryng euerye tithe into my barne, that there maye be meate in myne house: & proue me withall (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) yf I wyll

wyll not open the wyndowes of heauen vn to you, and poure you oute a blessinge with plenteousnesse. Yea I shall rebuke the consu mer for your sakes, so þ he shal not eate vp þ fruite of youre grounde, neyther shall the vyn yarde be barren in the felde, sayth the Lord of hostes: In so moche that all people shal say that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt land, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayth the Lord. And yet ye say: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayd:

D Is it but lost laboure, to serue God? What profyt haue we for kepinge his commaunde-mentes, and for walking humbly before the Lord of hostes? Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happy, and that they whiche deale with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, say thus one to an other: the Lorde considereth and heareth it. Yea it is before him a memorial boke wri ten for suche as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in þ day that I wyl make (sayth the Lord of hostes) they shal be myne owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth his owne son, that doth him seruyce. Turne you therfore, and cō syder what difference is betwyxte the ryghtous & vngodly: betwyxt him that serueth
Mal. xviii. a God and him that serueth him not.

For marcke, the daye commeth that shall burne as an ouen: and al the proude, yea and all suche as do wickednesse, shall be stubble:
and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote ne braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sonne of ryghteousnesse aryse, & healthe shall be vnder his winges: ye shall go forth & multyply as the fat calues. Ye shal treade downe the vngodlye: for they shall be lyke the asshes vnder the soles of youre fete, in the daye that I shall make, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruaunte whiche I commytted vn to him in Oreb for al Israel, with the statutes and ordynaunces. Beholde I wyll sende you Elyas the Prophete: before the commynge of the day of þ great & fearful Lorde.
Ye shall turne the hartes of the fathers to their children and the hertes of the children to their fathers, that I come not & smite the ¶ Josias holdeth passouer. After his death is Jechonias his sonne made kynge in his steade: whom the kynge of Egypte putteth oute, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, and Sedech. as taken.

CAP. I.

AND Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto ꝑ Lorde and slewe the passouer the fourtenth daye of ꝑ fyrst moneth. He set the preestes also in ordre (according to their dayly courses) beinge arayed in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy arcke of the Lord in the house that king Salomon the sonne of Dauid hadde buylded and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the arcke vpon your shoulders. Now serue your Lorde, and take the charge of his people of Israell, after your byllages and your trybes: according as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israell hath ordeyned, and according as Salomon his son hath honourably prepared: yea loke that ye all doo seruyce in the temple, according to the ordryng and distribucion of the ryncipall men, whiche are appoynted out of the trybes, to wo seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. Kyll the Passeouer, and prepare offeringes for your brethren, and do according to ꝑ commaundement of the Lord, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue. xxx. thousand shepe, lambes, kyddes and gotes, and thre thousand oxē. These the kynge (of his ryncely liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promised: and to the preestes for the Passeouer he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Jechonias and Semeias, and Nathanael brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, and Josabad gaue theym to the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were broughte to passe, the preestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the vnleuened breed thorowout the tribes. And after the ordryng of the ryncipall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accordyng as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe, as accordynge was. As for the thankeofferinges and the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, and set them before the people wt good wyll, and afterwarde before them selues, and the preestes. For the preestes offered the fatte, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues and for their brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The singers also the children of Asaph, stode in their ordre, according as Dauid had deuised. So did Asaph Zachary and Jouthum, whiche were appointed by the king Moreouer the porters and wre kepers stode by the wres and that diligently, so that none went out of his standing and seruice for their brethrē (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offeringe of the Lorde. In that day they held the Passeouer, and offred thākeofferinges beside the sacrifice of the Lorde, according to the cōmaundement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israel which were then ℭ present, held an honourable Passeouer, and ꝑ feast of swete breed seuē dayes long. Yea such a Passeouer was not kept in Israel from the time of the Prophet Samuel. And al the kynges of Israel held not suche an Easter as this which kyng Josias helde, and the preestes, the Leuites, the Jewes and all Israell, of all the that were at Jerusalem. And in the. xviij. yere of the raigne of Josias was this Passeouer kept. And with a perfect hert dyd kyng Josias ordre all his workes before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wrytten of him in tymes past, concerninge those that synned and were vngodly agaynste the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel.

After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao the king of Egypt went vp and came toward Carcamis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete him. Then sent the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, saying: what haue I to do wt the, O king of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpō Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayn in al the haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayn vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyghte agaynst him, and harkened not vnto the word of the Prophete, whiche he tolde him oute of the mouth of God, but pyched a battayle agaynst him in the felde of Mageddo. And the princes prealed to kyng Josias. Then said the kyng vnto his seruauntes: Carye me awaye out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him away out of the front of the battayle. The sat he vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalē, dyed, and was buried in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yea the rulers also with their wiues made lamentation for him vnto this daye. And this was done euer stil in Israel. ℭ iiij. Reg. xxiij. c iij. Paral. xxxv. d iiij. Reg. xxiij. c

These thynges are wrytten in the boke ℭ of the storyes of the kynges of Juda / namely all the actes and workes of kynge Josias, his power royall and maiesty, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, and what he dyd / yea thynges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israell and Juda. And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father, when he was. xxiij. yere olde. iiij. Reg. xxiij. c ij. Paral. xxxvi. a

And he raigned ouer Iſrael.iij. monethes. And the kyng of Egypt put him downe, ỹ he ſhold not raigne in Jeruſalem, and rayſed vp a taxe of the people: namely an hundred talētes of ſyluer and, one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt alſo made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda and Jeruſalem. As for them of ỹ kinges counſell with the king him ſelfe and Zaraceles his brother, he toke them & caried them away priſoners in to Egypt. Fiue and twenty yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lande of Juda and Jeruſalem, & iiij. Re. xxiij. c he did euil before the Lorde. After this Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon came vp, bound him with bandes of yron, & caried him vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonoſor alſo toke all the veſſels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, and all the iewels, & caryed them vnto Babylon, and broughte them in to his owne temple at Babylon. Of his vnclennelle and vngodlynelle it is written in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his ſon
F raigned in his ſtede. He was made kyng being xviij yere old, and raigned but thre monethes and.x. dayes at Jeruſalem, and dyd euil before the Lorde. So after a yere Nabuchodonoſor ſent and cauſed him be brought vnto Babylō with the holy veſſels of the Lorde, and made Sedechias his brother kynge of Juda and Jeruſalem, when he was.xxj. yere olde, and he raigned.xj. yere.

And he dyd euil alſo in the ſight of ỹ Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were ſpokē
Jere. xxxvii. F vnto him by the Prophete Jeremye, at the mouth of the Lorde. And where as he hadde made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonoſor, he manſwore him ſelf, and fel from him, hauing a ſtiffe necke and hert, and tranſgreſſed all the ſtatutes and ordinaunces of the Lord God of Iſrael. The rulers alſo and heedes of the people of the Lorde did moche euill, & became vngodly more then the Heathen, being defiled in all maner of abhominations: yea and defiled the holy temple at Jeruſalem. And the God of their fathers ſent his meſſengers vnto thē, to turne them backe and to call them agayne from their ſynnes, for he wold fayne haue ſpared them, for his holy tabernacles ſake. Ne-B uertheleſſe they had his meſſengers in derisiō: and loke what God ſpake vnto them by his Prophetes, they made but a ſport of it. This drewe on ſo longe, til the Lorde was wrothe with his people for their vngodlineſſe, and til he cauſed the kynges of the Caldees to come vp, which ſlew their yong men with ỹ ſwerde: yea euen in the compaſſe of their holy temple and ſpared no body, neyther yonge man nor olde, neyther mayden nor younge man: but they were al delyuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, and al the holy veſſels of the Lorde, and the kynges treaſures toke they, and caryed them vnto Babylon. As for the houſe of the Lorde, they brent it, & brake downe the walles of Jeruſalem, ſet fyre vpō her towres, deſtroyed all her noble buyldynges, and brought them to nought, and the people that were not ſlayne with the ſwerde, they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they priſoners and bondemen of the kynge of Babylon, tyll they were delyuered and raygned for them ſelues, * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whiche he prompted them by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye, and tyll the land had her reſte: namely all the tyme that it lay waſte, hadde it reſte and quyetneſſe. lxxvij. yeres. * Jere. xxv.

CIrus gyueth lycence to the Jewes to returne to Jeruſalem, and reſtoreth them the veſſelles of the temple. After that are there letters ſende to Artaxerxes, whiche accuſe the Jewes for buyldynge of the cyrye: and ſo is the buyldynge dryuen of, vntyl the ſeconde yere of Darius.

CAPI. II.

NOw when kynge Cyrus raigned ouer A the Perſians, and when the Lorde ii. Paral.
wolde perfourme the worde that he i. Eſdr.
had prompted by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye: the Lorde rayſed vp the ſpirite of Cyrus the kynge of Perſians, ſo that he cauſed this writynge to be proclaymed thorowe out his hole realme, ſaying: Thus ſayth the kyng of Perſians: the Lorde of Iſraell that hye Lorde hathe made me kynge of the lande and commaunded me to buylde him an houſe at Jeruſalem in Jurye. Yf there be anye now of your people, the Lorde be with him, and goo vp with him to Jeruſalem. And all they that dwell rounde about the place, ſhal helpe them, whether it be with golde, with ſyluer, with gyftes, with horſes and neceſſarye catell, and all other thynges that are broughte with a free wyll to the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem.

Then the prynceypall men oute of the tribes and vyllages of Juda and BenJamin ſtode vp, ſo did the preeſtes alſo and the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to goo vp and to buylde the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem. And they that were about them, helped them with all maner of golde, and ſyluer, and catell alſo, and with many lyberall gyftes, & this dyd many one, whoſe mynde was ſtered B vp therto. * Kyng Cyrus alſo brought forth i. Eſdr.
the veſſels and ornamentes that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whiche Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jeruſalem, and conſecrated them to his idoll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mithridatus his treaſurer, and by him they were delyuered to Salmanaſar the deputye in Jurye. And this was the nombre of them: Two thouſande and foure hundred ſyluer boules, thirtye ſyluer baſens, thirtye baſens of golde two thouſande and foure hundred veſſelles of ſyluer, and a thouſande beſyde. All the veſſels of golde and ſyluer, were fyue thouſande eighte hundred and.lx. Theſe were nombred vnto Salmanaſar, and them that were come agayne with him to Jeruſalem out of ỹ captiuitie of Babylon. Now in the tyme of kynge i. Eſdr. iiij.
Artaxerxes the kynge of Perſia, theſe men: Balemus, and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Ra-

thimus, Balthemus, Semellius the scrybe, and other that dwelte in Samaria and in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherin they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jury and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

E Syr thy seruauntes, Rathimus the storye wryter, Sabellius the scribe, and other iudges of the courte in Celosyria, and Phenices. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kyng, that the Jewes whiche are come vp frō you vnto vs in to the rebellyous and wycked cytye, begyn to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the temple a new. Nowe yf this cytye and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not onely refuse to gyue trybutes and taxes, but also rebel vtterly agaynste the kyng. And forso moch as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kyng, and to certifye him therof: to thintent that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it be soughte in the bokes of olde, and thou shalt fynd suche warning wrytten, and shalt vnderstande that this cyty hath alway ben rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges & cities, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer den a rebellyous, obstinate, vnfaythfull, and fyghtyng people, for the which cause this cyty is walled. Wherfore now we certifie our Lord the kyng, that yf this cyty be buylded & occupied agayne, and the walles therof set vp new, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosyria, and Phenices.

D Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Sicia and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epystle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche, and haue founde that the cytye hathe euer resysted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused moch warre, and that myghtye kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue raysed vp taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people that they shall not buylde the cytye, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no farther with the buyldyng: for so moche as it might be the cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathimus and Sabellius the scrybe, and the rulers in the lande hadde redde the wrytynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gat them togyther, and came in all haste to Jerusalem, with an hoste of horsemen, and with moche people of foote, and forbad them to buylde. And so they lefte from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

CAPI. III.

KYnge Darius made a greate feast vnto A his seruauntes, vnto all his courte, and to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yea to all the deputyes and rulers that were vnder him from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and.xxvij. countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, being satisfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge went in to his chambre, layde him downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre younge men that kepte the B kynges person, and watched his bodye commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to an other: let euerye one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kynge Darius gyue great gyftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall gyue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and couerynges, he shall make him a costly charet, and a bridle of golde, he shal gyue him a bonet of whyte sylke, and a cheyne of golde about his necke: yea he shall be the seconde and principall next vnto kyng Darius, and that bicause of his wisdome, and shal be called the kinges kynsman.

So euerye one wrote his meanynge, C sealed it, and layd it vnder the kynges pyllowe, and sayd: when the kynge ariseth, we wyll gyue him oure wrytynges, and loke whose worde the kynge and his chiefe lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thyng. The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thyrd wrote: Women haue yet more strengthe, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kynge was ryssen vp, they toke theyr wrytynges, and delyuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to cal all his chiefe Lordes, all the deputyes and rulers of the countreyes of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsell, the wrytynges were red before them. And he cōmaunded to cal for the yong men, that they might declare their meaninges thē selues by mouth. So when they were sent for and came in, the king said vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten.

Then began the fyrst (whiche hadde spo- D ken of the strengthe of wyne) and sayd: O ye men, wyne is marueylous strong, and ouercommeth them that drynche it: it disfygureth the mynde, and bryngeth both the poore man and the kynge to dotage and vanitie. Thus dothe it also with the bondman and with the free: with the poore, and ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderstandyng, and maketh them careles and merye, so that none of them remembreth anye heuynesse, dette, or tribute: It causeth a man to thynke also that the thynge whiche he dothe is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctoritie, and that he ought not to worke suche thynges.

Prouerb. 3.a wyne.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre younge men, of whyche the fyrste is declared.

Moreouer, when men are drynkynge, they forget all frendshyp, all brotherly faythfulnesse and loue: but as sone as they are dronken, they draw out the swerde and wil fight: and when they are layd downe frō the wyne, and so risen vp agayne, they can not tel what they dyd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the strōgest? For who wolde els take in hande to wo suche thynges? And when he had spoken this he held his tonge.

¶ The declaracyon of the two last sentences of the yonge men, propounded in the Chapter before: of which ỹ last, that is, that veritye beareth the victorye in all thynges, is most commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnder him, that they shoulde ayde Zorobabel to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. IIII.

A The kynge. Then the seconde (whiche had sayde that the kynge was stronger) began to speke saying: O ye men, are not they the strōgest and moste excellent, that conquere the lande and the see, and all that is in the see, & in the earthe? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, and hath dominion of them al: and loke what he commaundeth, it is doone. Yf he sende his men forth a warrefare, they goo, and breake downe hylles, walles, and towres. They are slayne, and slee (other men) them selues, and ouer passe not the kynges worde. Yf they get the victory, they bryng the kyng all the spoyle. Lykewyse the other that medle not with warres and fyghting, but til the grounde: when they repe they bryngе tri bute to the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll/yf he commaunde to forgyue, they forgyue/ yf he commaunde to smyte, they smyte / yf he byd driue awaye, they dryue awaye / yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde / yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe/yf he commaunde to plante they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him.

B And the kyng in the meane season sytteth him downe, eateth and drynketh, and taketh his rest: then kepe they watche rounde about the kynge, and not one of theym dare gette him out of the waye to do his owne businesse, but must be obedient vnto the kynge at a worde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye men, how sholde not he goo farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spokē this, he held his tonge.

The thyrde, whose name was Zorobabel, whiche had spoken of women and of truthe, began to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of mē, neither is it wine that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer them? Haue not women borne the kynge and al the people that rule those thinges? Haue not women borne them, & brought thē vp, that plant the vines whereout the wine commeth? They make garmentes for all mē, they gyue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. Yf they gather gold and syluer, & al precious thinges, and se a fayre welfauoured woman, they leane all togyther and turne their eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her and haue more delite vnto her, then vnto ỹ siluer and gold, or any maner of precious thing. A mā leaueth his father that brought him vp he leueth his own natural countrey & cleueth vnto the womā/yea he forgeteth his life w the woman, and remembreth neither father, nor mother, ne cōtrey. By this thē ye must nedes know that womē haue the dominiō ouer you.

¶ Dothe it greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, and seeth a lyon, and goeth in the darcknesse: and when he hath stollen, discerned and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better then father or mother: yea, manye one there be that renne oute of their wyttes, and become bondemen for their wyues sakes: many one also haue perished, and haue bene slayne, and haue synned bycause of women.

And nowe byleue me, I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I se that Apame (the doughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat besyde the kynge vpon his ryght hande, and toke of his crowne from his heed, and set it vpon her owne heed, and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer the kyng loked vpon her w open mouth: yf she laughed vpon him, he laugheth also: but yf she toke any displeasure with him, the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and to gyue her good wordes, tyll he hadde gotten her fauour agayne.

D

O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, and hye is the heuen that do these thinges. Then the kyng and the princes loked one vpon an other. So he began to speke of the truth. O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the erth, hye is the heuen, swyfte is the course of the sunne, he compasseth the heuen rounde about, and fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth this? Yea great is the truthe, and stronger then all thynges. All the erth calleth vpon the truth, the heuen prayseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wine is vnryghteous: the kyng is vnrighteous, women are vnryghteous, all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, yea all their workes are vnryghteous, and there is no truthe in them, in their vnryghteousnesse also shall they be destroyed and perysshe. As for the truthe, it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it lyueth and conquereth, for euermore worlde without ende.

Ecclesia. Truthe. E Esdre. Plutarche.

The truthe accepteth no personnes, it putteth no difference betwixte ryche or poore, betwyxte the myghtye or symple, but dothe ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euyll or good, and all men are lourngly dealt with all in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there there is no vnrygh̄teous thinge, but strength, kingdom and power, & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of truth.

And with that he held his tonge, and al the people cryed and sayd: Greate is the truthe, and abour all. Then sayd the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wylt, more then is appoynted in the wryttynge, and I shall gyue it the, for thou arte founde wyser then thy compaynons: thou shalte syt nexte me, and be my kynsman. Then sayd he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and vowe whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and iewels that were taken awaye oute of Jerusalem: whiche Cyrus separated whe he offred in Babylon, and wolde haue restored them agayne euen there. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple, whiche the Edomytes brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kynge) is the thynge that I requyre, this is the maiestye, whiche I desyre and aske of the: that thou perfourme the vowe whiche thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heuen.

F Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kissed him, and wrote a lettre vnto all the rputies and shreues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they sholde conuey him forth, & all them that wolde goo vp with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shreues that were in Celosyria and Phenices, & vnto Lybanus, that they shulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the city withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jury, bicause of the fredome, that no officer no ruler nor shreue, shold come to their dores: and that all theyr lande whiche they had conquered, shold be free and not tributary. And that the Edomites shold gyue ouer the cities and villages of the Jewes which they had taken in: yea and that they sholde yerely gyue. xx. talentes to the buyldyng of the temple, vntill ỹ time that it were finished, and to the dayly halowing of the brentofferinges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also/and that al they which come from Babylon to buyld the city shold haue fre libertie, they and their children and all the preestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also and commaun G ded ỹ holy garment shold be gyuen them wherin they ministred, and wrote that commaundmentes shold be giuen to the Leuites vntil the day that the house were finished, & Jerusalem buylded vp/and commaunded that al they that watched the city shold haue their porcions and wages.

He gaue ouer also al the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon, and al that Cyrus had gyuen in commaundement, the same charged he also that it shold be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this youge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalē, and prayed the king of heuē and said: Of the commeth the victory, of the commeth wysdome & clerenesse, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou whiche hast gyuen me wysdome: the wyl I praise, O Lorde, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon, and when he came there, he told this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon, and they prayed the God of theyr fathers, that he hadde gyuen them refreshynge and lyberte to goo vp and to buylde Jerusalem, and the temple (which is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and glaudrille seuen dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are nombred. They begyn to laye the foundacyon of the temple, but are let by the meanes of enemyes, and so is the buyldynge dryuen of by the space of two yeres.

CAPI. V.

A Fter this were the principal men of al A the vilages, chosen in the tribes & kynredes, that they shold go vp, with their wyues and chyldren, with theyr seruauntes and maydens, with all theyr catell and substaunce. And Darius the king sent with them a thousande horsemen, to conuey them safely vnto Jerusalem: and theyr brethren went glad, playing vpon instrumēres, and singing. And these are the names of the men whiche went vp out of the villages, accordyng to the trybes. Of the preestes, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedec, Joachim the sonne of Zorobabell, Math.i.b the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of David, out of the kynred of Phares, of the tribe iii. Esdr.iiii.b of Juda) whiche spake wonderfull thynges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in the seconde yere of his raigne in the fyrst moneth of Nisan.

These also are they of Jury which came vp and turned agayne vnto Jerusalem, oute of the captiuitie that Nabucodonosor the kynge of Babylon had brought vnto Babilon. And euery man sought his porcion agayne in Jury his city, they that came with Zorobabel, & with Jesus, Nehemias, Saraias, Raelaias, Elimeus, Emmanuus, Mardocheus, Beelsar, Mechpsa, Rochor, Oliorus, Emonias, one of their princes.

And the nombre of them according to their kynredes and rulers were. The chyldren of Phares, two thousand, an hundred thre score and twelue. The chyldren of Ares, thre thousand, an hundred and. lvij. The children of Jeme, an hundred & xlij. In the sōnes of Jesus and Joabes, a thousande thre. C. & two. The sonnes of Benin, two thousande foure hundred thre score and ten. The sonnes of Chorba, two hnndred and fyue. The sonnes of Banica, an hundred thre score and eyght. The sonnes of Rebech, foure hūdred and thre. The sonnes of Archad, foure hundred and .xxvij. The sonnes of Cham, thyrty and seuen The sonnes of Zorar, two thousande and. lxvij. The sonnes of Adinu, foure. C. thre score & one.

The sonnes of Adarectis, an hundred & eight. The sonnes of Clalo and Zelas, an hundred and seuen. The sonnes of Azorec, foure hundred and.xxxix. The sonnes of Jedarbone, an hundred and. xxxij. The sonnes of Hananias an hundred and thirty. The sonnes of Asom. xc. The sonnes of Marlar, four hundred & xxij. The sonnes of Zabarus. xcv. The sonnes of Sepholemon, an hundred and.xxvj. The sonnes of Nepopas, fifty and fiue. The sonnes of Hechanatus, an hundred and. lvij. The sonnes of Zebethanus, an hundred and.xxxij. The sones of Crearpatros (which is called also Enohadies and Hodias) four.C. and.xxvj. Of them of Gramos and Gabea, an.C. and.xxj. Of them of Bellelon and Leagge.lxb. Of the of Bastarus, an hundred and.xxij. Of them of Bechenobes.lv. Of the sones of Liplis, there were an hundred.lv. Of the sonnes of Labonus, three hundred and.lvij. Of the sonnes of Sichem, three hundred three score and ten. Of the sonnes of Huadon and Elimon, three hundred. lxxvij. Of the sonnes of Eetcus, two thousande an hundred and.xlv. The sonnes of Anaas, three hundred. lxx.

The prestes: The sonnes of Jeddus: The sonnes of Euther: The sonnes of Elasib, three hundred three score and twelue. The sonnes of Emerus, two hondred fifty & two The sonnes of Falsurius, three hundred & lvij. The sonnes of Caeca, two hundred and.xxvij The Leuites: The sonnes of Jesus in Cadubel & Banus, and Serebias, and Odeas, seuentye and foure.

The hole nombre of these from twelue yeres was three thousande foure hundred & lxij. Of the sonnes, doughters and wyues, ỳ hole summe was, a thousande, two hundred and foretye and two. The sonnes of the Preestes that prayed God in the temple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whome there were an hundred and.xxviij. But the doore kepers were: The chyldren of Selmenus, the chyldrē of Ater, the chyldren of Amon, the children of Acuba, Hopa, the chyldren of Tobi, an hundred thyrtye and vyne in all.

The Preestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Sell, the sonnes of Gaspha, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Caria, The sonnes of Sud, the sonnes of Helu, the sonnes of Labana, the sonnes of Armacha, the sonnes of Achub, the sonnes of Utha, the sonnes of Cetha, the sonnes of Aggab, the sonnes of Odap, the sonnes of Anant, the sonnes of Canna, the sonnes of Geddu, the sonnes of Au, the sonnes of Radin, the sonnes of Desanon, the sonnes of Mechoba, the sonnes of Caseba, the sonnes of Goza, the sonnes of Dzul, the sonnes of Sinona, the sonnes of Acra, the sonnes of Hastem, the sonnes of Asiana, the sonnes of Hanet, the sonnes of Masiin, the sonnes of Acuba, the sonnes of Agrita, the sonnes of Azut, the sonnes of Fauon, the sonnes of Phasalon, the sonnes of Heeda, the sonnes of Susa, the sonnes of Cared, the sonnes of Barcus, the sonnes of Sarea, the sonnes of Cocli, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Agrita, the sonnes of Pedon: Salomon his sonnes, the sonnes of Asophot, the sones of Phasida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Dedon, the sonnes of Gaddahel the sonnes of Zaphens the sonnes of Aggia, the sonnes of Hacharet, the sonnes of Habathem, the sonnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Masit, the sonnes of Anta, the sonnes of Salus, the sonnes of Abus, the sonnes of Suba, the sonnes of Ena, the sonnes of Rabotis, the sonnes of Phaphat, the sonnes of Malmon. All these ministred in the Sanctuarye, and were seruauntes of Salomon: euen foure hundred thre score and ten.

These folowing are they, that went vp fro Thelmellat Thelarsa (whose prices were Carmelā and Careth) and might not shew forthe their cities and kynredes, how they were of Israel: the sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Nechodaicus. Of the preestes that executed the office of the preesthode, and were not found: the sonnes of Odia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whiche maryed one of the doughters of Phargelen, and were named after him. The writinge of the same kynred was sought in ỳ register of their generacion, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of ỳ preesthode. Unto the said Nehemias & Atharas, that they sholde haue no porcion in the Sanctuarye, tyll there rose vp an hye preest, that were well instruct in the playne clerenesse and truth. Of all Israel (beside seruauntes and maydens) there were.xlij. thousande, three hundred and.xl. Nowe were there of seruauntes and maydens, seuen. M. three hundred and.xxxvj. Of synginge men and singinge women, there were two.C. and.lxb. Foure hundred and.xxxv. Camels. Seuen. M and.xxxvj. horses. Two hundred thousandes foretye and fyue mules. Fyue thousande and xxxv asses.

They? heedes also, and the rulers of the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God agayne in his place, they gaue after their abilitie, vnto the temple, to the treasure, and to the seruyce of the Sanctuarye twelue thousande poundes of golde, fyue thousande of siluer, and an hundred preestes garmentes. And so dwelte the preestes and the Leuites, and the people that wente out to Jerusalem, and the countrey there aboute, the syngers also & the porters euery one of Israell in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israell were euery man at his busynesse, they came all with one consent in to the courte, whiche was before the Easte doore. And there stode Jesus the sonne of Josedec, and his brethren the preestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and his brethren, setting vp an aulter to offre brent sacrifices vpon it, as it is written in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other cōtreys, & the heathen out of all landes to set vp ỳ aulter in his place, and offred sacrifices and brent offrings offeringes vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles as it is commaunded in the lawe: And daylye offred they as accordynge was. and made the sacrifyces appoynted, the offeringes also of the Sabbothes and of the newe Moones, & all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lorde, beganne at the new Moone of the seuenth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto ỹ Masons & carpenters, money, meate, and drynche with cheafulnes. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they sholde cary Cedre trees frome Libanus to Betaftes and beames, and that they shulde make shyppes in the heauen of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kinge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yere they came in to the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the second moneth beganne Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesue the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuyte of Babylon, and layde the foundacion of the temple, in the newe mone of the second moneth in the second yere that they were come in to Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue .xx. yere olde) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites stode to gyther, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde.

And the prestes stode, and had their garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph hadde Cymballes, gpuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lorde, accordynge as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd syng vnto the Lorde, was after this maner: O sing vnto the Lorde, for he is graeyous, and his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trōpettes, and songe with loude voyce, prayenge the Lorde togither in the rearynge vp of the house of ỹ Lorde. There came also frome amonge the Prestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accordynge to the trybes and kinredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyldyng of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge, many also with trompettes and great ioye: In so moch, that the trompettes myght not well be heard for the weppnge and mourning. For the commen people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

Then came the ennemyes of the trybes of Juda and Ben Jamyn, to knowe what that trompettynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they playned that it was they which were come agayne out of captyuyte, & wold buylde the temple vp a newe vnto the Lord God of Israel. So they went to Zorobabel and Jesus, and to the rulers of the villages and sayde vnto them: Shal we buylde with you also? For we lyke wyse haue heard your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the king of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then Zorobabel and Jesus and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayd vnto them: It is not mete that ye shulde buylde the temple of our God with vs: we oure selues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lorde, lyke as Cyrus the kinge of the Persians hath commaunded vs. 1. Esdr. 6.8

But the heithen in the lande layde them selues agaynste those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed wayte vpon them prcuyhye, stopped suche as broughtany thing to the, forbad the to build, and hyndered those that made them passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be so punyshed: and this contynued so longe as kinge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldynge for the space of two yeres, vntyll the raygne of kynge Darius.

Aggeus and Zacharyp prophecye. They buyld the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the cōmaundement of Darius.

NOt withstandinge in the seconde yere of the raygne of Darius, Aggeus and Zachary the sonne of Addo prophecied vpon them in Jewry and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Jesus the sonne of Josedec stode vp, and beganne to buylde ỹ house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, when the Prophetes of the Lorde helped them. Aggeus. 1.c

At the same time came Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, with the lād lordes and his companyons, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the rofe & all other thynges agayne? And who are the worke men, that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of ỹ Lord that they wold not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, vntyl ỹ tyme of kyng Darius were certifyed ther of, & an answere receyued from him. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

B Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Siria and Phenices, and the landlordes with their cōpanyons, which are deade rulers in Siria & Phenyces, sende their Salutation vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye oure Lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we founde them buylduynge the great house of God and the temple, with greate costely free stone and with goodly tymbre for the walles: yea they make greate haste with the worke, and helpe one an other. and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with greate diligence & worshyp is it mad.

Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldyng, and this we dyd to the intent that we myght certifye the perfectly: & wryte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers lers of the worke. So they gaue, vs this answere: we are the seruaūtes of ꝑ Lord, which made heauen and erth: and as for this house it hath bene buylded & set vp afore tyme by ꝑ

iii. Reg. vi. a great and mygthye kinge of Israel. But whē iiii. Reg. xxiiii. xxv. Jeremy. xxxix. lii. our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon the kinge of the Chaldees, which brake downe the house, and brēt it, and caryed awaye the people prysoners vn to Babylon. Neuertheles, in the fyrst yere
i. Esdr. v. c that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cirus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caryed away from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his own tēple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered thē to Zorobabel & to Salmanasar the vnder Shreue commaundynge them that they shulde bring those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalē in to the tēple, & to begyn frō ꝑ tyme forth, to build ꝑ temple agayne in his own place. Thē Salmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynckest it good, let it be sought in the Rybzarpes and rolles of kinge Cyrus: yf it be founde then, that it is done with ꝑ councell and consent of kinge Cyrus, and yf our Lorde the kyng be so myn ded, let him wrȝte vnto vs therof.

C Then commaunded kyng Darius, to seke
i. Esdr. vi. a in the Rybzaries: and so at Egbathanis in a
vi. Esdr. viii. c tyrle cyte in Medea there was founde such a writynge: In the fyrste yere of the raygne of Cyrus the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there cōtynually vnto the Lord) whose heygth shall be. x. cubytes, and the bredeth xl. cubytes, and. iiij. square with thre hewen stones, with a lott of tymbre of the same cōtrey, yea with a newe lott, and the expences therof to be gyuen of the house of kinge Cyrus.

And the ornamētes of golde and syluer, ꝑ Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem, shall be set agayne in ꝑ temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Sisennes also the vnder shreue in Siria and Phenices, the ꝓnces and theyr compa-nyons, and the other that be heade rulers in Siria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thing to do with that place.

D Cirus haue cōmaunded also, that they shall buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come oute of captyuyte: tyll the house of the Lord be fynyshed: and out of the trybute and taxynge that is yearelye raysed vp in Siria and Phenices, dyligently to gyue them a certayne summe to the offrynge of the Lord and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel ꝑ officer: that he therwithal may ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte, wyne and oyle, and that contynually euery yere: after the expences whiche the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made dayly: this shall be gyuen vnto them without delaye ꝑ
i. Esdr. they may offre sacrifices dayly to the hyghest God, for the kynge and for his seruauntes, and to praye for their lines. Let it be proclay med also on euery syde, that whosoeuer bre-keth or despyseth this commaundement of ꝑ kynge, shall be hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto the kinge.

The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kin ges and people, that vndertake by vyolence to hinder the same, or to deale vncurteously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shall be done with all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynyshed and dedicate: and the feast of vnleuened bread is holden.

CAPI. VII.

THen Sisennes the vnder shreue in Celosyria, and Phenyces, and the other Landlordes with theyr companyons, obeyed the thynges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, were dylygent in the holy workes and were felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus and Zachary prophecyed. A

And they perfourmed all thinges thorow the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artarexes kinges of Persia. B

And thus was oure house fynyshed vnto the. xxiij. daye of the moneth Adar in the. vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel ꝑ prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captyuyte, and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedycation of the temple they offred an hundred oxen, an hundred rammes. iiij. hundreth lambes, and. xij. gootes for the synnes of all the people of Israell, after the nombre of the trybes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in the prestly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer al the wor kes of the Lorde God of Israel accordynge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores.

And the chyldren of Israel (with those that C were come out of captyuyte) helde the passouer the. xiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuite, were not all sanctifyed together: but the Leuites were all sanctifyed together. Also all they that came out of captyuite, kylled ꝑ easter lambe, for theyr brethren, for the prestes and for the selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captiuite, and escaped from all the abominacyons of ꝑ Heathē, sought the Lord, D and kepte the feaste of vnleuened bread, vij. dayes dayes longe, eatyng and dzynkyng and were merey before the Lozde: that the Lozde had turned the deuyce of the kinge of Assiria, and comfozted their handes to the wozkes of ꝑ Lozde God of Israel.

¶ Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come togyther, and then readeth them the lawe. They kepe the feast of Tabernacles.

CAPI. VIII.

AND after him, when Artaxerres the kinge of the Perians raygned, there wente vnto him Esdras the sonne of Saratas, the sonne of Azarias, the son of Helchiab, the sonne of Hallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Boccus, the sonne of Abiu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aarō the fyrst preest. This Esdras went vp frome Babilon for he had good vnderstandinge in the lawe of Moses, that was gyuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede. And the kinge fauoured him, and dyd him great worthip and honoure, after all his desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the preestes of ꝑ Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynisters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the.vij. yere of the the raygne of kinge Artaxerres, in the.v. moneth, that is in the vij. yeare of the raygne, they wente frome Babylon in the newe moone of the fyfth month, and came the hyghe waye to Jerusalem after his commaundemente, lyke as the Lozde hadde prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat greate instruction that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behynde, whiche are in the law and commaundementes of God. And he taughte hole Israell all rightoulnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaryes of kynge Artaxerres, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artaxerres the kinge) to Esdras the preeste and reder of the lawe of the Lozde: And this is the coppye of the letter.

Kinge Artaxerres sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preeste and reder of the lawe of the Lozde: Of frynshyp and good will I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the preestes and Leuites in my realme, which desyreth and is contente to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therfore yf anye be minded to beare the company, let them come togyther, & go with the (lyke as I am content and my seuen frēdes my counselers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thinges accordynge as thou hast in the lawe of the Lozde and to brynge the gyftes vnto God ꝑ Lord of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer & golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Jerusalem, with the thing that is gyuen for the people in the Lozdes temple at Jerusalem; Yea that the same siluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rāmes, shepe and gotes and other that be long to these thinges: and that they maye offre sacryfyces vnto the Lozde, whiche is at Jerusalem,

And what so euer thou and thy brethren wyll doo with syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, and after the commaundemēt of the Lozde thy God: & lyke wyse with all the holye vessels, that are gyuen the for ꝑ seruyce of the house of the Lozd thy God: and other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, that shal be gyuē ꝑ of the kynges treasure: and loke what thou with thy brethren wylte doo with the golde and siluer, that doo after the wyll of the Lozde.

And I kynge Artaxerres haue commaunded the kepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lozde doth wryte, it shall be gyuen him: tyll an. C. talentes of siluer, and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an hundreth measures. and tyll an hūdreth vessels of wine, and other plenteous thinges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the law of the hyghest God, that ꝑ wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaūd you also, that ye requyre no tax ne trybute of the preestes, Leuytes syngers, and mynisters of the temple, ne of the writers: and that no man haue auctoryte to medle any thynge agaynst thē. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbytrers in the hole land of Siria and Phenyces, after the wysdome of God: and learne al such as are ignoraunte in the law of God thy Lozde, & let al them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be w death with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed.

Then sayde Esdras the wryter. Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath gyuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the herte of the kinge to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes and of his nobles. C 1. Esdr. viii. D

And so I was stedfast in my mynde, according as the Lord my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me.

And these are the heades (after their kinredes and houses of their fathers) that went vp w me frome Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerres: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of ꝑ sonnes of Sigmarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus, ꝑ sonne of Lectia. 1. Esdr. viii. E

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary: & with him there turned agayne an hundred and fyfty men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabylon, Zarei, and with him. ij. hundreth and. l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Zecholy, & with him. ij. C. and. l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasia &, Gotholie, & lxx. with him. Of ꝑ sonnes of Zaphatia, Zarias Micheli, & with him. lxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias Jeheli, and with hym. ij. C. &

twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Halimoth the son of Iosaphia, & with hym an. C. & lx. mē. Of ꝑ sonnes of Beer, Zachary, Bebei, and with him. ij C. and. viij. men. Of the sonnes of Elead, Johannes Ezechan, & with hym. C. & x. men, Of the sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last, and these are theyr names: Eliphalam the sonne of Gebell and Semeias, and with hym. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

D As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Eccelom, and Maisman, and Malobam, and Enaathan, and Samea, and Jozibimathan, Eunagan, Zachary, Mosollamum (these were the leders and men of experyence) and I sent them wyde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by ꝑ place of the treasurye, and cōmaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myght execute the prestes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And with the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, frome amonges the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeliam and the sonnes and his brethren Asbin and Anin, of whō there were. xviij. From amōges the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananeus, and their sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the pryncypall men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. and twentye men, whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

1. Esdr. viii. c Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myght desyre of him a prosperous iourney & a good waye for vs, yea for vs, for our chyldren, and for the catel, because of the layinges awayte, and I durst not require of the kynge men of horse and of fote, to conueye vs safely agaynst oure enempes, for we had sayd vnto ꝑ kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shuld be with them, that seke hym with theyr hole herte. And therfore we besought God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, & he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the people, and frō the prestes of the temple. xij. men, & Hebeia and Asania, and ten men of their brethrē with them. And I weied them the golde & the syluer and al the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kyng & his counsel, and his princes, & hole Israel had geuen. And whē I had weyed it, I gaue thē an. C. & l. talētes in syluer, & C. talentes of syluer vessell, an. C. talētes of gold, & of goldē vessell seuē tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea of good metall). xij. glystrynge as the golde, & sayd vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the lorde, & the vessels are holy, & the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the lord ꝑ God of our fathers, Be diligent nowe and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the Prestes, to the Leuite, and to the pryncypall men of the cytyes of Israell in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of our God.

So the prestes and the Leuytes which receyued of me the golde, the siluer and the vessell, brought it to Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from Thia we brake vp the. xij. daye of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde day was past, the weyed golde & syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Joz the preste, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them were Josabdus the sonne of Jesuet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the weyght: and the wayght of them were wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyuyte, they offred sacrifyce vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen. xij. oxen for all Israel. lxxxvj. rammes lxxij. shepe. xij. goddes for synne. xij. kyne for a thankoffrynge, al to ꝑ sacrifyce of the Lord. And the kynges commyssyon delyuered they vnto the stewardes and debites of the kyng, and to the vnder rulers in Celosyria and 1. Esd. 4. c Phenices.

Nowe when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyon of Israel, the Pryncs, the prestes and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the land, haue not put awaye theyr vncleanesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, from the Moabytes, Egypcyans and Edomytes.

For bothe they and theyr sonnes haue mengled them selues with the doughters of thē, and the holy sede is myxte with the outlandyshe Heathen, and sens the begynnynge of theyr raygne haue the rulers and heades ben partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

F * As soone as I had hearde these thynges 1. Esd. 8. c immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my heade & my beerd, & sat me downe sorowful & heuy. So al they that were moued thorow the word of ꝑ God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat styll full of heuynesse vntyll the euenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp frō fastyng, hauyng rente clothes and the holy garmēt, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many vpon our heedes, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heuē/ for sence the time of our fore fathers, we are in great syn vnto this day. And for the synnes of vs & our fathers, we with our brethren and with oure prestes haue ben delyuered vnto the kynges of the erth, in to the swerde, and in to captiuitie, and became a spoyle with confusion & shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the? in that thou hast left vs a rote & name in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to discouer oure

lyght in the house of the Lorde oure God, & gyuen vs meate at al tymes of our mynystracion. And when we were in captyuytie, we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kinges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs victayles and meate, yea and leaue to buylde vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, & to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And nowe, O Lorde, what shall we saye, hauinge all these thinges in possession? For we haue broken thy cõmaundementes, whiche thou gauest vnto vs by the hãdes of thy seruaũtes the prophetes, sayinge: The land that ye go vnto, and that is gyuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennes and filthynesse of the heithen, and with their abhominacion haue they poluted it all togyther. Therfore shall ye not ioyne your doughters vnto their sonnes ne mary your sonnes vnto their doughters: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make pear wt tyẽ, ỹ ye may increase & eat ỹ best in the land: & that ye may dyuyde the inheritaunce of the lande vnto youre chyldren for euermore. As for the thinge that nowe happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes & great synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs suche a rote, ỹ we are come agayne vnto our owne lande: and we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes and commaũdementes agayne, & mengled our selues with the vnclennes of the outlandyshe Heathen. O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs? wylte thou rote vs cleane out? that our rote and name remayn no more? O Lord God of Israell thou arte true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde, now are we before the in our synnes, now can we not stande before the in them.

And when Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weppynge, and lyenge flatte vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a great multytude of men and women, of yonge men & maydens, for there was a very greate weppyng and mournyng in the congregacyõ, So when Jechonias the sonne of Jehell one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde, because we haue maryed outlandyshe womẽ of the heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We wyll sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put awaye all oure wyues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathẽ with theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted the before our fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, and declare it playnly vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, & we wyll helpe the, qupte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the Priestes and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

After Esdras had read the lawe, the people put awaye theyr straunge wyues: and then returneth euery man meryly vnto his owne dwellynge.

CAPI. IX.

THen Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple with out, & went in to the chamber of Jonathas the son of Masabus, and remayned there, and eat no meate nor dronke drynke, for the multytude of the wyckednes of ỹ people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Jewrye and at Jerusalem, for all suche as were gathered et Jerusalem out of captyuite, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or .iij. dayes accordyng to the iudgement of the olde lordes of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captyuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the .xx. daye of the .ix. moneth. And the hole multytude satte trembynge in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose vp, and sayd vnto them: ye haue done vnryghtously, in that ye haue taken outlandyshe wyues to maryage, and so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now knowledge the same, and giue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and performe his wyll, departynge frome the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. Then cryed the hole multytude with loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for somoche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stãd without the house: agayne, this worcke is not a thynge, that can be fynyshed in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges: Ordeyne therfore, that the rulers of the multytude & all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outelandyshe wyues, the Prestes also and iudges of euerye place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyl they lose vp the wrath of the Lorde in his busynes.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezell, and Ozias and Thecam receued ỹ charge of this matter, & Bozozamus, and Leius. and Sabatheus helped them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captyuite. And Esdras the preest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordynge to theyr names, & in the new mone of the tenth moneth they satte together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the first moneth. And of the preestes that had myxt them selues with out landish wyues, there were founde: of the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedech and his brethren, Maazeas, Eleazar, Joribus, and Joadeus, whiche offred them selues to put away their wyues, and to offre a ram for their ignorauñce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri, Halleas, and Elles, and Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Foseta, Limosias, Hismaen, Nathanea, Jullio, Jodus and Talsas. And of the Leuites Jolabdus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, and Ellonas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuarye, Eliarib, Zacharus. Of the porters ters, Hallumus and Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the chyldren of Foro, Osi, and Remias, & Geddias, and Melchias, Athelus, Elcazarus, Jemmebias, and Bannas. And of the chyldren of Jolaman, Thanias, Zachari, Jezrelus, Joddius, Ermoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jotnoin, Eliadas, Liasamus, and Zochias, Larimoth, Habdis and Nebedias. And of the sonnes of Zebes, Johannes, Amanias, Zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addin, Naatus, and Moolias, and Caleus, and Baanas, Maasuas, Mathathias, Besel, Bannus and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Ases, Melchias, Sameas, Simon, Benjamin, Malchus and Sarras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manalles, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abzamas, Jobel, Baneas, Peliaas, Jona, Martmoth, Eliasib, Mathenens, Elialis, Ozias, Otelus, Semebius, Zambzis and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zecheda, Hedmi, Jesseus, and Baneas. All these had taken ouriandyshe women to marrage, and they put the awaye with theyr chyldren. The preistes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem and thorowout all the lande, in the newe moone of the .vij. moneth and ỹ chyldren of Israel were in theyr dwellinges. And ỹ hole multitude came together vpon the flooze at the easte syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldras the hye preste and reader, that he wolde bringe the lawe of Moses, whiche was geuē of the Lorde God of Israel. So Eldras the hye preste brought the lawe vnto the hole multitude, to man and woman, and to all prestes, that they myght heare the lawe, in the new mone of the .vij. moneth. And he red in the floze that is before the holy porte of the temple, from the mornynge early vnto the eueny̆ng, before men and women. And

ii. Eldr. iii. a

they applyed theire mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Eldras the preste and reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wood, which was made therfore: and vpō his ryght hand there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Urias. Ozechias, and Balsamus: Vpō his left hād stode Faldeus, Mysael, Malachias, Abuscas, Sabus, Nabadias and Zachary. Then toke Eldras the boke before the hole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in mooste honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all streyght vpon theyr fete. So Eldras prayed the Lorde the moste hygh God, the almyghty God of hostes. And all the people aunswered: Amen: and held vp their handes, fell wowne flat vpō ỹ earth, & prayed ỹ Lord. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Phylias the Leuites lyfte vp theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and prayed the Lord: Those were they which taught ỹ law of the Lorde, and red the lawe of the Lorde in the congregacyō: and euery man set those before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharates vnto Eldras the hye preste and reder, and to ỹ Leuites that taught the multytude, sayinge: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that heard the lawe, wepte So Eldras said: Departe your way thē, and eat the best and dzynke the swetest, and send gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye. Then wente they theyr waye euerychone, ate and dzonke, and were merye, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng that they myght also eat with gladnesse: for they were excedyngly reioyced, thorowe the wordes that were red vnto them in ỹ lawe:

And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde ỹ feast, accordynge to the couenaunt of the Lord God of Israel.

¶ The people is reproued for theyr vnthankfulnesse. God wyll fynde an other people yf theie wyll not be reformed.

CAPI. I.

THe seconde boke of the Prophet Eldras (ꝑ sonne of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the son of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias, the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Maraioth, the son of Saahias, the sonne of Uzi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui: which was prysoner in the land of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes king of Persia.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: go thy waye, and shew my people their synfulll dedes, and their children their wickednesses, which ꝑ they haue done against me, that they maye tell their childers children the same: for the sinnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, that brought thē out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despised my counsels. Pull thou but then the heer of thy heade, and cast al euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernyng and nourture. How longe shal I forbeare them vnto whom I haue done so moche good? Manye kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: Pharao with his seruauntes and all his power haue I smytten downe and slayne: All the nacions haue I destroyed and roted oute before them, ꝑ in the east haue I brought two landes and people to nought, euen Tyre ꝑ Sydon, and haue slayne al their ennemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde: I ledde you thorowe the see, and haue geuen you sure stretes tenee the begynnynge. I gaue you Moses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the preest. I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fyre, ꝑ greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, and tentes for your sucoure: Neuertheles ye murmured, and ascribed not the victory of your ennemyes vnto my name: yea this same daye do ye yet murmoure. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongry in the wyldernes, dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs in to this wyldernes, to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued the Egipcians, then to die in this wildernesse. Then had I pitie vpon your mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye ate angels fode. When ye were thurstly, dyd not I hewe the harde stone, ꝑ caused water to flowe therout? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees. A good pleasaunt fat lande gaue I you: I cast oute the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you. What shall I doo more for you, sayth the Lorde. Sapi. xvi. c Nume. xx. B Esay. v. c

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: When ye were in the wyldernesse, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyrste and blasphemynge my name: I gaue you not fyre for youre blasphemyes, but caste a tree in to the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I doo vnto the, o Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. I wyll tourne me to an other people, and vnto those wyll I gyue my name, that they maye kepe my statutes. C Seynge ye haue forsaken me, I wyll forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracyous vnto you, I wyll haue no mercye vpon you: when ye call vpon me, I wyll not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre handes with bloude, and youre feete are swyfte to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a maner) but your owne selues sayth the Lorde. Esay. i. d

Thus sayethe the almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her doughters, and as a nurse her younge babes, that ye wolde be my people, and I shoulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my children, and I shoulde be your owne father? I gathered you togither, as an henne gathereth her chyckens vnder her wynges. But nowe what shall I doo vnto you? I shall cast you oute fro my face. When ye offer vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for youre solemne feaste dayes, youre newe moones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken, I sente vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose bloud I wyll requyre of youre handes, sayethe the Lorde. Mat. xxv. F Esay. i. d xlvi.

Thus sayth the almyghtye Lorde: youre house must be desolate. I wyll caste you oute as the wynd doth the strawe: your children shall not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and doone the thynge that is euyll before me. Youre houses wyll I gyue vnto a people that shall come, and they that neuer herd me, shal bileue in me: ꝑ they vnto whome I neuer shewed token, shal doo the thynge that I commaunde theym. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege theym. I repose me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to com, whose children reioyse in gladnesse: and thoughe they haue not sene me with bodyly eyes, yet in spirite they byleue the thynge that I saye. D

And now brother, beholde what great worshyp and se the people that cōmeth from the East, vnto whom I wyll gyue the dukedom of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Michеas: of Joel, Abdi, Jonas, Naum, and Abacuc: of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary, and Malachi, which is called also an aungell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

¶ The Synagoge fyndeth faulte with her owne chyldren. The Gentyles are called.

CAPI. II.

A THus sayth the Lorde, I haue brought this people out of bondage, I gaue thē my commaundementes by my seruaun tes the Prophetes, whome thou woldest not heare, but despysed my counsels. The mother that bare them, sayth vnto them: Goo your waye you chyldren, for I am a wydow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorowe and heynesse haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before ꝑ Lord youre God, and done the thynge that is euil before him. But what shall I nowe doo vnto you? I am a wydowe and forsaken: goo youre waye, o my chyldren and aske mercye of the Lorde. As for me, o father, I cal vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldren, whiche wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bringe them to confusion, and their mother to a spoyle, that the beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode amonge the heathen, let them be put oute of the erth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Woo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest ꝑ vnrightous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd to Sodome & Gomorre whose lande is turned to pytche and asshes. Euen so also wil I do vnto all them ꝑ heare me not, sayth ꝑ almighty Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wil gyue them the kyngdom of Jerusalem which I wold haue gyuen vnto Israel: their glory also will I take vnto me, and giue thē the euerlastynge tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those. Gene. xix. e

B The tre of lyfe shall be onto them a swete smellynge oyntment: they shall neyther laboure nor be werye. Goo ye your waye, and ye shall receyue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwelle therin. Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche, take heuen and erth to witnesse, for I haue broken the euil in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bringe them vp with gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyller, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde.

And those that be deed wyll I rayse vp agayne from their places, and bring them out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren, for I haue chosen the sayth the Lorde. And for thy helpe, I shal send the my seruaūtes Elay and Jeremy, after whose counsel I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with dyues frutes, and as manye welles flowynge with mylke and hony, and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there grow roses and lylyes, wherin I wyll fyll my chyldren with ioye.

Execute iustyce for ꝑ widow, be iudge for the fatherlesse: giue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded & sicke, laugh not a lame man to scorne, defende the creple, and let the blynd come in to the lyghte of my clerenesse. Kepe the olde and yonge within thy walles, where so euer thou fyndest the deed, toke them, and bury them, and I shall gyue the, the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde stil, o my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietnesse is come. Fede thy chyldrē, o thou good nurse, stablish their fete. As for the seruaūtes whom I haue gyuē the, there shall not one of them perysshe, for I wyll seke them from thy nombre, were not thy selfe. Tobith

C For when the daye of trouble and heynesse commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalte be merye and plenteous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be hable to doo nothynge agaynste the, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be ioyfull, o thou mother with thy chyldren, for I wyll delyuer the, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy deed chyldren, for I shall bringe them out of the erth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull sayth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren vntyl I come, and shew mercy vnto thē, for my welles run ouer and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receyued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I sholde go vnto Israel. But whē I came vnto Israel they set me at nought, & despised the commaundemit of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, o ye heathen, that heare & vnderstand: Loke for your shepeherde, he shall gyue you euerlastynge rest: for he is nye at hande that shall come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy for ꝑ rewarde of the kyngdom, for the euerlasting lyght shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Flie the shadowe of this worlde, receyue the ioyfulnesse of youre glorye. I testifye my sauyoure openly: O receyue the gyft that is gyuen you, and be glad, gyuynge thankes vnto hym, that hathe called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

D Aryse vp and stand fast: behold the nōbre of those ꝑ be sealed in the feaste of the Lorde which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, and haue receyued glorious garmētes of the Lorde. Take thy nombre, o Sion, and shut vp thy purified, which haue fulfilled the law of the Lord. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longdest for, is fulfylled: beseche the power of the Lorde that thy people, whiche haue ben called from the begynnyng, may be halowed.

I Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Syon a greate people, whome I coulde not nombre, and they al praysed the Lord with songes of thankesgyuynge. And in the myddes of them there was a yong man of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, whiche I maruey led at greatly. So I asked the aungell and sayde: Syr what are these? He aunswered and sayde vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge, and put on the immortal, and haue confessed and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned and receyue the rewarde.

Then sayd I vnto the aungel: what yong person is it that crowneth theym, and gyueth them the palmes in their handes? So he answered and sayd vnto me: It is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to commende them, that stode so stoutly for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungell sayd vnto me: Go thy waye and tell my people what maner of thinges, and how great wonders of the Lorde thy God thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous workes whiche God dyd for the people are recyted. Esdras marueleth that God suffreth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, whiche yet are synners also.

CAPI. III.

IN the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cyty, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, and my spirite was sore moued: so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the hyghest, & sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnyng, when thou plantedst the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy handes, and hadst breethed in hym the breeth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou ledest him in to Paradyse, whiche gardeyn of pleasure thy ryghte hande hadde planted or euer the earthe was made. And vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, whiche he transgressed, and immediatly thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacyons, tribes people and kynredes out of nombre. And euery people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before the, but thy commaundementes they dispised. And in processe of tyme, thou broughtest the water floude vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And as the deathe was in Adam, so was the water floude also i these. Neuertheles one of them thou lefte st, euen Noe with his housholde, of whome came all ryghtous men. And it happened, that when they that dwelte vpon the earth began to increase, and hadde gotten many chyldren, and were a greate people, they began to be more vngodly then the fyrst. Nowe when they all lyued so wyckedlye before the, thou dyddest chose the a man amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedst, and to him onely thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euerlastynge couenaunte with him, promysynge hym thou woldest neuer forsake his seed. And vnto hym thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dyddest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greate multitude. Gene.xxi.a Gene.xxv.c Genes.xxvii.a

And it happened that when thou leddest his seed out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge downe the heauens, settynge fast the earthe, meuynge the grounde, makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: And thy glorye went thorowe foure portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest gyue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generation of Israel. And yet takest thou not awaye from the that wycked hert, that thy lawe myght bring forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they that are borne of him. Thus remayned weyknesse with the lawe in the herte of the people, with the wyckednesse of the roote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euyll abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and ỹ yeres were brought to an ende. Then dyddest thou rayse the vp a seruaunte called Dauid, whome thou commaundedst to buylde a citye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifyce vnto ỹ therin. This was doone nowe manye yeres. Then the inhabitaũtes of the city forsoke the and in all thinges did, euen as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked hert. Roma. viii.a 1.Reg.xv.c 1.Reg. v.a.g

And so thou gauest thy citye ouer in to the handes of thyne ennemyes. Are they of Babylon then better and more eyghtous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominion of Syon? For when I came there, and sawe theyr vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse that it coulde not be nombred: yea, when my soule sawe so many euyll doers in the thirty yere, my herte fayled me: for I saw how thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wycked doers: but thyne owne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thyne ennemies, and this hast thou not shewed me. D

I can not perceyue howe this happeneth. Doo they of Babylon then better then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the saynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so bilened thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appeareth not, and theyr laboure hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se they be ryche and welthye, and thynke not vpon thy commendementes.

Wepe thou therfore our wickednesse now in the ballaunce, and theirs also that dwelle in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde, but in Israell. Or where is there a people vpon earthe, that hathe not synned before the? Or what people hathe so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fynde that Israell by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, bicause he semed to entre in to the profounde iudgement of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A AND the aungell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an answere, and sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moche vpon it in this worlde, and thou thynkest to compasse the waye of the hyest. Then sayde I: Yea my Lorde. And he answered me and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth thre symilitudes before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the waye that thou desyrest to se, and I shal shew the whēce thy wycked herte commeth. And I sayde: Tell on my Lord. Then sayd he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayd: What man borne is hable to do that? Why requyrest thou suche of me? And he sayd vnto me: Yf I shoulde aske the, how depe dwellinges are on the see? Or how greate water sprynges are vpon the firmament? Or how great water sprynges are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or whiche are the out gopynges of Paradyse? Peraduenture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet in to the depe nor hel, neither syd I euer clymme vp in to heuen. Neuertheles nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre and wynde, and of the daye thorowe whiche thou hast trauayled, and from whence thou canste not be seuered: and yet canst thou gyue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp with the can thou not knowe: how shoulde thy vessel then be hable to compasse the way of the hyest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde to vnderstande the corruption that is euident in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better we were not at al, then we shold lyue in wyckednesse, and suffre, & not to know

B wherfore. He answered me and sayd: I went Judith. ix. b in a wod, and the trees toke such a deuice and 2. Para. xxv. c sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye depart awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet moze woddes. The floudes of the see also in like maner toke this deuyce ad sayd: Come let vs go vp and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodde, that we may make our lande the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodde was but vayne, and nothynge worthe, for the fyre came and consumed the wodde: The thought of the floodes of the see came lykewyse to nought, for the sand stode vp and stopped them. Yf thou were iudge nowe betwene these two, whom woldest thou iustifye, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered and sayd: Uerily it is a folysh thought that they bothe haue erred. For the grounde is gyuen vnto the wod, and the see also hath his place to beare his floodes. Then answered he me and said: Thou hast gyuen a ryghte iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the ground is gyuen vnto the wodde, and the see to his floodes: euen so they that dwell vpon erth maye vnderstande nothyng but that which is vpon erth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heues, maye onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heuens. Clau. de Iebame 1. Cozinth.

Then answered I and sayd: I beseche the O Lorde, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curious of thy high thinges, but such as we daily medle withal/ namely, wherfore that Israell is blasphemed of the Heathē, and for what cause the people (whome thou euer hast loued) is gyuen ouer to be punished of vngodly nacions: and why? the law of our fathers is brought to nought, and the wrytten couenauntes come to none effect, and we passe away out of the worlde as the grashoppers, and our lyfe is a deep feare, & we are not worthy to obteyne mercy. What wyll he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me and said: The more thou serchest, the more thou shalte marueyle, for the worlde hasteth faste to passe awaye, and can not comprise the thynges, that are promysed for the ryghtous in tyme to come, for this worlde is full of vnryghteousnesse and wyckednesse.

But as concernynge the thynges wherof 1. Johā. ii. C thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The cupll is sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. Yf the cupll nowe that is sowen, be not tourned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the cupll is sowen, passe not awaye, then can not the thynge come that is sowen with good. For the corne of cupll sede hathe ben sowen in the herte of man frome the begynnyng, and how moche vngodlynesse hath he brought vp vnto this time? and how moch shall he yet bryng forth vntyll he come in to the barne?

Ponder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of cupll sede is cut downe, how great a barne shall it fyll? I answered an sayd: How and when shal these thinges come to passe? Why? fore are oure yeres fewe and cupll? And he answered me, sayinge: Haste not thou to moche vpon the hyest, for thy hastynesse to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to moch ado. Dyd not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these thynges in their holynesse, sayinge: ✠ How longe shall I hope of Apoca. vi this facion? When commeth the frute of my barne, and my rewarde? And vpon this Jere-

miel the Archaungel gaue them answere, and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the sedes is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaūce: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayd: O Lorde Lorde, now are we all full of synne, and for our sakes peraduenture it is not that the barne of the righteous shall not be filled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the erth.

So he aunswered me and sayde: Goo thy waye to a woman with chylde, and aske of her when she hath fulfylled her nyne menethes, yf her chyldbed maye kepe the byrth any longer within her. Then sayd I: No Lord that can she not. And he said vnto me: In hel the secrete places of soules are lyke the pruy chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauaileth, maketh haste when the time and necessitie of the byrthe is at hande: Euen so dothe the haste to delyuer it that is cōmitted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shal be shewed the from the begynnyng. Then aunswered I and sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me the whether there be more to come then is paste, or more paste then is for to come? What is paste I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon the right syde, and I shall expounde the symilytude vnto the. So I stode, and beheld, an hote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that when the flambe was gone by, the smoke hadde the vpper hande. After this there wente ouer before me a watery cloude, and sent down moche rayne with a storme: and when the stormye rayne was past, the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: Lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke: euen so the measure of the thynges that are paste, hathe the vpper hande. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He aunswered me, and sayde. As for the tokens wherof thou askest me, I may tell the of them in a parte: but as touching o thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

Esdras and the Iungel commen togyther.

CAPI. V.

NEuertheleſſe, as concernyng the tokens marke this. Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon erth shal be taken in a great nombre, and the way of the truth shall be hyd, and the lande shall be barayn from fayth, but iniquitie shal haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde long ago. And the land that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte thou shortly se waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trompet, that the sunne shall sodeynly shyne ageyn in the nyght, and the mone thre tymes in a day, and bloude shall drop out of wod, and the stone shall gyue his voyce, and the people shall be vnquiet: and euen he shall rule, whome they hope not that dwell vpō erth, and the foules shal flye, and the Sodomitish see shall cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the night, which many shal not know, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shal be a confusion also in many places, and the fire shall be ofte sent agayne, and the wylde beastes shall go their way, and mēstruous women shal beare monsters, and salt waters shall be found in the swete, one frend shall fight agaynst an other, then shal all wit and vnderstandyng be hyd and put aside in to their secrete places, and shall be sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vnrighteousnesse, and voluptuousnesse haue the vpper hande vpon earthe. One lande also shall aske an other and saye: Is righteousnes gone thorow the? And it shall say, no. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothynge obteyne: they shall labour, but their wayes shall not prosper.

To shewe the suche tokens I had leue, and B yf thou wilt pray agayne, and wepe as now, and fast seuē dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnesse went thorow al my body, and my minde was feble and carefull, so that I almost swouned withal. So the aungel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the Capitayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where haste thou bene? and why is thy countenaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israell is committed vnto the in the lande of their captiuitie? Vp then and eat, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayd I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he herd it, and as I sayd, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes, it happened that the thoughtes of my herte were verye greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receyued the spirite of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talke with the moste hyghest agayne, and sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wodde of the earthe, and of all the trees therof, thou haste chosen the one onely vyneyard, and of al landes of the hole world thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all floutes of the ground, thou hast chosen the one lyly: and of all the depthes of the see, thou hast fylled the one ryuer, and of all buylded cityes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue, and of al the catel that are made thou hast prouided the one shepe, and among all the multytudes of folkes, thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whō thou louedst thou gauest a lawe that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou gyuen this one people ouer vnto manye? and vpon the one roote thou haste prepared other, and why hast thou scattered thy one onely people amonge many? whiche treade theym downe, yea whiche haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer byleued thy couenauntes? And though thou weredst ennempe vnto the people yet shouldest thou punysshe them with thyne owne handes.

¶ Now when I had spoke these wordes, the aungel that came to me the nyght afore, was sent vnto me and sayde vnto me: Heare me & harken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell the more. And I sayd: Speke on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou the people better than him that made them? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of verye greefe & compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, bycause I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyest, & to seke out part of his iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayst not. And I sayd: wherfore Lorde? Wherevnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldbed then my graue? So had I not sene the misery & trouble of Iacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: nombre me the thinges that are not yet come / gather me togyther the droppes that are scatred abrode: make me the floures grene agayne that are wythered: open me the thynge that is closed: and bringe me forthe the wyndes that are shutte vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, & then shall I declare the, the thynge that thou labourest to know. And I sayd: O Lord, Lord who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with men? As for me I am vnwyse: Howe maye I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me. Then sayd he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people.

And I sayd: beholde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doo that haue bene before me, or we that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgement vnto a synge. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the fyrste. So I answered and sayde: Couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and that be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at ones, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Howe haste thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuynge maker, haste made the creature lyuynge at ones, and the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present at ones. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the chyldebedde of a woman, and saye vnto her: Yf thou bryngest forthe chyldren, why doest thou it not togyther, but one after an other? Praye her therfore to bryng forth ten chyldren at ones. And I sayd: she can not, but muste do it one after an other. D

Then sayd he vnto me: Euen so haue I gyuen a chyldebed vnto the earthe, forthose that be sowen vpon it by procesle of tyme. For lyke as a ponge chylde maye not bringe forthe the thynges that belonge to the aged, euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seinge thou haste nowe gyuen me awaye, I wyll speake before the: for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet younge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age. He aunswered me and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke those that were before the, but lesse of stature: and she shal aunswere the: They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one facyon: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the chyldbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consydre nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures whiche nowe begyn to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou vysyt thy creature?

¶ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, and gyueth him answere to his questyons.

CAPI. VI.

AND he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge when the grounde was made: ¶ before the worlde stode, or euer the windes blewe, before it thondered and lyghtened, or euer the foundations of Paradyse were layde, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer the mouable powers were stablysshed, before the innumerable multitude of aungelles were gathered togyther, or euer the dyghnesse of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the fyrmament were named, or euer the chymneys in Syon were hote, and or the present yeres were sought oute, and or euer the inuencyons of them that now synne were put aside, before they were sealed that nowe gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consydre and ponder all these thinges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorowe none other, by me also they be ended, & by none other.

Then

Then answered I and sayde: whiche shal be the partynge a sunder of the tymes? Or when shall be the ende of the fyrste, and the begynnynge of it that followeth? And he said vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the beginnynge of it that followeth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, if I haue founde fauoure in thy sight I beseche the, shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayde: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacio of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whe I had herd it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: and beholde there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sound of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nyghe, and to vysette them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquisicio of them, what they be that hurt equyte with vnryghtoulnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shal be fulfylled: and when the world that shall vanysh awaye, shal be ouersealed, then will I do these tokens.

The bokes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall se all togither, & the chyldre of a yere olde shal speake with their voyces: the women with chylde shall bring forth vntymely childzen of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, & be rayled vp: & sodenly shal the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, the ful store houses shall sodenly be found emptye, and the trompet shal gyue a sounde, whiche when euery man heareth, they shall be hastely afrayde. At ꝑ time shall fryndes fight one against an other like enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The sprynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth frō all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shall escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receyued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death frome theyr byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shal be chaunged, and turned into another meaning for euyll shall be put out, & disceyte shall be quenched: as for sayth, it shall florysshe, corrupcio shalbe ouer come: and the truth, whiche hath bene so longe without frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked vnto me, that I loked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shew the, the tyme of ꝑ nyght for to come.

Yf thou wilt prayse yet more, and fast seuē dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyghest: for why? the mighty hath sene thy rightous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastyte, whiche thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hathe he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comfort, & feare not, and haste not with the tymes that are past to thynke vayne thynges, and make not haste of the latter tymes. L

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuē dayes in lyke maner that I myght fulfyll the thre wekes, whiche he tolde me. In the eyght night was my hert vexed within me agayne, and I begamne to speke before the hyghest: for my spirite was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distres, and I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature fom the beginninge (euen the fyrste daye) and sayedst: Let heauen and erth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the spirite, and the darknesses were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet frō the. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke myght appeare and be sene. Genel.i.a

Upon the seconde daye thou madest the spirite of the fyrmament, and commaūdedst it to parte a sundre, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that the one part might remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon the thyrde day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuēth part of the earth: Sire partes hast thou dryed vp and kept them, to thintent that men myghte sowe and occupye husbandrye therin. As soone as thy worde went forth, the worcke was made. for immediatly there was great innumerable frute, and manye dyuers pleasures and delyres of temptacion, floures of chaungeable colour and smel, and this was done the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth day thou commaundedst that the sonne shoulde gyue his shyne, and ꝑ moone her lyght: the starres dydest thou set in ordre, and gauest them a charge: to do seruyce euē vnto man: that was for to be made. Upon the fyft day thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bryng forthe dyuerse beastes, foules, & fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the dom water & withoute soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous workes. The diddest thou preserue two soules, the one ꝑ calledst Enoch and the other Leuiathan, & dyddest separate the one frō the other: for the seuēth parte (namely, where the water was gathered togither) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherin are a thou- D Deut.xiii.e Genel.i.c lande lykes. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the leuenty parte, namely the moyst, and, hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wylt and whan. Upon the syxte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the it shulde bryngе forth beastes, catel, and all that crepe, and (besydes this) Adam also whom thou madest lorde of all creatures: Of hym come we all, and ye people also, whō thou hast chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayd nowe and spoken before the, that I myght shewe, how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people whiche also come of Adam, thou hast sayde that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spetie, & hast lykened the aboundaunce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rote of the house.

And nowe, O Lorde, the Heathen whiche haue euer ben reputed as nothynge, haue begonne to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called the fyrst borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes & power. Yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessyon with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

Exod. iiii. f

¶ The Aungell sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

CAPI. VII.

A

And it happened after that I had spoke out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an aungell, which hadde ben by me also the nyghtes afore, and he sayd vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayd: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayd he vnto me: The see is sette in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and great: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde goo into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he went not thorowe the narrowe, howe myght he come into the brode?

Item an other: A cyte is buylded and sette vpon a brode felde, and is full of goodes: the entraunce is narrowe and sodeyn, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onlye one strayte pathe betwyxte them bothe, too smal that there coulde but one mā go there.

Yf this cyte now were gyuen to an heyre, & he neuer went thorowe the perelous waye, howe wolde he receyue his inheritaūce? And I sayde: it is so Lorde. Then sayd he: Euen so is Israel also a portyō. And why? for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, full of sorowe and trauayle: They are but fewe and euell, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal fruyte: If they now which entred into this worlde maye not comprehende these strayte and vayne thynges, moche lesse may they comprehende and understande the secrete thynges: Why disquieteth thou thy selfe then, synge thou arte but a corruptible man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou arte but mortall? And why hast thou not receyued in to thyne owne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, thou hast ordened in thy lawe, that ye righteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly wulde perysshe. Neuertheles the righteous shall suffre strayte thynges and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffred strayte thynges, shal not se the wyde. B Deut. viii.

And he sayd vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, & none that hath vnderstanding aboue the hyest. For there be many that perysshe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is sette before them. For God hath gyuen strayte cōmaundement to such as come, that they know what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kept this they shuld not be punysshed.

Neuertheles they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynste hym: ymagyned vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, & sayd moreouer that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they despysed, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes and ordynaunces haue they not ben faythfull and stedfaste, and haue not performed his workes.

And therfore Esdras, vnto the full, plenty, and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare: and the earth that now palleth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered from the foresayd euelles, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openlye declared, with those that be with hym: and they that remayne, shall be merry in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne C Christe dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe tourned into the olde sylence. vij. dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgmētes so that no man shall remayne. And after. vij. dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shal be raysed vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earthe shall restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylence, and the secrete places shall delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moste hyest shall be openlye declared vpon ye seate of iudgement, and all myserye shall vanysshe awaye, and longe suffrynge shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall cōtynue, the truthe shall remayne, and faythe shall waxe stronge, the worcke shall folowe and the rewarde shall be shewed, the righteousnesse shall watche, and ye vnrighteousnesses shall beare no rule.

Then sayd I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the

the Hodomites, and Moses for the fathers that lyned in wyldernes, & he that came after him for Israel, in the tyme of Achas and Samuel: and Dauid for the destruccyon, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, and Elias for those that receiued raine and for the deed, that he myght lyue: and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuers other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euen nowe seynge the corrupte is growē vp, and wyckednes increased, and the ryghtous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also?

He aunswered me, and sayd: This present worlde is not the end: there remayneth much honoure in it, therfore haue they prayd for ỹ weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and the beginnyng ỹ of immortalite for to come, wherin al corrupcyon, vanisheth, al voluptuousnes is lowsed all mischeue taken away ryghtousnesse growne, & and the veritie springe vp. Then shall no mā be able to saue hym that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath goten the victorye.

I aunswered then, and sayd: This is my fyrst and last saying: that it had ben better, not to haue gyuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whē it was gyuen him, to kepe him ỹ he shuld not synne. For what profite is it for men nowe in this present tyme to lyue in heupnes, and after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyt were it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we oure selues are cupll and vayne? & that there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of health and fredome, where as we haue lyued cupll? and that the worshyp of the hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue ledde a pacyent lyfe where as we haue walked in the moste wycked wayes of all? And ỹ there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medecyne, where as we shall not goo in? for we haue walked in vnpleasaūt places: And that the faces of thē whiche haue ableyned, shal shyne aboue the starres. where as our faces shalbe blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnrygh toulye, we consydered not, that we shoulde suffre therfore after death?

Then aunswered he me, and sayd: This is the consyderacyon & thought of the batayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gette the victorye, he shall receyue the thynge that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, saying: Chose the lyfe, ỹ thou maist lyue. Neuertheles they belyued him not, neither the Prophetes after him. No nor me which haue spoken vnto them, that heupnes shulde not reach vnto theym to their destruccion lyke as sore is for to come ouer those, that haue suffred them selues to be enfourmed in saluacyon.

I aunswered then and sayd: I know Lorde, that the hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that he is pacyent and longe suffrynge, towarde those that haue synned in Roma.ii.a theyr workes: and that he is lyberall to gyue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth his louynge kyndnesses towarde those that are present, and that are past, & to thē whiche are for to come. For yf he multyplye not his mercyes, ỹ world shall not be made lyuynge, with those that dwell therin: He gyueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that they whiche haue done cuell, myght be eased, the ten thousand parte of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed with his word, and yf he wold destroy the multytude that stryueth, there shulde be very fewe left in an innumerable multitude.

¶ Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his owne mercy, than on the synnes of the people.

CAPI. VIII.

AND he aunswered me, sayinge: The A moost hyest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a symylitude, Esdras: As whē thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it gyueth moche moulde, where of earthen vessciles are made, but lytle of it that gold commeth of, Euen so is it with ỹ worke of this worlde. There be many created, Math.xx.b
but fewe shal be preserued. Then aunswered xxii.b
I and sayd: Then swalowe vp the wyt (thou soule) & deuour the vnderstandynge, for thou arte agreed to herken and to gyue eare, and wyllynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space gyuen ỹ, but only to lyue. O Lorde wylt thou not gyue thy seruaunt leaue, that we may pray before the, and that thou mayst gyue sede vnto our herte, and buyld our vnderstandyng, that there may come frute of it: and that euerye one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one workmanshyp of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayd, and lyke as the body is fashioned nowe in the chyldesbed, and thou gyuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: and .ix. monethes bothe thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her but the thyng that preserueth and it that is preserued, shall bothe be kepte together: and when tyme is, the chyldesbed delyuereth the thyng, that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the brestes to milke vnto the frute, ỹ the thyng which gine is created and fashioned, may be norished for a tyme: and than thou dysposest and ordrest it with thy mercy, bryngest it vp with thy ryghtoulnes, nurtureſt it in thy lawe, and reformeſt it with thy vnderſtandynge, mortifyeſt it it as thy creature, and makeſt it lyuynge as thy worke. Seynge then that thou 13 deſtroyeſt hym, which with ſo greate labours is created and faſhyoned thorowe thy commaundement, thou couldeſt lyghtly ordeyn, alſo that the thynge whiche is made, myghte be preſerued.

And this I ſpeake nowe of all men in generall, as thou knoweſt: but of thy people, for whoſe ſake I am ſory: and of thy inheritaunce: for whoſe cauſe I mourne, and of Iſrael, for whome I am wofull: and for Iacob, for whoſe ſake I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before the, for my ſelfe and for them, for I ſe the fall of vs, euen of vs, ¶ dwell vpō earth. But I haue herd the ſwyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderſtand my wordes, and I ſhall ſpeake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eſdras, before he was receyued: O Lorde, thou that dwelleſt in euerlaſtyngnes, whoſe eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whoſe ſtole is exceedynge hye, whoſe glorye and maieſty maye not be comprehended, before whome the hoſtes of heauen ſtand with tremblyng, whoſe keepyng is turned in wynde and fyre, whoſe word is true, whoſe talkig is ſtedfaſt, whoſe commaundemente is ſtronge, whoſe ordynaunce is fearfull, whoſe loke dryeth vp the depthes, whoſe wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whoſe truth beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy ſeruaunt, and marke with thyne eares the peticyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll ſpeake, and ſo longe as I haue vnderſtandynge, I wyll anſwere. O loke not vpon the ſynnes of thy people, whiche ſerue in the truthe. Haue no reſpecte vnto the wicked ſtudyes of the heithen, but to the deſyre of thoſe that kepe thy teſtimonies with ſorowes. Thynk not vpon thoſe that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which w̄ wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to deſtroy thē whi che haue had beaſtly maners, but to loke vpō them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, whi che are worſe then beaſtes: but loue them, that alway put their truſte in thy ryghtouſneſſe and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the ſame ſyckneſ and diſeaſe but becauſe of oure ſynnes thou ſhalte be called mercyfull.

For if thou haſt mercy vpon vs, thou ſhalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no worckes of righteouſnes: for the righteous which haue layde vp many good worckes to gither ſhal out of their dedes receiue reward. For what is man, that thou ſhuldeſt take diſpleaſure at him? Or what is the corrupty-ble mortal generacion, that thou ſhuldeſt be ſo rough towarde him?

For of a truth there is no man amōges thē that be borne, but he hath dealte wyckedly: and amonges the faythful there is none, whi che hath not done amiſſe. For i this (O Lord thy ryghtouſneſſe and thy goodnes ſhall be prayſed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not ryche in good workes.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Some thinges haſt thou ſpoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy worde it ſhall be. For I wyll not verely conſydre the workes of the, whi che haue ſinned before death, before the iudgment, before deſtruction, but I wyll reioyce ouer the worke & thought of the ryghtous. I wyl remēbre alſo the pylgremage the holy makynge and the reward. Lyke as I haue ſpoken nowe ſo ſhall it come to paſſe. For as the huſbande man ſoweth moche ſede vpon the grounde, and planteth manye trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is ſowne or plāted is not al kept ſafe, neither doth it al take rote: Euen ſo is it of them that are ſowne in the worlde, they ſhall not all be preſerued.

I anſwered then and ſayd: If I haue foūd grace, then let me ſpeake. Lyke as the huſbande mans ſede peryſheth, if it receyue not rayne in due ſeaſon, or if there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen ſo peryſheth man alſo, whic he is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine own Image & to thy ſelf, for whoſe ſake thou haſt made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the huſbande mans ſede. Be not wrath at vs, O Lorde, but ſpare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Thinges
preſent are for the preſentes thynges to come for ſuch as be to come. For thou wanteſt yet moche, ſeinge thou mayſte loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft tymes drawne nygh vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this alſo thou art marueylous before the hyghest in that thou haſt humbled thy ſelfe as it becommeth the, and haſt not regarded thine owne ſelfe, that thou art had in ſuch honour amonges the ryghtous. Therfore ſhal great wretchednes and myſerye come vpon them, that in the latter tyme ſhall dwell in the worlde, for they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderſtande thou for thy ſelfe, & ſeke out glory for ſuch as be like the: for vnto you is paradyſe opened, the tre of lyfe is plāted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteouſnes made redy: a cyte is buylded for you, and reſt is prepared, yea perfecte goodnes and wyſdome. The rote of euell is marched from you, the weaknes and mocke is hyd frō you, and into hell fleeth corruption in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vaniſhed awaye, and in the ende is ſhewed the treaſure of immortalyte. And therfore aſke thou no more queſtions, concernyng the multitude of them that peryſh. For they haue taken lyberte, deſpiſed the hyghest, thought ſcorne of his lawe, and forſaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe his ryghtous, and ſayd in their herte, that there is not tyne God, yea and that wyttyngly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue spoken of, is made redy for you: Euen so is thirst and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wyll that man shoulde come to nought: but they whiche be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, & are vnthäckfull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto the, and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme and whä thou hast not shewed me.

Esdras hath vysyons shewed vnto hym.

CAPI. IX.

HE answered me then and sayde: Measure thou the tyme diligently in it selfe when thou seest that one part of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before: so shalte thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherin the hyghest wyll begynne to visyt the worlde, which he made.

And when there shall be sene earthquake and vprore of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstande, that the moost hyest spake of those thinges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from ỳ beginning.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euē so the tymes also of ỳ hyghest haue playne begynnynges in wondres and sygnes, and the ende in worckynge and in tokens. And euery one that shall be saued, and shall be able to escape by his worckes and by faythe, wherin ye haue beleued, shall be preserued from the sayde parels, and shall se my saupour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whiche now haue abused my wayes: and they that haue cast them out despytefully, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receyued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open rowme of amendement and conuersyon, and vnderstode not: but despysed it: the same must know it after deathe in payne. And therfore be thou nomore carefull: howe the vngodly shall be punished, & how the ryghtous shall be saued, and whose the worlde is, & for whō the worlde, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talked before, and nowe I speake, and wyll speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche perysshe, then shall be saued, lyke as the flood is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is: so is also the sede: as the floures be so are the colours also: such as the worckmā is, such is also the worck: and as the husband man is him selfe, so is his husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they should dwel, then was there no man that withstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde whiche is now prepared, & the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe which is vnsearcheable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I considred the worlde, and beholde, there was peryl, because of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I saw, and spared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wyne bery of the grapes, and a plant from among many generacyons. Let the multitude perysh then, whiche are growen vp in vayne, and let my grape and wynebery be kept: euen my plant: for with great labour haue I made it vp.

Neuerth eles yf thou wylt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalte not fast in them) go thy waye then in to the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate only of the floures of the felde, tast not flesh, drinke no wyne, but eate floures only. Pray vnto the hyest contynually, so wyll I come, and talke with the.

So I went my waye, and came in to the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sate among ỳ floures: and ate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the same satisfyed me. After seuen dayes, I sate vpon the grasse, & my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore, and I opened my mouth, and began to talke before the hyest, and sayed: O Lorde, thou that shewest thy self vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy self vnto our fathers in ỳ wyldernesse, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest, sayinge: Heare me O Israel, and mark my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde, I sawe my lawe in you, and it shal bryng frute in you, and ye shall be honoured in it for euer. For our fathers which receyued the lawe, kepte not, and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why? it was thyne. For they that receyued it perysshed, because they kepte not the thynge that was sowen in them.

It is a custome when the ground receyueth seed, or the see a shyp, or a vessell meate and drynke, that when it perysheth or is broken, wherin a thyng is sowen, or wherin any thing is put: the thynges also perysshe & are broke, which are sowen or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receyued the lawe, perish in synne, and our herte whiche also receyued the law: notwithstandynge the lawe perysheth not, but remaynyth in his laboure.

And when I consydered these thynges in my herte after this maner, I loked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryght syde, I sawe a woman, whiche mourned sore, made greate lamentacion, and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, & she had had alches vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, ꝑ I was in, and turned me vnto her, & sayde: wherfore wepest ꝑ? why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she said vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vered in my mynde, and broughte very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to ꝑ? tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfrutfull and baren, and haue had an husbande thyrty yeres. And these thirty yeres I do nothig els daye & night and al houres, but make my prayer to the highest, After thyrtye yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my mysery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbande also, and all my neighboures and we gaue greate honoure vnto the mightye. And I norysshed him wᵗ great trauayle. So when he grew vp, and came to the tyme that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

Eldras and the woman that appeareth vnto him common togither.

CAPI. X.

AND it happened that when my sonne went in to his chambre, he fell downe and dyed, then ouerthrew we all the lyghtes, and all my neyghboures rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the second day at night: & whē they had al rested that they myghte comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cytye, but to remayne here, and neither to eate ne drink but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fal, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou folysshe woman, seist thou not oure heuynesse and mournynge, & what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion oure mother is al wofull and sorye, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery? seynge we be all nowe in heuynes, and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shall tell the ꝑ it is she which ought (by reasō) to mourne for the fall of so manye that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnyng al men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde, they walke almoste all in to destructiō, and many of them shall be roted out

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournyge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multytude? and not thou, whiche art sory but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournyng of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, whiche I bere with heuines: but the earth is according to the maner of the earthe, & the present multytude goeth agayne into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also ꝛ̄ the begynnynge gyueth her frute vnto man, for him ꝑ made her. And therfore withholde thy sorow and heuynes by thy selfe, and loke what happeneth vnto the, beare it stronglye. For yf thou iudgest the matche and ende of God to be rygh̄teous and good, and receyuest his councell in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into the cyty to thy husbande. Ecclꝰ. xiiii.

And she sayd vnto me: that wyl I not do, I wyl not go into the cyty, but beare wyl I dye. So I cōmoned more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be counselled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good cō forte because of the sorow of Ierusalem. For thou seist that our Sanctuary is layed waste our aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and synginge layde downe, the chaunche ſgeuynge put to silence, oure myrthe is banyshed awaye the light of oure candelstycke is quenched, ꝑ arck of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all oure holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishoured: our chyldren are put to shame our prestes are brente, oure Leuites are carped awaye in to captyuytye, oure byrgyns are defyled, and oure wyues rauisshed, our ryghteous men spoyled, and our childrē destroied, our yong mē are brought in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Sion (whiche seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worshyp for she is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heuynes, and put awaye the multytude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto ꝑ, and that the byghest maye gyue the rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd shyne and glyster, so that I was afrayde of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatly she caste oute a greate voyce, berye fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and behold, the womā appeared vnto me no more: but there was a cytie builded, and a place was shewed from the ground and foundacion.

Then was I afrayd, and cryed with loude voyce, and sayde where is Vrpel the aungel, which came to me at the fyrste? For he hathe caused me to come in many considerations & bygh thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakinge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene deed, and myne vnderstanding was aultered, and he toke me by the ryghte hand & comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstanding vexed? and ꝑ vnderstādyng of thy herte, and wherfore art thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken iiii. Esd.

forsake me, and I haue done accordyng vnto thy wordes, I wēt in to the feld, & there haue I sene thiges, that I am not able to expresse. He said vnto me: Stand vp, and be manly, & I shall gyue the exhortacion.

Then sayd I: Speke on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I die in vayn: for I haue sene that I knew not, and herd that I do not know. Or shal my vnderstanding be disceyued, and my mynde? But now I beleche the, that thou wilt shew thy seruaūt of this wondre. He answered me then & said: heare me and I shal enstorme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayd? for the hiest hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy way is right, & that thou takest sorow cōtinually for thy people and makest great lamentacion for Sion, and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her. Neuertheles now seist thou the liknes of the woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a city buylded: & lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: the woman whom thou sawest is Sion, and where as she tolde the that she hath ben. xxx. yeres vnfrutful & baren, those are the. xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after thirty yeres Salomon buylded her, and offered, and then bare the bareyn a sonne. And where as she told the that she norysshed him with labour, that was the dwellynge of Ierusalem, but where as the sonne dyed in her chambre, that is the fal of Ierusalem. And thou sawest her lyknesse how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth that thou art sory in thy mynde, & suffrest from thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed the her clerenesse, and the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I badde the remayne in the feld, where no house is buylded. For I knew that the hyghest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo in to the felde, where no foundacyon nor buyldynge is. For in the place where the hyest wil shew his cityе, there shall be no mans buyldynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thy herte be afrayde, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe greate it is, and howe greate thou thynkest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalte thou heare as moche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou arte blessed aboue many other, and art called vnto the hyest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here, and so shal the hiest shew the visions of hye thynges, which he wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earthe in the last dayes, so I slepte the same nyghte lyke as he commaunded me.

¶ In this chapter and in the two next ensuing, he intreateth of certayne visions and of the interpretacions therof.

CAPI. XI.

Then saw I a dreme: and beholde, there came vp from the see an Egle, whiche had twelue wynges and thre heedes. And I sawe and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put togyther agayne. And I behelde, and oute of his fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heedes rested, the heed in the middest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I saw, that the Egle flew with his wynges, and raigned vpon erth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the erth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heuen were subiecte vnto him, and no mā spake against him no not one creature vpon erth. I saw also that the Egle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sound with his fethers, & a voyce, sayinge after this maner: watche not all togyther, slepe euery mā in his own place, and watche for a time, but let the heedes be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe that the voyce went not out of his heedes, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde there were eyght of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the right syde there arose one fether, and raigned ouer al the erth. And it happened when it raigned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So the next folowing stode and raigned and had a great time: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also, lyke as the fyrste, so that it appeared no more.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, and said: Heare thou that haste kepte in the earthe so longe, this I saye vnto the before thou begynnest to appere no more. There shal none after the, attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, and appered no more also. So went it with all the residue one after an other, so that euery one raygned, & then appeared no more. Then I loked, & beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed, were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: & some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered no more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not.

After this I loked, and beholde the twelue fethers appered no more, and the two winges: and there was no more vpon the Egles body, but two heedes that rested, & sixe fethers. Then sawe I also that the sixe fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heed that was vpon the right side, for the four cōtinued in their place. So I loked, & beholde, they that were vnder the winges thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The was there one set vp, but shortly it appered no more, and the seconde was sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I behelde, and lo, the two thought also by thē selues to raigne: & whē they so thoughte: beholde, there waked one of the heedes that were at rest, namely, it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heedes. And then I sawe that the two heedes were filled with him, and ꝑ heed was tourned with them that were by hym, & ate vp the two vnder wynges ꝑ wolde haue raigned.

But this heed put the hole erth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelt vpō erth with moch labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the world, ouer all the foules that haue ben. After this I loked, and behold, the heed ꝑ was in the middest, sodeynly appered no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heedes, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those dwelt therin. And I beheld, and lo, the D heed vpon the right syde, deuoured it ꝑ was vpon the left syde. And I herd a voyce, whiche sayd vnto me: loke before the, and consyder the thing that thou seist. Then I sawe, & behold, as it were a lyon that roreth, renninge hastely oute of the wodde, and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Egle, and said: Heare thou, I wyll talke with the, and the hyest shal say vnto the: Is it not thou ꝑ hast the victorye of the foure beastes, whome I I made to raigne vpon erth, & in my worlde, and that the ende of their tymes might come thorow them?

And the fourth came, and ouerwan al the beestes that were paste, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulnesse, and ouer the hole compasse of the erth w the most wicked labour, and so long tyme dwelt he vpon the erth with disceyte, and the erth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou haste troubled the meke & thou hast hurt the peaceable & quyet, thou louest lyers, and destroyest the dwellynges of them that brought forthe frute, and hast cast down the walles of such as did the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pryde vnto ꝑ myghty. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proud tymes, and behold, they are ended, and they abhominaciōs are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Egle, and thy horrible winges and thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earthe maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, when she is delyuered from thy violence, and ꝑ she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

CAPI. XII.

A And it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I sawe, & behold, the heed that afore had the vpper hande appered no more: neyther dyd the four winges appere any more, that came to hym, & were set vp to raigne, and their kingdom was smal and ful of vprore. And I saw and beholde, they appered no more, & the hole body of the Egle was bȳt, and the erth was in greate feare. Then awaked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from great feare, and sayd vnto my spirite: lo, this haste thou gyuen me, in that thou serchest out ꝑ wayes of the hyest: lo yet am I wery in my mynde, and very weyke in my spirite, & litle strēgth is there in me, for the greate feare that I receyued this nyght. Therfore wyll I now beseche the hyest, that he wyll comfort me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lorde, Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustifyed with the, before many other, and yf my prayer be com vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretacion and playne difference of this horrible syght, that thou mayst perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthye, to shewe me the laste of tymes.

And he sayd vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this syght. The Egle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdom whiche was sene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him Dānie. vii. B for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon erth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall twelue kynges raygne one after an other. For ꝑ second shal begyn to raygne, & shal haue more tyme then the other, and this do the twelue wynges signify which thou sawest. As for the voyce ꝑ spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heedes, but not from the body, it betokeneth that after the tyme of that kyngdome, there shall aryse great stryuynges, and it shal stād in peryl of fallyng: neuertheles it shal not yet fall, but shall be set in to his begynnyng. And the eyght vnder winges which thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betokē that in him there shall a ryse eyghte kynges, whose tyme shal be but smal, and their yeres swyft, & two of them shall beare. But when the middest time commeth, there shal be four kept in the time, when his tyme beginneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shal be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heedes re- L
stynge, this is the interpretacion: In his last shal the hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, and call manye agayne in to them, and they shal haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therin, with moche labour aboue all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heedes of the Egle: for it is they that shall bryng forthe his wyckednesse agayne, and that shal performe and finyshe his laste. And where as thou sawest that the great heed appeared no more, it signifyeth that one of them shall dye vpon his bedde, and yet with payne, for the two that remayne shal be slayne with the swerde, for the swerde of the one shall deuour the other, but at the last shall he fall thorow the swerd hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwinges vpō the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom the hyghest hathe kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a small kyndgom, & ful of trouble. The lyon whom thou thou sawest rysynge vp out of the wod, and rorynge and speakynge vnto the Egle, and rebukynge hym for his vnryghtousnesse, is the wynde, whiche the hyest hathe kepte for them & for theyr wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rente them asunder before them. For he shall sette them lyuynge before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for the relydue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble, those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make the ioyful, vntyl the commyng of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the beginning. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou haste sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in ỹ people, whose hertes thou knowest, maye comprehende & kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the hyghst to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And when al the people perceyued, that ỹ seuē dayes were past, and I not come agayn into the city, they gathered them al togither from the leest vnto the most, and came vnto me, & sayd: what haue we offended the? and what euyll haue we done agaynst the, that ỹ forsakest vs, and sittest here i this place? for of all people thou only art left vs as a grape of the vine, and as a candle in a darke place, and as an hauē and shyp preserued from the tempest. Haue we not els aduersitie ynough, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brent with Sion. for we are no better then they ỹ dyed there: and they wepte with loud voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob, for the hyest hathe you in remembraunce, and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to pray, bicause of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarye. And nowe goo youre waye home euerye man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the citye, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styl in the feldes seuen dayes, as the aungell badde me: and I ate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meat of the herbes in those dayes.

CAPI. XIII.

1 AND it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dremed a dreme by nyghte. And behold, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was stronge, & increased with the cloudes of heuen, & when he turned his countenaunce to consydre, all the thinges trembled ỹ were sene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouthe, all they brent that herd him, lyke as the erth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togither a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heuen, to fight against the man that came out from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued him selfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, whereout the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynste hym, were sore afrayde, and yet durst they fyght. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the fearcenesse and vyolence of the people, he neyther lyfte vp his hande, ne helde swerde nor any weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent oute of his mouthe as it had ben a blast of fyre, & out of his lyppes the wynde of the flambe: and out of his tonge he caste oute sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte togyther the blaste of fyre, the winde of the flambes, and the great storme, and fell with a rusche vpon the people whiche was prepared to fight, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng sene, but onely duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayde.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym an other peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hym: some were gladde some verye sorye, some of theym were bounde, so that they were caryed and brought forth.

Then was I fycke thorowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayd: thou haste shewed thy seruaunt al thy wonders from the beginnynge, and haste counted me worthye, that ỹ myghtest receyue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consydre in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes: and moche more woo vnto them that are not lefte behynde: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behinde. Therfore are they come in to great perylles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whi che suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayd: The interpretacion of the syghte shall I shewe the, and I wil open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou haste spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perryll in that tyme hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are suche as haue wor-kes and sayth vnto the most mighty. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behind are more blessed then they that be deed. This is the meanynge of ꝑ vision. Where as thou sawest a man commyng vp from the depe of the see, the same is he which God the hyghest hath kept a great season, whom by his owne selfe shal deliuer his creature, & he shal ordre them that be left behynd. And where as thou sawest, that oute of his mouthe there came a blast of wynde, fyre, and stormes, & how that he lyfte vp neyther swerde nor weapon, but that the rushyng in of hym destroyed ꝑ hole multitude that came to fyght agaynste hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earthe, and L in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon thē that dwell in the earth. And one shall vndertake to fyght agaynste an other, one citye a-

Math.xxiiii.a gaynst an other, one place agaynst an other, one people agaynst an other, and one realme against an other. When this cōmeth to passe then shall the tokens come that I shewed the before, and then shall my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shall in theyr owne lande leaue the batayle that they haue one agaynste an other, & an innumerable multitude shall be gathered togyther, as they ꝑ be wyllynge to come & to ouercom hym by fyghtyng. But he shal stād vpon the top of the mount Syon. Neuertheless Sion shall come, and shal be shewed, beinge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth without any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke ꝑ people that are come for theyr wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euyll ymagynacyons: and theyr paynes wherwith they shall be punysshed, are lykened vnto ꝑ flambe, and without any labour shall he destroye them, euen by the lawe, whiche is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten tribes which are caryed away prysoners out of their own land, in the tyme of Oseas the kyng, whom Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria toke prisoner and caried them ouer the water, and so came they in to an other lande.

But they gaue them this counsel, that they shold leaue the multitude of the heathē, and to go forth in to a farther cōtrey, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theyr statutes, which they neuer kept in theyr owne land, and so they entred in at the D narow passages of the water of Euphrates, Exod.xiiii.e and God shewed tokens for them, and held Iolue.iii.d still the floud till they were passed ouer: for thorow that cōtrey there was a great way namely of a yere and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth.

Then dwelt they there vnto ꝑ latter time: and when they come forth agayne, the hyest shall holde styll the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they maye go thorowe, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are those that be found with in my border. Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered togyther, he shall defende his people ꝑ remayne, and then shall he shewe them great wonders.

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man comming vp from the depe of the see? And he sayd vnto me: like as thou canst neither seke out nor know these thinges that are in the depe of ꝑ see, euen so mayst thou not se my sonne, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the day. This is the interpretacion of the dreme whi che thou sawest, therfore thou onely art here lightened: for thou hast forsakē thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto mine, and sought it. Thy lyfe haste thou ordred in iii.Regū.iii wysdom, and hast called vnderstandyng thy Prouer.ii.a mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyest. After thre dayes I wyl shewe the more, and talke with the at more large, yea heuy and wonderous thynges wil I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forthe in to the felde, gyuyng prayse and thankes greatly vnto God bycause of his wonders whiche he dyd in tyme, and bycause he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Esdras in the bushe, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

CAPI. XIIII.

VPon the thyrd daye I sat vnder an oke A tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, and said: Esdras, Esdras? And I said: here am I Lord, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: In the bushe dyd I appere vnto Moses, and talked w̄ him, when my people serued in Egypt Exod.iii.a and I sent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Syō where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, & shewed him the secretes of the tymes and the ende, & commaūded him, saying: these wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them.

And nowe I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte, the dremes that thou haste sene, and the interpretacions whiche I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receyued of al, thou shalt be tourned, and remayne with my counsell, and with suche as be lyke the, vntil the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begyn to ware old. For the tyme is deuyded in to twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alredye, and halfe of the tenthe parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, & reforme thy people: comfort suche of them B as be in trouble, and tell now of the destruction, let go from the mortal thoughtes, cast awaye the burthens of mā, put of the weyke nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are moost heuy vnto the, and haste ꝑ to flyt from these tymes: for suche euyl and wyckednesse as thou hast nowe sene happen, shall they doo yet mocke worse. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, ꝑ more shall synne and wyckednesse increase, in them that dwell vpon earthe. For the truthe is fled farre awaye, and lesynge is harde at hande. For now hasteth the vision to come, ꝑ thou hast sene.

Then aunswered I and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll go as thou hast commaunded me, and reformme the people which are present. But they that shal be borne afterwarde who wyll exhorte or rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is set in darknesse, and they that dwell therin are without light: for thy law is kyndled, bycause no man knoweth ꝑ thinges that are done in the, or that shal be done. Yf I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghost in to me, and I shal wryte al that hathe bene doone in the worlde sence the begynnynge, whiche was wrytten in thy law, that men maye fynde the pathe-, and that they whiche wyll lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

¶ And he aunswered me, sayinge: Goo thy waye, gather thy people togyther, and saye vnto the that they seke the not for. xl. dayes, but loke thou gather the manye bare trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ethanus, and Asiall: these fyue whiche are redy to wryte swyftly, and come hyther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne herte, whiche shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be performed, whiche thou shalt begyn to wryte. And then shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalte thou shewe secretly vnto the wyse. To morow this hour shalt thou begyn to wryte.

Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered al the people togither, and sayd: Heare these wordes, O Israell: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were straungers in Egypte, from whence they were deliuered, and receyued, the lawe of lyfe, whiche they kepte not, whiche ye also haue transgressed after them. Then was this land and the lande of Syon parted among you by lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue doone vnryghtousnesse, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the highest commaunded you. And for so moch as he is a rightous iudge, he toke from you in time the thynge that he had gyuen you. And nowe are ye here, ꝑ your brethren amonges you. Therfore yf so be that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandynge, and reformme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alyue, ꝑ after deathe shall ye obteyne mercye. For after deathe shall the iudgemente come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shal the names of the rightous be manyfest, and the names of the vngodlye with theyr workes, shall be declared. Lette no man therfore come nowe vnto me, ne aske anye questyon of me these forty dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we went in to the felde, and remayned there, the nexte daye a voyce called me, sayinge: Esdras, open thy mouthe, and drynke that I gyue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde he reached me a full cup whiche was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my hert hadde vnderstandynge, and wysdome grewe in my breste: for my spirite was kepte in remembraūce, and my mouth was opened, and shut no more. The hyest gaue vnderstandinge vnto the fyue men. that they wrote the hye thinges of the nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they ate breed: as for me, I spake in the day, and held my tong by night. In forty dayes they wrote two hundred and four bokes.

And it happened when the forty dayes were fulfylled, that the hyest spake, sayinge: The fyrste that thou hast written, speake openly, that the worthye and vnworthy may rede it. But the thre score and ten laste, that thou mayst shewe it onely to suche as be wise amonges thy people. For in theym is the sprynge of vnderstandynge, the fountayne of wysdome, and the streme of knowlege. And I dyd so.

¶ The punyshement tha tewyll people shall haue, whiche God commaundeth Esdras to shewe vnto them.

CAPI. XV.

BEholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of the prophecy, whiche I will put in thy mouthe, sayethe the Lorde, ꝑ cause them to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the truth, Feare not the imaginaciōs against the, let not the vnfaithfulnesse of thē trouble the, that speke against the. For al the vnfaythful shal dye in theyr vnfaythfulnes. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I will bryng plages vpon ꝑ worlde, the swerde, honger, deth and destruction, for wickednes hath the vpper hand in all the erth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfylled.

Therfore sayethe the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge no more vnto theyr wyckednesse, whiche they doo so vngodlye: neyther wyll I suffre theym in the thynges that they deale withall so wyckedly.

Beholde, the innocent bloude of the troubled creyeth vnto me, and the soules of ꝑ righ tous complayne contynually: and therfore (sayethe the Lorde) I wyll surely auenge, and receyue vnto me all the innocent bloud from amonges them.

Apoca. vi. b and. ix. a

Behold, my people is led as a flok of sheye to be slayne, I wyll not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte, but wyll bryng them out with a mighty hand, ꝑ a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plages as afore, and wyll destroy all the land of it. Egipt shal mourne and the foundacions of it shall be smitten w the plage and punyshment ỹ God shal bring vpon it.

B They that tyll the ground shall mourne: for theyr sedes shall be destroyed thorow the blastynge and hayle, and an horryble sterre. Wo worth the worlde, and them that dwell therin, for the swerde and theyr destruction draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyghte agaynste an other, and swerdes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shal not regarde their kyng & prynces: the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cite, & shall not be hable. For bicause of theyr pryde, the citys shal be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shal be afrayde. A man shall haue no pitye vpon his neyghboure, but one shall prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle theyr goodes, bycause of of the honger of breed, & bicause of the great trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and cal togyther al the kynges of the earth, which are from the vprysynge, from the South, from the East and Libanus, to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they haue gyuen them, Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recompence them in their bosome. Thus sayth the Lorde God: my right hand shal not spare the synners, & my swerd shall not cease ouer them that shede ỹ innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath consumed the foũcions of the earthe, and the synners lyke the straw that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde. I will not spare them. Goo your waye you chyldren of vyolence, defyle not my Sanctuarye, for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynste hym, and therfore delyuereth he them vnto deathe and destruction. For now are the plages come vpõ the worlde, and ye shal remayne in them, for God shall not delyuer you, bycause ye haue synned against him.

E Behold, an horrible vision commeth from the Easte, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes, with mayne charettes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they whiche heare them ragynge in their wrathe, maye feare and be afrayde: and as the wylde beastes oute of the wodde, so shall they goo oute, and with greate power shall they come, and stande fyghtynge with them, and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assirians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge theyr byrthe, and shall tourne aboute swearynge togither in greate power, to persecute theym. But these shall be afrayde, and kepe sylence at theyr power, and shall flee: and one oute of the lande of the Assirians shall besiege them, and consume one of them, and in their hoste shall be feare and drede, and stryke amonges theyr kynges.

Beholde cloudes from the East and from the North vnto the Southe, and they are verye horryble to loke vpon, full of wrathe and storme. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shal smyte at the great sterre vpon earthe and theyr sterre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the belye, and the smoke of man vnto the camelles lytter. And there shall be greate fearefulnesse and tremblynge vpon earthe, and they that se the wrath shall be afrayde, and a trembling shal come vpon them. F

And then shall there come greate rayues from the Southe, and from the North, and parte frome the weste, and from the stormye wynde frome the Easte, and shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude whiche he rayseth vp in wrath, and the sterre to cause feare towarde the East and west wynde, shal be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfte vp, and the myghty cloudes full of wrath, & the sterre, that they may make all the erth afrayde, and them that dwell therin, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible sterre, fyre and hayle, and fleing swerdes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they that breake downe the citys and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wod, and the grasse of the medowes, & all their frute. And they shal goo stedfaste vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde, they shall come to her & beliege her, the sterre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the duste and smoke goo vp vn to the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worshyp of her person. Woo be vnto the thou wretche, bycause thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast decked thy doughters in hoordome, that they myghte triumphe and please thy louers which haue alway desyred to commyt hoordome with the: thou hast folowed the abhomynable citye, in all her workes and inuencions. G

Therfore sayth God: I wyll send plages vpon the, widowhod, powertie, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction and deth, and the glory of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure, when the heat ariseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be lycke as a poore wyfe that is plaged and beaten of women: so that the myghty and lorer shall not be hable to receyue the. Wold I so hate the, sayth the Lord, yf thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exaltynge the stroke of thy hãdes, and said ouer their deth, when thou wast dronken: set forth the beautie of thy countenunce.

The rewarde of thy hoordome shal be recompensed in thy bosom, therfore shalt thou be reacquited.

Lyke

lyke as thou haste done vnto my chosen (sayth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of honger, and thou shalt fall thorow the swerde. Thy cities shal be broken downe: and al thyne shall perysshe with the swerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger, and eat their own flesh, and drynke their owne blood for very honger of bred and thyrste of water. Thou vnhappye shalte come thorow the see and receyue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the stayne cytye, and shall rote out one parte of thy land, and consume the porcion of thy glory. They shal treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be the fyre and shall consume the: thy cytyes and thy lande, thy wod and thy frutfull trees shal they burne vp with ꝑ fyre. Thy chyldren shall they cary awaye captyue, & loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marre the beawtye of thy face.

¶ The heithen shall be punished.

CAPI. XVI.

¶ WO be vnto the Babilon and Asia, woo be vnto the Egypte and Syria: gyrde youre selues with clothes of sacke and heer, and mourne for youre chyldren, be sory for your destruccion is at hande. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, and who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, & what is he that wil drive them awaye? May any mā dryue away an hongry lion in the wod? Or may any man quenche the fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agaynste the arowe, that is shot of a stronge archer: The mighte Lorde seeth the plages, and what is he that will dryue them away? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wrathe, and what is he that wil quench it? He shall caste lyghtenynges, and who shall not feare? He shall thundre, and who shall not be afrayde? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not vtterlye be beaten to poudre at his presence?

The earth quaketh, and the foundacions therof: the see aryseth vp with waues from the depe, and the floudes of it are vnquyete and the fyshes therof also before the Lorde, and before the glory of his power. For strōg is his righte hande that holdeth the bowe his arowes that he shooteth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begin to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Beholde, the plages are sent, and shall, not turne agayne, tyl they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shal not be put out til it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backwarde: euen so ꝑ plages that shall be sent vpon earthe, shall not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who wyll delyuer me in those dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnyng of derth and great death: the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shall stande in feare of the begynnynge of cuyls, & they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde, hongre, and plage, trouble and angwysh are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shal not turne from theyr wickednesse, ne be alway myndfull of the scourges.

Beholde, vytayles shall be so good cheape vpon the erth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall myschefe grow vpon earth, warres, derth and great dysquyetnesse. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perysh of hungre, and the other that escape the hungre, shal ꝑ swerd destroye: & the deed shall be cast out as dong, and there shal be no mā to comfort them. For the earth shall be wasted, and the cytes shall be caste downe: there shall be no man lefte to tyll the earthe and to sowe it. The trees shall gyue feute, and who so shal pluck them of & gather them? The grapes shall be rype, and who shall tred them? For all places shal be desolate of men, so that one man shal desyre to se an other, or to heare his voyce. For of one hole cytie there shal not be .x. left, and two in the felde, whiche shal hyde them selues in the thyck bushes, & in the clyffes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or four olyues vpon the olyue tre, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered: there are lefte some grapes, of them that dyligently sought thorowe the vyneyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or four left, for them that search their houses with the swerde. And the earthe shall be left wast and the feldes therof shall wax olde: & her wayes and all her pathes shal grow full of thornes, bicause no man shall trauayle there thorow. The doughters shall mourne, haupng no bydegromes: ꝑ womē shall make lamentation, haupnge no husbandes, theyr doughters shall mourne, haupnge no helpe of theyr bydegrome. In the warres shal they be destroyed, and theyr husbandes shall perysh of hungre. O ye seruauntes of the Lord, here these thynges, and marke them. Behold the worde of the Lorde, O receyue it: behold, the plages draw nigh: and are not slacke in tarynge, lyke as a trauelynge woman, whiche after the. ix. moneth bryngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of ꝑ byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore: that the paynes come vpon her body, and when ꝑ chylde commeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynklyng of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slack to come vpon the earth, and the world shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euerye syde.

O my people, beare my worde / make you redy to the battel: and in all euell be euen as pylgrymes vpon erth. He that selleth let him be as he that flyeth his waye: and he ꝑ byeth, as one that wyll lese. Who so occupyeth marchandyse, as he that wynneth not:

1. Corin. vii. D

and

and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that trymmeth the vineyarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes: they that marry, as they that shal get no children: & they that mary not, as the widowes: and therfore they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shall reape their frutes, and spoile their goodes, ouerthrow their houses, and take their children captyue, for in captyuytie and honger shall they get children. And they þ occupy their marchaundyse with robberye, howe longe decke they their cyties, their houses, their possessions, and persones? the more wyll I punysshe theym for their synnes sayth the Lorde. Lyke as an hore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall vnryghteousnes hate iniquitie, whē she decketh her selfe and shall accuse her to her face, whē he cōmeth that defendeth, which shal make inquisition for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, ne to the workes therof: for or euer it be lōg, iniquitie shal be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghtousnesse shall raygne amonges you.

Psal. xxxvi. a

F Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpō his heade, which sayth before the Lorde God & his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all the workes of men, their ymaginacions, their thoughtes & their hertes. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, and it was made, let the heuen be made and it was made. In this worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, & what it contayneth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the erth vpō the waters. He spredeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and dyre wyldernes hathe he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, & gaue hym breath, lyke and vnderstandynge, yea & the spirite of the almyghtye God, whiche made al thinges, and hath serched the groūd of all the secretes of the earth.

Genes. i. a

G He knoweth your ymaginacyons and inuentions, and what ye thynke when ye syn, and wold hyde your synnes. Therfore hath the Lorde searched and sought out all your workes, and he shall bewraye you all. And when your synnes are brought forthe, ye shal be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall be youre accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or how wyll ye hyde your synnes before God and his Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue of from your synnes, and forgeat your vnryghteousnesses, and medle no more with theym: so shal God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede the ydle with Idols: and they that cōsent vnto them, shall be had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place, and in the nexte cyties a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lord. They shal be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & waste such as feare the Lorde, theyr goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, & they shal be tryed as the gold in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed: dyspayre not, for God is youre capitayne.

Who so kepeth my cōmaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and let not youre vnryghteousnesses be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and tangled in theyr wyckednesses, lyke as a felde is hedged in with busshes, and the patge therof couered with thornes, that no man maye trauayle thorowe: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brēt. (:)

¶ The ende of the fourth boke of Esdras.

THE BOOKE OF TOBIAS.

¶ Tobias beynge taken pryſoner, forſaketh not the lawe of truth. The mercy and charytye of Tobias, and the maners of him in his youth. He taketh Hannah to wyfe, by whome he hath a ſonne named Tobias. He ſuccoureth Gabell for money. He and his are fayne to flye, but after the death of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

CAPI. I.

TObias was of the tryde and citie of Nephtall, whiche lyeth in the high countreyes of Galile aboue Naaſon the waye towarde the weſt hauyng the cytye of Sephet vpō the left ſyde.

Though he was taken pryſoner in ỹ dayes of Salmanaſar king of the Aſſirians, neuertheleſſe beinge in captyuitie, he forſoke not the waye of truth: In ſo moche that whatſoeuer he myghte get, he parted it dayly with his felow pryſoners & bzethzē, that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger thē al in the tryde of Nephtall, yet dyd not not he behaue him ſelfe chyldyſhly in his worckes. And when al the other went to the golden calues, which Jeroboam the kynge of Iſrael had made, he him ſelfe alone fled all their companyes, and gat hym to Jeruſalem vnto the temple of the Lozde and there wozſhypped the Lozde God of Iſrael, faythfully offrynge of all his fyrſte frutes and tythes, ſo that in the thyrde yere he miniſtred all the tythes vnto the ſtraungers and conuertes. Theſe and ſuch lyke thynges dyd he accozdynge to the lawe of God, whē he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke oute of his owne tryde a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a ſonne whome he called after his owne name, and taught him frome his youth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from all ſynne.

Nowe when he with his wyfe, his ſonne and with all his kinred was come in captyuitie vnto Nintue, what time as they al ate of the meates of the heithen, he kepte his ſoule, and was neuer defiled in their meates. And for ſo moche as he was myndfull of the Lozde in all his hert, God gaue him fauoure in the preſence of Salmanaſar the king whi the gaue him power to go where he wolde, and ſo hadde he lybertye to doo what hym lyſt.

So went Tobias vnto al them that were in pryſon, and comforted them, and gaue thē hollome exhortacions. And when he came to Rages a cytye of the Medes, haupnge ten talentes of ſyluer (of the thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) & ſawe amōge a greate companye of people of his kynred, one Gabelus (which was of his own tribe) beynge in neceſſite, he gaue him the ſayde weyght of ſyluer vnder an hand wrytynge.

After a longe ſeaſon when Salmanaſar the kynge was deed, and Sennacherib his ſonne ragned in his ſteade, whiche hated the childzen of Iſrael. Tobias went dayly thorow out all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them as moch as he myght: he fed the hungrye, clothed the naked, and buryed ỹ deed and ſlayn. iiii.Reg.xix.g and that diligently. D

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punyſhed him for his blaſphemy) and in his wrath, ſlewe many of the childzen of Iſrael. Tobias buryed theyr bodyes. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to ſlaye him, and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheleſſe Tobias with his ſonne & with his wyfe, fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after. xiv. dayes, the kynge was ſlayne of his owne ſonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his houſe, and all his goodes reſtored vnto hym. iiii.Eſdr.iic ¶ Tobias byddeth ſuche of his frendes as feare God, to a banket or feaſt. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He becommeth blynde, by the permyſſyon and ſuffraunce of God. His kynſfolkes mocke hym.

CAPI. II.

AFter theſe thynges vpon a ſolemne daye of the Lozde, Tobias made a good feaſt in his houſe, and ſayd vnto his ſonne: Go thy waye and brynge hyther ſome of our tryde, ſuche as feare God, that they maye make merry with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the chyldzen of Iſrael laye ſlayne vpon the ſtrete. And immediatly he lepte from his table, lefte the feaſt, came faſtynge to the deed coorſe, toke hym and bare hym pryuelye in to his houſe, that when the Sunne was downe, he myghte ſafely burye hym. And when he had hydde the coorſe, he ate his meate with mournynge and feare, remembrynge the wordes that the Lozde ſayth by the prophete Amos: your hye feaſtes ſhall be turned to ſorowe and heuyneſſe. Amos.viii.b a.i.Mac.i.d

But when the ſonne was downe, he went his way and buryed hym. Then al his neyghbours reproued hym, ſaying: It is not longe, ſence it was cōmaunded to ſlaye the bycauſe of this matter, and haſte ſcarce eſcaped the daunger of death, and buryeſt thou the deed agayne? Neuertheleſſe Tobias feareng God more then the kynge, toke the bodyes of the ſlayne, hyd them in his houſe, and buryed thē at mydnyght. Tobi.i.d

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buryed the deade, and was wery, came home, and layed him downe by the wall and ſlept. C

And

Deuter.viii.a and.xiii.a Iohn.ix.a and.xi.a

And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme donge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blynd. This temptacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his patience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so moche as he euer feared God from his youth vp, and kepte his commaundementes, he was not beuye agaynst God, that ꝑ plage of blyndnes chaunsed vnto hym but remayned stedfast in ꝑ feare of God, and thãked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

Job.iiii.a

Tobi.viii.a

For like as blessed Job was had in derisiõ of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynfolkes, which sayde vnto him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buryed the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shal gyue vnto them that neuer turn their beleue from him.

Ephesi.iiii.a

Anna his wyfe went dayly to the weuyng worke, and loke what lyuyng she coulde get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it hapened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

Deute.xxii.a

Job.ii.b

And when her husband herd it crye, he said loke that it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eat or to touche any thynge of theft. Thẽ was his wyfe angrye, and sayd: Now is thy hope become vayne openlye, and thy almes dedes are manyfest. With these and such like wordes dyd she cast hym in the teeth.

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the doughter of Raguel, is sclaundred of her fathers seruaunt. The prayer and fastinge of Sara: And also the innocency and chastitie of her. The prayers of Tobias & of Sara are herde.

CAPI. III.

A THen Tobias toke it heuelye, and with teares began to make his prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true, yea al thy waies are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgemẽt. And now, O Lorde, be myndfull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, neither remembre my mysdedes, neither the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyent vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled brought in to captyuytie, into death, in to derision and shame vnto all nations, amonges whom thou hast scatered vs. And nowe O Lord thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordynge to thy comaundementes neither haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordynge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spirite to be receyued in peax, for more expedyente were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

Psal.xxxiii.b

B At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a cytye of the Medes was sclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes, that she shoulde haue hadde seuen husbandes, whiche as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuyl called Asmodeus. Therfore when she reproued the mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer se son nor doughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wente, Sara in to an hyghe chambre of her house, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes she neyther ate ne dranke, but continued in prayer, and besoughte God with teares, that he wolde delyuer her from this rebuke.

C Upon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of her prayer, she praysed the Lorde sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of our fathers, whiche when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in ꝑ tyme of trouble thou forgyuest the synnes of the, that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lorde, loose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterly away from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vncleanly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, neyther haue I made my self partaker with thẽ ꝑ walke in lyght behauour. Neuertheles, an husbande haue I cõsented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happly hast kepte me to an other husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in ꝑ power of man. But who so euer loueth the, and serueth the a ryghte, is sure, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the ꝑ Eccly. viiii. and xlvi and xlvii. frenges: and yf he endure in pacience, he shall haue a rewarde and be hylye crowned, and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall delyuer him: and yf his lyfe be in chastening, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in our damnacyon: and why? after a storme thou makest ꝑ wether fayre and styll: after weppynge and heuynesse, thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both theyr prayers heard in the syght of the magesty of the hyghest God. And Raphael the holy Aungell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them bothe, whose prayers came togyther before God.

CAPI. IIII.

SO when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias: and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouthe, and laye theym in thyne herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, soule burye thou my body, and holde thy mo ther in honour all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remembre, what and howe greate perils she suffred for the in her wõbe.

And when she also hath fulfylled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and be ware, lest at any tyme thou consent vnto sin, and lest thou let slyp the commaundementes of the Lorde our God.

Gyue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shal not be turned awaye from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moch, gyue plẽ teously: yf thou hast lytle, do thy dylygence, gladlye to gyue of that lytle. For so gathe-rest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessitye. For almes delyuereth frõ deth, & suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes.
A greate comforte is almes be fore the hyghe
God, vnto all them that do it.

My sonne, kepe the well frome all hordedome, and (beside thy wyfe) se that no faulte be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde began all destruction.

Wholoeuer worketh anye thynge for the, immediatlye gyue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruaunte wages remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto an other man, the thynge that thou wol-dest not an other mã should do vnto the. Eate thy bred with the hungry and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon the buryal of the ryghteous, and doo not thou eate and drynche therof with the synners. Alke euer counsayle at ỹ wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and be-seche him, that he wyll ordre thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest in hãd it may remayne in him. I certyfy the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe)
I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and his handwrytynge haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou maist come by hym, and receyue of him the sayd weyght of syluer, and gyue him his handwrytynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: truth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shal we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne and do well.

¶ The obedience of yonge Tobias to his father, whiche is sent in to Rages. An angell accompanyeth with him in his iourney.

CAPI. V.

Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do, & that dyly-gently. But how I shal require this mony I cã not tel. Neither doth he know me, ne I him.
What token shall I gyue him? And as for ỹ waye thyther, I neuer knew it. Then his father answered him, and sayd: I haue his hãd wrytynge by me, whiche when thou shewest him, immediatlye he shall paye the. But go thy waye nowe, and get the some faythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayste receyue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge.

Then went Tobias out, and vpon the strete, he found a fayre young man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one readye to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Aungell of God, but saluted hym, and sayd: From whence art thou, thou good yong man? He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest thou B the waye that leadeth vnto the countrye of the Medes? He answered: I know it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus that dwelleth in Rages, a cytie of the Me-des, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Egathanis. Tobias sayd vnto hym: I praye the tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father mar-ueled, and prayed that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Now when the Aungell came in, he saluted hym and sayd: Ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can C I haue that syt here in darcknes, and se not the lyght of heauen? The younge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shal help the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Cãst thou bryng my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre.
And the Aungel sayd vnto hym: I shal leade thy sonne, and bryng e hym to the agayne.
Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I pray
the, of what house, or of what tribe art thou?
The Aungell Raphael sayd vnto hym: Al-kest thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng, or sekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azaries the sonne of greate Ananias.
And Tobias answered: thou arte come of a greate kynred: but I pray the be not dyspleаsed that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Aungel sayd vnto hym: thy sonne shal I lede for the sake lye, and bryng e hym hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well D goo on youre waye, and God be in youre iourney, and his Aungell beare you cõpanye.
So when they had prepared all thynges, ỹ they wolde take with them in theyr iourney:
Tobias bad his father and his mother fare well, and they went on theyr waye both together. Now when they were gone, his mother began to wepe, and sayd: The staffe of our age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the

for the whiche thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our powertye, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayd Tobias vnto her: wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sownde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Aungell of God shall beare hym company, and ordre well all the thynges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother lefte of from weppynge, and helde her tongue.

¶ Younge Tobias is delyuered from the fysshe, by the Aungell. The Aungell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

CAPI. VI.

a SO Tobias went on his waye, and a dog folowed hym, and the fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Tygris. Then wēt he out to washe his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horryble fysh to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take him by the cheke blade, and draw hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fysh began to leape at his fete.

Then sayd the Aungell vnto hym: Take out the bowels of this fysshe, and as for the herte, the gall, and the liuer, kepe them by the. b For these thynges are necessary and good for medicyne. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fish, & they toke hym with them in theyr iourney, the residue they salted, as moche as was sufficyent for them, tyll they came to Rages. Then Tobias asked the Aungell, & sayde vnto hym: I pray the brother Azariah, tell me wherto are these thynges good of the fysshe, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coles the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euyll spirites, whether it be frome man or from womā, so ꝓ frō thence forth ꝓ same shal come no more vnto them. The gall is good to anoynt or to stricke ꝓ eyes withal, where as there is any blemyth in them, so shal they be hole.

c And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wylt Num.xxv.a thou that we remaynе? The angel answered and sayde here is a nygh kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a doughter called Sara, & hath neither sonne ne doughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto ꝓ, and thou must mary his doughter: and therfore desyre her of her father, and he shall gyue her the to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayd: As I vnderstād, she hath bene maryed vnto seuē husbandes, and they al are dede: and I haue herde saye, that the deuyll slewe them. I am afrayde therfore, lest such thinges happē vnto me also: which if it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde dynge them in theyr age, with sorow to theyr graues.

d Then sayd the Aungell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuyll hathe power. Namelye, they that receyue maryage of such a fashyon, that they shut God out from them and from theyr hert, & gyue them selues to their awne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, vpon suche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takest her, and Tob.viii.b art come in to the chambre, withholde thy self from her thre dayes, and gyue thy diligence vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her.

Tertia ad Psalm.xxxii

And in the fyrst nyght, roste the lyuer of the fysshe, and the deuyll shall be dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght, shalte thou be receyued in to the companye of the holye patriarches. The thyrde nyght, shalte thou obtayne the blessynge of God, so that hole chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleshly lust, that in the sede of Abraham thou mayest obtayne the blessynge in chyldren.

¶ Younge Tobias and the Aungell come to the house of Raguel. He requyreth Raguels doughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

CAPI. VII.

e THen wente they in to Raguell, whiche receyued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyke is this ponge man vnto my systers sonne. And when he had spoken this, he sayd: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the tryde of Nephthaly out the captyuytye of Niniue. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: know ye my brother Tobias? They sayd: yea, we know hym well. And when he had spoken moche good of him, the Aungell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobies of whom thou askest, is this ponge mans father. Then Raguell bowed him selfe downe, and wepte, toke him about the necke and kyssed Tob.xi.d hym, and sayd: Gods blessyng haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous mā. And Anna his wyfe and Sara his doughter wepte also.

f Now when they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sytt downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyll neither eate ne dryncke here this daye, excepte thou fyrste graunte me my peticion, and promyse me to gyue me thy doughter Sara. When Raguel hearde this, he was astonyed, for he knewe what had happened vnto the other seuē men that went in vnto her: and he began to feare that it should chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, and gaue the young man no answeree, the Aungel sayd vnto him: Feare not to gyue him thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belōgeth thy doughter to wyfe, therfore mighe

none

none other haue her.

Then said Raguel: I doubt not, but God L hathe accepted my prayers and teares in his syght: and I trust he caused you to come vn to me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne myght be maryed in her owne kynred, according to the lawe of Moses. And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyll gyue her vnto the: So he toke the ryghte hande of his doughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayd: The God of Abraha, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be D with you: ioyne you togyther, and fulfyll his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the maryage. And then made they mery, and praysed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambre, and thy-ther he broughte Sara his doughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my doughter, the Lorde of heuen gyue the ioye, for the heuynesse that thou haste suffered.

¶ The Aungell byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhor-teth his wyfe to prayer, and they praye thre dayes before they lye togyther.

CAPI. VIII.

NOw after that they hadde supped, they brought the yong man in to her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the lyuer of the fyth, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuyl, and sent him awaye, and bound him in the wildernes of hyer Egypt.
Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & said:
Tob. vii. a. Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to day, to morow, and ouermorow: for these thre nyghtes will we reconcile our selues vn to God: and when the thyrd holy night is past we shall ioyne togyther in the duty of mariage. For we are the children of holy mē, and we may not come togyther as the Heathen that know not God.

Then stode they vp both togither, and be B sought God ernestly that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers, praysed be thou of heauen and erth, of the see, welles, and floudes, and of al the creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the erth, and gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou kno west, that it is not bicause of voluptuousnes that I take this syster of myne to wyfe, but onely for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara said: haue mercy vpon vs, o Lorde, haue mercy vpō vs and let vs bothe come hole and sounde to a good age.

And aboute the cocke crowe, it happened
L Raguel called his seruantes, and they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayd: it is chaunsed vnto him peraduenture, as it did vn to the other seuen men, that wet in vnto her.
Now whē they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her:
send one of thy maydes to loke yf he be deed, that I may bury hym afore it be lyght daye.
So she sent a mayden to se, whiche when she came in to the chambre, she founde them hole and sound slepyng togyther. And so she came agayne, and brought good tydynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wife, prayed D and sayd: Praysed be thou, o Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs as we thought. For thou hast delt mercifully with vs, and put awaye from vs, the ennemy that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercye vnto yonder two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnify the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy praise and of their helth:
that al people may know, that thou only art
God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fill the graue that they had made with erth afore it was lyghte: and bade his wyfe prepare a feast, & to make redy al thyn-ges that were necessary for meat, to suche as wēt by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne, & meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours & fren des, and Raguel charged Tobias to remayn with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the one halfe of it, & made this writing, that the halfe which remayned, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabelus, at the desyre of Tobias, which deliuereth the lettre, and receyueth the money.

CAPI. IX.

THen Tobias called vnto him the aun-gell, whome he thought to haue bene a man, and sayd vnto hym. Brother Aza rias, I pray the harken vnto my wordes: yf I sholde gyue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. Neuerthelesse I beseche the, that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citye of Medes, and de-lyuer hym his hande wrytynge, and receyue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my maryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary one day to longe, he will be sorye in his mynde. Nowe seist thou how earnestly Ra-guel hath requyred me, so that I can not say hym naye.

Then toke Raphael four of Raguels seruauntes & two camels, & went vnto Rages the citye of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wrytyng and receyued all the money. He told hym also of Tobias the son of Tobi, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with him to the mariage. Now whē he came in to the house of Raguel, he fond Tobias sitting L at the table: and he lepte vp, and they kyssed one an other, and Gabelus wepte, and pray-Tobi. vii. a. sed God and said: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and gyueth greate almes. And blessyng haue thy wife, and your elders that ye maye se your chyldren and your chylders chyldren, vnto the thyrde and fourthe generacion, and that your sede maye be blessed of the God of Israell, whiche reygneth worlde without ende. And when they had sayde: Amen, they wente to the feaste, but with the feare of the Lorde, helde they the feast of the mariage.

D

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the taryance of theyr sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

CAPI. X.

A NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made long taryinge by reason of the maryage his father was full of care and heuynesse, and thought what shoulde be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe? Or why shoulde he be kepte so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is deed, and no man wyll gyue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull he Anna his wyfe with him, & began to wepe bothe togyther, bicause their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and said: Wo is me, my son Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge countrey, thou lyght of our eyes, ✠ staffe of our age, ✠ comfort of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seing all the thinges that we haue are onely of the, we shulde not haue sent the away from vs.

Tobi. v. d

Then Tobias comforted her, & said: hold thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our son is hole and sound: the man that we sent him withall is faythfull ynoughe. Neuertheles she might in no wyse be comforted: but dayly went out, loked about, and went about all the stretes, wherby she thought he shold com agayne, that (if it were possible) she myght se him commyng a farre of.

C

But Raguel sayd vnto his son in law: O tary here, & I shall send a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel hym that ✠ art in good helth. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure that my father and my mother count euery daye, and that theyr hertes are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with manye wordes, and wolde in no wyse heare hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all his good: in seruauntes, & handmaydens, in shepe in camels, & in kyne, and moche money, and so sente hym awaye from him with pear and ioye, and sayd: the holye aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney, and bryng you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre chyldren afore I dye. So the elders embraced theyr doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honour her father & mother in lawe, to loue her husband, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe faultelesse.

D

¶ Younge Tobias leuyng his wyfe and housholde in the myd waye, commeth before with the Aungel. The dreame of his mother, lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receyued of his father and mother. Sara commeth leuen dayes after.

CAPI. XI.

AS they nowe were goynge homeward agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Niniue. And the aungel said: Brother Tobias thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the we two wyll go before, and let the housholde with thy wyfe and the catell come softe and fayrly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shold go before, Raphael sayd vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente theyr waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the top of an hylle, frome whence she myghte se farre aboute her. And whyle she was waytynge there for his commyng, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceyued her sonne comming, and ran and told her husband, saying: Beholde, thy son cometh. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: Assoone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worshyp the Lord thy God, and gyue thankes vnto hym: then goo to thy father & kysse hym, and stryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fyth, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure that his eyes shal strayt way be opened, and thy father shall se the lyghte of heuen, and shal reioyse at the lyght of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in theyr iourneye, ranne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

B

So the blynd father arose, & began to ren and hombled with his fete, & gaue a seruaunt his hande, ran to mete his son, receyued hym and kyssed hym and his wyfe, and began to wepe for ioye.

C

Now when they had worshiped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed half an hour, and then began the blemysh to go out of his eyes, like as it had ben the whyte skyn of an egge, which Tobias toke and drewe from his eyes, and immediatly he receyued his syght.

D

Then they prayed god, he and his wife, & al they that knew him. And Tobias said: O Lorde God of Israel, I gyue the prayse and thankes, for thou haste chastened me, & made me hole. And lo, nowe do I se my son Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sound, with all the housholde and catell, with camels & moche money of his

of his wynes, and with ꝑ money that he had receyued of Gabelus: and he told his father and mother al the benefytes, which God had doone for him, by the man that ledde hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias systers sõnes came, and were glad, and reioysed with hym, by reason of al the good, that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for ꝑ space of seuẽ dayes they made merye, and were ryght ioyfull euery chone.

¶ Younge Tobias reckeneth vp vnto his father the pleasures that the Aungell dyd vnto hym. He offreth vnto the Aungell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

CAPI. XII.

¶ Then Tobias called his son vnto him, & sayd: what may we gyue this holy mã that wẽt with the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: father what rewarde shal we gyue him? or what thyng can deserue his benefytes? He hathe bene my guyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receyued the money frõ Gabel⁹, he caused me to get my wife he droue the euil spirit from her, he hath ben mocca1yon of gladnesse to her father & mother, he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fyth, he hath made the to se ꝑ lyght of heuẽ, yea we all haue receyued great good of hym. How shold we worthily deserue these thinges vnto him? But I pray the my father that thou wylt desyre him, yf happely he wil vouchsafe to take with hym the halfe of all ꝑ we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, ¶ B toke him aside, and began to pray him, that he wolde be content to take in good worthe the halfe parte of all that he hadde brought. Then sayd he secretly vnto them: Prayse ꝑ God of heuen, and gyue thankes vnto hym, before al men lyuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good for vs to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shew and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honourable thynge. Prayer is good with fastynge, and to gyue almes, is bettter then to hoord vp treasures of golde, for almes delyuereth from deathe, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlasting lyfe. But they that do synne & vnrighteousnesse, are the ennemyes of theyr owne soules.

Wherfore I tell you the truth, & wyl hyde ¶ C nothing from you. Whẽ thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the deed, and lefte thy dyner, and hyddest the deed in thy house vpõ the daye tyme, that thou myghtest bury them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And bycause thou wast accepted and beloued of God, it was necessary that tẽptacion shold trye the. And now hath the Lord set me to heale the, & to deliuer Sara thy sõnnes wyfe from the euyl spirite. For I am Raphael an aungel, one of ꝑ seuen that stand before God.

Whẽ they herd this, they were sore afraid and trembled, and fel downe vpon theyr faces vnto the ground. Then sayd the aungel: ¶ D Peace be with you, feare not. Wher as I haue ben with you, it is ꝑ wyl of God, giue prayse and thankes vnto him.

You thought that I did eate and drynke w you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, & drinke that can not be sene of men. Gene. xviii. & and. xix. a Judith. xiii. c

Now therfore is the tyme ꝑ I muste turne agayne vnto him ꝑ sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tel out all his wõderous workes.

And when he hadde spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye oute of theyr syghte, so that they sawe him no more. Then fell they downe flatte vpon theyr faces by the space of thre houres, and prayed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

CAPI. XIII.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouthe & ¶ A prayed the Lorde, and said: great art thou, o Lorde, for euermore, and thy kyngdome, worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none ꝑ may escape thyne hande. O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye chyldren of Israell, & prayse hym in the syght of the Heathen. For among the Heathen whiche knowe hym not hath he scatred you, to thintent that ye shold shewe forth his maruelous workes: and cause thẽ for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hathe chastened vs for oure mysdedes, and for his owne mercy sake shall he saue vs. Deute. xxxii. c 1. Reg. ii. b Sapie. xvi. c

Consider then how he hath delt with you, ¶ B and prayse him with feare and drede, and magnifye the euerlastynge kynge in your workes. I wyl praye hym, euen in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye sinners, and do righteousnesse before God, and be ye sure that he wyll shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me and my soule, we wyll reioyse in God. O prayse the Lorde al ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem thou citye of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thinges, and gyue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he may buylde vs his tabernacle agayne in the, that he may call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayste haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre light shalt thou shine and ale the endes of the worlde shall honour the. The people shall come vnto the frõ far, they shall bryng gyftes, & worshyp the Lord in the, and thy land shal they haue for a Sanctuary, for the shall call vpon the great name in the. 2. Para. vi. a Luke. ii. c Esay. lx. a Mark. viii. a Acts. ii. a

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blaspheme the, shall be condemned:

but blessed shal they be that buyld the vp. As for the, thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all þ loue the, & be glad of thy pear. Prayse thou the Lord, o my soule, for the Lorde our God hath delyuered his city Jerusalem frome all her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye yf my sede remayne to se the clerenesse of Jerusalem.

Apoca.xi.c ¶ The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Saphyre, & Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her stretes shal be paued with whyte marble stone, and in all her stretes shall Alleluya be song. Praysed be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the destruction of Niniue. His sonne returneth to Raguel, after the decesse of his father and mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

A ¶ AND after that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued. xlij. yeres, and sawe his nephewes chyldren. Nowe when he was an hundred and two yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Niniue. For when he was sixe and fyftye yeres of age, he lost his syght of his eyes, and when he was three score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in pear.

Job.xlii.c
Psal.cxxvii.a

B ¶ But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen younge spryngoldes his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at hand, for þ worde of the Lord can not fayle, and our brethren that are scatred oute of the lande of Israell, shall come thyther agayne. And the hole lande of it that hath ben walste, shal be filled, and the house of God that was brent in it, shal be buylded agayne, & al suche as feare God, shal returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their ydols, & come to Jerusalem, & dwell there, and all the kinges of the erth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel.

C ¶ And therfore my chyldren, heare your father: Serue the Lorde in faythfulnesse, seke after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth hym. Commaund your children that they do right, gyue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truthe and with all their power. Heare me therfore my chyldren, & abyde not here: but in what day so euer ye haue buryed youre mother beside me, gette you frome hence. For I se, that the wickednesse of it shal bring it to destruction and ende.

D ¶ After the deth of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Niniue, with his wyfe & chyldren, and with his chylders chyldren, and came agayn to his father and mother in law and found them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, & sawe the fyfth generacion and chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his kynsfolkes buryed hym: And all his posteritie continued in a good life, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted bothe of God and men, and of al the people of the lande.

¶ The ende of the boke of Tobias.

THE BOKE OF IVDITH.

¶ The duyldynge of Egbathanis. The victory of Nabuchodonozor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonozor are dispyted.

CAPI. I.

ARpharat the kinge of ꝑ Medes, submoued many people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble stronge citye, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, four squared, seuentye cubytes hye, & thirty cubites brode. He made towres therupon of an hundred cubites hye. But vpō the. iiii. corners, euery side was. xx. fote brode. He made the portes in the heygthe like as the towres. This king trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes.

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great citye of Niniue) fought agaynste Arpharat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau beside Euphrates and Tigris, and Jadason, in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elikes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyfte vp: and he sente vnto all them that dwelte in Celicia, in Damiascus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel, and Cedar, and to suche as dwelte in Galile in the greate felde of Esdrelon, to all theym that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalem, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consente wolde not agree vnto hym, and sente the messengers agayne emptye, and put them awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacyon at all those landes, and sware by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes.

¶ Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the worlde. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

IN the thyrtenth yere of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the. xvij. daye of the fyrste moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defend him selfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all his capitaynes, & men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them that his purpose was to brynge the hole earthe vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with his saying: Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes the chyef capitayne of his warres, and sayd vnto him: goo thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the weste, and specially agaynste those that haue defyed my commaundement. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cities shalt thou bring in subiection vnto me. Ezechi. 17.b

Then Holofernes called togyther all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sente he before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with oxen and smal catel, and that without nombre. He caused corn to be prepared oute of all Cilicia for his hoste. Moche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and al his host, with charettes, horsemē, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the ground of the land, lyke the grashoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyryans, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye vpon the left syde of Celicia: and so he went vp in to all theyr castels, and wanne euerye stronge hold. As for the welthy city of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the children of Tharsis and the Jsmaelites, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south side of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye citys that were there, from the brooke of Mambre, til a man come to the see: & he toke the borders in frō Celicia, vnto the costes of Japhet towarde the southe. He caryed awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all theyr goodes: & who so euer withstode him, he slew them with the swerde. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest and brente vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fel vpon al them that dwelt in the earth.

¶ Kynges become wyllyngly subiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and crueltye of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and prynces of all cityes, & landes sent their embassadours, namely they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Lybia, and Celicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayde: Lette thy wrathe cease toward vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonosor with oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we sholde dye, and be slayne, & receyue greater hurte. All our cityes and possessyons, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes great, and smal catel, shepe, gotes, horses and camels, all our goodes and housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiectiō be it all togyther. We oure selues also and our childzen wyll be thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes downe frome the mountaynes with horsemen and greate power, and conquered all stronge fenced cytyes, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cytyes he toke stronge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym.

Judi.v.a There came such a fear also vpon those coūtreys, that the indwellers of all the cytyes, the Pzynces and rulers, and the people togyther wente forthe to mete hym as he came, and receyued him honourably with garlandes and torches, with daunses, tabzettes, & pypes.

Neuertheleese thoughe they dyd this, yet C might they not swage his rigorous stomack but he destroyed their cityes, & hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor ỳ kinge had commaunded hym, that he shoulde roote oute all the goddes of the lande: to the intent that he onely might be called and taken for God of the nacions, whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wēt he thorowe Syria Sabal, and thorowe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopoly, and toke theyr cytyes, & remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused al the hole multytude of his hoste to be gathered togyther.

¶ Israel requyreth helpe of God, agaynste Holofernes. They fast and praye.

CAPI. IIII.

A When the childzen of Israel that dwelt in Jurye herde this, they were sooze afrayd of him. There came suche tremblynge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he sholde do vnto the cityе of Jerusalem and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cityes and their temples. So they sent in to all Samaria round about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, made fast ỳ townes with walles, and prepared corne for them agaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the Preest wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Esdzelon (whiche lyeth ouer agaynst the great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whome men myghte haue passage vnto theym, that they should take in the wayes of the mountaynes wherby there myghte be any waye and passage to Jerusalem, and that they sholde hold B diligent watche where any straȳte way was betwyxte the mountaynes. And the childzen of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the preest of the Lorde had commaunded theym. And all the people cried ernestly, and humbled their soules with fastynges and prayers, they & theyr wyues. The Preestes put on heerye clothes, and layde the younge babes before the temple of the Lorde, and couered the aulter of ỳ Lorde with an heerye clothe. And with one accorde they cryed vnto the Lord God of Israel, that their childzen sholde not be gyuen in to a pray, & their wiues in to a spoyle, that theyr cityes shoulde not be layde waste, and that their Sanctuary sholde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen. Eccl. prynt.

Then Eliachim the hye preest of ỳ Lorde C wente rounde abonte all Israell, and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, ỳ the Lorde wyll heare youre peticyons, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in ỳ syghte of the Lorde. Remembze Moses the seruaūt of the Lorde, whiche ouerthrew the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr myghte and power, in theyr hoste, in theyr shyldes, in theyr charettes and horsemen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall all the ennemyes of Israel be, yf ye contynue in this worke that ye haue begon. So vpon this exhortacyon, they continued in prayer before the Lorde. In so moche that they whiche offered brente sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, offered the offerynges vnto the Lorde, beinge arayed in heery clothes, and had asshes vpon theyr heades. And they all besoughte God from theyr hole herte, that he wolde vysyte his people of Israel. Exod. xiii.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes Achior sheweth vnto Holofernes the maruels of God, done vnto the Jewes, for whiche thynge, the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

CAPI. V.

AND word came to Holofernes ỳ prince of the warres of the Assyrians, that A the childzen of Israell prepared them selues to make resystaunce, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceding wrothe, and called all the princes of Moab, and the capitaynes of Ammon, and said vnto them: tell me, what people is this ỳ kepeth in the mountaynes? or what maner of cityes are they? what is theyr power? or what maner of host haue they, who is their capitayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwell in the Easte) and come not forthe to mete vs, that they myght receyue vs w̄ pear? Judi.vi.b Judi.vi.d Then Achior the capitayne of al the Ammonites, answered and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I wyll tell the truthe before the concernyng this people that dwel in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye goo oute of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the B Caldees, they dwelte fyrst in Mesopotamia, for for they wold not folow the goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshypped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also commaunded them þ they should go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now when there came a derth in to the hole lande, they went downe to Egypt, and there they dwelt foure hundreth yeres, in the whiche they multiplyed so greatlye, that their host might not be nombred. And when þ king of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in buyldyng of his cytyes, with makynge of claye and bycke, they cryed vnto God their Lorde, which punyshed the hole lande of Egypt, with dyuers plages.

C Now when the kynge of Egypt let them go their way, and the plage ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them, & to bryng theym agayne in to his seruyce, whyle they were sleynge awaye, the God of heauen opened the see, so that the water stode fast, vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and these wente thorow the bottom of the see: drye shod. In the which place, when an innumerable people of þ Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed thorowe the red see, they came vnto the wyldernes of the mount Synai, wher neuer man myght dwell afore, and where the sonne of man had neuer rested.

D There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myght drynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Where so euer they went (without bowe and arow, without bukler or swerde) their God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yea no man was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaythfullye frome the worshyppynge of the Lorde their God. But as oft as they worshypped any other beside their God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuertheless as oft as they were sory for departyng from the worshyp of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strength to withstand their enemyes.

A Moreouer they slewe the kyng of the Canaanites, Iebusites, Pheresites, Hethites, Euites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke their landes and cytyes in possessyon: and so long as they synned not in the syght of their God, it wente well with them, for their God hateth vnryghtousnesse. For in the tymes past when they wente out of þ waye, which God had gyuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse battayles of manye nacyons: and many of them were caryed awaye presoners vnto a straunge countrey. But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde their God, and are come togyther agayne out of the countreys where they were scatred abrode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell ther in: and as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayn in possession.

And therfore my Lord, make dylygent inquysyon, yf this people haue done wyckednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp agaynste them, for doubtlesse their God shall delyuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But if this people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defend them, and so shall we be a shame to all the worlde. Judith vi.

Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, all the prynces of Holofernes were wroth and thoughte to slay him, and sayde one to an other: what is he this, which dare say that the chyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge and his host? where as they are an vnweaponed people, without strength or vnderstandynge of the feates of war? That Achior therfore may knowe that he hath dysceyued vs, we wyll go vp in to the mountaynes: and whe the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shall be stykt with the swerde, that all people may know, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

Achior is committed into the handes of the Iewes by Holofernes. He is tied to a tre, but is loosed of the Iewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Iewes.

CAPI. VI.

SO when they had lefte of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and sayd vnto Achior. For so moch as thou haste prophecyed vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israell shall be defended of their God, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yea when we slee them al as one man, thou also shalte perysh with the thorow the swerde of the Assyryans, and all Israel shall be destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the Lord of the hole earth. Then shal the swerd of my knyghthod go thorow thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe stykte amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalte not come to thy selfe agayne, but be vtterly destroyed with them. A Judith.v.f

But yf thou thynckest thy prophecy to be true, why dost thou then chaūge thy colour? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayst know, that thou shalt fele these thynges with them, beholde, from this houre forthe wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue worthelye deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayste be punished with them. B

So Holofernes cōmaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and to cary hym vnto Bethulia, thulia, and to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, and wente thorowe the playne felde. But when they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the slynge casters came out agaynst them. Neuertheles they gat them away by the syde of the mountayne, & bounde Achior hande and fote to a tree, and so lefte hym bound with withyes, and turned agayn vnto their Lorde.

Notwithstandynge the chyldren of Israel went downe from Bethulia, came vnto him, loosed hym, brought him in to Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, & asked hym what the matter was, that the Assyrians had left hym bounde.

Osias the sonne of Micha, of the tribe of ℒ Symeon, and Chatmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatoures, and before them al he tolde them, what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thyng that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so saying: and how Holofernes hym selfe was wrath, and commaunded hym for the same cause to be delyuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to death with dyuers tormentes, because he sayd: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnly tolde out al these thynges, al the people fel downe vpon their faces, praisyng the Lorde, and poured out their prayers together vnto ℘ Lord, with a generall complaynt and weppyng, and sayde: O Lorde of heauen and of earthe, beholde their pryde, and loke vpon our lowlynesse, and consyder how it standeth with thy sayntes, and make it to be knowen that thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, and how that thou bryngest them lowe, that presume of them selues, and make their boost in their owne strength.

℘ So when the weppynge and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power and strength thou hast praysed, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalte rather se their destruction. When the Lorde our God then shall gyue his seruauntes this lybertie, God be also with the amonges vs: so that yf it please the, thou with thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Osias had ended the counsell, he toke him into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers all the nyght longe in the congregacyon, and besought ℘ God of Israel for helpe.

¶ Bethulias is belieged of Holofernes. The people requyreth helpe at God. They of Bethulia wolde gyue ouer the cytye for want of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentation.

CAPI. VII.

The nexte day, Holofernes commaunded his hoste, to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There were an. C. and .xx. thousande fyghtynge men on fote, and two and twentye thousande horsmen, beside the preparing of them that were wonne: and came to the on euery side out of the countreyes and cityes whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynst the Israelytes, and came on by the hyll syde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Esdrelon. ℒ Judith.iij

Now when the chyldren of Israel saw so great a multytude of the Assyryans, they fel downe flat vpon the ground, strawed asshes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accorde, that the God of Israel wolde shewe his mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapons, and sat betwyxte the mountaynes in the narow place, & kept the waye daye and nyght. ℬ

But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water sprynge, whiche from the South syde was conueyed in to ℘ cytye by a condyte: this commaunded he to be diuerte an other way, and to cut their condyte in sundre. There were welles also not farre from the walles, whiche they vsed secretlye, more for pleasure then for necessytye.

Then went the Ammonites and ℘ Moabytes vnto Holofernes, and sayde: The chyldren of Israel truste neyther in speare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hylles. That thou mayste ouercome them, therfore without the strikyng of any battayle, let me to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: so shalte thou destroy them without swerde, or at the leaste they shall be so feble, that they muste be layne to gyue ouer the cytye, whiche they thynke not vable to be wonne, for so moche as it lyeth in the mountaynes. ℒ

These wordes pleased Holofernes wel, & Judith.xiij.a all his men of warre, and he let and. C. men at euery well rounde about. And when this watch had endured twentye dayes, the Cisternes and all that had water, fayled them that dwelte in the cytye of Bethulia, so that in the hole cyty they had not drynke ynough for one daye, for the people had water gyuē them dayly in a measure. ℘

Then came the men and women, younge personnes and chyldren all vnto Osias, and sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwyxte vs and the, for thou haste dealt cupl with vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kyng of the Assirians, therfore hath God solde vs in their handes, and there is no man to help vs, where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thyrst & greate destruction. Exod.xvij.a

Therfore gather now togyther al the people that be in the cytye, that we may al yelde ouer oure selues wylyngly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayse the Lorde with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perysshe, and to be laughed to scorne and shamed of euery man, when we se oure wyues and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whiche punysheth vs according to the deserynge of oure synnes) and gyue you warnynge, that ye gyue vp the cyte nowe in to the power of Holofernes hoost, that oure ende maye be shorte with the swerde, whiche els shall endure longe, for wante of water and for thirste.

When they had spoken out these wordes, there was a great weppynge and howlyng in the hole congregacyon, and that of euerye man, and they cryed an hole houre long vnto God with one voyce, saying: we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealte wyckedly. Thou that art gracyous, haue mercy vpon vs, punysshe oure vnryghteousnesse with thyne owne scourge, and gyue not those other that knowledge the, vnto a people which knoweth the not, lest they saye amonges the Heythen: where is theyr God.

And when they were so werye with this cryinge and weppynge, that they held theyr tunges: Olyas stode vp with watrye eyes, and sayde: O take good herdes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he shall cut awaye his indignacyon, and gyue glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

Of the vertuous woman Judith, which reproueth the auncyentes because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encorage and herten the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynst the enemyes of the Jewes.

CAPI VIII.

AND it happened when these wordes came to the eares of Judith, a wyddowe, whiche was the doughter of Merary, the sonne of Idox, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Oziah, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphaim, the sonne of Achitob, the son of Melchia, the sonne Euam, the son of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly heruest.

For whyle he was byndynge the sheues togyther in the felde, the heate came vpō his heed, and he dyed at Bethula his city, and there was he buried beside his fathers. Now was Judith his desolate widdow. iij. yeres and syx monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a prury chambre, where she dwelte, beynge closed in with her maydens. She ware a smock of heer, and fasted al the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabbothes, and newe moones and the solemne dayes that the people of Israell kepte. She was a very fayre and beutyfull person. Her husbande also hadde lefte her great ryches, a plenteous housholde, greate vnmouable possions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a verye good report with euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no body that spake an euyl word of her.

When this Judith herde, how Olias had promysed the people, that after the fifth day he wolde gyue vp the cyte vnto the Assirias she set for the elders Chabri and Charmin and when they came to her she sayde: what thynge is this, wherin Olias hath consented that yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyll gyue ouer the cyte to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? This deuice optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath & displeasure. Wyll ye set the mercye of the Lorde a tyme and appoynte him a daye after your wyll? Judith.viii.a

Neuertheles for so moch as the Lorde is pacyent, let vs rather amende oure selues, pourynge oute teares, and beseechyng hym of grace. For God threatneth not as a mā, neither wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hertely fal downe before him, and serue him with a meke spyryte, and with weppynge eyes saye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs according to his owne wyl and mercye: that like as our herte is now vexed, and brought low thorow the pryde of them, it may so be confirmed thorow his grace: in so moch as we follow not the synnes of oure fathers, whiche forsoke their God, and worshypped other goddes: for the which synne they perysshed with the swerde: were spoyled and broughte to shame of all their ennemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whose comforte let vs tarye with mekenes. Jeremy.xviii.a and.xxv.a

He shall requyre and make inquysycion for our bloude, from the vexacions of our ennemyes: he shall bringe downe all the Heithe that ryse vp agaynste vs, and put theym to dyshonour, euen the Lorde our God. Judith.viii.b viii.a.b.c Deute.xxxii.e

Therfore deare brethren, seynge ye are honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respect, and vpon whome the life of the people standeth, lyfte vp their hertes with youre exhortacion that they may cal to remembraūce, how our fathers also in tymes past were temted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshypped their God a ryght. They ought to remēbre, howe our father Abraham beynge temted, and tryed thorowe many trybulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God beynge tryed thorow many troubles, were foūde stedfast in faith. Agayne they that receyued not their temtacions with the feare of God, but put theym selues forth with vnpacience & murmuringe Deute. viii.a ii.Par.xxxii.f Gene.xvii.a and.xxii.a Gene.xxviii.h Prouer.xi.b Hebr.xi.a

Wherupynge also that this correction commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendment, & not for our destruction.

¶ Then sayd Ozias and the elders vnto Judyth: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reprope thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judyth sayd vnto them: Seinge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell and deuice, yf it be of God: and beseche God, that he wyll brynge my counsell to good ende.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stand this nyght before the porte, and I wyll go forthe with Abra my mayden: Pray ye therfore vnto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel, within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thynge that I go in hande withall, aske ye no questyons of it, tyl I open it vnto you my self: do ye nothyng els but praye vnto the Lorde your God for me. ¶ The prayer of Judith for the victory.

CAPI. IX.

A NOw when they were gone theyr waye, Judith went in to her oratory, put on hearye smocke, strowed asshes vpon her heed, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him, sayng: O Lorde God of my father Symeon, whiche gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst that enemyes, that vsed violence and wylfulnesse, and that rauysshed the virgyn, and put her to dishonestye. Thou that gauest theyr wyues in to a praye, and theyr doughters in to captyuitye, & all theyr pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zeale vnto the, helpe me wyddowe, O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge, and and loke what thou hast taken in hand & deuysed, it came euer to passe. For al thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastynge foreknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assyryans, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpō the hoost of the Egyptians, when they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put theyr trust in theyr charrettes horsemen, and in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedst vpon theyr hoost castynge a thycke darknes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lorde let it go with these, that trust in ꝑ power and multitude of theyr men of warre, in their charettes, arowes and speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, whiche destroyest warres from the begynnynge, and that thou arte the Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme now lyke as euer from the beginning, and in thy power bryng their power to nought, cause they myght to fall in thy wrath.

Bryng to passe (O Lord) ꝑ ꝑ pride of ꝑ enemy may be cut downe with his own swerd, that he maye be taken with the snare of his eyes in me and that thou mayst smite him with ꝑ lippes of my loue. O giue me a stedfast mynde that I maye despyse hym and his strength, and that I maye destroy hym.

This shal brynge thy name an euerlasting remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrow him for. For thy power (O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neither hast thou any pleasure in the strength of hors. ¶ Judith decketh her self to go to Holofernes. The blessynge that the Elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

CAPI. X.

AND when she had left of cryinge vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before ꝑ Lord and called her mayde, went downe in to her house, layde the heery cloth from her, put of the garmentes of her widdowhode, washed her body, anointed her self w precious thiges of swete sauour, bryoyded & platted her heer, set an hoode vpon her heade, and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnes, slippers vpon her fete, armelettes, spanges, earynges fynger rynges, and decked her self with al her best arape.

Judyth.x

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall beautye and fayrenesse (for all this deckynge of her selfe was not done for any voluptuousnesse, and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discreacion & vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase her beauty) so that she was exceding amiable and wel fauoured in al mens eyes.

She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wine

a pot

a pot with oyle, potage, cake bred and chese, and went her waye.

B Nowe when she came to the porte of the cytye, she founde Ozias and the eldees of the cytie wayting there. Which when they sawe her, they were astonyed, and meruelled greatly at her bewty, neuertheless they asked no questyon at her, but let her go, sayinge: The God of oure fathers gyue the his grace, and with his power performe all the deuyce of thy herte: that Jerusalem maye reioce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and ryghtous. And all they that were there, sayd with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and went out at the porte, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that about the spryngе of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shall be gyuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde the selues vnto you, that they myght fynde mercy in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of his host shall perysh.

And when these men had herde her wordes, and consydred her fayre face, they were astonyed (for they wondred at her excellent bewtye) and sayd vnto her: Thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndynge oute this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, & thou shalte please him at the hert. So they brought her into Holofernes pauylion, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before hym, immedyatlye he was ouercome and taken with her bewtye. Then sayd his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Iewes, that haue so fayre women? Should we not by reason fyght agaynst them for these? So when Judith saw Holofernes sytting in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpō hym. and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at theyr Lordes commaundement.

Holofernes requyreth of Judith the cause of her commynge, whiche gyueth hym a lubyl answere.

CAPI. XI.

A Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lyft vp a spere agaynst them. But tell me now what is the cause that thou art departed frome them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs.

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy hād mayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truely as Nabuchodonosor a Lorde of the land lyueth, & as truly as his power lyueth, whiche is in the to the punyshment of all men that go wrōg all men shal not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but al the beestes also of ỹ feld. For all people speake of thy prudente actyuytie, and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onely art good and myghtye in all his kyngdome, and thy discrecion is commended in all landes.

The thynge is manyfest also, that Achior spake, and it is wel knowen what thou commaūdedst to do vnto him. ffor this is playne and of a suertye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hathe shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, how that for theyr synnes he wyl deliuer them ouer vnto the ennemye. And for so moch as the children of Israel know that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afrayde of the. B Judith.v.a

They suffre greate honger also, and for want of water, they are deed nowe in a maner. Moreouer they are appoynted to slaye all their catell, that they maye drynche the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende al the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, that they must nedes be destroyed. Which when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled frome them, and the Lord hath sēt me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyp God, euen here nowe beside the, and thy handmayden shall go forthe, and I wyll make my prayer vnto God, and he shal tell me, when he wyll rewarde theym theyr synne: then shall I come and shewe the and bringe the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalē so that thou shalt haue al ỹ people of Israel as the shepe without a shepeherde, there shal not so moch as as one dog barcke agaynst the. For these thynges are shewed me by thy prouydence of God: and for so moche as God is displeased with them, he hath sente me to tell the the same. C

These wordes pleased Holofernes and al his seruauntes, which marueyled at the wisdome of her, and sayd one to an other: there is not suche a woman vpon earthe, in beauty and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sēt the hither before thy people, that thou mayste gyue them, into our handes. And for so moche as thy promyse is good, yf thy God performe it, vnto me, he shalbe my God also, and thou shalte be excellente and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande. D

Holofernes

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desyreth lycence to go out in the nyght season to praye, and obtayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banket, and she commeth. Holofernes is dronken.

CAPI. XII.

A Then cõmaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shoulde be gyuen her from his table. Judith answered hym, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaũded to gyue me, I maye not eat of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eate of suche as I haue brought with me. Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges ꝑ thou hast brought with the sayle, what wal we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde, thy handemayde shall not spende all this, tyll God hathe brought to passe in my yande, the thynges that I haue deuysed.

B So his seruauntes brought her in to the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leaue to go forthe by nyght and before daye, to her prayer and to make intercessyon vnto the Lorde. Then commaũded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shoulde go out and in at her pleasure to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, & besought the Lorde God of Israel, that he wolde prospere her waye, for ꝑ delyueraunce of his people. And so she went in, and remained clene in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

C Vpon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a costlye supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayd vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and entyse this Hebruelle, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe cõpany with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman should so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnlayne with.

Then went Vagao vnto Judith, and sayd Let not ꝑ good doughter be afrayed, to come into my Lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and dryncke wyne, and be merye with him. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shuld saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she stode vp, and decked her selfe with her apparell, and went in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was thorowlye stycken, so ꝑ he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde to her: dryncke nowe and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my wynde is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke before him the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranck more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

¶ Holofernes slepeth for very dronckennes, and Judith cutteth of his heed, & goeth therwith to her owne people: of whom she is receiued with ioye. They gyue thankes vnto God, for their delyueraunce. Judith speaketh vnto Achior, whiche marueyleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

CAPI XIII.

NOwe when it was late in the nyghte his seruauntes made haste euery mã to his lodgynge. And Vagao shut the chãbre dores, and went his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chambre. As for Holofernes he lay vpon the bed all dronken, & of very dronnes fell a slepe. A Eccle. xxxi.

Then commaũded Judith her mayde, to stand with without before the dore and to wayt. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretlye, and sayde: Strengthen me O Lorde God of Israel, and haue respect vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayste set vp thy cytye of Jerusalẽ lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunt that by the I may performe the thynge, whiche I haue deuised thorow ꝑ beleue that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken this, she went to the bedsteade, and loosed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it out. Then toke she holde of the heery lockes of his heade, & sayde: Strengthen me O Lord God in this houre: & with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deade bodye aside. Immedyatly she gat her forth, and delyuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet. B

And so these two went forth togyther after theyr custome, as thoughe they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of the cyty. And Judith ceyed a farre of vnto ꝑ watch men vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytye togyther. And they came al to mete her litle and greate, yonge and olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she went vp into an hye place and caused sylence to be proclaymed.

When euery man nowe helde his tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despyted, nor forsaken them, that C that put their truſt in hym, & in me his handmaiden he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promiſed vnto the houſe of Iſrael: yea in my hande this ſame night hathe he ſlayne the enuemy of his people.

And with that ſhe toke forthe the heed of Holofernes out of the wallet, and ſhewed it them, ſaying: Beholde the heed of Holofernes the capiteyn of the Aſſirians, and this is the canapy wherin he lay in his dronkennes: where the Lord our God hath ſlayne him by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth his aungel hath kept me, going thyther, remainig there, and comming hither agayn from thēce. And the Lord hath not ſuffred me his handmaidē to be defiled, but withoute any filthynelle of syn hath he brought me agayn vnto you, and that with gret victory, ſo that I am eſcaped and ye deliuered. O gyue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayſed the Lorde all togyther, & gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they ſaid: The Lord hath bleſſed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemyes to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of ꝑ people of Iſrael, ſayd vnto her: Bleſſed art ꝑ of the Lorde the hyghe God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Bleſſed be the Lorde, the maker of heuen & erth, which hath guyded the aright, to woūd and to ſmyte of the heed of the capitayne of our enemyes. For this day he hath made thy name ſo honourable, that thy prayſe ſhal neuer come out of the mouth of mē, which ſhal alway remembre the power of the Lord, ſeing thou haſt not ſpared thine owne ſelf, but put the in ieopardy, conſidringe the anguyſh and trouble of thy people, and ſo haſt helped their fal before God our Lorde. And all the people ſaid: Amen, Amen.

C Achior alſo was called, and he came. Thē ſayd Judith vnto him: The God of Iſraell vnto whom thou gaueſt witneſſe, ꝑ he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this night thorow my hand ſmitten of the heed of all the vnfaythfull. And that ꝑ mayſt ſe that it ſo is, behold this is the heed of Holofernes which in his preſumptuous pryde, deſpiſed ꝑ God of the people of Iſrael, & threatned the with deſtruction, ſaying: whē the people of Iſrael is take, I ſhal cauſe ꝑ alſo to be ſticke with the ſwerd. When Achior ſaw Holofernes heed he fell downe vpon his face to the groūd for very anguiſh and feare, ſo that he ſwowned withall. But after ꝑ he was come agayn to him ſelfe, he fel downe before her, & prayſed her ſaying: Bleſſed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob, for all the people that hear of thy name, ſhal prayſe the God of Iſrael bicauſe of the.

¶ The counſell of Judith. Achior beyng an heathen man, turneth to God. The Aſſyrians are afrayed of the Iewes.

CAPI. XIIII.

IUdith ſayd vnto al the people: Brethren hear me. Stick vp this heed vpon our walles, and when the ſunne ariſeth, take euery man his weapon, and ſal out violently: not as though ye wold go beſide them, but to renn vpon them with violence. When the ſpies in the tentes ſe this, they ſhall of neceſſitie be cōpelled to fle backward, and to raiſe vp their capiteyn to the batayle. So when their capitaynes come in to Holofernes pauylion, and fynde the deed bodye wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnes ſhal fall vpon them, and when ye perceyue that they fle, folowe them without all care, for God ſhal deliuer them vnto you to be deſtroyed. A

Then Achior ſeinge the power of God, whiche he had ſhewed vnto the people of Iſrael, fell of from his Heatheniſh byleke, and put his truſt in God, and let him ſelfe be circumciſed: and ſo was he nombred among ꝑ people of Iſrael, he and all his poſteritie vnto this daye.

Now as ſoone as it was daye, they ſtickte vp Holofernes heed vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and ſo they went oute with an horrible crye. When the ſpyes ſawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before his chambre, and made a greate ruſhing to wake him vp, bicauſe they thoughte with the noyſe to haue rayſed hym. For there durſt not one of the Aſſirians knocke, go in, or open. B

But when the Capytaynes and Prynces and all the chyefe in the kynge of the Aſſyrians hoſte came togyther, they ſayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Goo your waye in, and wake hym vp, for the myce are crepte out of theyr holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto batayle. 1. Reg. xiiii. b

Then wente Bagao in to his chamber, ſtode before the bedde, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had ben ſleppyng wᵗ Judith. C

But when he had harkened perfectly with his eares and coulde perceyue no ſtering, he went nere to the bed, and lyft it vp, and then ſawe he the deed bodye of Holofernes lyeng there without a heed, weltred in his bloude, vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and with weppynge rente his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde hym not: And ſo he lepte out vnto the people and ſayd one woman of the Iewes hath brought all Nabuchodonoſors people to ſhame. For lo, Holofernes lieth vpon the ground, & hath no heed.

When the chief of the Aſſirians hoſte herd that, they rent their clothes, and there fel an intollerable feare and tremblyng vpon the, ſo that theyr myndes were ſore afrayd. And there was an exceding great crye in the hole hoſte.

¶ The flyght of the Aſſyrians. The purſute of Iſrael after them. Iſrael becommeth ryche, by the ſpoyles of the Aſſyrians. Judith is prayſed of Joacim and of the people.

CAPI. XV.

A NOw when all the hoste herde that Holofernes was heeded, theyr mynde and counsell fell from theym: and suche a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by fleing away: one spake not to an other, but hāged downe their heades, left all behinde them, and made haste to escape frome the Hebrues: for they herde that they were hastynge to come after with theyr weapōs, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thorow all the fotepathes of the dales.

And when the childzen of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wēt downe with trompettes, blowyng and makyng a great crye after them: As for the Assirians they had no ordre, and kept not them selues togyther, but fled their waye. Neuertheselle the childzen of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomfeted as many as they myghte get. And Olias sent messengers vnto all the cityes and countreys of Israel.

B So all the regions and euery city sent out their best men after them in harnelle, & smote them with the swerd, tyl they came to the vttermost part of their borders. And ỳ other ỳ were in Bethulia came in to the tentes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they found great good. And they that came agayn to Bethulia from the battayle, toke with thē such thinges as had ben theirs: there was no nōbre of the catell, and of all costlye iewels, so that from the lowest to the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye preest at Jerusalem came to Bethulia with al the elders, that they might se Judith.

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they began all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worthyp of the city of Jerusalem thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of our people, thou haste doone manly, and thy herte is comforted, bycause thou haste loued clenlynelle and chastitie, and hast knowen no man but thyne owne husband: therfore hath the hand of the Lorde comforted the, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And al people sayd: so be it, so be it.

C In thyrtye dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had ben his specyally (whether it were of gold, of syluer, of precious stones clothyng and all ornamētes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, bothe women, maydens, and yong people, with pipes and harpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victory. After the victorye obtayned, the people commeth to Jerusalem, to worthyp and prayse God.

CAPI. XVI.

THen songe Judith this songe vnto the Lorde: Begin vnto the Lorde vpon ỳ tabzettes, syng vnto the Lorde vpō the cymbales. O sing vnto him a newe songe of thankesgyuing, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. It is the Lorde ỳ destroyeth warres, euen the Lorde is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the middest of his people, ỳ he myght deliuer vs from the hand of al our ennemyes. Assur came out of the mountayns in the multitude of his strengthe. His people stopped the water brookes, and their horses couered ỳ valeys. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, and to slee my yonge men with the swerde. A Psalm.xlv.b Judi.viii.

He wolde haue caryed awaye my childzen and virgyns in to captyuitie, but the almyghty Lorde hurt hym, and delyuered him in to the hādes of a woman, whiche brought hym to confusyon. For theyr myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slewe him, neyther haue the greate gyauntes set them selues agaynst hym: but Judith the doughter of Merari with her fayre beauty haue discomfeted hym, and broughte hym to nought. For she layd awaye her wydowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnelle in the reioysing of the chyldzen of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bounde vp her heere in an houe, to begyle hi. Her slyppers rauisched his eyes, her beautye captyuated his mynde, with the swerde smote the of his necke. The Persiās were astonyed at her stedfastnelle, & the Medes at her boldnelle. Then howled ỳ armies of the Assirians, when my symple appeared, dyre of thurst. B Judi.x Judi.xiii

The sonnes of the doughters haue perised them thorowe, and slayne them as fugityue chyldzen: they perysched in the battayle, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgyuynge vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of prayse wyll we syng vnto our God. Lord Lord, thou art a great God, myghty in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shoulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made, thou sentest thy spirite, and they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountayues shal moue from the foundacyons with the waters, the stony rockes shal melt before the like ware. But they that feare the, shall be greate with the in all thynges. Woo vnto the people that ryse vp agaynste my generacion, for the almyghtye Lorde wyll auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyl he visyt them. For he shal gyue fyre and wormes in to their flesshe, that they may burne and fele it for euermore. C Gene.i Psal.cxxii. Psalm.cxlviii.

After this it happened that after the victorye, all the people came to Jerusalem to giue prayse & thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purified, they offred al their brent sacrifices, and their promysed offriges. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all the iewels that the people had gyuen her, and the canapye that she toke frome his bed, and D and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyful as the vse is: and this ioy by reason of the victorye with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euerye man wente home agayne, and Judith was in great reputacion at Bethulia, and ryght honourablye taken in al the land of Israel. Unto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses died, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hye solemne dayes she went out with great worshyp. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yere, and lefte her handemayden free and dyed, and was buryed beside her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and manye yeres also after her deathe.

The daye wherin this victorye was gotten, was solemnely holden and reckened of the Iewes, in the nombre of the holye dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the iewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XI.

After the latyne.

MArdocheus the son of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cilei of the tribe of Benjamin, a Iewe, whiche hadde his dwellynge in Sulis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte. (Neuertheleſſe, he was one of the prysoners whō Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias ꝑ kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of greate Artaxerxes, in the fyrſt daye of the moneth Nisan, hadde this Mardocheus suche a dreame: he thoughte he herde a greate tempest, horrible thonderclappes, erthquakes, and greate vprore in the land: and that he saw two great dragons redy to fyght one against an other. Theyr crye was greate: At the whiche roryng and crye, all Heathen were vp to fight agaynſte the ryghtous people. And the same daye was full of darckeneſſe, and verye vnclere, ful of trouble and anguyth, yea a great fearefulneſſe was there in all the land. The ryghtous were amased, for they feared the plage and euyll that was deuyſed ouer them and were at a poynte with thē ſelues to dye. So they cryed vnto God, & whyle they were cryeng, the lytle wel grewe in to a great ryuer, and in to many waters, and with that it was daye, and the ſunne roſe vp agayne, And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured ꝑ gloryous and proude.

Now whē Mardoche had ſene this dreme he awoke, and muſed ſtedfaſtly in his herte, what God wold do: & ſo he deſired to know all the mater, and his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

Mardocheus bitreth the treaſō deuyſed againſt the kynge, and is therfore rewarded of him.

CAPI. XII.

AT the ſame tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares the kynges chamberlayns and porters of the palace. But when he herde their deuyce, and had diligently conſydred theyr ymaginacyons, he perceyued that they wente aboute to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxerxes, and ſo he certified the king therof. Then cauſed the kynge to examyn the two gelded with tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to deth.

This the kyng caused to be put in the Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kyng commaunded þ Mardocheus shold B do seruyce in þ court, & for this faythfulnes of his, he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holdē in great honour & reputacion in þ kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people, bycause of þ two chamberlaynes that were put to deth.

¶ The copye of the leters of Artarerres, agaynst the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XIII.

A The great kyng Artarerres which rayneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and .xxvij. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the princes and deputyes of the countreys, which be subiect vnto his dominiō. Whē I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the hole erth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte my self by the reason of my power: but purposed with equitie alwaye and gentlenesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction and holly toset them in a peaceable life, and therby to bryngе my kyngdome vnto tranquillitie, that men myght safely go thorowe on euery syde, and to renue peax agayne, whiche all men desyre. Hestr. i. a ii. Hest. vii. a

B Now when I asked my counsellers howe these thynges myghte be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs excellent in wysdome, whose good wyll, truthe, and faythfulnesse hathe ofte bene shewed and proued, (whiche was also the principall and next vnto the kynge) Aman by name: whiche certyfyed vs, howe that in all landes there was crepte in a rebellyous folke that make statutes and lawes against al other people, and haue alwayes despysed the, proclaymed commaundementes of kynges, and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred that such rule shoulde contynue by you, and not to be put downe.

C Seynge now we perceyue the same, þ this people alone are contrarye vnto euery man, vsyng straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes and doynges, and go about to stablish shrewde matters, that our kyngdome sholde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therfore haue we commaunded, that al they that are appoynted in writing, & shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordeyned and set ouer all oure busynesse, and the moost principall next vnto the king, and in maner as a father) shall with their wyues and chyldren be destroyed and roted out with the swerde of theyr ennemyes and aduersaryes: and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shal be done in þ fourteenth day of the moneth called Adar, of this yere that they which of old (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellyous, maye in one daye with violence, be thruste downe in to the hell, to the intent that after this maner our empyre maye haue peax and tranquillitie.

D But Mardocheus thoughte vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lord, & made his prayer vnto hym, saying: O Lord Lord thou valyaunt and almyghty kynge, for all thynges are in thy power, and yf thou wylte helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mā that can withstāde ne let the: for thou hast made heuen and erth, and what wonderous thyng so euer is vnder the heuen: thou arte Lorde of all thynges, and there is no man that can resyst the, o Lorde. Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, that it was neyther of malice, ne presumpcion, nor for any desire of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, and that with good wyll, yf it myghte haue done Israel any good, to haue kyst euen his fotesteppes) but þ I dyd it bycause I wolde not set the honoure of a man in the stede of the glorye of God, and bycause I wolde worshyp none but onely the my Lorde. And this haue I done in no pride ne presumpcion.

E And therfore, O Lorde, thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they ymagin how they may bringe vs to nought, yea, theyr mynde and delyre is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe the people that hathe euer ben thyne inheritaūce of olde. O despyse not thy porcion whiche thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egypte for thyne owne self. Heare my prayer, and be mercyful vnto thy people, whom thou hast chosē for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complaynt and sorowe in to ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in like maner cryed as ernestly as they could vnto the Lorde, for theyr death and destruction stode before theyr eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther, for the delyueraunce of her and her people.

CAPI. XIIII.

Quene Esther also being in the batell A of deth, resorted vnto the Lord, layd awaye her gorgyous apparell, & put on the garmētes that serued for lighyng and mournyng. In the stede of precious oyntment, she scatred asshes and dong vpon her heed: and as for her body, she humbled it and brought it very low. All þ places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she with the tearyng of her heere. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israell, with these wordes.

O my

O my Lorde, thou only art our kyng, helpe me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but the, for my mysery & destruction is hard at my hād. Fro my youth vp I haue herd out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonges al people, and so haue our fathers of their fore elders, þ they shold be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, & loke what thou dyddest promyse them, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Nowe, well Lorde, we haue synned before the, therfore hast thou gyuen vs in to the handes of oure ennemyes, bycause we worshypped theyr goddes. Lorde thou art ryghtous. Neuertheles it satisfyeth them not, that we are in bytter and heuye captiuitie, and oppressed amonges theym, but thou haste layde theyr handes vpon the handes of theyr goddes: so that they begyn to take awaye the thynge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted: to destroye thyne enheritaunce, to shut and to stop the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quenche the glorye & worshyp of thy house and thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the heathē, that they maye prayse the power and vertue of þ goddes, and to magnifye the fleshely kynge for euer.

O Lorde, gyue not thy scepter vnto them þ be nothynge, leest they laugh vs to scorne in our mysery and fall: but turne their deuice vpon them selues, and punyth hym that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thynke vpon vs, o Lorde, and shew thy selfe in the tyme of oure distresse, and of oure trouble. Strengthe me, o thou kynge of goddes, thou Lorde of al power, gyue me an eloquent and pleasaunt speche in my mouthe before the lyon. Tourne his herte in to the hate of our ennemye, to destroye hym, and al suche as consent vnto hym. But delyuer vs with thy hand, and helpe me desolate womā whiche haue no defence nor helper but onely the. Lorde thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worshyp of the vnrightous, and that I hate & abhorre the bedde of the vncircumcysed, and of all heathen.

Thou knowest and wotest my necessitie, that I hate the token of my preemynence, and worshyp, whiche I beare vpon my heed, what tyme as I muste shewe my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferynges, and that I thy handemayden haue hadde no ioye sence the daye that I was broughte hyther, vnto this daye, but onely in the o Lorde. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God aboue al: heare the voyce of them that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs oute of the hande of the wycked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Hester to go in to the kynge, and make intercessyon for her people, and she performeth his request.

CAPI. XV.

A And vpon the thyrde daye it happened that Hester layd awaye the mourning garmentes, and put on her glorious apparell, and decked her selfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, whiche is the beholder and sauyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her beautye made her face rose coloured. The symilitude of her face was cherefull and amiable, but her hert was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sate vpon the trone of his kingdome, & was clothed in his goodly araye all of golde, and set with precyous stones, and he was very terrible. He lyfte vp his face that shone in the clerenesse, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the quene downe, was pale and fayut, leaned her selfe vpon the heed of the mayde that went with her. A i. Hest. v. a

B Neuertheles God tourned the kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he lepte out of his seat for fear, and gat her in his armes and helde her vp, tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He haue her louyng wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the mater? I am thy brother, be of good chere, thou shalte not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the commons, not the. Come nye. And with þ he held vp his golden wand, and layd it vpō her necke, and embraced her frendly, & sayd: talke with me. Then sayd she: I sawe the, o Lorde, as an aungell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clerenesse. For excellent and wonderful art thou, o Lord, and thy face is ful of amitie. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the whiche cause the kynge was afrayde, and all his seruauntes comforted her. B Prouer. xii. b

¶ The coppy of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those which he fyrste sent forth.

CAPI. XVI.

A The great king Artaxerxes, which rayngneth from India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred and. xxvii. landes sendeth vnto the princes & rulers of the same landes suche as loue hym, his frendly salutacyon. There be many þ for the sondry frendshyppes and benefytes, whiche are dyuersly done vnto theym for theyr worshyp, be euer the more proude and hye minded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes, for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffre, and begyn to ymagyn some thynge agaynste those that do them good, and take not only all vnthankfulnes away from men, but in pryde & presumpcion (as they that be vnmindful and vnthankful for ꝑ good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God that seith al thinges, which (iudgement) hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth oft also, that they whiche be set in office by ꝑ hyer power, and vnto whom the busines and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled ware proude, & defile them selues with sheding of innocent bloude, which bringeth thē to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceytfull wordes, and with lyinge tales, disceyue and betraye the innocent goodnesse of princes.

B Now is it profitable & good, that we take hede, make serch therafter, and consider not onely what hathe happened vnto vs of olde, but the shameful, vnhonest, & noysom thinges that the deputies haue now taken in hand before our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ꝑ we may make the kyngdom quyet and peaceable for al men, and that we might somtyme draw it to a chaūge: and as for the thing that now is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude and farre from oure goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an alyaunte, and hadde obteyned the frendshyp that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called our father, and hadde in hye honoure of everye man, as the nexte and pryncipall vnto the kyng, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to rob vs of the kyngdome, but of our lyfe. Hester.iii.a

With manyfolde disceyte also hath he desyred to destroy Mardochey our helper and C preseruer, whiche hathe done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Hester the lyke partaker of our kyngdome with all our people. For his mynde was (when ye had take them out of the way, & robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdom of the Persians vnto thē of Macedonia. But we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wicked, ꝑ they might be destroied) are no euil doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes, & that they be the childzen of ꝑ most hye liuing God, by whom the kyngdome of vs, and our progenitours hath ben wel ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forth by Aman ꝑ son of Amadathu, ye shal do wel yf ye hold them of none effect: for he ꝑ set them vp and inuēted them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, and God (which hath al thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruyng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp ꝑ copy of this letter in all places, ꝑ the Jewes D maye frely and withoute hindraunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, & that they maye be helped, and that vpon the .xiij. day of the .xij. moneth Adar, they may be auēged of them, which in ꝑ time of their anguish and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges hath turned to ioye the day wherin the cholen people shold haue perished.

Moreouer among the hye solemne dayes ꝑ ye haue, ye shall hold this daye also with all gladnesse: that now, and in time to com this day may be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persiās: but a remembraunce of destruction to those ꝑ be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this, shal horribly perysshe and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabyted of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

THE BOOKE OF VVYSDOME.

¶ How we oughte to searche and enquyre after God, and who be those that fynde him. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from backbityng and murmurynge. &c.

CAPI. I.

A Set youre affection vpon wysdome, ye that be iudges of the erath. Haue a good opynyon of the Lord and seke him in the singlenesse of herte. For he wyll be fownd of them that tempt him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. But the frowarde thoughtes they seperate from God, and vertue (if it be alowed) reboumeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ne dwell in the body that is subued vnto synne. For the holye ghost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, and withdraweth hym self from the thoughtes that are wit hout vnderstandynge: and where wickednesse hath the vpperhande, he fleeth from thence. For the spirite of wysdom is louyng, gentle and gracious, and wyll haue no pleasur in him that speaketh euyll with his lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of his reynes, a true sercher oute of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spirite of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and the same that vpholdeth al thinges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

Therefore he that speaketh vnrygh tous thynges, can not be hyd, neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reprofe. And why? inquision shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punyshed. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges, shall not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmurynge, whiche is nothynge worth and refrayne youre tonge frome sclaundre. For here is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for nought: & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

D Seke not youre owne death in the errour of your lyfe, destroye not your selues thorow the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue their beynge: yea all the people of the earth hath he made that they should haue health, that there should be no destruction in them, and þ the kyngdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for ryghtousnesse is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnryghtousnesse byngeth death.) Neuertheles, the vngodly call her vnto them, bothe with wordes and workes, and whyle they thynche to haue a frende of her, they come to nought: for þ vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte: are worthy of death.

¶ The ymaginacyons and deuyces of the wycked, and theyr counsell agaynst the faythfull.

CAPI. II.

FOr the vngodly talke and ymagin, thus among them selues (but not ryght) The tyme of our life is but shorte and tedyous, and when a man is onse gone, he hath no more ioye ne pleasure, neither know we any man that turneth agayne frome death for we are borne of nought and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breth is a smoke in our nostrels, and the wordes as a sparcke to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shall be very ashes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanysh as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to nought as the mysle that is dryuen awaye with the beames of the sunne, and put downe with the heate therof. Our name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle and no man shal haue our workes in rem embrauce. A Job.vii.a Math.xxii.b 1.Corint.xv.a

B For oure tyme is a very shadow that passeth awaye, and after our ende, there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs entoye the pleasures that be presente, and let vs soone vse þ creature lyke as in youth. We wyll fyll oure selues with good wyne and oyntment, there shall no floure of the tyme go by vs. We wyll crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. There shall be no fayre medow, but our lust shal go thorow it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptousnesse. Let vs leaue some token of oure pleasure in euery place, for that is oure porcyon, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore ryghtous, let vs not spare the wydow ne old man, let vs not regarde þ heedes that are gray for age. B ii.Para.xxx.c Esay.xxii.b and.xvi.c Sapie.v.b

Let the lawe of vnryghtousnesse be oure auctorytye, for the thynge that is feble is nothynge worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghtous, and why? he is not for our profyt, yea he is cleane contrary to our doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynste the lawe, and sklaundreth vs as traiigressoures of all nurtoure. He maketh his booste to haue the knowledge of God, yea he calleth hym selfe Gods sonne. He is þ bewrayer of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of an other fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne persõs, he withdraweth him self from oure wayes as from fylthynesse: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his booste that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be trewe, let vs proue what shall come vpon him: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. C Jeh.vii.a Esay.liii.a

For yf he be the true sonne of God, he D wyll

wyll receyue hym and delyuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examen hym with despytefull rebuke and tormentynge, ꝑ we may know his dignite, and proue his pacience. Let vs condemne hym with the moste shamefull deathe: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodly ymagyn, and go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for the myseryes of God, they vnderstand them not: they neyther hope for the rewarde of ryghtousnesse, ne regarde the worshyp that holy soules shall haue. For God created man to be vndestroyed, yea after the ymage of his owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuertheles, thorow enuye of the deuyll, came deathe vnto ꝑ worlde, and they that holde of his syde, do as he doth.

CAPI. III.

A But the soules of the ryghteous are in ꝑ handes of God, and the payne of deathe shall not touche them. In the syght of the vnwyse they appeare to dye, and theyr ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the ryghtous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And thoughe they suffre payne before men, yet is theyr hope ful of immortalyte. They are punysshed but in fewe thinges, neuertheles, in many thinges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hym selfe: yea as the golde in the fornace doeth he trye them, and receyueth them as a brente offrynge, and when the tyme commeth: they shall be loked vpon.

Who so despyseth wysdome and nurture, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, their laboures vnfruteful, and theyr workes vnprofitable. Theyr wyues are vndiscrete, and theyr chyldren moost vngodly. Theyr creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, whiche hathe not knowen the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche with his handes hath wrought no vnryghtousnesse, ne ymagined wycked thynges agaynst God. For vnto hym shall be gyuen the specyall gyfte of fayth, and the moste acceptable porcyon in ꝑ temple of God. For gloryous is the frute of

As for the chyldren of aduoutrers, they shal come to an ende, & the sede of an vnryghtous bed shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothynge regarded and theyr last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, neyther shal they be spoken to in the day of knowledge. For horrible is the deathe and ende of the vnryghtous.

¶ Of the chaste generacion of the faythfull, and of their felycytye. Of the death of the ryghtous and of the condempnacion of the vnfaythfull.

CAPI. IIII.

O howe fayre is a chaste generacyon wt vertue? The memoryall therof is immortall, for it is knowen with good men. When it is present, men take example therat: and yf it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayle. But ꝑ multytude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofytable, and the thynges that are plãted with horedome, shal take no depe rote, ne laye any fast foundacion. Thoughe they be grene in the braunches for a tyme, yet shal they be shaken with the wynde for they stand not fast, and thorow the vehemence of the wynde they shall be roted out. For the vnperfect braunches shall be broken, their frute shal be vnprofytable and sowre to eat, yea mete for nothynge. And why? all the chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare recorde of the wyckednesse agaynste their fathers and mothers, whẽ they be asked. But though the ryghtous be ouertaken wt death yet shall he be in rest.

Jerem.xii.b Malach.i.a
Matth.viii.c

Age is an honourable thynge. Neuertheles it standeth not only in the length of time ne the multytude of yeares: but a mans wisdome is the graye heer, and an vndefiled life is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonges synners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he taken away, to the intent that wickednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandynge, and that ypocrelye shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewytchyng of lyes make good thinges darcke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wickednesse of volouptuous desyre turne aside the vnderstandynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he moch tyme. For his soule pleased God therfore hasted he to take hym awaye fro̅ amonges the wycked. This the people se and vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thinges in theyr hertes, how that the louing fauoure and mercye of God is vpon his saintes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

B Age.

Hebr.xi.a

Thus the ryghtous that is deed, condemneth the vngodly whiche are lyuynge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstand not what God hath deuised for him, & wherefore fore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therfore shall God also laugh them to scorne: So þ they them selues shall dye here after (but without honoure) yea in shame amonge the dead for euermore. For withoute any doyce, shall he burst those that be put vp, & remoue them from the foundacyons, so that thy shal be layed waste vnto the hyest. They shall mourne, and their memoryall shall perysshe. So they beyng afrayed shall remembre their synnes, and their owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

¶ The constauntnesse of the ryghtous before their persecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The blessednesse and fortunatenesse of the sayntes and godly.

CAPI. V.

THen shall þ ryghtuous stande in greate stedfastnesse, agaynste suche as haue dealt extremely with them, and taken awaye their laboures. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horryble feare, and shall wonder at the hastynesse of the sodayn helth: gronyng for very destresse of mynde, and shal saye within them selues, bauynge inwarde sorow, and mournyng for very anguysshe of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derisyon, & iested vpon. We fooles thought their lyfe very madnesse, and their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are coũted among þ chyldren of God, and their portyon is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, the lyghte of ryghtousnesse hathe not shyned vnto vs, and the sunne of vnderstandyng, rose not vp vpon vs. We haue weryed our selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but the way of the Lorde we haue not knowen.

What good hath our pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hath the pompe of rychesse brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messenger renynge before: as a shyp that passeth ouer the waues of water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, neither the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorow the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is flowen, but only heareth the noyce of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemence of her flyghte, and flyeth on shakynge her wynges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a marcke, it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth togyther agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it went thorow. Euen so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, began immediatlye to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse.

Such wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a dyse thistell floure (or dust) þ is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke as thyn scom that is scatered abrode with the storme, lyke as the smoke whiche is dispersed here and there with the wynde, & as the remembraunce of a straunger that tarryeth for a daye, & then departeth. But the ryghtous shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lorde: and their remembraunce w the hyghest. Therfore shal they receyue a gloryous kyngdome and a beautyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his right hãd shall he couer thẽ, and with his owne arme shall he defende them. His gelousy also shall take harnesse, and shall arme the creature to be auenged of the enemyes. He shall put on ryghtousnesse for a brest plate, and take sure iudgement in stede of an helmet. The inuincible shylde of equitie shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the hole compasse of the world shall fyght with hym agaynst the vnwyse.

Then shall the thonder boltes go oute of the lyghtenynges, and come out of the rayn-bowe of the cloudes to the place appoynted out of the harde stony indignacion there shal fall thycke hayles, and the water of the see shal be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly togyther. Yea a myghtye wynde shall stande vp agaynst them, and a storme shall scatre them abrode. Thus the vnryghtous dealynge of them shall bringe all the lande to a wyldernes, and and wyckednesse shall ouerthrow the dwellynges of the myghtye.

¶ The callinge of kynges, Princes, and Iudges: whiche are also exhorted to search wysdome.

CAPI. VI.

WYsdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one that is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstand: O lerne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earthe. Gyue eare ye that rule the multytudes, and delyte in moche people. For the power is gyuen you of the Lord, & the strength from the hyghest: whiche shall trye youre workes & serche out youre ymagynacions. How that ye beynge officers of his kyngdom, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghtousnes, nor walked after his wyll. Horrybly and that ryght soone shal he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorytye shal be sore punyshed. For God whiche is Lorde ouer all, shall except no mans person, neither shal he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse: for he hathe made the small and greate, and careth for all alike. But the myghtye shal haue the sorer punishment.

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake speake, that we may lerne wysdome and not go amysse: for they that kepe ryghteousnesse, shall be ryghteously iudged: and they that are lerned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherefore set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtour. Wysdome is a noble thyng, and neuer fadeth awaye: yea she is easely sene of them þ loue her, and found of such as seke her.

C She preuenteth them that desyre her, that she may fyrst shew her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her bytymes, shall haue no great trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttyng redye at his dores. To thynke vpon her, is parfect vnderstanding, and who so watcheth for her, shall be sake, and that soone. For she goeth aboute, seekynge suche as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cheerefully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meeteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of reformacyon is her begynnynge: to care for nurtoure is loue, and loue is the keepynge of her lawes. Now the keepyng of lawes is perfection and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familyer with God. And so the desyre of wysdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge.

Mom. xiii. b

D If youre delyte be then in royall seates and cepters (O ye kynges of the people) let youre lust vpō wysdome, that ye may raygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wysdom, all ye that be rulers of þ people. As for wysdome what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natyuytye, and bringe the knowledge of her in to lyght, and wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neither wyl I haue to do with consumyng enuye, for such a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wyse, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vpholdyng of the people. O receyue nurtoure thē thorow my wordes, & it shal do you good.

I My selfe also am a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashyoned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes, was I brought togyther in blood, thorow the sede of man, and þ commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne, I receyued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) cryinge and weppynge at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and brought vp with greate cares. For ther is no kyng that hath had any other begynnyng of byrth. B Wherefore I desyred, and vnderstandynge was gyuen me: I called, & the spirite of wysdome came into me. I set more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparyson of her. As for precyous stone I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but claye before her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beauty and purposed to take her for my lyghte, for her shyne can not be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, and innumerable ryches thorowe her handes. I was glad in them all, for this wysdome went before me, and I knewe not that she is my mother of al good thynges. Nowe as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches from no mā for she is an infynyte treasure vnto men, whiche who so vse, becom partakers of the loue and frendshyp of God, and are exrepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, & C conuenyently to handle the thynges that he hath gracyously lent me. For it is he þ ledeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdom a ryght. In his hande are we and oure wordes, yea all oure wysdome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of al our workes. For he hath gyuen me the true sycence of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes the begynnynge, endyng and myddest of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, how one goeth after an other, and how they are fulfilled the course of the yeare: the ordynaunces of the starres: the natures and kyndelle of beastes: the furyousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes by the ymagynacyons of men: the dyuersityes of yonge plantes, the vertues of rotes, and all such thynges as are secret and not loked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thynges hath taught me wysdome.

Sapien. ii. c

D In her is the spirite of vnderstādyng, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll outeous, discrete, quyck, vndefyled, plaine, swete, louinge, the thynge that is good, sharpe, which forbyddeth not to doo well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, free: hauyng al vertues, circumspecte in all thynges, receyuynge all spirites of vnderstandynge beynge cleane & sharpe. For wysdom is nymbler then al nimble thynges: she goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges, because of her clennes. For she is the breth of the power of God, & a pure cleane expressyng of the cleerenesse of almyghty God. Therefore can no vndefyled thynge come vnto her: for she is the byghtenesse of the euerlastynge lyght, the vndefyled myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse.

And for so moch as she is one, she may do al thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she renueth all, and amonge the people conueyeth she her selfe in to the holy soules. ¶ The effectes of wysdome.

CAPI VIII.

A Wysdome reacheth from one ende to an other myghtyly, and louyngly doth she ordre all thynges. I haue loued her and laboured for her euen fro my youth vp: I did my diligence to marry my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilite, yea the Lorde of all thynges him selfe, loue her. For she is the scholemaistresse of the nurtour of God, and chefe ouer his workes. If a man wold desyre ryches in this life: what is rycher then wysdome, that worketh all thynges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstanding worketh. What is it among all thinges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hathe greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobrenesse and prudence, ryghtousnesse and strength, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothinge more profytable in theyr lyfe.

B If a man desyre moche knowledge, she can tell the thynges that are past, and dyscerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the subtyltyes of wordes, and can expounde darke sentences. She can tell of tokens & wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the endes of al tymes & ages. So I purposed after this manet: I wyll take her vnto my company, and cõmen louingly with her no doubt, she shall gyue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse and greefe. For her sake shall I be wel and honestly taken, amonge the cõmens and lordes of the cõsell. Though I be young, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so that I shall be meruelous in the syght of greate men, and the faces of Princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure: when I speake, they shall loke vpon me: and yf I talke moch, they shal laye theyr handes vpon theyr mouth.

Moreouer by the meanes of her, I shall obtayne immortalytye, and leaue behynde me an euerlastyng memorial, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacyons shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyraunces shal be afrayed, whe they do but heare of me: amonge the multitude I shall be counted good, and myghtye in battayl. When I come home, I shal finde rest with her: for her companye hath no bytternes, & her felowshyp hath no tedyousnesse, but mirth and ioye.

C Now when I consydered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is immortalytye, & great pleasure to haue her frendshyp: how that in the workes of her handes are infynyte ryches: how that, who so kepeth cõpany with her shall be wyse: and that he whiche talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I went about sekynge, to get her vnto me. For I was a chylde of a type wit, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But when I grew to more vnderstanding I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheselfe when I perceyued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that was a poynt of wisdom also to know whose gyfte it was) I stepte vnto the Lorde, and besought hym, and with my hole hert I said after this maner. Iacob.i.b Chastitye.

CAPI. IX.

A O God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast made all thinges with thy worde, and ordeyned mã thorow thy wysdome, that he shulde haue dominion ouer the creature whiche thou hast made: that he shulde ordre the worlde accordyng to equite and ryghtousnes, and execute iudgement with a true herte) gyue me wysdome whiche is euer about thy seat: and put me not out from amonges thy chyldren: for I thy seruaunt and son of thy handmayden am a feble personne of a short tyme, and to yonge to the vnderstandynge of iudgement, and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge the chyldren of men, yet yf thy wysdome be not with hym, he shal be nothyng regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, & the iudge of thy sonnes and doughters. iii. Reg. iii. d Gen. i. c 1. Para. xxix. b

B Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mount, and an aulter in the cytye wherin thou dwellest: a lykenes of thy holy tabernacle which thou hast prepared from the begynnynge, and thy wisdome with the whiche knoweth thy workes. which also was with the, when thou madest the worlde, and knew what was acceptable in thy syght, and ryght in thy commaundementes. O sende her out of thy holy heauens and from the trone of thy maiestye, that she maye be with me, and laboure with me: that I may know, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth al thinges: and she shall leade me sobrelye in my workes, and preserue me in her power. So shal my workes be acceptable, and then shal I goueme thy people tightously, & be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that may knowe the counsayle of God? Or who can thynke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortal men are myserable, & oure forecastes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall and corruptyble body is heuy vnto the soule and the eart hy mansion keepeth downe the vnderstandynge that museth vpon many thynges. CAPI. X.

A Wysdome preserued the fyrst man, whom Gene.i.d and.ii.d God made a father of the worlde, whē he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, toke hym out of the moulde of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thynges.

Ge.vi.vii.viii worlde, wysdome preserued the ryghteous thorowe a poore tree, wherof she was gouerner her selfe. Moreouer when wyckednesse had gotten the vpper hande, so that the nacyons were puft vp with pryde, she knewe the ryghtous, preserued him faultlesse vnto God, and Gene.xvi.c layed vp sure mercy for his children. She preserued the ryghteous, when he fled from the
B vngodly that perysshed, what tyme as ꝑ fyre fell downe vpon the fyue cyties: Lyke as yet this daye ꝑ vnfruteffull, waste, and smokyng land gyueth testimony of theyr wyckednesse: yea the vnrype and vntymely frutes ꝑ grow vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pyller of salt. For all such as regarded not wysdom gat not only this hurte, that they knew not the thynges whiche were good, but also lefte behynde them vnto men, a memoryall of theyr foolyshnesse: so that in the thynges wherin they synned, they coulde not be hyd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shal

Gen.xix.viii.d When the vngodly fled because of his brothers wrath, wysdome led him the ryght waye, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made hym ryche in his labours, and brought to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In the disceytfulnesse of such as defrauded hym, she stode by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the enemyes, and defended him frō the disceyuers. She made him strong in battayll, and gaue hym the victorye, that and were auēged of their aduersaryes. Whē they were thirsty; they called vpon the, and water was gyuen them out of the rock, and their thyrst slaken out of the harde stone. For by the thynges, where thorowe their ennemyes were punyshed, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the ennemyes thou gauest mans bloude in stede of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenes in ꝑ rebuke when the chyldren were slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnlooked for declarynge by the thyrste that was at ꝑ tyme, how thou woldest brynge thyne owne vnto honoure, and slaye their aduersaryes.

For when they were tryed and nourtured B Deute.viii.
with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished thorow ꝑ wrath of God. These hast ꝑ exhorted as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kynge, layd harde to their charge, and condemned them. Whether they were absent or present, theyr punyshment was alyke. For their greefe was double: namely, mourynge, and the remembraunce of thynges past. But when they perceyued that their punyshmentes dyd them good, they thought vpon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at the last they helde moch of hym, of whome in the oute castyng they thoughte scorne, as of an abiecte.

For vnto the almyghty hand, that made the worlde of nought, it was not vnpossible to send among them an heape of beeres, or wod lyons, or cruell beestes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vnknowen, or spout fyre, or cast out a smokyng breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not only destroy them with hurtyng, but also kyll thē with their horrible syght. Yea without these beastes myght they haue ben slayne with one wynde, beyng persecuted of their owne workes, and scatred abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles thou hast ordred al thinges in D measure nombre and weight: for ꝓ hast euer had great strēgth and might, and who may wᵗ stand ꝓ power of thine arme? And why? like as the smal thing that the balaūce weyeth, so is the world before the: yea as a drop of the mornyng dewe, that falleth downe vpon the erth. Thou hast mercy vpon al, for thou hast power of al thinges, & makest the, as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, bycause they sholde amende. For thou louest al ꝓ things that are, and hatest none of them whome thou hast made: neither diddest thou ordeyn or make any thyng of euyl wyll.

How might any thinges endure, yf it were not thy wyll? Or how coulde any thynge be preserued, except it were called of the? But thou sparest al, for al are thine, o Lord, thou louer of soules

¶ The mercye of God towarde synners, the workes of God are vnreprouable. God gyueth leysure to repent vs.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde, how gracious and swete is thy spirite in all thynges? Therfore chastenest thou them measurably that go wrong, & warnest them concerning the thinges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them, o Lord, & exhortest them to leaue theyr wickednes, and put their trust in the. As for thole old inhabiters of thy holy land, ꝓ migh test not away with them, for they cōmytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as witch craft, sorcery and ydolatry: they slew their own children wout mercy, they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the blood: yea bicause of such abhominacions, misbileues & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of ꝓ desolat soules by the hādes of our fore fathers, that the land which thou louest aboue al other might be a dwelling for the children of God.

B Neuertheless thou sparedst them also, as men, & sendedst the forerunners of thine host euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle and litle. Not that thou wast vnhable to subdue the vngodly vnto the righteous in batell, or with cruell beastes, or with one roughe worde to destroye them together: But thy mynd was to dryue them out by litle & litle, gyuing them time and place to amend, knowing wel that it was an vnrighteous nacio, and wycked of nature, & that their thoughte myght neuer be altered: for it was a cursed sede from the begynnyng, and feared no mā: yet hast thou pardoned their sines. For who wil saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who wil stande agaynst thy iudgement? Or who wil come before thy face, an auēger of vnrighteous men? Or who wil blame ꝓ, yf C the people perysshe whome thou hast made? For there is none other God but thou, that carest for all thinges: that ꝓ mayste declare 1. Petri. v. o how ꝓ thy iudgement is not vnryght: there dare neither kyng ne tyraunt in thy syght requyre accomptes of them whom thou hast destroyed.

For so moch then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghtously, & Iob. xx. 6 punyshest euen hym that haue not deserued to be punished, and takest hym for a straunger and an alyaūt in the land of thy power. For thy power is the begynnyng of righteousnesse: and bicause thou art Lorde of al thinges, therfore art ꝓ gracious vnto all. When men thynke the not to be of a full strengthe, thou declarest thy power, and boldly deliverest thou ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lord of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest vs with great worshyp, for thou maist do as thou wylt.

By such workes now hast thou taught thy D people, that a man also sholde be iust and louynge, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgest, thou gyuest rowme to amend from synnes. For in so moche as thou hast punished, and wᵗ such diligence deliuered ꝓ enemies of thy seruauntes which were worthy to dye (wherthorow thou gauest them tyme and place of amendment, that they might turne frō their wicked nesse) with how great diligence then punyshest thou thyne owne children vnto whose fathers thou hast swore and made couenaūtes of good promyses? so where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punishest our ennemyes dyuers wayes, to the intent ꝓ when we punish, we shold remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punished, to put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherfore where as men haue lyued ignoE raūtly and vnrighteously thou hast punished them sore, euē thorow the same thynges that Sapien. xi. 8 they worshipped: for they went astray very Roma. i. c long in the way of errour, and held the beastes (which euen their ennemies despised) for goddes, lyuyng as children of no vnderstādyng. Therfore hast thou sent a scornful punishment among them, as among the childre of ignorauncе. As for suche as wolde not be reformed by those scornes & rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffred, they bare them vnpacientlye, being not content in them, but vnwillyng. And whē they perished by the same thiges that they toke for goddes, they knowleged then that there was but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came the ende of their damnacion vpon them.

¶ All thynges be vayne, except the knowledge of God. Idolatrers and Idols are mocked.

CAPI. XIII.

A VAyne are all men, whiche haue not the knewlege of God: as were they that out of the good thiges, which are sene knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euerlastynge. Neyther toke they so moche regarde of the wozkes þ are made, as to knowe who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fire, some the wind oz ayze, some course of the sterres, some the water, some toke sun and moone, oz the lyghtes of heauen, whiche rule the earth foz goddes. But thoughe they had suche pleasure in their beauty, that they thought them to haue ben goddes, yet sholde they haue knowen howe moche moze fayzer he is that made them: foz the maker of beauty hath ozdeyned al these thinges. Oz if they marueled, at the power and wozkes of them they shoulde haue perceyued therbye that he whiche made these thinges is myghtyer then they.

Romans.i.c Vayne philosophers.

B Foz by the greatnes and beauty of the creature, þ maker therof may plainly be knowē. Notwithstanding they are the lesse to be blamed that sought God, and wold haue found him, and yet missed, and why? foz in as moch as they went about in his wozkes, & sought after them, it is a token that they regarded & held moche of his wozkes that are sene, how be it, they are not holly to be excused. Foz yf their vnderstandinge and knowlege was so great, that they coulde discerne the wozld & the creatures, why dyd they not rather fynd out the Lozde therof.

Romans.i.c

But vnhappy are they, and among þ deed is their hope that call them goddes, whiche are but the wozkes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thing that is found out by cūning, the similitude of beestes, oz any vayne stone that hath ben made by hand of old. Oz as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wod, and pareth of the barke of it cunnyngly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dzesseth meate with the residue. As foz þ other part that is left, whiche is profitable foz nothing (foz it is a croked pece of wod and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thozow his vanitie, and accozding to the knowlege of his cunninge, he giueth it some propozcion, facioneth it after þ similitude of a man, oz maketh it like some beest, streketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is i it, he casteth some colour vpon it.

He mocketh the ydolaters.

C Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle foz it, setteth it i the wal, and maketh it fast with yron, prouiding so foz it, lest it happen to fall, foz it is well knowen that it can not helpe it selfe. And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessitie be helped.

ymages.

D Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it, foz his childzen, and foz his wife, he seketh helpeth at it, he asketh counsel at it, he is not ashamed to speke vnto it that hath no soule, foz helth: he maketh his peticion vnto him that is syk, foz life: he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him foz helpe, that is not hable to helpe hym selfe, & to send hym a good iourney, he prayeth hym þ maye not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to obteyn any thyng oz to wozk) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

¶ The detestation and abhomination of ymages. A curse of them and of him that maketh them. The euyls that come of Idolatrye.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Gayne, an other man purposynge to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thozow the ragyng see, calleth foz helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weyker thē the tree that beareth him. Foz as foz it couetousnesse of money hath founde it oute, & the craftesman made it with his connynge. But thy prouydence, o father, gouerneth all thinges from the begynning: foz thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure pathe in the middest of the waues: declarynge therby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yea thoughe a man went to the see without thyp. Neuertheselse that the wozkes of thy wysedome shoulde not be vayne, thou haste caused an arke to be made, and therfoze do men commyt theyr lyues to a small pece of wod, passynge ouer the see in a thyppe, and are saued.

Gen.vi.c

Foz in the olde tyme also when the proude gyaūtes perished, he (in whom the hope was left to encrease the wozld) went in to þ thyp which was gouerned thozow thy hand, and so lefte sede behynd him vnto the wozld. Foz happy is the tre where thozow ryghtoulnes commeth: but cursed is the ymage of wod, þ is made with handes, yea both it and he that made it. He bycause he made it: and it, bycause it was called God, where as it is but a fraple thynge. Foz the vngodly and his vngodlynesse are both like abhominable vnto God. Euen so the wozke and he that made it also shall be punyshed togyther. Therfoze shall there a plage come vpon the ymages of the heathen, foz oute of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare foz the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sekyng out of ymages is the begynnyng of hoozdom and the bzyngynge vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. Foz they were not from the beginning, neither shal they continue foz euer. The welthy ydlenesse of men hath found thē out vpon erth, therfoze shall they come shozt ly to an ende.

Gen.viii.d B

Psalm.c. and.cxv. Baruch.vi. Psalm.xcvi.

C When a father mourned foz his son þ was taken away frō hym, he made him an ymage (in al the hast) of his deed son, and so began to wozshyp him as a God, whiche was but a deed man, & ozdeyned his seruauntes to offre vnto hym. Thus by procesle of tyme, & thorowe yow longe cuſtome, this errour was kept as a lawe, and tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for thoſe þ were ſo farre of, that men myght not worſhip thē yelenely, their pycture was brought frome farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whom they wolde honour) to the intent that with great diligence they myghte worſhyp him, whiche was farre of, as thoughe he had ben preſent. Agayn, the ſynguler cunnyng of þ craftesmā gaue the ignorāunt alſo a greate occaſion to worſhyp ymages. For the worckemā wylling to doo him a pleaſure that ſet hym a worke, laboured with all his cunnynge to make the ymage of the beſt facion. And ſo, thorow the beauty of the worck, the common people was diſceyued, in ſo moche þ they toke him nowe for a God, whiche a lytle afore was but honoured as a man. And this was the errour of mans lyfe, when men (eyther for to ſerue theyr owne affection or to do ſome pleaſure vnto kynges) aſcribed vnto ſtones and ſtockes the name of God, which ought to be gyuen vnto no man.

Moreouer this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignorāunce, thoſe manye and greate plages called they peax. For eyther they ſlewe their owne childzen, and offred them and did ſacrifyce in the nyght ſeaſon, or els helde vnreaſonable watcyes: ſo that they kepte neyther lyfe ne maryage clene: but eyther one ſlewe an other to death maliciouſly, or els greued his neyghbour wᵗ aduoutrye. And thus were all thynges myxte togyther: bloude, manſlaughter, theefte, diſſimulacion, corrupcion, vnfaythfulneſſe, ſedicion, periurye, diſquietynge of good men, vnthankfulnes, defiling of ſoules, chaungyng of byrth, vnſtedfaſtnes of mariage, miſorder, of aduoutry and vnclēneſſe. And why? the honouryng of abhominable ymages is the cauſe, the begynnynge and end of all euil. For they that worſhip ydols, either they are mad when they are merye, or prophecy lyes, or liue vngodly, or els lightly forſwere thē ſelues: for in ſo moche as their truſt is in the ydols, which haue neither ſoule ne vnderſtanding, though they ſwere falſly, yet they thinke it ſhall not hurte them.

Therfore cōmeth a great plage vpon thē, and that worthely: for they haue an euil opiniō of God, giuing hede vnto ydols, ſwering vniuſtly to diſceyue, and deſpiſyng righteouſneſſe: for theyr ſwerynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that ſynne, & goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The voyce of the faythfull prayſyng the mercye of God, for whoſe graces ſake they ſerue not Idols.

CAPI. XV.

BVt thou, o our God, art ſwete, long ſuffervng and true, and in mercye ordereſt thou all thynges. ¶ thoughe we ſyn, yet are we thyne, for we know thy ſtrengthe. Yf we ſynne not, then are we ſure that thou regardeſt vs. For to know the, is perfect rygh touſneſſe: Yea to knowe thy ryghtouſneſſe and power, is the roote of immortalitie. As for the thynge that men haue founde out thorowe theyr euyll ſcyence, it hathe not diſceyued vs: as the payntynge of the pycture (an vnprofytable laboure) and carued ymage with dyuers colours, whoſe ſyght entyſeth the ignorāunte: ſo that he honoureth and loueth the pycture of a deed ymage that hath no ſoule.

Neuertheleſſe they that loue ſuch euil thinges are worthy of deth: they þ truſt in them they that make them, they that loue them, & they that honour them. The potter alſo taketh and tempereth ſofte earthe, laboureth it, and gyueth it the facion of a veſſell, what ſo euer ſerueth for our vſe: and ſo of one pece of claye he maketh ſome clene veſſell for ſeruyce, and ſome cōtrary. But where to euery veſſell ſerueth, that knoweth the potter hym ſelfe. So with his vayne labour he maketh a God of the ſame clay: this doth euen he whiche a lytle afore was made of erth hym ſelfe and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the erth agayne.

Notwithſtandynge he careth not the more bycauſe he ſhall labour, ne bycauſe his life is ſhorte but ſtryueth to excell goldſmythes, the ſyluerſmythes & copperſmythes, and taketh it for an honour to make vayne thynges. For his hert is aſches, his hope is but vayne erth, and his lyfe is more vyle then claye: for ſo moche as he knoweth not his owne maker, þ gaue hym his ſoule to worke, and breethed in hym the breethe of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a paſtyme, and oure conuerſacion to be but a market, and that men ſhoulde euer be gettynge, and that by euyll meanes. Nowe he that of earth maketh frayle veſſels and ymages, and knoweth hym ſelfe to offende aboue all other.

All the ennemyes of thy people and that holde them in ſubiection, are vnwyſe, vnhappye, and excedynge proude vnto theyr owne ſoules: for they iudge all the ydols of þ heathen to be goddes, which neyther haue ſyght to ſe, nor noſes to ſmel, ne eares to heare, nor fyngers of handes for to grope: and as for theyr fete, they are to ſlowe to goo: for man made them, & he þ hath but a borowed ſpirite facioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for ſeing he is but mortal him ſelfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. He him ſelfe is better then they whom he worſhippeth, for he lyued though he was mortal, but ſo did neuer they. Yea, they worſhyp beaſtes alſo, whiche are moſt miſerable: for compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, an they are worſe thē thoſe. Yet is there not one of theſe beaſtes þ with his ſight can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they gyuen prayſe ne thaukes vnto God.

¶ The iudgementes of God vpon the Egyptians.

CAPI. XVII.

G Reat are thy iudgemētes, o Lorde, and A Romaꝛ.d thy counſels can not be expreſſed, therfore men do erre, that wil not be reformed with thy wiſdom. For when the vnrigh- Exodi.x. tous thought to haue thy holy people in ſubiection, they were bound with the bandes of darkeneſſe and longe nyghte, ſhut vnder the rofe, thinking to eſcape the euerlaſtyng wiſdom. And whyle they thought to be hyd in ꝓ darkneſſe of their ſynnes, they were ſcatred abrode in the very myddeſt of the darke couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible feare and wonderouſly vexed for the corner wher they myghte not kepe them from feare: becauſe the ſound came down & vexed thē: yea manye terryble and ſtraunge viſions made them afrayde.

B No power of ꝓ fyre myght gyue the light, neither myght the clere flambes of ꝓ ſterres lyghten that horrible night: for there appered vnto them a ſodeyn fire very dredful. At the which (whē they ſaw nothing) they were ſo afraid, that they thought the thing which Exodi.viii.b they ſaw to be the more fearfull. As for ꝓ forcery and enchauntment ꝓ they vſed, it came to derilio, & the proud wyſdom was brought to ſhame: for they that promiſed to dryue away the fearfulnes and drede from ꝓ weyke ſoules, were ſycke for feare them ſelues, and that with ſcorne. And thoughe none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayde at the

at the beestes which came vpon them, and at the hyssyng of the serpentes. In so moch that with tremblynge they swowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet may escape.

For it is an heuy thyng, whē a mans owne conscience bereth recorde of his vickednesse & condēneth him. And why? a vexed & wounded conscience, taketh euer cruel thynges in hand. Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seketh helpe and defence, to answere for him selfe. And loke how moche lesse the hope is within, the more is the vncertentie of the mater for the which he is punished. But they that came in the mighty night slept the slepe that fell vpon them frō vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afraid thorow the feare of the wonders, & somtime they were so weyke þ they swowned withal: for an hasty & sodeyn fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen he was kept & shut in prysō, but wout cheynes. But if any dwelt in a village, yf it had ben an herd or husbandman he suffred intollerable necessitie: for they were al bound w one cheyne of darknesse.

Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete song of the byrdes amonge the thycke braūches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty running water, or great noyse of the falyng downe of stones, or the playing and rūnyng of beestes whom they sawe not, or the mighty noyse of rorying beestes, or the sound that answereth agayn in the hye moūtaynes, it made them swowne for very feare. For al the erth shyned with clere lyght, and no man was hyndered in his laboure. Onely vpon them there fell an heuye nyght, an ymage of darknesse that was to come vpon them. Yea they were vnto thē selues the most heuye and horrible darknesse.

¶ The fire lyght that the Israelites had in Egypt. The persecution of the faythfull. The Lorde smote all the fyrste borne of Egypt. The syn of the people in the wyldernesse. Aaron stode betwyxte the lyue and the deed, with his censoure.

CAPI. XVIII.

NEuertheless thy holy had a very great lyght (& the ennemyes herd their voyce but they sawe not the figure of them.) And bicause they suffred not þ same thinges, they magnified the, and they that were vexed afore (bycause they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besoughte the, o God, that there might be a differēce. Therfore hadde they a burning pyller of fyre to lede them in the vnknowen waye, and thou gauest them þ sunne for a free gyft, without any hurt. Reason it was that they sholde want lyght, and be put in the prysō of darknesse, which kept thy chyldren in captiuitie, by whom the vncorrupt lyght of the lawe of the world was for to be gyuen.

When they thought to slee the babes of the ryghtous (one being layd out, and preserued to be leader vnto the other) thou broughtest oute the hole multitude of the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the mightye water. Of þ night were our fathers certifyed afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had gyuen credence, might be of good chere. Thus thy people receiued the helth of the rightous but the vngodly were destroyed. For like as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the rightous children of the good men offred secretly, and ordred the law of rigtousnesse vnto vnite, that the iust shold receiue good and euil in lyke maner, synging prayses vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herd a discacordyng voyce of the enemies, and a piteous cry for chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruant were punyshed in lyke maner. For they al togyther, had innumerable that dyed one deth. Exod. xii.

Neyther were the liuing sufficient to bury the deed, for in the twinckling of an eye, the noblest nacīō of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them byleue, but in the destruction of þ fyrst borne, they knowleged that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll, and when the night was in the middest of her course, thy almighty worde, o Lorde, lept down from heuē out of thy royal trone as a rought man of warre, in the myddest of the land that was destroyed: and the sharpe swerd perfourmed their strayte commaundemēt, standing and filling al thinges w deth: yea it stode vpon the erth, and reached vnto the heuen. Then the sight of the euil dremes vexed them sodeynly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares. Exod. xii.

Then laye there one here, an other there, halfe deed, halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his deth. For the visions that vexed them, shewed theym these thynges afore: so that they were not ignorāunt wherfore they perysshed.

The temptacion of deth touched the righ tous also, and amonges the multitude in the wyldernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrathe endured not longe. For the faultelesse man wente in all the haste, and toke the battayle vpon him, broughte forth the weapon of his ministracyon: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcylynge: set hym selfe agaynste the wrath, and so broughte the myserye to an ende: declarynge therby, that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodyly power, ne with weapons of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed hym, puttyng the in remembraunce of the othe and couenaūt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon an other, he stode in the myddest, pacifyed the wrathe, and parted the waye vnto the lyuynge. And why? in his longe garment was all the beautie, and in the foure rowes of the stones, was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiestie was writtē in the crowne of his hed. Exod. xxviii. b. c vnto these the destroyer gaue place, & was afrayde of them: for it was onely a temptacion worthy of deth.

¶ The death of the Egyptians, and the great ioye of the Hebrues. The meate that was gyuen at the desyre of the people. The elementes serue not only to the wyll of God, but also the wyll of man.

CAPI. XIX.

A AS for the vngodly, þ wrath came vpō thē without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew what shold happen vnto thē, how that (when they had consented to let thē go, & had sent them oute with great diligēce) they wold repent and folow vpon them. For when they were yet mourning and making lamentacion by the graues of the deed, they deuysed an other folyshnelle, so that they persecuted them in their fleing, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also brought them vnto this end, for they had clene forgotten the thynges that happened vnto thē afore. But the thynge that was wanting of theyr punishment, was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them with tormētes: that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge death.

Exodi. xiiii. a

B Then was euery creature facioned again of new, according to the wil of their maker, obeying thy commaundemētes that thy children myght be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, & the drye erth appered, where afore was water: so þ in the red see, there was a waye without impediment, and the great depe became a grene felde, where thorow al the people went that were defended with thy hand, seing thy wonderous and marueylous workes. For as the horses, so were they fed, and lepte lyke lambes prayling the, o Lord, which hadst deliuered them. And why? they were yet myndfull of the thinges þ happened whyle they dwelt in the land: how the ground brought forthe flyes in stede of catell, & how the riuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in stede of fyshes.

But at the last they saw a new creacion of byrdes, what tyme as they were disceyued with luste, and desyred delycate meates. For when they were speakyng of their appetyte, the quayles came vp to them frome the see, and punishmentes came vpō the sinners, not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the stremes: for they suffred worthely accordig to their wickednelles, they delt so abhominably & churlishlye with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straungers in to bōdage that did thē good. Beyde all these thinges there were some, þ not only receyued no straungers with their wylles, but persecuted those also, and did thē moche euil, þ receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with blyndnelle, lyke as they that were couered with sodeyn darknelle at the dores of the ryghtous, so that euerye one sought the entraunce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned in to them selues, like as when one time is chaunged vpon an instrument of musike, and yet all the resydue kepe their melody, whiche may easely be perceyued by the syghte of the thynges þ are come to passe. The drye land was turned in to a watery, and þ thynges that afore swam in the water, went now vpon the dry groūd. The fyre hath power in the water (cōtrary to his own vertue) and the water forgat his owne kynd, to quenche. Agayne, the flambes of the noysome beestes hurte not the flesh of them that wente with them, neyther melted they the yse, whiche els melteth lyghtly.

D

In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (o Lord) and brought them to honoure: thou haste not despysed thē, but alwaye and in al places hast thou stand by them.

¶ The ende of the boke of wysdome.

THE BOKE OF IESVS THE SONNE OF SIRACH, VVHICHE IS CALLED IN LATYNE ECCLESIASTICVS.

The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Sirach, vnto his boke.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs, oute of the lawe, out of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne, & wysdom: Therfore they that haue it, and rede it, shulde not onely them selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graundfather Jesus had gyuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had well exercysed hym selfe therin: he purposed also, to wryte some thyng of wysdome, and good maners, to the intēt that they which were willyng to lerne and to be wyse myght haue the more vnderstādyng, and be the more apt to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore I exhort you to receyue it louingly, to reade it with dylygence, and to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famos Oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well, when it is translated into an other speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes, sound farre otherwise, the they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language.

Nowe in the .xxxviij. yere when I came into Egipt, in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and contynued there all my lyfe, I gat liber tye to reade and wrȳte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consydrynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, & to brynge it vnto lyght: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to lerne, myght applye theym selues vnto good maners, and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

Wysdome procedeth and commeth of God. The prayse of the feare of God. Rightoulnesse is a degree to come by wysdome.

CAPI. I.

ALl wysdome commeth of God the Lord, and hathe bene euer wt hym, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sand of the see, the droppes of the rayn & the daies of the time? Who hath measured ꝑ heyghte of heauen, the breedth of the earth, & the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome, whiche hath bene before all thynges? Wysdom hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods worde in the heygth, is the well of wysdom, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath the rote of wysdom bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctryne of wysdom bene discouered & shewed? and who hathe vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her? A iii. Reg. iii. b and. iiii. c Job. xxviii. & Iacob. i. c

There is one: euen the dyghest, the maker of all thynges, the almyghtye, the kynge of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpō his trone, being a God of dominiō: He hath created her thorowe the holye ghost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her oute vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesshe, accordynge to his gyft: he gyueth her rychely vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worshipp and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery herte, gyueth gladnes, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the last, and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed. B

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what wonderous thinges it doth. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the ryghtous and faythfull. The feare of ꝑ Lord is the ryghte Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifyeth the herte, and gyueth myrth & gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde, shal be happye: and when he haue nede of comfort, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh ryche, and bryngeth all good with her. She fylleth the hole house wt her gyftes: and ꝑ garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde, is the crowne of wysdome, C Psal cx. b Proue. ix. b Feare of the Lorde.

wysdome, and gyueth plenteous peare and healthy. He hathe sene her and nombred her: knowledge and vnderstandyng of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that holde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome, is vnderstandynge and deuotion of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lorde dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made ryghtous, and his wyl full boldnesse is his owne destruction. A pacyent man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, and the shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstanding wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, and manye mens lyppes shall speake of his wysdome.

In the treasures of wysdome is the declaracyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshyp of God. My sonne, yf thou desyre wysdom, kepe the commaundement, and God shall gyue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurtoure, he hath pleasure in fayth and louyng mekenesse, and he shal fil ꝑ treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym with a double herte. Be not an ypocryte in the syght of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Watche well thyne synnes, lest thou happen to fall, and brynge thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: bycause thou woldest not receyue the feare of God, and bycause thy herte is full of fraynednesse and disceyte.

¶ He exhorteth the seruantes of God to ryghtousnesse, loue, vnderstandyng, and patience, and exhorteth hym that feareth God, to belyue, to hope, and to loue: bycause God neuer confoundeth ne forsaketh them that trust in hym. A curse vpon the subtyll, fearfe, and impacient of herte.

MY sonne, yf thou wylte come into the seruyce of God, stand fast in ryghtousnesse and feare, and arme thy soule to temptacion: settle thyne herte, and be pacyēt: bowe downe thyne eare, receyue the wordes of vnderstandynge, and shrynke not awaye, when thou arte entyred. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy selfe vnto hym and suffre, ꝑ thy lyfe maye encreace at the last. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto the, receyue it: suffre in heupnesse, and be pacyent in thy trouble. O ye that feare the Lorde put your trust in him, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure: O ye that feare the Lorde set your loue vpon hym, and your hertes shall be lyghtened

Consydre the olde generacions of men (O ye chyldren) and marke them wel: was there euer any one confounded, that put his truste in the Lorde? Who euer continued in his feare and was forsaken? Or whome dyd he euer despyse, that called faythfully vpon hym? For God is gracious and mercyfull, he forgyueth synnes in the time of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the truth. Wo be vnto him ꝑ hath a double herte wycked lyppes and euyll occupied handes, & to the synner ꝑ goeth two maner of wayes. Wo be vnto theym that are loose of herte, which put not their truste in God, & therfore shall they not be defended of hym. Wo be vnto them that haue lost patience, forsaken the ryghte wayes, and are turned back, in to frowarde wayes. What wyll they do, whē the Lorde shall begyn to vysyt them?

B Psalm.xxx.a Ecclesiast.xxvi.a

They that feare the Lorde wyl prepare their hertes, and humble their soules in his sight. They that feare the Lorde kepe his commaundementes, and wil be pacyent tyll they se hym selfe, sayinge: better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lorde, then in to the handes of men: for his mercye is as greate as hym selfe.

retcheouse the foundacyons. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is no honour vnto the, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father, is his owne worshyp, and where the father is without honour, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make merth of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandyng fayle, haue pacience with him, and dyspyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not be forgotten: and when thou thy self wastest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt not be recompensed with good, yea it shall be founded for the in ryghtousnesse) and in the day of trouble thou shalte be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt away, lyke as the yse in the fayre warm wether.

The greater thou art, the more humble thy self (in all thinges) and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the syght of God. For great power belongeth only vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowly.

Seke not out the thynges that are aboue thy capacytie, and searche not the grounde of suche thynges as are to myghtye for the: but loke what God hath cõmaunded the, thynk vpon that alway, and be not curyous in many of his workes. The medlyng with such hath begiled many a man, and tãgled their wittes in vanytye. Now he that loueth perill, shall perysshe therin.

An harde herte shall fare euyll at the last, (an hert that goeth two wayes, shal not prosper: and he that is frowarde of hert, wyl euer be the worse and worse.) A wycked hert shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyll heape one syn vpon an other. The counsell of the proude hath no healthe, for the plant of syn shall be roted out in them. The herte of him that hath vnderstandynge shall perceue hygh thynges, and a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. An herte that is wyse and hath vnderstandynge, wyll absteyne from synnes, and increase in the workes of ryghtousnesse. Water quencheth burning fyre, and mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym agaynst ỹ tyme to come: so that when he falleth, he shal fynde a strõg holde.

Almes must be done with all mekenesse. The study of wysdome and her frute. Iudge ought to be mercyfull. In exhortacyon to eschewe euyll and to do good.

CAPI. IIII.

My sonne, defraude not the poore of his almes and turne not away thine eyes from him that hath nede. Dyspyse not an hungry soule, and defye not the poore in his necessitye: greue not the herte of hym ỹ is helpelesse, and withdrawe not the gyft frõ the nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one ỹ is in trouble, and turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thyne eyes aside frõ the poore, that thou gyue him not occasyon to speake euyll of the. For yf he complayne of the in the bytternesse of his soule, his prayer shal be herd: euen he ỹ made him, shal heare him. Be curteous vnto the companye of the poore humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy heade to a man of worshyp. Let it not greue ỹ to bow downthine eare vnto the poore, but paye thy dette, and gyue him a frendly answere, and that with mekenesse. A Deut.xv.a Math.xxiii.c

Delyuer hym that suffreth wronge from the hand of the oppressour, and be not fayntherted when thou sytteste in iudgement. Be mercyfull vnto the fatherles as a father, & be in stede of an husband vnto their mother so shalte thou be as an obedient sonne of the byghest and he shall loue the more then thy mother doth. B Gene.xliii.c Exodi.ii.a

Wisdome bryngeth lyfe into her children, reskyeueth them that seke her, and wyll go before them in the way of ryghtousnes. He that loueth her loueth life: and they that seke her dylygently, shal haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the herytage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is ỹ dwellig of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruauntes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so gyueth care vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen: and he that hathe respecte vnto her, shall dwell safe lye.

He that beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generacyon shall endure: for when he falleth, she shal go with hym before al. Feare, drede and temptacion shal she bring vpon hym, and trye hym in her doctrine: tyll she haue so proued hym in his thoughtes, ỹ he commytte his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablysh hym, bryngе the ryght way vnto hym, make hym a glad man, shewe hym her secretes, and heape vpon hym the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandyng and ryghtousnes. But yf he goo wronge, she shall forsake him, and gyue hym ouer in to the handes of his enemy. C

My sonne make moch of the tyme, eschue the tyng that is euyl, and for thy lyfe, shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame ỹ bryngeth synne, and there is a shame that bryngeth worshyp and fauoure. Accepte no persone after thyne owne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thyne owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersyte, and kepe not back thy counsell when it may do good, neither hyde the wysdome in her beauty. For in the tonge is wisdome D Ephesi.v.b Math.v.e Leuitti.xix.d dome knowen, so is vnderstandynge, knowledge and lernyng in the talkyng of the wyse and stedfastnesse in the workes of ryghtousnesse.

In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of truth, but be ashamed of ȳ lyes of thyne own ignorauncē. Shame not to confesse thyne errour, submyt not thy selfe vnto euerye mā bi cause of syn. Withstand not ȳ face of ȳ mygh tye, and stryue not agaynst the streame. But for the truthe stryue thou vnto deathe, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne ennemyes. Be not hastye in thy tong, neither slak and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thyne owne house, destroynge thy housholde folkes, and oppressyng them that are vnder the. Let thyne handē be stretched Ecclo.xx.d out to receyue, and shut when thou shouldest gyue.

¶ In rychesse maye we not put anye confidence. The vengeaunce of God ought to be feared, and to repentaunce maye we not be slowe.

CAPI. V.

A Trust not vnto thy ryches, and saye not: tush, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeaunce and temptacyon.) Folow not the lust of thyne owne herte in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how vaine I had strength, or who wyll bryng me vnder because of my workes? for doubtlesse God shall auenge it. And saye not: I haue committed mo synnes, but what cupll hath happened me? For the almyghtye is a pacient rewarder. Bycause thy syn is forgyuen the, be not therfore without feare, neither heape one syn vpon an other. And saye not: tush, the mercy of the Lorde is greate, he shall forgyue me my synnes, be they neuer so manye. For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wrath from hym also, and his indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no tarying to turne vnto the Lord, and put not of from day to day: for sodeynly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeaunce he shall destroye the. Trust not in wycked ryches, for they shal not helpe in the daye of punyshment and wrath. Be not caryed about to euery wynde, and go not in to euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tonge. Stande fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the worde, and folowe the worde of peace & ryghtousnesse. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstand it, and make a true answere with wysdome. Be swyft to heare, but slow and patient in gyuynge answere. If thou hast vnderstandynge, shape thy neyghboure an answere: If no, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshyp is in a mans wyse talkyng, but the tong of the vndiscrete, is his owne destruction. Be not a pryuye accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and vse no slaūder with thy tong. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the theefe, and an cupll name ouer hym that is double tonged: but he that is a pryuy accuser of other men, shal be hated enuyed and confounded. Se that thou iustifye the small and great alyke.

¶ It is ȳ propertye of a synner to be cupll tonged. The dowryne and good counsell of the wyse is to be embraced wysdome shulde be searched for. The profyte therof.

CAPI. VI.

BE not thy neyghbours enemye for thy A ryndes sake: for who so is euell shall be the heyre of rebuke and dyshonoure and who so euer beareth enuy and a double tonge offendeth. Be not proude in the deuice of thyne owne vnderstandinge, lest thy leues wither, and thy frute be destroyed, & so thou be lefte as a dyre tree. For a wyked soule destroyeth hym that hath it, maketh hym to be laughed to scorne of his enemyes (& bringeth him to the porcyon of the vngodly) A swete worde multyplyeth frendes and pacifyeth them that be at varyaunce, and a thanckfull tonge wyll be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendshyppe with many, neuerthelesse haue but one counseler of a thousande.

If thou getteſt a frende, proue him fyrste, B and be not rashly to gyue him credence. For some man is a frende, but for a tyme, & wyll not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frynde that turneth to enimytie, and taketh part agaynst the: and if he knowe any hurt by the, he telleth it out. Againe, some frende is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of nede he contynueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne owne selfe, and deale faythfullye with thy housholde folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduersytye, he is with the, and hydeth not hym selfe frome the. Departe frome thyne enemyes, yea and be ware of thy frindes.

A faythfull frend is a strong defence: who C so fyndeth such one, findeth a noble treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, the weight of gold and syluer is not to be compared to ȳ goodnesse of his fayth. A faythfull frend is a medicyne of lyfe, & they that feare the Lord shall fynde hym. Who so feareth the Lorde, shall prosper with frendestand as he is hym selfe so shall his frende be also. My sonne receyue doctryne from thy youth vp, so shalte thou finde wysdom tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth, & soweth, & wayte Eccli.li.d pacyently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes right soone. O howe excedynge sharpe is wisdom to vnlerned men! an vnstedfast body wyll not remaine in her. Vnto suche she is as it were a touchstone, & he casteth her frome him in all the haste, for wysdome is with him but in name, there be but few that haue knowledge of her. But with them that knowe her, she abydeth euen vnto the appearynge of God. D Mat.xxiii Gyue eare (my sonne) receyue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsayle. Put thy fote in to be

to her lynckes, and take her pocke vpon thy neck: bow downe thy shoulder vnder her, bere her pacyently, and be not wery of her bãdes. Come vnto her with thy hole herte, and kepe her wayes with all thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be shewed the: and when thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shall be turned to thy great ioye. Then shall her fetters be a stronge defence for the, and her pock a glorious rayment. For the bewtie of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are the couplynge together of saluacyon. Yea a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, & the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weare.

My sonne, yf thou wylt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstandynge: and yf thou wylt applie thy mynd, thou shalt be wyse. If thou wylt bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receyue doctryne: and yf thou delyte in hearing, thou shalt be wyse. Stande with the multitude of suche elders as haue vnderstandyng, and consent vnto their wysdome with thyne herte: that thou mayest heare all godlye sermons, and that the worthy sentences eskape the not. And yf thou seist a man of dyscrete vnderstandynge, get the soone vnto hym, and let thy fote tred vpõ the steppes of his dores. Let thy minde be vpon the commaundementes of God, and be earnestly occupyed in his lawes: so shall he stablyshe thy herte, and gyue the wysdome at thyne owne desyre.

¶ We must forsake euyll, and yet not iustifye our selues. The behauiour of the wyse, towarde his wyfe, his frende, his chyldren, his seruauntes, his father and mother, the prestes, &c.

CAPI. VII.

DO no euyl, so shal there no harme happen vnto the. Departe away from the thynge that is wycked, and no myshappe shall medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euyll thynges in the forowes of vnrighteousnesse, so shalt thou repe them seuenfolde. Labour not vnto man for any lordshyp, neither vnto the kynge for the seate of honoure. Iustify not thy selfe before God (for he knoweth the herte) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kynge. Make no laboure to be made a iudge, except it so were, that thou couldest myghtelye put downe wyckednesse: for yf thou shouldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest fayle in gruynge sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cytye, and put not thy selfe amonge the people. Bynde not two synnes togyther, for in one syn shalte thou not be vnpunyshed. Say not: tush, God wyl loke vpon the multytude of my oblacyons, and when I offre to the hyest God, he wyll accept it.

Be not faynte herted when thou makest thy prayer, neither slacke in gruyng of almes. Laughe no man to scorne in the heuynesse of his soule, for God (whiche seeth all thynges) is he that can brynge downe, and sette vp a-gayne. Accept no lesinge agaynst thy brother neither do the same agaynste thy frende. Vse not to make any maner of lye, for ỹ custome therof is not good. Make not many wordes when thou arte amonge the elders: & when thou prayest, make not moche babblynge. Let no laboryous worke be tedyous vnto the, neither the husbandrye whiche the almyghtye hath created. Make not thy boste in the multytude of thy wickednes, but humble thy selfe euen frome thyne herte: and remembre that the wrath shall not be longe in tarynge, and that the vengeaunce of the flesshe of the vngodly is a very fyre and worme. Gyue not ouer thy frynde for any good, ne thy faythfull brother for the best golde. 1. Reg. ii. b

Depart not frome a discrete and good woman, that is fallen vnto the for thy portyon in the feare of the Lorde, for the gyfte of her honesty is aboue golde. Where as thy seruaunt worketh trulye, intreat him not cuyl, ne the hyrelynge that is faythfull vnto the. Loue a discrete seruaunt as thyne owne soule defraud him not of his lyberty, neither leaue hym a poore man. If thou haue catell, loke well to them: and they be for thy profit kepe them. If thou haue sonnes, brynge them vp in nourtoure and learnynge, and holde them in awe frome theyr youthe vp. If thou haste doughters, kepe theyr body, and shew not thy face chereful toward them. Marry thy doughter, & so thou shalt perfourme a weyghty matter: but giue her to a man of vnderstanding. If thou haue a wyfe after thyne owne minde forsake her not (but commit not thy selfe to the hateful). Math. vi. b Rom. xii. b

Honoure thy father from thy hole herte, and forget not the sorowfull trauayle that thy mother had with the: remembre that thou wast borne thorow them, and how cãst thou recompense them the thinges that they haue done for the? Feare the Lorde with all thy soule, and honoure his mynysters. Loue thy maker with all thy strength, and forsake not his seruauntes. Feare the Lord with al thy soule, and honour his prestes. Gyue theym their portyon of the fyrst frutes and increase of the earth, lyke as it is commaunded the gyue them the shulders, and their appoynted offrynges and fyrstlynges. Reach thyne hãd vnto the poore, that God maye dieste the blessednesse. Be lyberall vnto all men lyuynge, yet let not but do good euen to them that are deade. Ecclesi. iii. b Tobi. iii. b Deu. xxv. b Ecclesi. xxx. b Deu. xii. b Nu. xvi. b Galat. vi. b Tobi. i. b

Let not them that wepe be without comfort, but mourne with suche as mourne. Let it not greue the to vysyt the sycke, for that shal make the to be beloued. What so euer ỹ takest in hande, remembre the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse. Roma. xii. b Math. xxv. b ¶ Agaynst thy better is no stryuynge. Of the death of thyne enemye mayst thou not reioyce, ne despise thy neyghbours, ne the wordes of the wyse.

CAPI. VIII.

Stryue

A STrywe not with a myghty man, lest thou chaunce to fall in to his handes. Make no bargaunce with a ryche man, leest he happen to bynge vp an harde quarel agaynst the. For golde and syluer hath vndone many a man, yea euen the hertes of kynges hath it made to fall. Strywe not with a man that is full of wordes, and laye no styckes vpon his fyre: Kepe no companye with the vnlerned, lest he gyue thy kynred an euyll reporte. Despyse not a man that turneth hym self awaye from syn, and cast him not in the teeth with all: but remembre that we are frayle euerychone. Thynke scorne of no man in his olde age, for we wax olde also. Be not glad of the deathe of thyne enemye, but remembre that we must dye al the sort of vs (and fayne wold we come in to lope.) Despyse not the sermons of suche elders as haue vnderstandynge, but acquaynte thy self with the wyse sentences of them: for of them thou shalte learne wysdome and the doctryne of vnderstandynge, and how to serue greate men withoute complaynte.

B Go not from the doctrine of the elders, for they haue lerned it of theyr fathers. For of them thou shalt learne vnderstandyng, so that thou mayest make answere in ỹ tyme of neede. Kyndle not the cooles of synners, lest thou be brent in the fyrye flames of theyr synnes. Represt not the face of the blasphemer, that he laye not wayte for thy mouth. Lende not vnto hym that is myghtyer then thy self: If thou lendest hym, count it but lost. Be not ouertrye aboue thy power: yf thou be, then thynke surely to paye it. Go not to lawe wt the iudge, for he wyll iudge accordyng to his owne honoure. Trauayle not by the waye with hym that is braynelesse, lest he do the euyll: for he folowyth his owne wylfulnesse, and so shalt thou perysh thorow his foly.

C Strywe not with hym that is angrye and cruell, and go not with hym in to the wylderness: for bloude is nothynge in his syght, and where there is no helpe, he shall murther the. Take no counsell at fooles, for they loue no thynge but the thynges that please them selues. Make no counsell before a straunger, for thou canst not tell what wyll come of it. Open not thyne herte vnto euery man, lest he be vnthanckfull to the, and put the to reproffe.

¶ The ieoperdyes of chastnesse are to be eschewed. An olde frende is to be preferred before a newe. The glory and rychesse of synners. Ryghtous men should be bydden to gest. Labour is the chefe thing in a workmen, and wysdome in a prynce.

CAPI. IX.

A BE not gelous ouer the wyfe of thy bosome, that she shewe not some shrewde poynte of wycked doctryne vpon the. Geue not the power of thy lyfe vnto a woman, lest she come in thy strength, and so thou be confounded. Loke not vpon a woman that is desyrous of many men, lest thou fall in to her snares.

Vse not the company of a woman that is a player and daunser, & heare her not, lest thou perysh thorow her entysynge. Beholde not a mayden, that thou be not hurt in her beautye. Cast not thy mynde vpon harlottes in any maner of thynge, lest thou destroye bothe thy selfe and thyne heritage. Go not aboute galynge in cuerye lane of the cytye, neyther wandre thou abrode in the stretes therof. Turne awaye thy face from a beautyfull woman, and loke not vpon the fayrenes of other.

Many a man hath perysshed thorowe the beautye of women, for thorowe it the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduoutrous woman shall be troden vnder fote as myre, of euery one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderyng at the beauty of a straūge woman, hath bene cast oute, for her wordes kindle as a fyre.) Syt not wt another mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not with her vpon the bed, make no wordes with her at ỹ wyne lest thyne hert consent vnto her, and so then with thy bloude fall in to destruction. Forsake not an olde frende, for the newe shal not be lyke hym.

A newe frende is newe, wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt drynke hym with pleasure. Desyre not the honoure and ryches of a synner, for thou knowest not what destructiō is for to come vpon hym. Delyte not thou in the thynge that the vngodly haue pleasure in, beynge sure that the vngodly shall not be accepted vntyll theyr graue.

C Kepe the from the man that hathe powre to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayde of death. And yf thou commest vnto hym, make no faute, lest he happē to take away thy life. Remembre that thou goest in the myddest of snares, and vpon the bulwarkes of the cytye. Beware of thy neyghboure as nyghe as thou canste, and medle with such as be wyse and haue vnderstandyng. Let iust men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy minde and let all thy talkynge be in the commaundementes of the hyghest. In the handes of craftesmen shall the workes be commended so shall the princes of the people in the wysdome of their talkynge. A man ful of wordes is perylous in his cytye: and he that is temerarious and past shame in his talkynge, is to be abhorred.

¶ Of kynges and iudges. Pryde, and couetousnes are to be abhorred. Labour is praysed.

CAPI. X.

A WYse iudge wil order his people with discrecion, and where a man of vnderstandynge beareth rule, there goeth it well. As the iudge of the people is hym selfe euen so are his officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the cytie is, suche are they that dwell therin also. An vnwyse kynge destroyeth his people, but where they ỹ be in auctorytye auctozitite are men of vnderstanding, there the city prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God, and when his time is, he shal set a profitable ruler vpō it, in the hand of God, is the power of man, and vpon the scrybes shal he lay his honour. Remembre no wrong of thy neyghbour, and medle thou with no vnrygh tous wozkes. Pryde is hatefull bekoze God and man, and all wickednesse of the heathen is to be abhozred. Bicause of vnrighteous de lyng, wronge, blasphemyes, and dyuers disceyte, a realme shall be translated from one people to an other.

There is nothyng wozse then a couetous man. Why art thou proude, o thou erth and asshes? There is not a moze wycked thynge then to loue money. And why? such one hath his soule to sell: yet is he but fylthye bonge whyle he lyueth.

And though the phisicion shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusion it goeth after this maner, to day a king, to mozow ded. For when a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beestes and wozmes. The beginning of mans pryde, is to fal away from God: & why? his herte is gone frome his maker, for pryde is the ozyginall of all syn. Who so taketh hold therof, shal be fylled with curlynges, & at ꝑ last it shal ouerthrow him. Therfore hath the Lozde brought ꝑ congregaciōs of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

God hath destroyed the seates of proude pryuces, and set vp the meke in theyr stede. God hath wythered the rotes of the proude heathen, and planted the lowlye amonge them. God hathe ouerthrowen the landes of the heathen, and destroyed them oute of the grounde. He hathe caused them to wyther awaye, he hath brought them to noughte, and made the memozial of them to cease frō oute of the earthe (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of the būble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, neither wzothfulnes for mens chyldren: the sede of man that fereth God shal be brought to honour: but the sede which transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lozde, shal be shamed. He that is ꝑ ruler amonges brethren is holden in honour among them, and he regardeth suche as feare the Lozd. The glozy of the ryche, of the honourable, & of the poze is the feare of God.

Despyse not thou the iust pooze man, and magnify not the rych vngodly. Great is the iudge, & mighty in honour, yet is there none greater then he that feareth God. Vnto the seruaunt that is discrete, shall the fre do seruyce, he that is wise and wel nourtured, wil not grudge when he is reformed, and an ignozaunt body shall not come to honoure. Be not proud to do thy wozke, and dispayze not in the tyme of aduersitie. Better is he that laboureth, and hathe plentcousnesse of all thynges, then he that is gozgeous and wanteth breed.

My sonne, kepe thy soule in meknes, and gyue her, her due honour. Who shall iustifie him that synneth agaynst him self? who wil honour him that dishonoureth his own life? The pooze is honoured for his faithfulnes & truth, but the ryche is had in reputacion, bycause of his goodes. He that ozdreth him self honestly in pouertie, how moch moze shal he behaue him self honestly in riches? And who so ozdreth him self vnhonestly in ryches, how moche moze shall he behaue hym selfe vnhonestly in pouertie.

¶ The prayse of humilytye. After the outwarde apperaūce ought we not to iudge. Of hedy and rash iudgement. The ryche is not without offence. All thinges come of God. Al men are not to be brought in to thy house.

CAPI. XI.

A The wysdome of hym that is broughte low, shal lyft vp his heed, & shall make hym to syt among great men. Cōmend not a mā in his beautie, neither despise a mā in his vtter apperaunce. The Bee is but a smal beest among the foules, yet is her frute excedynge swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, and exalt not thy self in the day of thy honoure: for the wozkes of the hyest onely are wonderful: yea glozious secrete and vnknowen are his wozkes. Many tyrauntes haue ben fayne to syt downe vpon the earth, and the vnlykely hathe wozne the crowne. Many myghty men haue ben brought lowe, and the honourable haue ben delyuered in to other mens handes. * Condemne no man bekoze thou haue tryed out the matter, & when thou hast made inquisicion, thē rekozme righ tously. ϕ Gyue no sentence bekoze thou hast herde the cause, but fyrste let men tell oute their tales.

Gene.xli.f Daniell.vi.a Ecc.xli.A 1. Reg.xv.f 1. Esd.vi.vii * Deut.xiii.b i vii.b Iosue.vii.c and.xx.c ϕ Pro.xviii.d

Stryue not for a mater that toucheth not thy self, and stande not in the iudgement of synners. My son, medle not with many maters: & yf thou wylt be ryche, thou shalt not get it: and though ꝑ rennest thy waye afore, yet shalt thou not escape. There is some mā that laboureth, and the moze he werieth him selfe, the lesse he hathe. Agayne some man is slouthful, hath nede of help, wanteth strēgth and hath greate pouertie, & Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good, setteth hym vp from his lowe estate, and lyfteth vp his heed, so ꝑ many men maruell at hym, and gyue honour vnto God.

B Math.xix.e i. Timot.vi.b Prouer.x.c

Prosperitie and aduersitie, life & deth, pouertie and riches come of the Lozde. (Wysdome, nurtour and knowlege of the law are with God: loue, and the wayes of good are with hym. Errour and darknesse are made for synners: and they that exalte thē selues in cuyl, ware olde in cuyl.) The gift of God remayneth for the ryghtous, and his good wyll shall haue prosperitie for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuyng nygardly, and that is the pozciō of his rewarde, in that he sayth nowe haue I gotten reste, and nowe wyll I eate and dzynke of my goodes my self alone.

C Iob.i.e Ecc.xxviii.a Luke.xii.b

And yet he consydreth not, that the tyme draweth nye, that he must leaue al these thinges vnto other men, and dye hym selfe. Stande thou fast in thy couenaunt, and exercyse thy selfe therin, and remayne in the worke vnto thy age. Continue not in the workes of synners, but put thy truste in God, and byde in thyne estate: for it is but an easye thynge in the syght of God, to make a poore mā riche, and that sodeynly. The blessyng of God hasteth to the rewarde of the ryghtous, and maketh his frutes sone to florysshe and prospere. Say not: what helpeth it me? & what shall I haue the whyle? Agayne, saye not: I haue ynoughe, how can I want? When thou arte in welfare, forget not aduersitie: and when it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope þ it shall be better. For it is but a small thynge vnto God in the daye of death to rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes. The aduersite of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, his workes are discouered. Prayse no bodye before his deathe, for a man shal be knowen in his chyldren.

Bryng not euery man in to thyne house, for the disceptful layeth awayte dyuerslye. Lyke as a partryche in a maunde, so is the hert of the proud: and lyke as a spye that loketh vpō the fal of his neighbour. For he turneth good vnto euil, & sclaundreth the chosē. Of one sparke is made a greate fyre, and an vngodly mā laieth wayt for bloud. Beware of the disceptfull, for he ymagyneth wicked thynges to bryng the in to a ppetual shame. Yf thou takest an aleaunt vnto the, he shall destroy the in vnquietnesse, & dryue the from thyne owne wayes.

¶ Vnto whom we oughte to do good. Ennemyes ought to be eschewed.

CAPI. XII.

A When thou wylt do good, know to whō thou doest it, & so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefytes. Doo good vnto the rightous, and thou shalt fynd great rewarde: though not of hym, yet (no doubt) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alway occupyed in euyll, & gyueth no almes: for the hyest hateth þ synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shewe the workes of repentaunce. Gyue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receyue not a synner. As for the vngodlye and synners, he shall recompence vengeaunce vn to them, and kepe them to the day of wrath. Gyue thou vnto the good, and receyue not the synner: do wel vnto hym, that is lowly, but gyue not vnto the vngodlye. Let not the breed be gyuen hym, that he be not myghtyer then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receiue twyse as moche euyll, in all the good þ thou doest vnto hym: And why? the hyest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

Timoth. v. a

In prosperitie a frende shall not be knowen, and in aduersitie an enemy shall not be hyd. For when a man is in welth, it greueth his ennemyes: but in heynesse and trouble a man shall knowe his frende. Truste neuer thyne ennemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wyckednes. And though he make moche crouchyng and knelyng, yet kepe wel thy mynde, and beware of hym. Set him not by the, neither let him syt at thy right hand, leest he tourne hym, get in to thy place, take thy rowme and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, & be pyerced at my sayinges.

Bynde not two sinnes togither, for there shal not be one vnpunisshed. Who wyl haue pity of the charmer that is stinged of the serpent, or of all suche as come nye the beestes? Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wycked man, and lappeth hym selfe in his synnes. For a leason wyll he byde with the, but yf thou stomble, he taryeth not. An enemy is swete in his lyppes, he can make many wordes, and speke many good thynges: Yea he can wepe w his eyes, but in his herte he ymagineth how to throw the in to the pit, and yf he may fynde opportunitie, he wil not be satisfied with bloude. Yf aduersitie come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst, & though he pretende to do the help, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake his heed & clap his handes ouer the for very gladnesse, and whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall disguyse his countenaunce.

¶ The companyes of the proude and of the ryche are to be eschewed. The loue of God. Lyke do company with theyr lyke.

CAPI. XIII.

A Who so toucheth pytche, shall be fyled withall: and he that is familier with the proude, shall clothe hym selfe with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanyeth a more honourable man then hym selfe. Therfore kepe no familiaritie w one þ is rycher then thy selfe. How agree the kettle and the pot togither? for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other, it shall be broken. The ryche deleth vnryghtously, and threteneth withall: but the poore being oppressed and wrongously delt withal, suffreth scarcenesse, and gyueth fayre wordes. yf thou be for his profyt, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As long as thou hast any thynge of thyne owne, he shall be a good felowe with the: yea he shall make the a bare man, & not be sorye for the. If he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and (with a priuy mocke) shall he put þ in an hope, and gyue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntyll he haue supte the clene vp twyse or thryse, and at the last shal he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde when he seith that thou hast nothynge, he shall forsake the, and shake his heed at the.

B Beware thou be not disceyued & brought downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysdome, lest when thou art brought low, thou be disceyued thorow foolishnesse. Yf thou be called a mightye man, absent thy selfe, so shall he cal the to hym the more oft. Preasse not vnto hym, that thou be not shot out: and go not farre of, lest he forget the. Withdrawe not thy selfe from his speache, but byleue not his manye wordes. For with moche communicacion shall he tempte the, & (with a prouy mocke) shall he questyon the of thy secretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his shal marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to doo the hurte, and to put the in prison. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in peryll of thy ouerthrowynge.

C Now whē thou hearest his wordes, make as though thou weren in a dreme, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe long, & call vpon him in thy nede. Euery beest loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neyghbour. Al flesh wil resorte to their lyke. And euery mā will kepe companye with suche as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth wt the lambe, so doth the vngodly with ỹ rightous. What felowshyp sholde an holye man haue with a dog? How can the ryche and the poore agre togyther? The wyld asse is the lyons prayе in the wyldernesse, euen so are poore men the meat of the ryche. Like as ỹ proude may not away with lowlynesse, euen so doth the rych abhorre the poore. Yf a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayn, but when ỹ poore falleth, his frendes forsake hym. Yf a ryche man fall in to an errour, he hathe many helpers, he speketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye him.

But yf a poore man go wrong, he is punis
D shed: yea though he speke wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speketh euery body holdeth his tong, and loke what he sayth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? And yf he doo amysse, they shal destroy him. Ryches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wycked thynge in the mouthe of the vngodly. The hert of mā chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euyl. A cherefull countenāce is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thynge to knowe the thoughte.

¶ The offence of the tonge. Man is but a vayne thynge. Happy is he that continueth in wysdome.

CAPI. XIIII.

A BLessed is the man, that hathe not fallen with the word of his mouth, and is not pryched with the conscience of synne. Happye is he that hathe no heuynesse in his mynde, and is not fallen frome his hope. Yt becommeth not a couetous man & a nygarde to be ryche: and what sholde a nygarde doo with golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapeth togyther vnryghtously gathereth for other folkes, and an other mā shall make good chere with his goodes. He ỹ is wycked vnto hym selfe, howe sholde he be good vnto other men? How can such one haue any plea sure of his goodes? There is nothyng worse then when one disfauoureth hym selfe, and this is a reward of his wickednesse. Yf he do any good, he doth it not knowynge therof, & agaynst his wyl, and at the last he declareth his vngraciousnes. A nigard hath a wycked eye, he turneth away his face, and despyseth his owne soule. A couetous mans eye hath ne uer ynoughe in the portion of wyckednesse, Prou. xxviii. c
